shows her to be a denseuse of exceptional cleverness, every movement being a picture of poetic and delightful grace which keeps one in a state of pleasant expectancy. While in the category of Salome dancing, La Loi's interpretation is not to be construed with the prevailing idea of that dance and may be witnessed by the most critical without a qualm of conscience. Albert Warner and Daisy Lakewood offer some clever dancing and singing stunts. Mr. Warner's (I feel so loose) style of dancing, being an amusing feature of the act. An interesting and novel act is found in Rawson and June, the Australian boomerang throwers, who are a decided feature of the performance. The Al Hayes and Julia Redmond company present an amusing comedy act that wins many a laugh from the audience. Some catchy songs and rapid fire jokes constitute an entertaining act by the Garden City Trio. ## Vaudeville Notes

The sketch Alice Davenport is appearing in at present, Now, was written in a little less than three hours and produced in two weeks after its completion. The idea was founded upon the experience of a very dear friend of hers. Miss Davenport says she is producing it as a warning to her sex. So beware, you horrid men, whom you take to see it as thy conscience may reproacheth thee.

Glorine, the fine and spectacular dancer has arrived from the East and opens at the National as a special feature April 11.

John W. Considine is en route to this city. There will be big doings in vaudeville circles when he arrives.

Will H. Cross & Co., now playing the South, will be in this territory in the near future.

Al. Jolson, the big feature of Dockstader's minstrels last season, is in town. He has resigned with Dockstader for next season. There is a probability that Al. will be signed for a season at the American Theatre when the minstrel season opens there.

A letter from Carroll Johnson to Archie Levy advises that he will soon arrive in Frisco.

Carl Richter, for the past six years manager of the Orpheum at Omaha, has been transferred to the Seattle Orpheum in a similar capacity.

Sullivan & Considine will soon add three houses to their California circuit.

Alice Davenport, at present appearing in her sketch Now, at the National, is busily engaged in perfecting the details for next season's tour, which is to be called Passions. The production will be an innovation in the vaudeville field, requiring seven principals and fifteen supernumeraries, and special scenery will be carried for the staging of the piece. The plot is of an intense and highly dramatic nature, requiring a cast of experienced dramatic people for its interpretation. The story hinges around a murder for which an innocent man is accused. His wife, in order to establish his innocence, goes to the gambling house disguised as a favorite French danseuse of the day, and succeeds in arousing the jealousy of the mistress of the place, and eventually wrings a confession from her as being the real criminal. The denouement is startling in the extreme and calls for dramatic ability of a marked degree. Miss Davenport has received several flattering offers for the booking of the act and at the conclusion of her present tour will immediately begin preparations for its production.

Mueller & Mueller, billed as the Gibson Boys, will make their appearance at the National next week with a line of high class singing specialties. Their rendering of The Rosary being especially recommended. They were formerly with Houdini and come high recommended.

An amusing conversation was overheard in front of the National Theatre a few evenings ago, viz: "I see Little Hip is going to be at the National next week." "He's there already." "No, he isn't." "I say he is, I saw the show and ought to know." "So have I, and I didn't see any elephant on the bill." "Elephant? What are you talking about? He isn't an elephant, that's only a burlesque on his size because he's so small and an elephant is so large." He had seen the Marco Twins.

A treat is promised the patrons of the National next week by the Atlantic City Four in a number of singing and musical selections. Their act is said to be one of the best of its kind and has found enthusiastic favor wherever presented.

David Porter & Co. in The Law of the Desert, now appearing in vaudeville, are making a decided hit wherever they appear. The work of Marion Francis Bisbee stamps her as a young woman of rare personal attraction and still rarer ability. Her impersonation of the Mexican coquette, Querida, is artistic and in a class with that of Jane Grey in the production of The Rose of the Rancho at the Belasco. The piece is a striking little affair, original and live, and both David Porter and Edwin Eggleston fully meet the requirements of the intense parts they portray. The playlet is of the tense order, and keeps every fiber aquiver with its keenness of lines and action. Surely there are many who have lived through just such incidents, whether they be where the author laid the scene (near Tucson, Ariz., close to the Mexican border), or in some other part of the globe, where men and women will always be men and women.—Los Angeles Herald.

When You and I Were Young, Maggie, made popular by Dick Jose, as rendered by Frank Willard at the Empire's amateur night last week made a decided hit. Mr. Willard has a rich baritone which he knows well how to handle.

Mr. Emerson, of Fougere & Emerson at the Wigwam this week, presented his partner (his wife) with a diamond ring last week. It has real glossy and scintillating fire, and he paid real money for it. Cash, too.

James Pilling, who has the Columbia Theatre in Oakland running as a picture house, it is reported, will establish an Airdome in Sacramento this summer. One is outlined for Stockton, one for Fresno, one for San Jose and one for Reno, all by different promoters. Mark Twain may put up one in Santa Cruz, to be occupied by Jim Post and company.

Manager Le Breque, of the Australian Tree Fellers, will, after present tour, accept a position as assistant manager and director of the International Industrial Exhibition Co., of New York, for summer season. He will also be interested in the Plantation and Minstrel show to be located at Palisade Park, on the Hudson.

Harry Orndoff, stage manager at the Orpheum, is on a sea jaunt, making the round trip to Europe for the rest cure.

Mazie Oliver is playing vaudeville dates. She is at Pantages, Seattle, this week.

Mr. Zemansky said that his theatre will be built on much the same plan as the Pantages and will hold 1,100 people, 700 on the lower floor and 400 on the upper.

The house will be ready for opening on September 1st, if the plans of the proprietor materialize. Tenants now occupying the site of the proposed theatre have been given notice to move June 1st.

Al Hessie, playing at the Coliseum last week at Phoenix, Ariz., was held over for the second week. The Coliseum is playing to packed houses every night. Phoenix is an extra good show town, writes Mr. Hessie.

San Bernardino, Cal., March 27.—Quieting down after a night's rampage, during which he tore up trees, smashed through fences and overturned everything movable he found in his path, Nero, one of the big elephants with Norris & Rowe's circus, meekly allowed himself to be recaptured here early today. Nero broke loose about 11 o'clock last night, when he was being loaded onto the circus train here. Trumpeting with rage the huge animal lumbered through the streets of the town, leaving a trail of terror in his wake. Circus crowds filled the streets and the majority of the population was in a panic within two minutes after Nero started to run away. After wrecking considerable property the big elephant began to calm down and it was believed that he could be recaptured without difficulty. Apparently realizing the plight of his keepers, Nero tantalized them by refusing to allow himself to be chained. It was not until early today that he was apparently sleepy and willing to be fed, that the big runaway hunted up the circus camp and allowed his feet to be shackled.

The Borsini Troupe at the Wigwam this week will close their tour on the S. & C. circuit in Los Angeles week of April 5th, and join the Hackenbach and Wallace shows opening in Peru, Ind., April 24th. They will book under William Morris in vaudeville again the latter part of November under the management of Tom Brantford.

Ensign Barrett Leslie Anderson, of the battleship Missouri, and Elsie Fay, the vaudeville actress, were not married in New York last Wednesday. At the apartment of Miss Fay it was said that the wedding had been postponed one week and that the ceremony would be performed in Boston.

E. A. Fischer of Los Angeles has sold his theatre to G. M. Schmidt and G. B. Warren.

Claudia Colonne has joined S. Miller Kent to play leads in a sketch over the Orpheum Circuit.

The Globe Theatre will re-open with 5c and 10c moving pictures and vaudeville, Saturday, April 17th, under management of Zeke Abrams.

Edwin August arrived from the East Wednesday in the support of Otis Skinner, playing Captain Potel, in The Honor of the Family, which will be seen at the Van Ness next week. Earlier in the season Mr. August was the juvenile of the Auditorium stock company at Los Angeles. After leaving Los Angeles Mr. August went East and created the juvenile in John Luther Long's new play, Kasso, which Mrs. Carter produced at the Liberty Theatre in New York City.

Guy Smith Introduces a Good Thing in the Opening of the New Broadway Theatre in Oakland

One more week and Kolb and Dill will have concluded their engagement at the Macdonough. This week they are playing The Politicians, and will follow with Lonesome Town. As this is the second week of The Politicians the attendance has naturally fallen off. Adele Rafter always comes in for her share of the honors and the chorus at all times have cause to feel satisfied with their treatment. At the Liberty the new leading woman Helen Holmes made her first appearance in The Crisis and in the opinion of everyone she will do. At last Manager Bishop has secured a leading woman who seems to possess every requirement for the position. Her personality is all that could be desired and in the role of Virginia Carvel in The Crisis Miss Holmes showed ability. The part calls for devoted love at one stage and for considerable emotional power at another, and Miss Holmes was equal to both occasions. The balance of the company also seemed to enter into the spirit of the play with much more life than usual. Landers Stevens as Stephen Brice was at his best and gave an excellent portrayal of the character. E. L. Bennison played a fiery young Southerner to perfection and George Friend was more than good as the German student. Some fine character work was done by George Webster and Henry Shumer. Walter Whipple was added to the cast this week and showed up well as Eliphalet Hopper. Georgie Cooper was as vivacious and winsome as ever. Many a laugh was created by Lillian Elliott as Nancy the colored woman. The costumes and stage settings were very characteristic of the periods of the civil war and were appropriate in every detail. Willie Collier's clever comedy, Caught in the Rain, will be the next attraction. This week's bill at the Orpheum is a very even one and the attendance has been up to expectations. The Blessings, McDonald and Huntington, and Ray L. Royce are the holdovers, and the other features are as follows: Violet Black and company; Four Poncherry's; James M. Cullen; and motion pictures. A new motion picture with Taft in Panama is the principal number of the Bell's program. Don Leno's youngsters, The Great Erric; Ellsworth and Lindon; Les Georgretys; Ralph W. Snow also present some good numbers and taken all in all the week's entertainment is very satisfactory. The Broadway Theatre, formerly the Novelty, opened Monday night under the management of Guy Smith. The production chosen for the opening attraction is The Fatal Wedding and the company which has been gathered under Mr. Smith's management is one fully capable of giving a good account of themselves. In the roster we find such well known players as Al H. Hallett, Priscilla Knowles, Jack Bennett, Louis Thompson, Sidney Diamond, Roy Clements, Anita Allen, Claire Sinclair and Georgia Woodthorpe. The play was carried out with much smoothness and the settings and scenic effects were very much in keeping with the production. Al H. Hallett as stage director deserves much credit. The attendance was of the standing room order on the opening night and has kept up all week. Norris & Rowe's circus have been performing here the past week. The attendance has been very slight, much to the disappointment of the managers of Fabiola Hospital who were to receive a benefit of all excess proceeds. The business was so poor that not a cent was realized for the benefit of the hospital. Ossip Gabrilowitsch, the celebrated pianist, gave a concert at the Liberty 7th. The house was small but very enthusiastic. Admiral Evans will give a lecture at the Liberty 19th and the Orpheus Club have engaged the theatre for their annual concert the next night. Sunday, the 11th, will mark the reopening of Idora Park. Patrick Conway's band will be the attraction. Dan Sully will open at the Macdonough 19th for a week's engagement and will be followed by Otis Skinner. Mischa Elman, the Russian violinist will give a concert at the Liberty 23d.

LOUIS SCHEELINE.

Success Attends Opening of Oakland Broadway

That wise and exceedingly popular young Oakland manager when he pulled off the Broadway Theatre deal did a clever and, we believe, a very profitable thing for all concerned. The opening last Monday night crowded the house to the doors and business has been immense all week. Mr. Smith knows the Oakland taste—good shows at popular prices—about 50 cents is the Oakland limit except for an attraction of national renown. The Fatal Wedding was the opening bill and the company under Al Hallett's skillful direction showed up exceedingly well. Priscilla Knowles was a dream of beauty and a revelation in an emotional way as the heroine. Anita Allen played the "little mother" with a powerful and finished art and Claire Sinclair was the scheming "heavy" to splendid purpose. Al Hallett, Georgie Woodthorpe, Jack Bennett, Roy Clement, Sydney Diamond, Louis Thompson and Fred Munier established themselves as good actors.

The Raymond Teal company left by the City of Topeka for Eureka yesterday morning, where they will play a two weeks' engagement at the Margarita Theatre. This is the initial attraction of the Great Western Theatrical Circuit in this house and will be followed by many more high class shows that have been contracted for.

RENO, March 31.—Arguments in the case of Mrs. E. H. Sothorn, whose stage name is Virginia Harned, against her actor-husband, occupied the attention of two judges to-day. Neither principal was present, and only depositions formed the evidence. The attorneys for Mrs. Sothorn contend that service on the husband is all that was necessary. The case is regarded as a test of the Nevada divorce law, which is expected to go eventually to the Supreme Court.

The complete roster of the company which will support Selma Herman during her long stock season at Seattle, beginning next week, includes Robert Vaughn, Henry W. Otto, Rollins Holden, Raymond S. Paine, Harry McFayden, Irving Lancaster, Harry J. Russell, Fred E. Wright, Ruth Vaughn, Dorothy Stanton, Minnie Williams, Catherine Collins and Maurice James Fitzgerald.

Sullivan & Considine are to retain the name of Majestic for their new theatre at Second and Spring.

The Valencia Theatre will remain closed until Easter Sunday afternoon, when, after weeks of careful rehearsal and painstaking preparation, Peter Pan, J. M. Barrie's delightful fantasy, will be presented for the first time in San Francisco by a stock company.

Peter Pan will serve to introduce the Valencia's new leading lady, Harriet Worthington, who will appear in the titular role. Little Rena Kiefe, a child actress, will appear, and the three Walter children, who have just concluded an engagement in the Los Angeles presentation of the play, have been brought to San Francisco for the production which the Valencia management promises to be of the highest order of excellence possible. Herman Heller and his orchestra, which will be augmented for the occasion, will play all of the music from the original score and the incidental numbers will be appropriate and very interesting.

The Gleason-McGlynn play, Might's Right, that sees its first performance at the American Theatre, April 15, went into rehearsal this week. The company will be composed of Thomas McLarnie, who has been specially engaged to play the lead; Frank McGlynn, Lansing Rowan, Maybelle Thompson, Ora Harris, Elaine Davis, Charles Place, Edmund W. Bracht, Emmet Sarsfield, Thomas Caulfield, Ralph Bell, Norman Phillips, Howard Nugent and Franklyn Murray.

If I Were King, the romantic drama in which E. H. Southern scored so successfully, will follow Peter Pan at the Valencia Theatre and will serve to introduce the new leading man, Paul McAllister, to San Francisco audiences. Many other new faces, well known to the theatrical world, will be seen in the production, which will be on a most lavish scale.

Barbara Freitchie, Clyde Fitch's intensely interesting drama of the Civil War, will be the bill at the Valencia Theatre the week in May in which Decoration Day falls.

They Say In Portland That Billy Gleason Has a Shadow the Best of It on the Other "Billy" Who First Played David Harum

PORTLAND, April 5 — HEILIG THEATRE (Cal. Heilig, mgr.; William Pangle, res. mgr.)—Last Thursday night brought us The Right of Way, and it proved a very strong bill. In the company were found Theodore Roberts and Guy Standing and with two stars of that caliber no matter what the pooriness of the play might be, they would make it interesting enough to satisfy the most critical. It can truly be said that the present play owes its success to the two mentioned actors. The balance of the company were satisfactory. Last night The Girl Question opened its engagement to a good house. It is one of the best musical shows we have had this season, and let me add right now that that firm of Askin-Singer have sent us some pretty good musical comedies this season, viz.: The Time, the Place and the Girl, and A Stubborn Cinderella, and the present one, The Girl Question. Paul Nicholson is the principal comedy maker in their present offering, and his comedy went well. The supporting company is equal to all demands made upon them, and the chorus is good in every way. The Eddie Foy number went big. Richard Carle is an early offering at this house.

BUNGALOW THEATRE (Geo. L. Baker, mgr.; Milton Seaman, bus. mgr.)—Last season the Baker Stock Company produced David Harum at The Baker Theatre with William Gleason essaying the role made famous by W. H. Crane, and I think I am not exaggerating when I state that the play did about the week's largest business of last season at that house. Yesterday they offered the play again at this theatre, and both performances were the magnet that packed the house. But to get down to the play and players—well words are not in my power to say all the good things I would like to mention about Billy Gleason for his admirable performance of the role of David Harum. Long time ago we all learned that he was a capital actor, but I think I voice the sentiments of all of his admirers when I state that his Harum seems about nigh perfect. He follows the Crane interpretation of the role, and does not fall down one iota in his reading of the lines and business of that part as made known to us by Crane. Every one who left this playhouse did so with words of compliments falling from their lips for Billy Gleason. Following right after the star of this production comes his better half, Mrs. Mina Gleason, who played the role of his sister, Polly. It is one of those parts in which she excels, and again I must state that it looks like another Gleason week at the Bungalow. The stock leads are absent this week from the cast, and with all due respect to them and their ability, everyone must admit that they were not missed. The juvenile role is ably filled by Donald Bowles, and Maribel Seymour is playing the ingenue part faultlessly. Leo Lindhard and William Mong give some high class character work, especially the latter as the money lender. Oh, yes, I nearly forgot Howard Russell for his clever portrayal of the chief clerk of Harum it was a piece of work worthy of that sterling young actor. The rain scene in the second act is perfect in all respects. Next week Carmen is the bill. The First Born is underlined to follow.

BAKER THEATRE (George L. Baker, mgr.; Milton Seaman, bus. mgr.)—This house has been dark for the past week but reopens next Sunday with The Gingerbread Man.

ORPHEUM THEATRE (J. E. Errison, mgr.)—The bill at this theatre the past week was one we could not register any kicks against. The Misses Milch are the curtain raisers and their violin playing was very artistic. Following them came the headliner of the week, the playlet entitled The Night of the Wedding, produced by Dunlap-McCormick Company; a piece dealing with the serious side of the mother-in-law question. Following this act came Lotta Gladstone, who proved to be one of the best imitators we have ever had. Other enjoyable acts on the bill were Mme. Sandwina and Harry Webb. Commencing tonight the bill is James Neill and Edythe Chapman as headliners, Frank Fogarty, Sandor's Cirque, Fred Ray's Players, Imperial Quartette, Arcadia, and Ames & Corbett.

LYRIC THEATRE (Keating & Flood, mgrs.)—The biblical play, The Holy City, is the bill for this week at this popular playhouse, and the management have spared no expense in the production of the play. It drew big houses yesterday and no doubt will do a banner week's business for this house. The version used is one of the best. The leading roles were well entrusted to Herbert Ashton and Lillian Branscomb. The supporting company all did well, and Ralph Belmont, Lillian Griffiths and Rupert Drum are all well entitled to words of praise.

GRAND THEATRE (J. E. Errison, mgr.)—The bill for the ensuing week at this theatre is headed by Manuel Romaine and Company; the other acts are Delomore & Oneida, Tom Dugan, Glenroy & Russell, Carlyle's Pantomime Company, and Harry McDuffee.

Pantages has Sehara, India's Mystic Goddess, for their headline act for this week. A. W. W.

Is There to Be a Battle?

A telegram from Chicago, April 7, says that rumors of a theatrical war between the Shuberts and Klaw & Erlanger are agitating the convention of Western theatre managers now in session here. The association includes practically all the "one-night stand" theatres from Indiana to the Pacific coast. About 200 managers and owners, each operating from one to forty theatres, are present. It is feared that a struggle between the big companies will result in the small theatres being compelled to use the plays of one or the other, but not of both. The convention has suspended any aggressive tactics pending further information.

The Orpheum

A program of charm, novelty and variety will be given for the week beginning this Sunday matinee. Mlle. Zelig de Lussan, prima donna, who has entirely recovered from her cold, will most positively make her appearance and will be heard in her choicest operatic selections and ballads. Adeline Dunlap and Frank McCormack, eastern dramatic artists, will, with the assistance of Violet Flugrath, present a dramatic classic by Richard Duffey, called The Night of the Wedding. Bill Gordon and Nick Marx, appropriately styled the Weber and Fields of vaudeville, will convulse the audience with a skit termed You Can't Get None. Mons. and Madame Sandwinas, herculean acrobats from the Nouveau Cirque, Paris, are expected to create a sensation, for the man is a most phenomenal athlete while Madame Sandwinas is physically the most marvelous woman ever seen in vaudeville or circus. Although of generous build she is particularly graceful and muscular, and performs the most difficult feats with smiling ease. Next week will be the last of S. Miller Kent & Co., Elsie Fay, Miller & Weston, Edward Barnes, and of the beautiful Parisian danseuse, Joly Violetta. A new series of motion pictures will conclude the performance.

American Theatre

Sissieretta Jones, the Black Patti, and her Troubadours will appear for the last times this Saturday afternoon and evening, and at the Sunday matinee Norman Hackett, the popular young actor, will begin a week's engagement in Wm. G. De Mille and Margaret Turnbull's play, Classmates. This young star will make his first appearance here in modern character. He has already won for himself an enviable position in the classic drama and will be recalled with pleasure for his fine work with Louis James, Frederick Warde, H. Sothorn and Julia Marlowe, a substantial foundation of which few of the young actors can boast. It has led him logically and surely to the high position he now occupies.

Alcazar Theatre

It is announced by the management that its production of Under Two Flags, commencing Monday evening, will be the most stupendous achievement ever scored by a stock theatre. In addition to the twenty-eight speaking characters in the play a host of extra people have been engaged, and to prepare the inanimate accessories the Alcazar's artistic and mechanical resources have been taxed to the utmost limit, the painters, carpenters and electricians having been kept busy throughout the last month constructing the eight complete "sets" of scenery that are shown in the five acts. All of which tends to convey assurance that the stage pictures will be well worth seeing.

As for the play itself, no stronger drawing card could have been selected for Easter week, as it appeals to every phase of theatre-going taste. Dramatized from Ouida's novel of the same title—and the brilliant woman never wrote anything more popular—it enhances the charm of the book, because it embraces in condensed form the story's most interesting incidents. Evelyn Vaughn will play Cigarette, of course, and rehearsals indicate that it will be the most impressive character portrayal she has yet given in San Francisco. In the fourth act she leaps upon the back of a spirited horse and dashes up a rocky defile, and wherever the scene has been adequately presented is has thrilled the spectators. Bertram Lytell is cast for Cecil, and all the other Alcazar favorites have congenial roles.

Richard J. Jose will this season carry Mary L. Fitzsimmons, the solo harpist, who will accompany him in his songs.

Henry E. Dixey's Magical Art

Henry E. Dixey, who captivates his audiences, is a magician, and toured one season in a repertoire of tricks as clever as the great Hermann ever executed. As a contrast to the delightful entertainment he is now furnishing in Mary Jane's Pa, here is a little story Dixey relates of an experience that befell him as a magician. Mr. Dixey, one should know, is a tremendously versatile actor, whose scope of ability includes a first-class knack at sleight of hand, or legerdemain. Some time ago he found himself before a rural audience of his own choosing, and his portion of the entertainment consisted of palming watches. He borrowed a timepiece from an individual of the audience. The contributed watch came from a good looking country boy, and when in the progress of the trick Mr. Dixey pretended to drop the borrowed property to find the timepiece shattered into small bits, the country boy burst into tears. This unusual episode induced Mr. Dixey to ask the cause, and thereupon the boy explained that the watch was the gift of his dead mother, and he could not bear to be deprived of it in that sort of fashion. The sight of the crying boy appealed to Mr. Dixey and he immediately handed the child his watch, which of course, he had successfully palmed, having substituted a fake watch for the borrowed one to accomplish the trick. But, of course, the experiment failed, with the boy's tears. Mr. Dixey declared never before had an occurrence of that sort appeared to his notice.

GEORGE BAKER, the Portland manager, was in town last week hobnobbing with Walter Hoff Seeley of the Valencia.

Actors Flee While Audience is Hunting for Misses

SNOHOMISH, March 26.—Snohomish went through another sensational episode last night and come out somewhat smeared. The members of the Three of a Kind theatre company were rotten egged as they left the theatre, after giving a part of the worst performance seen here in many months. The Three of a Kind company consisted of four girls and a number of young men absolutely devoid of dramatic ability, unversed in their lines and without excuse for being on the road. The very first act was too much for the audience, and certain young men in the back of the house were heard talking. One is reported to have said: "Let's go out and get some old lemons and soak 'em." "No," said another, "we'll make it eggs." They left the house, and a member of the company hurried to the stage and repeated the conversation. The curtain went down at the end of the first act, and never went up any more. The intermission was a long one. The people waited reluctantly for what was to come, hoping against hope that something ahead would help make up for the outlay of money at the box-office. At last some one suggested that possibly the company had left by the back way. Several went on the stage and found the company one by one dropping out of the back window. A rush was made for the street and then things broke loose. Many eggs were shattered on the street, and some probably hit members of the company. It was a race for life down First Street toward the hotel. Two girls and part of the men ran up a stairway and did not venture down until 11 o'clock, and the small riot started at 9:30. No arrests were made, but a badly scared troupe of "actors" faded away one by one as trains or trolley cars left town.

Sothorn and Marlowe Together Again

Edward H. Sothorn and Miss Julia Marlowe have decided to resume their partnership, which was broken in 1907. They will appear together on the same stage in Shakespearean dramas, supported by players drawn from their present separate companies. The theatre chosen for their reappearance is the Academy of Music, New York, and the date has been set for May 15, immediately after each fulfills the present contracts arranged by their booking agents, the Shuberts. The greatest secrecy has been observed regarding the arrangement. One of the reasons why the stars have wished to keep their summer plans a secret is that it is acknowledged generally that they will head The New Theatre Company when the millionaire's playhouse at Central park and West Sixty-second street is dedicated, Nov. 10.

Final Nickelodeon Ordinance

The emasculated nickelodeon bill, prescribing strict requirements for all such amusement places erected in the future, but permitting the present 58

"theatres" to continue without installing sheet metal walls and ceilings, and with only minor changes in some of the more flagrant cases, was finally passed by the board of supervisors last Monday. Dr. d'Ancona and four other members vainly sought to have the board require the same safeguards against fire hazard of the 58 places in existence that all were legislating to exact of new establishments. Fire Chief Shaughnessy's warning that 25 of the present places were "dangerous and unsafe" having been blanketed by Chief Building Inspector Horgan's report that this was all a mistake except in regard to four or five, whose hazardous character was too pronounced to be covered up even with board of works whitewash, the majority of the board defeated D'Ancona's motion and, in Connolly's language, "made fish of one and fowl of another." Giannini, with the aid of the other members, then improved on their workmanship by passing to print a bill which will require 10 foot square patches of sheet metal to be tacked upon the walls and ceilings adjacent to the boxes holding the picture machine.

Mary Garden to Become a Princess

There is a persistent rumor in Paris that Mary Garden intends to marry Prince Mavrocordate immediately after her arrival there at the end of April. She has cancelled her engagement to sing at the Paris Opera this spring, to the consternation of Messenger, who, in retaliation, has engaged Lina Cavalieri to sing Thais, commencing on April 19.

The Stage As a Teacher

CHICAGO, April 5.—The stage is the most successful popular teacher of morals is the opinion of Jane Addams, who delivered a Sunday address to Sinai Temple, in the absence of Dr. Emil G. Hirsch. It was Miss Addams' contention that there is a lack of spiritual teaching for the children up to the age of thirteen years, which is producing an undesirable trend in national life. At that age, she asserted, the mind of the child is receptive and pliable, while it is more difficult to teach an adult. Miss Addams spoke of a boy 13 years old who committed suicide because he did not make the proper advancement at school in his estimation. Another tried to convert "dull lead pipe into theatre tickets in his search for something strenuous, exciting and adventurous." It was at this point that the speaker declared for the theatres as teachers of morals. "The plays are often poor and flimsy," she said, "but there are at least a dozen of them on the stage today which could easily be made the subject of sociological lectures."

Donah Benrino Sues Miller Kent

Donah Benrimo Reed, who formerly played a leading part in the one act sketch, Marriage in a Motor Car, now being produced at the Orpheum, filed suit in the Superior Court Wednesday against S. Miller Kent for $500 damages for breach of contract. Miss Benrimo alleges in her complaint she was employed under contract at $50 a week to appear in the sketch. The engagement was to last 27 weeks, but Kent had the right to terminate the contract by giving two weeks' notice, paying her two weeks' salary and reimbursing her in the amount of her fare back to New York City. Miss Benrimo charges that in Portland, Ore., on March 28 last, Kent abandoned the contract and secretly left for San Francisco. She followed him here and tendered her services, but was refused permission to appear in the sketch. Miss Benrimo asserts that pictures of herself in the role of leading lady are being exhibited by Kent. W. T. Hume is her attorney.

Stock Managers Organize

The Stock Producing Managers' Association was organized at a meeting in Albany week before last, and a certificate of incorporation was filed with the Secretary of State, New York, on March 20. The directors named are Percy G. Williams, Charles Emerson Cook, Sherman Brown, of Milwaukee; Thomas D. Long, of Denver; Charles Lovenberg, of Providence; Milton E. Hoffman, of Cleveland, and John C. Craig, of Boston. E. F. Albee and A. W. Dingwall are other members. Offices will be opened in the Long Acre building, Long Acre square, this week. Will H. Gregory will be in charge as secretary. The objects of the association are to lessen the charges for the use of plays, to eliminate the difficulties of dealing individually for plays, and in general to promote closer relations between stock company managers. The offices in New York will be in the nature of a clearing house, where plays will be selected and routed for the various companies represented. Players will be engaged here in many cases. The ability of the association to offer the owner of a play twenty or more weeks in stock will probably make it possible for stock houses to obtain rights to successful plays much sooner than is now the case. The incorporators state that the association is not a trust, but a working arrangement to protect contracts and to handle business more economically. The charter does not provide for any profit-making scheme.

EDMUND GARDINER has taken a four months' lease on the Victoria Theatre in Victoria, and will open a stock company about May 1.

HENRY G. SONNENBERG, who has been with the Orpheum Circuit for the past twelve years, has resigned his position as assistant manager and treasurer of the Los Angeles Orpheum. He intends taking an ocean voyage to Japan and other places of interest in the Orient. He will be gone about three months and will take a complete rest.

James Neill and Edythe Chapman Are the Headliners at the Portland Orpheum

PORTLAND, Ore., April 12.—The Heilig has been dark since the date of The Girl Question, but reopens the latter part of this week with Richard Carle in Mary's Lamb. Following Carle, Lillian Russell produces Wild-fire.

BUNGALOW THEATRE (Geo. L. Baker, mgr.; Milton Seaman, business mgr.)—Carmen is the offering for this week at this theatre, it opened yesterday to a packed house. Izetta Jewel returns to the cast this week and is portraying the leading part. Too much praise cannot be bestowed upon this young lady for her interpretation of the part. It is one of the very best things she has ever done, and will long be remembered by her admirers. Sydney Ayers was Don Jose, and the part was handled by him up to all requirements. James Gleason played Escamillo, and it was another hit for that popular young actor. Miss Seymour was satisfactory as Dolores and Louise Kent was good as Teresa. The settings are the best that money can buy, and the same statement applies to the costumes. Next week, The First Born.

BAKER THEATRE (George L. Baker, mgr.; Milton Seaman, business mgr.)—The Gingerbread Man opened at this theatre yesterday matinee to a packed house, and last night the same state of affairs existed. It is one of the daintiest and merriest of musical comedies, and made a hit in this section last season. The old songs of Beautiful Land of Bonbon and John Dough and many others were just as melodious as of yore. Fred Nice is again found playing the title part, and he is a fine comedian in every sense of that word; he can sing, has few equals as a dancer, and besides can whistle. What more can one ask of a comedian? Then there is Carrick Major, with his fine deep voice. Ross Snow and Maurice Holden are two more comedians that go to make up a first-class show. The chorus is large and the production first-class in every respect. The play will no doubt do the banner week's business of the present season at this house. Next week, Black Patti.

ORPHEUM THEATRE (J. E. Ericson, mgr.)—It was a case of old friends back with us when James Neill and Edythe Chapman opened at the Orpheum in the playlet, The Lady Across the Hall, last week. They were the headliners and they more than made good. Paul Sandor's Dog Circus also made a good-sized hit. Other pleasing acts on last week's bill were the Imperial Male Quartet and Arcadia. This week's bill is as follows: Lillian Mortimer; Fannie Rice; Four Sisters Amatis; Knight Brothers and Sawtelle; Collins and Brown; Chinko, and Minnie Kaufman.

LYRIC THEATRE (Keating & Flood, mgrs.)—Uncle Tom's Cabin is the bill for this week at this house, and the play is going to do a big week's business if yesterday's attendance can be taken as a criterion. Herbert Ashton is staging the play in first-class style, and each and every member of the cast is outdoing themselves. Lily Branscomb, Harry Belmont, Rupert Drum and Mrs. Lillian Griffiths all went to make up an enjoyable performance. Next week, Sapho.

GRAND THEATRE (J. E. Ericson, mgr.)—Brindamour, the jail-breaker, is the headline act for this week, and the balance of the bill comprises George Wilson; Mr. and Mrs. Robyns; Iva Donette; Doherty's Dogs, and Harry McDuffee.

Pantages has Balke's mule "Maud" for their headline act for this week. A. W. W.

Modjeska's Funeral

More than 5,000 persons called at the Knights of Columbus Clubhouse at Twenty-second and Figueroa Streets, in Los Angeles, last week to view the remains of Mme. Helena Modjeska. Professional men and women, social leaders, business men, members of various clubs of the city and a host of those who had been interested in the actress during her lifetime paid homage to her in death. The casket was literally covered with floral offerings. Almost every social and literary club in Los Angeles sent its tribute. A guard of honor from the Knights of Columbus, the Polish Literary Society and the Newman Club were in constant attendance until Monday morning, when the burial ceremonies were held, preparatory to shipping the body to her native Poland. The pall-bearers at the funeral were Dr. J. H. Bullard, James S. Rice, Samuel Tustin, Joseph Scott, Joseph Yoch, Isidor B. Dockweiler and Richard J. Dillon. Mme. Modjeska did not die poor. Her property, it is stated, will total about $120,000. There was an impression abroad that Mme. Modjeska and her distinguished journalist-husband, Count Bozenta, were considerably reduced in material means, through business reverses and by other ways. Their income, however, was substantial, and was so fixed by good securities as to continue indefinitely. The personal property of the actress, counting her costumes, her jewels, her library and her sumptuous household furnishings, many articles of which were presented to her and many of which she gathered in travels all over the world, is worth something more than $20,000. Of these, jewels form the largest part. The land holdings of the family in Southern California were comparatively small—considering the beautiful property, the "Forest of Arden," which she once owned. This famous homestead was sold about two years ago to a country club of Long Beach men, who paid for it $35,000. As property goes, this was a fair valuation, though Mme. Modjeska must have spent considerably more than $100,000 in improvements upon it. These, however, were in artistic trifles that did not add to its general value, and the cost of house construction in itself was about five times greater in this comparatively inaccessible place than it would have been elsewhere. The holdings of Mme. Modjeska at the time of her death consisted of the house and lot at Bay Island, near Santa Ana, probably worth $3,000, and an acre or so at Tustin, three miles east of Santa

CLOTHIER TO THE PROFESSION

Ana, worth perhaps $1,500 or $2,000. There were also a number of first-class securities. The largest single property, according to reliable information, consists of a Polish bond, worth about $40,000, backed as effectively as though by the government, and interest bearing for a very extended period. There were also some standard American stocks, some railway bonds, first mortgages and the like. All of these properties were in good shape and are secure. Yet this little fortune, comfortable as it is, was only a small portion of what Modjeska earned during her actual career upon the American stage. This may be estimated at not less than $800,000. Its owner's princely generosity accounted for the disposal of the larger part of it, as no case of suffering or want among her relatives, or even mere acquaintances, ever went unrelieved, as far as she could prevent it. And her gifts in Poland are actually historic. She is the founder of the Industrial School for Girls in Cracow, Poland. She gave $100,000 outright for this work. The institution teaches poor girls the arts of needlework, housework, and in short all the needful learning necessary to make them self-supporting in an intelligent way. At another time she made a trip to Poland with several scores of thousand in actual cash. This was disbursed to charitable causes within a few months. Some time ago her biography was sold in the East, and she had received in advance payment and early royalties about $7,000. The actress left a will, but this, in all probability, will not be filed. Her attorney, in answer to questions concerning it, said: "I cannot at this time say anything about the will, or about any of Modjeska's property, save to state that the will is a simple document, devoid of any sensational clauses, or even any of marked public interest. Briefly, it is a purely family affair." From other sources, however, it is learned that the reason of the probable non-filing of the will lies in the fact that all of her property is already disposed of, save a single acreage piece in Orange County. The tranquility of the family affairs of Count Bozenta and his wife were notable, hence at her death the property simply passes to his entire control, and so will remain until his death, when, in all probability, the simple private testament referred to will dispose of the remainder among relatives and others—parties individual or corporate—whom the great actress deemed worthy of benefactions.

THURLOW WHITE has been specially engaged to play the heavy in next week's production of At Valley Forge at the Broadway in Oakland.

HELEN HALE will retire from the leads at Y. Liberty stock in Oakland next week.

Mme. Nordica May Return to the Metropolitan Opera House

Mme. Lillian Nordica probably will return to the New York Metropolitan Opera Company to sing next season. Although much secrecy has been maintained as to the artists to be engaged, it became known last week that the management is anxious to have the prima donna rejoin the forces at the Metropolitan, as she did under the regimes of the late Maurice Grau and Heinrich Conried. Mme. Nordica, it is known, would be quite happy in the company with which she was so prominently identified in the past, but it is understood that she desires to sing more than a dozen or eighteen times during the season. But for the reason that her performances were limited she would have remained a member of the Conried company, which she left after the close of the winter of 1905-6. The singer declined to make any statement beyond saying that if she again became a member of the Metropolitan company the public would know it in good time. Andreas Dippel, administrative manager of the Metropolitan, said that while it is true that negotiations with Mme. Nordica are in progress, he could say nothing as to what had been agreed upon if anything. Mme. Nordica last sang in the Metropolitan three seasons ago. After that she went on tour at the head of the San Carlos Opera Company. Then she joined the Manhattan company, reopening that opera house in the autumn of 1907 in La Gioconda, but resigned before the season ended. All of last spring and this winter the prima donna devoted to concert tours, which extended from coast to coast, in which she met with great success. It is known that many of Mme. Nordica's friends in society would be pleased to have her sing again in the Metropolitan her famous roles in the Wagnerian and Italian operas, and their wishes may have some weight in deciding the question of her engagement. The management was anxious to have her join the company for the coming spring tour to Chicago and Pittsburg, but concert engagements prevented her doing so.

Margaret Illington Is Bound to Have Those Babies

CHICAGO, April 11.—"I have taken the initial steps to obtain a divorce from Daniel Frohman so that I can marry Edward J. Bowes," said Mrs. Daniel Frohman at the Auditorium Annex tonight. Mrs. Frohman, who on the stage is Margaret Illington, has just returned from New York, where she said she went to consult her attorney on the divorce. "I don't care to say what the charges will be or to talk about the divorce matter, except to say that I am going to get it just as soon as I possibly can. I want to be married to the man I really love and settle down to domestic life. I am going to have eleven children every year," said Mrs. Frohman, with a merry laugh. I am going to San Francisco tomorrow to meet Mr. Bowes. I want to be near him until I get my divorce. I hate the stage. I hate everything connected with it. It is all sham and hypocrisy. I want to live myself. I want to be real. I do not want to be living as other people all the time. The stage is no place for a real woman. The hotel is no place for a woman. What do you see? You see sham, hypocrisy. All the women think of is dress. Look at the big hats. They are hideous. The gowns are hideous. These are the women who do not care for home and children. What they seek is show. It is the same with the stage. It is all show and ambition. My husband broke me down by his ambition for me. He worked me until the physical strain was too great and I had to leave. I shall never go back. As soon as I am freed I shall settle down with the man whose ideals accord with mine. He is wealthy, but he is a domestic man. We shall have our own little home and I shall try to forget there is a world. I want the world to forget there ever was a Margaret Illington. What I want is babies, my own little babies, to nestle at my heart and call me mother. I have been cheated out of my home and babies for so long that I want all of them I can have. I am hungry for them."

Couldn't Forget She Was a Lady

William Seymour, Charles Frohman's general stage manager, tells this story of an aspirant to the boards: "This young lady had a certain amount of influence, and so was cast for a little character part. She rehearsed and proved satisfactory. The piece had its initiation at Williamsburg. Going over on the ferry the morning of the day the piece was to be produced I was told a young man wished to see me. He handed me a note which ran somewhat after this fashion: 'Dear Mr. Seymour: On consideration I am sorry to say that I have decided to throw up my part. I was born a lady, educated and brought up as a lady, and I really cannot bring myself to appear before the American public except in the character of a lady.' Later on I believe by some means or other she did get a lady's part with another company and was a total failure."

Butler, Walling and Cashman Called As Witnesses to a Dog Fight

Several of the members of the Alcazar Theatre company, instead of attending rehearsal Tuesday morning, gathered in Police Judge Shortall's court to give evidence for the prosecution against the owner of the bull terrier that nearly killed Don, the favorite dog of the Alcazar, April 3. The original defendant was Benjamin Blum, but the charge against him was withdrawn and George F. Winters was substituted. Blum testified that he was sitting in an automobile and saw the two dogs fighting. Winters at the time was playing a slot machine at the cigar stand on the corner. Waldo Striker, musician at the Alcazar; Will Walling, Harry Cashman and Fred J. Butler all testified to seeing the bull terrier chewing Don's legs. Walling said that some one was beating the bull terrier on the legs with a revolver, another man was hitting the dog on the head with a mat, while his wife was squirting seltzer water in the creature's face. The judge dismissed the case.

Shuberts Finally Out of New York Managers' Association

NEW YORK, April 13.—The Theatrical Managers' Association today accepted the resignation of the firm of Sam S. & Lee Shubert, who withdrew last week because they were not allowed votes in proportion to the number of their playhouses. A committee was appointed to draw up a statement in answer to the Shuberts. President Charles Burnham in addressing the meeting said the question of proportionate adjustment was gone into very thoroughly when the association was formed, and that the one member one vote idea had been favored from the beginning.

Berlin Hisses At Play Aimed At Germany

Berlin, April 11.—The German version of Du Maurier's An Englishman's Home was produced at the Neus Theatre tonight before an audience which included high officials of the imperial court. This is the play that created a sensation in England, dealing as it does with the invasion of that country by a foreign force, and originally it was thought that the play was aimed at Germany. Its reception tonight was so hostile that it is not likely to be repeated. It virtually was laughed and hissed off the stage. The hissing, stamping and hooting began with the second act and continued almost incessantly until the final scenes, the words of which were completely drowned in the din.

Opera Story of Laparra's La Habanera

In the tavern of a Spanish village gathered a group of peasants. From the street outside came the sound of revelry. For it was feast day and every one was in holiday humor. The one exception to the general gayety was a dark-browed young man who sat gloomily in one corner of the tavern. He was Ramon, son of an old and unfortunate family. He was brooding over the loss of pretty Pilar, whom he adored, and who was about to marry his brother, Pedro. Several of the townsfolk sought to draw Ramon into talk. But he rebuffed them all, knocking down one man who had ventured to slap him on the shoulder. One by one the people quit the tavern, leaving Ramon alone with his miserable thoughts. Outside a band of musicians struck up the wild music of the Habanera dance. The door opened, and Pilar ran in, looking for Ramon. Catching sight of the melancholy youth, she begged him to come out and dance the Habanera with her. In response, Ramon suddenly leaped to his feet, threw his arms about Pilar and crushed her to his breast. She cried aloud in terror. At her cry, Ramon, dismayed by his own madly impulsive act, released her. Barely had he returned to his seat when Pedro hurried in. The newcomer, suspecting nothing, greeted his sweetheart ardently, and they fell to talking of their happy future. Again the Habanera sounded from the street outside. Pilar suggested that they join in the dance. She ran off, followed by Pedro. But at the doorway Ramon halted his brother, brusquely forbidding Pedro to leave the room. Pedro, surprised, sought to calm the angry man. But as Ramon still barred his way the lover thrust him aside. Ramon, furious at the thought of Pedro dancing with Pilar, drove a knife hilt deep into his brother's back. Pedro reeled to the floor—dying. The approach of death gave him clearer mental vision. He all at once understood that Ramon loved Pilar. With a last effort the dying man gasped, "You shall see me again in a year—less one day!" and sank back dead. Ramon rushed out of the inn just in time to avoid Pilar, who had come back to see why Pedro had not followed her to the dance. Her shrieks at sight of her dead lover brought an excited throng to the spot. Last of all an old blind man—the father of Pedro and Ramon—was led in. The father was overwhelmed with grief. Summoning Ramon, he commanded him to take solemn oath to track down his brother's murderer and to avenge the crime. Ramon shrank back in dread. The father, dipping his hand in Pedro's blood, made a sign with it on Ramon's brow. The assassin, panic-stricken, took the oath of vengeance. A year—less one day—had passed. Time had softened Pilar's grief. She had at last consented to listen to Ramon's love-word. On the following morning she and Pedro's unsuspected slayer were to be married. To the father's reproaches at Ramon's neglect to discover the murderer of his brother, the girl declared Ramon was made unhappy and his reason imperiled by the constant references to that terrible tragedy. And, indeed, a profound melancholy that nobody could explain upon any other grounds had settled over the assassin. Three blind beggars sought admittance to the old house where Ramon and his father lived. Ramon fancied he heard Pedro's voice outside the house and refused to open the door. Pilar calmed his fears and he at last admitted the beggars. As they entered, Pedro's ghost—unseen by any one except Ramon—crept in with them. A carouse followed, and Pilar made the horrified Ramon dance the Habanera with her. But, throughout the dance, he could not take his eyes from the ghost. Pedro, unheard by the others, ordered Ramon to tell Pilar the whole story of the murder; threatening that otherwise she should die. A funeral procession moved into the nearby cemetery. Ramon and Pilar went along with others to lay flowers on the grave of the newly buried. They paused beside Pedro's tomb. There Ramon tried to tell Pilar the true tale of his brother's death. But the words died in his throat. He could not confess. Pilar suddenly fell dead across Pedro's grave. Ramon rushed from the cemetery—a maniac.

The Theatrical Treasurers of Los Angeles Are Becoming Luxurious and Now Banquet Luxuriously

LOS ANGELES, April 15.—The daily crop of rumors regarding the operations of the Shuberts in Los Angeles has crystallized in the definite announcement that they will build a theatre. They have abandoned the hope of securing the Majestic from Oliver Morosco and are making an attempt to secure a site at Main and Winston streets.

The theatrical treasurers of Los Angeles have formed a club, the object of which is sociability and the promoting of a better acquaintance among its members. The following officers were elected at the first meeting: President, Joseph Montrose of the Majestic; vice-president, George Clayton of the Belasco; treasurer, Warwick Horn of the Orpheum; secretary, Charles Clark of the Grand; recording secretary and press agent, J. Barnes of the Belasco; sergeant-at-arms, Geo. Baudrand of the Burbank. This is the only organization of the kind west of Chicago and we wish them success.

BELASCO—And still The Dollar Mark continues at the Belasco Theatre with all the rush of a first week's performance. In the meantime Miss Reed is getting impatient to begin work, and threatens to return to the East if rehearsals for Miss Hobbs do not commence soon.

BURBANK—Is musical comedy popular at the Burbank? Just stand outside the box office before any performance of Gay New York and I am sure the question will be answered to your entire satisfaction. Miss Hall is making quite a hit with her dancing as well as her singing. Few of us were aware that she was gifted in this line. This week Mr. Giblyn's song, Linky Dee, is being sung with a chorus accompaniment, the girls appearing in a new set of costumes.

MAJESTIC—Daniel Sully appears at the Majestic Theatre this week in a three-act comedy by Jerrold Shepherd, entitled The Matchmaker. Mr. Sully is cast as the pastor of a struggling little church in a Western cattle town, where the congregation is poor, the collections scanty and the clergyman's lot a hard one. The part fits Mr. Sully well and the naturalness of his acting is most pleasing. The play, while it is not a great one, is full of heart interest and holds the attention of the audience from first to last. Gertrude Earl, the best woman in the cast, is seen in the role of the priest's ward, a young girl who was born in the mountains and reared in the priest's house in a Nevada frontier town. Julius Wright gives a good characterization of Jim Carter, a wealthy ranchman, who, foiled in his villainy by the priest, turns out to be of some account after all. R. A. Stewart appears as Willie Beckman, New Yorker. Each character is a study in itself.

MASON—Large and fashionable audiences are the order of the day at the Mason Opera House. Madame Nazimova, the Russian star, is the attraction. The Doll's House is the play in which she appears the first part of the week. Later she will be seen in Hedda Gabler and Comtesse Coquette. Comment on the play, The Doll's House, is not necessary as most of us are familiar with this play of Ibsen's. All praise Nazimova, although many do not like the drama. Nazimova gives a fine impersonation of Nora, the doll wife, but she is capable of far bigger things. She is supported by a very excellent company which includes besides the two children in the cast—Brandon Tyon, Cyril Young, Evelyn Wielding and Percy Lyndal. Mme. Nazimova is making her initial appearance in Los Angeles, although she was first seen as an American star three seasons ago. She is a Shubert star and her tour is under their direction.

GRAND—The Tourists is the offering of Ferris Hartman and company at the Grand for the week. There is plenty of good comedy, more plot than is at all necessary, and some very good musical numbers. Mr. Hartman cast as Timothy Todd is as funny as ever, the mere sight of him calls forth a laugh. Walter DeLeon as John Duke, the young man who gets into much trouble, is fine. There is something doing every second that he is on the stage and he sure is the busy boy all the time. Mr. DeLeon works hard and justly merits the applause given him. Oscar Walch as the Captain of the Rajah's body-guard has less to do than usual, but his voice has lost none of its sweetness. Miss Christine Nielsen is cast as the Rajah's daughter, Princess Cholulu. All of her songs are sung well; however Miss Nielsen would make a much more pleasing appearance if she would not let her audience see how much it bores her to be obliged to respond to an encore. The rest of the characters are well taken care of by Emil Kruschke, Charles Arling, Joseph Fogerty, "Muggins" Davis, Josie Hart, Anna Littel and Grisella Kingsland. The chorus does some good work and wears some very attractive costumes.

ORPHEUM—The bill for the week at the Orpheum is headed by Ray L. Royce, who presents a series of eccentric character sketches. Mr. Royce is one of the cleverest in this kind of work. The Eight Palace Girls, according to the bill, direct from the Palace Theatre, London, are agile, pretty and sing well. They are assisted by Mr. James Clemons, who does some difficult dancing. Mr. James McDonald and Miss Valerie Huntington are pleasing in a variety of character songs. The Blessings, a man and a woman, present a clever acrobatic act. The holdovers include Six Little Girls and a Teddy Bear, Mr. Herbert Mitchell, A Modern Pocahontas and the Kitabanzai troupe of Japanese athletes.

LOS ANGELES—The Australian Tree Fellers are featured at the Los Angeles Theatre this week. The men are introduced as the light, the middle and the heavy weight champions of the world, and are said to have won their titles at the Melbourne tournament last November. One of these wood choppers saws through a tree 14 inches in diameter in just 47 seconds. Callan and Smith are clever dancers and they also try to sing. John LeClaire is a juggler. Miss Margaret Severance has a novel character act.

John W. Heffern and company present a playlet, The Grafter, which is interesting and well played. Fougiers and Emerson complete the list with a song and dance act.

FISCHER'S—The new managers of the Fischer First street playhouse present a good bill for this, their opening week. The Sugimotos are headliners and are Jap acrobats of much cleverness. Bernard Dyllin pleases with his character songs. Ransdale and Bance contribute a bit of musical comedy with, The Spoony Couple. Vocal numbers are furnished by Annie Bauman and Trevathan Smith. Motion pictures complete the bill.

UNIQUE—The humorous efforts of a retired hod carrier trying to break through the crust of society via the medium of a large sized bank account, under the title of Ryan's Party, furnishes the amusement at the Unique Theatre this week. Will H. Armstrong makes a good Irishman and sings Kate Carey; Ben Sellers is the Dutchman and sings Not the Sort of Girl I Care About. John Martin makes a hit in his song Fatherland. Miss Sutherland and Miss Elwood are cast as the two daughters of Ryan and both have solo numbers. Miss Atkins and Mr. Armstrong are well received in their duet Beautiful Dreams. Mr. Sellers and Miss Elwood also have a duet entitled You and I and the Moon. Jack Curtis as the well meaning tough completes the cast.

WALKER—There is a program at the Walker Theatre this week of unusual interest and novelty. Some of the acts have never before been seen outside of the larger Eastern vaudeville houses. After a week's absence Roberta returns this week to the Walker Theatre with an entire new act entitled The Great Trunk Mystery. Phil Godfrey, another headliner, is called the eccentric acrobat. Miriam Marr is the young lady with the baritone voice, and in her singing of coon songs imitates May Irwin. Charles Applegate is a well known Hebrew comedian. He has a very pleasing voice and sings well. Clara Dagnau and her dancing boys, Frank Wilson and John Murray, are live wires. Nagel, Adams and company present a laughable sketch, The Burlesque Actress.

REGAL—The program for the Main street Regal Theatre for the week includes the Morgans, in a new feature specialty; the Norman Brothers in an acrobatic act; Eva Martelle, soubrette; James Hitherington, in illustrated songs, and Ransom's orchestra, in a variety of classical and popular music.

EMPIRE—Manager Walter Fulkerson continues to present up-to-date vaudeville at his little Third street theatre of a high class and diverting nature. A balladist, illustrated songs, a comedy sketch, and a monologist are features of the current bill.

Lillian Russell, the noted actress, now playing an engagement at the Mason Opera House, has purchased a residential site at Point Loma, San Diego, upon which she contemplates the erection of a costly home.

George Broadhurst and Manager Blackwood of the Belasco have arranged for a series of Broadhurst plays for the Main street house for next season. The first piece to be given during the time set aside for the Broadhurst product is The Man of the Hour. This will be followed by a new play called A Garden of Lies. It is founded upon the story of the same name by Justin Miles Forman. Then will come The Captain, another new play—a farce of the What Happened to Jones and Why Smith Left Home type; one week will be devoted to a revival of The Easterner, while the Belasco players are preparing for the first performance on any stage of the new play upon which Broadhurst is now at work in his Santa Monica bungalow.

FLORENCE D. EMERY.

F. Marion Crawford Dies

Sorrento (Italy), April 9.—F. Marion Crawford, the novelist, died here at 7:30 o'clock tonight. He was born in 1845. Mr. Crawford knew the end was near and calmly he encouraged his family to bear up and to cease weeping. "I enter serenely into eternity," he said. Mr. Crawford collapsed last night, but during the night was without fever. Sadly he expressed the presentiment that he was soon to die. But almost immediately afterward, when referring to the approaching Good Friday, he said: "I die with Christ." Mr. Crawford's daughter, at his request, then read to him Plato's dialogues, the novelist declaring that they taught him serenity in death.

New People for Valencia Theatre

Harriet Worthington's introduction to San Francisco has been attended with disastrous results. Opening on Sunday and giving promise of becoming very popular in the Valencia leads, Miss Worthington was unfortunate on Tuesday night to wrench her knee and sprain her ankle during the scene in the pirate ship. She slipped on one of the guns used in the act, and, although in great pain, finished the evening. On Wednesday, Effie Bond took her place and will fill out the engagement of Peter Pan. As the attending doctors fear Miss Worthington may not be able to act for two or three months, Manager Walter Hoff Seeley has engaged Florence Oakley for leads, opening in If I Were King, which follows Peter Pan. George Osbourne will in that play also become a new and permanent member of the stock, as will Paul McAllister, the new leading man.

Litigation Over Pickwick Theatre In San Diego

Mrs. Frances Zahn, a Los Angeles widow, has brought suit to cancel the lease of Scott A. Palmer and W. H. Palmer of the Pickwick Theatre, of San Diego. She charges them with mismanagement and failure to account and asks that a receiver be appointed to take charge of the theatre business. Judge Guy will hear the application in the Superior Court on April 20th. The Pickwick is one of the leading houses in that city. Mrs. Zahn claims that a leasehold on the premises was transferred to her by L. J. Wilde, a local banker, who built the house. The Palmer brothers say they have no contract with Mrs. Zahn.

OTIS SKINNER's engagement does not include Sunday night performances.

Shubert Has Secured American Theatre

J. J. Shubert is at the St. Francis, and everybody in town who has a theatrical proposition to float is haunting the little man who represents the new and big theatrical interests in New York, who threatens lively competition all over the United States. As THE DRAMATIC REVIEW was confidently informed some weeks ago, the Shuberts have arranged with Manager Abe Cohn and his associates of the American Theatre to send the Shubert shows here, commencing September 1st. The list of shows promised are: Girls, The Blue Mouse, The Witching Hour, The Wolf, The Girl Behind the Counter, The Truant, Nearly a Hero, Mlle. Mischief, The Mimic World, The Typewriter Girl, The King of Cardonia, Lena, The Paradise of Mohammed, The Handsome Guard; E. H. Sothern, Julia Marlowe, Mary Mannering, Marietta Ally, Alla Nazimova, Bertha Galland, Maxine Elliott, Mlle. Courtenay, Louise Gunning, James T. Powers, De Wolf Hopper, Lew Fields, Sam Bernard, Charles Cherry, John Mason, Eddie Foy, William Faversham, Jeff de Angeles, Minnie Dupree, George Fawcett, Mabel Barrison, Harry Coner, Elsa Ryan, Gertrude Hoffman, to which will soon be added Gertrude Elliott, Forbes Robertson and Lewis Waller, for her first American season. In Los Angeles Mr. Shubert did not do anything definitely, but it is thought possible that he will eventually secure a house there. Rumor has it that he has approached Oliver never be strong enough to appear upon the stage. She is a San Francisco girl, and her work was always characterized by a dainty charm that was unusual.

Morosco for his beautiful Majestic Theatre, and also that John Blackwood would not be adverse to playing the Shubert shows at the Grand Opera House. In regard to the Shubert circuit, Mr. Shubert said: "Now we have fourteen theatres in New York alone, and sixty in all through the country. We will have one as soon as we can in every city in this country and Canada. We will be able to send a company direct to the Coast from Omaha or Kansas City and play them only week and two weeks stands. This will enable us to send you the same people seen in New York, in a fresh production, that has not been dragged about all the one-night stands in the country. The result will be that this Coast will have just the same and just as good companies as seen in New York, and that we will get some of the big business that is waiting here on this Coast for the right sort of shows. As to San Francisco, we intend eventually to build a theatre here. It will be a playhouse which, in beauty and completeness of equipment, will be worthy of this wonderful city, which has so splendidly emerged from disaster. San Francisco is bound to become a producing center. There is room for two here. Klaw & Erlanger will probably flourish as heretofore. We will get the business if we give the public the shows. This we intend to do. It will not be before 1910, however, that we will be able to route all of our attractions direct, though by next September we will be started here. We will jump our plays direct from Omaha to San Francisco, thus eliminating the source of complaint which actors make against doing one-night stands at great intervals on the way to San Francisco and the Coast. This travel necessarily interferes with the perfection of the productions you get here. The scenery is injured, the costumery is wilted and worn, and the players are wearied by the fatigue of the tour. That condition keeps many of the best Eastern players—except stars—from the rigors of a Western trip. We will obviate that by a long jump to the coast. When here we will play Los Angeles, where we are ready and about to build; San Francisco, Portland, Tacoma, Seattle and Spokane. In addition to our own attractions we will buckle up with David Belasco and Fiske, who have been independents for some time. We will produce their pieces and carry their stars over our circuit and give cities, which heretofore have been unable to see them, a chance to witness the art of a Warfield, of a Mrs. Fiske, or the skill and ingenuity of a David Belasco. We would be willing," and here Shubert smiled, "to play any of the Klaw & Erlanger attractions if they appeal to us. The reason why the people on the Coast do not know us and think we are rushing to bite something off that we can't swallow is because only the merest fraction of the Shubert pieces ever reach the Coast. We have staged and financed more than 125 plays in the last three years, but of this number not more than seven have been sent here." From here Mr. Shubert will go north on a house-hunting visit.

Virginia Shelton

Miss Virginia Shelton, the strikingly pretty young actress, whose likeness adorns our front page this week, will soon be seen on the Coast in Charles Swickard's play, When Love Is Young. This is a very beautiful and intensely interesting drama, which will be presented in the first-class theatres about the first of July. Miss Shelton will be supported by a strong company, and the production will be something out of the ordinary. Everything will be carried, even to the smallest "prop." Accompanying the show will be a special musical feature, which will replace the local orchestra. In fact, this will be one of the strongest attractions to be seen here this season. Miss Shelton has a part specially suited to her abilities, and her gracious personality and talents will be given full swing.

Fischer Has Secured the Novelty

After much backing and filling, Herr E. A. Fischer of Los Angeles and San Francisco has secured a lease on the Novelty Theatre in this city and will open it in the near future with musical comedy and vaudeville. And he will make a go of it, too, for Fischer is a shrewd showman and people have faith in him.

Olive Fremstedt Remarks On Children and Art

The following letter received from Olive Fremstedt is self-explanatory: "Sir: In reference to a statement that I am quoted to have made about singers having children, I should like to say that I am totally unconcerned about this matter. My statement was purely personal. When asked if I should enjoy a home with children, I answered that as my art was all-absorbing it would be impossible for me personally to give a child or children the attention that they rightfully deserved without detriment to my life work. As so many have taken this matter as directed to them, I shall appreciate your putting them to rights. Cordially yours—Olive Fremstedt, Minneapolis, April 12th."

Modjeska to be Honored In Poland

Warsaw, Russian Poland, April 15.—A movement is on foot in Russia and Austrian Poland to honor the memory of Helena Modjeska, the Polish actress, who died in California, April 8. Arrangements are being made for a memorial service to be held in this city, and a statue of Mme. Modjeska will be erected in the foyer of the Warsaw theatre. A committee is working in Austrian Poland to erect another statue at the Lemborg theatre. The Warsaw theatre has decided to establish a Modjeska fund to further the education of young actors. An effort is being made to collect money to bring Modjeska's body to Warsaw for burial, and if this is permitted there will be a public funeral. There is some doubt, however, whether the Russian authorities will permit this, as Modjeska was expelled from Russia several years ago when she was about to make a public appearance in this city. If burial in Warsaw is not possible, the body will be interred in Cracow, in Austrian Poland.

Gerster Has Successor

BERLIN, April 10.—Mme. Etelka Gerster, who will be remembered by many American operagoers, has been living in Berlin since her retirement from the stage. At a musical entertainment given recently in her home, Mme. Gerster introduced her daughter, Fraulein Berta Gerster to the professional artists who made up the audience. Fraulein Gerster has a rich, dramatic soprano, with qualities that promise to earn for themselves a reputation of her mother's international fame.

Airdome for Auburn

Messrs. Hazlitt and Christopherson will open a Airdome in Auburn next Monday, later on alternating a stock company with one to be established in Grass Valley. In the company are Burt Porter, Dick Scott, Viola Lambert, Dick Hazlett, Reva Raymond and Vera Hamilton.

The Reopening of the New Orpheum

Next Monday night, when the Orpheum resumes business at the old stand on O'Farrell Street, there will be celebrated an event memorable in the history of new San Francisco. The occasion will be marked by a happy combination of sentiment and enthusiasm. The new Orpheum reflects much credit on the management. It is one of the best equipped theatres in America. Supplied with every ingenious contrivance that has been designed for the comfort and convenience of theatregoers, this new vaudeville house bespeaks a most praiseworthy disposition to minister to the esthetic sense. It contains much that is pleasing to the eye and abolishes altogether the much objugated advertising drop curtain. As indicating the remarkable interest in the dedication of the new house, it is only necessary to mention the line that formed last Saturday night for the box-office sale on Monday morning. People from everywhere evinced a remarkable interest and wanted to be present the first night. Of course, many could not be accommodated, even though the theatre is the largest in the city.

Shakespearean Festival

Manager Will Greenbaum promises a week of Shakespearean productions with the appropriate music interpreted by a notable symphony orchestra. The actors will be the Ben Greet English Company, numbering over thirty players, singers, dancers and pantomimists, under the personal direction of Ben Greet. The orchestra will be the Russian Symphony Orchestra of New York, under the direction of Modest Altschuler. Over one hundred people will be employed in the magnificent performances. The season will open Monday, May 3d, and the repertoire will include A Midsummer Night's Dream with Mendelssohn's music; The Tempest, with Tschaikowsky's and Arthur Sullivan's music; Romeo and Juliet, with Tschaikowsky's and Gounod's music, and Merry Wives of Windsor, with Nicolai's setting. Two special performances will be given at the Greek Theatre in Berkeley on Saturday night, May 1st, and Sunday afternoon, May 8th.

A Merry Widow Scandal

Some idea of the amazing financial success of Henry W. Savage's American production of Lehar's Merry Widow is obtained from the report that the gross receipts of the Boston company, which closed its season of thirty-three weeks ending last Saturday in Montreal, amounts in round numbers to nearly a half-million dollars. Last year this same company played six months in Chicago to over $300,000, while the New York company played fifty-two weeks to a million dollars. The New York company and the Western company are still on tour, playing even to greater receipts than the Boston company. This means that up to April 1st three Merry Widow companies this season have played to over one and a half million dollars, a record that cannot be touched by the total receipts of any other six opera companies.

MARIE HOWE and Charles Swickard will be added to the Kolb and Dill forces for the Los Angeles engagement which opens at the Majestic week after next.

Van Ness Theatre

The Honor of the Family is, first of all, an author's triumph. The American stage has not in years seen a better constructed play, and this successful adaptation of Balzac's Menage de Garcon naturally revives the old suggestion that the world lost a possible peer of Shakespeare when Balzac turned to the novel instead of to the drama. Paul M. Potter's adaptation of Fabres' play leaves a far more pleasant impression than does the original story of Bachelors' Apartments, from which the play was written, for where Balzac gives us in all its revolting realism the sordid selfishness of his Colonel Philippe Bridau, squandering his family's money, and ending on the boulevard, boasting of the days of Napoleon in one breath, and wheedling a drink of brandy from a friend in the next, the play emphasizes the likeable and pleasing traits in Philippe's character. A more artistic entrance than Philippe's would be rare indeed. We have been shown the scheming of Flora Brazier and her lover, Commandant Max Gilet, to get the money of old Jean Jacques Rouget, who, in his senile love for this young "gutter girl," has lifted her to a position of mastery over his household, has made his will in her favor, and is about to sign a paper deeding over to her the bulk of his property. They are succeeding famously in their plotting, overcoming the overtures of old Rouget's sister and nephew for financial assistance for her other son, Colonel Philippe, who is in prison. When, within the last few minutes of the first act, the Colonel himself acquitted on his trial bursts onto the stage with a swaggering and commanding air that relieves the situation of its overcharged sordidness, and starts things swinging to the final defeat of the two young plotters. The change from when, before her first entrance, Flora, off stage, commands that Borniche, seeking assistance from her Rouget, be sent away, to the plea by the old man, in Act II to Philippe, that he "don't beat Flora"; and the startling answer by Philippe in the third act, to Flora's artful wiles and suggestions of her dreaming of meeting just such a man as Philippe, "To hell with dreams"; and the final dejection in the last act, when Flora's love has been mortally wounded by Philippe in a duel brought about by Philippe himself, to rid the scene of that factor against his own intention of sharing in his uncle's wealth; all this is a most vivid portrayal of an intense duel between a clever woman and a cleverer man, each seeking the same goal; and it never flags in interest for an instant. A. G. Andrews, as Jean Jacques Rouget, has created a part that will live in the memories of all Balzac's readers. From his first entrance, leering through the door windows at his young Flora, with a look that recalled Count Hulot in Cousin Bette,—all through the sustained miserly, weak, Flora cajoled and Philippe bullied character;—to the ending when the Honor of the Family is saved by the turning out of doors of Flora by Philippe, he gave to us a most remarkable sketch—the most real Balzac touch in the play. Otis Skinner's Philippe is such glorious daredeviltry and roistering bravado that we can imagine no other than he portraying it. Otis Skinner is certainly to be thanked for giving us, in this age of theatrical froth, a real play, written by a real dramatist, and produced by a real company. There was much merit in his witty curtain speech on the opening night, when he congratulated San Francisco on this opportunity to see such "a capital play so capitally produced." Percy Haswell as Flora Brazier was a most effective foil for Philippe, and at times she was Fiskian in her intense bitterness and hatred for the man who had taken from her her old protector. The last act is probably the most artistic in the play, for, though the duel between Philippe and the handsome Max Gilet has taken place (one couldn't blame Flora for loving such a handsome fellow!), and we know in the beginning of this act that Max has been mortally wounded, Flora is still in the household, and hopes against hope for her love's recovery, and that failing, she hopes for her enemy's assassination by another plotter. But this, too, fails. Philippe killing this man, too, and lazily coming on to the stage in the end, at a most dramatic moment, with the announcement that "there's a man outside needs assistance." Probably the most effective piece of playwriting in this play is in this last act, when, while Flora is waiting impatiently for news of her wounded Max, the convivial Captain Renard, sauntering by in the light snow storm, taps on the window, and, when it is thrown open, not seeing Flora, he shouts out the news that "Max is a dead one,"—and one cannot but feel for the despairing and vanquished girl as she succumbs to her grief, when from the snow storm without comes the message of her undoing.

Valencia Theatre

"Make me a child again, just for tonight."

The writer of the time-honored old song might have had his prayer granted if he had been in San Francisco this week. "A child again," that's the charm, the elusive, delicious charm of Peter Pan. However case-hardened the hearers may be, each one feels a throb of what it is to be a child again. The dreams of childhood, the thoughts, the fancies of childhood come trooping back. Who, in his childhood, would not have longed to be one of the Darling children—to go forth, after being forcibly bathed and put to bed, and meet other children in a delightful country where there are no hateful rules and regulations, no one to scold; where Indians abound and where pirates positively invite a licking on their own ship? It is hard to say too much in praise of the Valencia's production of J. M. Barrie's fantasy. In some respects it surpasses the production given by Maude Adams' company, particularly in the final tableau of Peter Pan, playing on his pipes in a haze of golden radiance. Every character in the mammoth cast is well handled, and the staging is well nigh perfect. Harriet Worthington, the new leading woman, had the misfortune to sprain her ankle, after making a pleasing impression in the name role. At the Wednesday matinee her place was taken, after only one rehearsal, by Effie Bond, who gave a refined and graceful rendering of the boy who wouldn't grow up. Both actresses were hampered by having to compete with memories of Maude Adams, and both found the hardest task lay in conveying the impression of boyishness, in eliminating the femininity. Ollie Walter makes a delicious Michael Darling, his childish tantrums bringing down the house; Edith Lyle, though rather out of her class in the matter of weight, is a human, motherly Wendy, and Florence Walter ably completes the trio of Darling children. Grace Travers and Darrell Standing are excellent as the Darling parents; Gerald Harcourt appeals to parents and children alike as Nana, the faithful watch dog, and Max Schaul is an efficient Liza. The members of Peter's band are more childlike and vivacious than the youngsters in the original production. They are sustained by Irene Walter, Jesse Mendelson, Zena Keife, Peggo Monroe, Antoinette Crawford and Lonna Nelson. Robert Homans is an ideal pirate captain, full of life and more villainous than his predecessor in Maude Adams' company. The efficient members of his band are Thomas Mac Larnie, Charles Dow Clark, George Van Blik, William Walbert, Reginald Holmes, Norman Feusier, E. C. Clisbee and Ernest Aktor. The Indian band is very efficient, and the lion, the ostrich and the crocodile all win applause. Great credit is due George Foster Platt, the stage manager. Mr. Platt is well known to San Francisco theatre-goers as playwright, stage director and actor. At the old Alcazar some of Louis Morrison's most delightful work was done in Mr. Platt's plays The Master of Ceremonies and Frederick the Great, and his artistic productions at the Alcazar are fresh in the memories of local theatre-goers. Mr. Platt is only living up to his reputation by his fine staging of Peter Pan.

Princess Theatre

Music, girls, comedy and then more girls and more music, these together with Fred Mace and a diverting enough book make-up, The Umpire, and the enthusiasm of the opening houses, bespeaks a good run of the piece. Fred Mace shines even more brilliantly in the more brilliant company at the Princess than he did during his starring season in the play, and as the unfortunate "Umphs," is a scream. Incidentally he is well to the fore in the dancing and singing numbers of the bill, of which there is a plethora supply, coloricly supplied, and then a little. It's a most amusing comedy which Will M. Hough and Frank R. Adams have provided for Joseph E. Howard's music. The scene is laid in Morocco prior to the existence of an extradition treaty with the United States, and the characters include several subjects of the Stars and Stripes, who for various reasons find the climate and environments of Morocco pleasing. Reginald Travers is happily cast as a trust magnate, avoiding Federal investigation by a visit to the city of Tangiers, while Budd Ross, as his able attorney, also has a part to which he is well suited. James F. Stevens as a member of Uncle Sam's diplomatic corps, is allowed a couple of songs in which his robust baritone voice is splendid. May Boley is the saucy and precocious daughter of the trust magnate, and she is quite the witch. Her two songs are well sung, and when she dons football togs to manage the "scrimmage" by the chorus girls, similarly adorned, in the last act, she looks like good "line" material, O.K., and acts it. Grace Darling is a dashing American divorcee, and Zoe Barnett is a chic young refugee from the fancied wrath of her government. Little Jennie Metzler covers herself with glory by her clever work as "Jimmie," the bell-hop, and Ethel Du Fre Houston does all she is allowed to do as a native woman searching for the American husband who deserted her. And last, as first, there are girls and music, girls and Fred Mace (which is to say enjoyable comedy), and just girls—I had almost said plain girls, but they're not "plain." Go, see.

American Theatre

Classmates was built by Margaret Turnbull and W. C. De Mille on plans and specifications to suit Robert Edeson. It was found later, however, that the role of the cadet hero suited the erudite Norman Hackett better than the star for whom it was designed, and it is he who has brought the play to the American Theatre. Classmates is designed to afford opportunities for the hero, and of these opportunities Mr. Hackett takes full advantage, giving a manly and, as far as possible, convincing rendering of the leading role. The scene opens in the grounds at West Point and among the numerous cadets who appear, three prominently stand out—Hackett, a poor but brilliant cadet, who loves a girl in a social sphere far above him; Henry Flaring, who plays a cadet in the girl's social class, who likewise loves her and who, though young in years, is old in theatrical villainy, and Bobby Dumble, a delightfully human cadet, who loves the villain's sister and who, though fat, has feelings. The hero's father has bibulous tendencies, and the villain plies him with Manhattan cocktails to the end that the hero may be placed in a humiliating position before the girl. In defending his father's character, the hero strikes the villain in such a manner that partial blindness results. The villain goes off to explore the headwaters of the Amazon and is lost in a swamp. The hero, learning of his plight, from the heroine, shows that he is all-wool-and-a-yard-wide by going off to rescue his enemy. Act III shows the tropical swamp, with the villain dying of thirst. For a time it looks as if the rescue party would die too, but after the hero has given the thankless villain the last drop of water in the flask, a dramatic touch is introduced by the flashing of the heliograph with a message that reinforcements are at hand. The play ends with the triumph of the hero who wins the girl and his commission. Much of the play's success rests on the stalwart shoulders of Willard Loais as the fat cadet, Bobby Dumble. E. D. Cromwell comes out strong in the swamp scene, where he struggles with Hackett for the remaining drops of water with which the hero is about to moisten the dying villain's lips. Doris Mitchell is a charming heroine and Mae Berton is a charming ingenue. A large audience greeted Classmates at the Greek Theatre, Berkeley, last Saturday night, and Mr. Hackett was forced to make a speech.

MARIAN DUNN was a DRAMATIC REVIEW caller last week. Miss Dunn opens with the George Howard company at the Lyric Theatre in Vancouver next week.

The Orpheum

Quite a number of old, familiar faces greet us in the program this week. Zelig de Lussan, the grand opera vocalist, who has been taking a two-weeks' lay off in our glorious climate on account of a sore throat, contracted in Portland, is the best known and most popular of the favorites. Evidently she is not yet in the best of condition, for she used her voice with the greatest care, and that buoyancy and abandon that is generally so characteristic of her work, was somewhat lacking. Of course, she is the skilled singer, with a voice of great charm and power. The rest of the new ones consist of Adeline Dunlap and Frank McCormack, who have an uncommon and immensely good sketch—The Night Before the Wedding—which they play with plenty of artistic effect and much of that quality which is termed heart interest. That is, Miss Dunlap supplies considerable comedy and a perverse character that feeds the splendid opportunities offered to Mr. McCormack to express the real feeling and pathos wrapped up in the father's love for an only motherless child, who is about to be consigned to the care of a shrewish stepmother. Gordon & Marx are two happy young fellows, who give the familiar Kolb & Dill Dutch turn. They are clever and enjoyable, but they need a new make-up. Edward Barnes, the piano vocalist; S. Walter Kent and Claudie Colonna in the sketch, Marriage in a Motor Car; Elsie Fay, Miller and Weston in their clever dancing turn; Joly Violetta, who for a Parisienne with more than considerable avoirdupois is a marvel of lightness and gracefulness; and the Sardwinas strong woman and her smaller athlete constitute the strong contingent of hold-overs. Of course there is an enjoyable offering of moving pictures.

The Wigwam

Those two grand old men, John L. Sullivan and Jake Kilrain, are playing to packed and admiring audiences at every performance. I say old, that is figuratively speaking, for they are old only in years and not in spirits. John L. has some amusing anecdotes to relate that puts the audience in good humor from the start, and his voice alone is enough to convince the most skeptical that he is far from being a feeble old man. Jake Kilrain comes in for his share of the ovation extended at every performance and with Sullivan puts up as lively a bout as could well be wished for. Harry Walton in his one-man Chinese tragedy is an entertaining feature of the bill. Sarah Cogswell renders some delightful vocal selections in a talented manner. Don Leno's Youngsters are a happy bunch that make things lively with their singing and dancing, and some future Warfields, etc., are manifest in several of this happy family. Some artistic work on the violin is contributed by Errac. Les Georgettys introduce one of the cleverest hand-balancing acts offered for some time and the bulk of the work is handled by a little tad who seems to thoroughly enjoy it. Gilbert and Katen have a line of parodies and jokes that take well with their auditors. The above, with the usual high-class moving pictures, constitute one of the best bills of the year.

The National

A program of delightful variety holds forth at this popular house this week and crowded houses are in evidence at every performance. The bill is headed by that precocious infant, Little Hip, who, though only three years of age, goes through his various stunts with a fidelity and promptness that shows a thorough knowledge of what he is about. Although so young, Little Hip is quite dissipated, being an inveterate drinker and smoker, but nevertheless makes a great hit with the old as well as the young folks. Hip makes a little spending money every evening by passing out the programs at the door, where you will find him as you pass in. All I can say of the Wurttemberg Brothers as foot jugglers is that they are great. See them. Mueller and Mueller have a line of classy songs that take well. Glorine, the spectacular dancer, has a beautiful display of electrical effects to introduce which make the act, not the dancing. It is a beautiful creation and well worth seeing. My Lady Raffles, a melodramatic composition, in the capable hands of Ann Crewe and company holds the audience. Miss Crewe in the title role proves herself to be an emotional actress of exceptional cogency and is accorded good support. Rose Stevens is heard to advantage in a number of vocal selections. Miss Stevens has a voice of exceptional sweetness which she knows well how to handle. The Atlantic City Four render a number of tuneful selections on string instruments which, together with their harmonious singing, constitute a pleasing feature of the program. Entertaining motion pictures, one of President Taft inspecting the Panama Canal being especially interesting, complete a program that is facile princeps. Next week at the National—Carlyle's Pantomime company, including Dan the only talking pony in vaudeville. Manuel Romaine, assisted by Sadie Palmer and the Foleys will present a musical oddity, Down Music Row. Delmore and Oneida in some artistic poses on a Japanese balancing perch. Eva Westcott will handle the dramatic personae of her tragic sketch, A Butterfly Wife. Joe Flynn monologist comes with a new bunch of mirth and Rose Stevens will repeat her success of last week with some new vocal selections. Newly imported motion pictures will complete the program.

Pantages-Empire

A good show is to be seen at the Sutter street house this week, headed by Prince Albert, an educated horse that displays almost human intelligence and deserves great credit for the short nine months that his trainer, J. B. Cuthbertson, has devoted to his education. Some clever comedy juggling is introduced by Marty, who includes soap bubbles in his act. The Kiltie Duo give a pleasing entertainment on the bag-pipe and several other instruments. Bob Housely and Edith Russell present an amusing farce. It's a woman's act, awfully talky. Great Johnson gives an exhibition of ven-

Vaudeville Notes

John Bernard Dylln, who became famous here thirty years ago by singing Never Take the Horseshoe From the Door, is now playing a successful Coast engagement in vaudeville. He sang at the old Adelphi Theatre on California Street, above Kearny, and at the Bella Union Theatre during the engagement of Patti Rosa, the little actress whose daughter is expected to contest the will of "Lucky" Baldwin. The Widow Dunn, Swinging on Dylln's Gate and Peckinpah, the Great, were other songs with which the actor scored tremendous hits in the old days. Peckinpah was an immense policeman stationed for many years at the corner of Bush and Kearny Streets, and when Dylln impersonated him on the stage, even reproducing his bristly black Dunderbush whiskers, the audience went wild with enthusiasm. Many of Dylln's comrades here later became famous in the theatrical life of the country. Among them were John McCullough, the tragedian, who went insane; Thomas Keane, E. J. Buckley, William Mestayer, John Wilson, John T. Raymond, who sang Millions in It; W. F. Florence, who impersonated Colonel Sellers in The Mighty Dollar; Lewis Morrison and Fred Levantine. Levantine was juggling a table at the Bella Union at the time, but he later changed his name to Proctor, and he now owns a half interest in all the New York productions of Keith & Proctor.

Manuel Romaine, who begins an engagement at the National Sunday afternoon, is well known in the minstrel field and as a singer for the Edison phonograph.

Vaudeville Notes

A varied and interesting as well as entertaining program will be offered beginning this Sunday matinee at the Wigwam. Alice Davenport will present her tragic one-act vehicle, Now, supported by her capable company. The Marco Twins, a couple of the funniest knockabout comedians seen in a long time, will supply unlimited comedy. Rawson and June will introduce some interesting work with the boomerang and spears. Hetty Urma, the dainty English comedienne, in some clever dancing and singing. Elmer Tenley and Joe Watson, monologists, come with a new line of jokes and parodies and Ellsworth and Lindon will present a one-act farce, His Day Off. A new series of motion pictures will conclude the bill.

Walton, the Chinese impersonator, will retire from the stage indefinitely after his present engagement at the Wigwam and will take the management of Fischer's opera house in Fruitvale.

The week ending John L. Sullivan's engagement at the Wigwam will make the 232d consecutive week that he has been on his present tour. Records in every house played have been broken for the week except upon two occasions, one being Holy Week and the other held in the grasp of a blizzard. I guess that's bad.

Sarah Cogswell has fallen in love with Vallejo. She says the sport up there is great. She went out fishing and caught t-w-o catfish.

La Loie Helene in Cleopatra's Death Dance leaves for the North to fill six weeks on Pantages and Morse and Stoll time before leaving for a three weeks' engagement at the Hippodrome in London, under the booking of Marco and Ike Rose. The tour will be under the management of Edwin T. Emery. Negotiations are now pending for her appearance in Paris before returning to this country.

C. L. Cole, assistant manager of the Pantages Theatre Company, is in town on a business trip.

Frank Moulán and wife (Maud Lillian Berri) will shortly be seen in vaudeville.

Emerson and Summer will present their refined high-class comedy sketch Almost at the National Theatre beginning Sunday afternoon, April 25th. They have just closed a successful engagement in the East and the act comes highly recommended.

Manuel Romain, appearing at the National next week, is busily engaged elaborating upon his present act for next season. He will carry his own scenery consisting of four sets and six people.

Hetty Urma, the dainty little English comedienne now playing Sullivan & Considine time, was formerly one of the Three Urmas trapeze performers who played a successful engagement at the Orpheum last season. She was also with the Barnum & Bailey shows for a season. The following is her idea of playing a boy and also her idea of the United States and woman's suffrage: "It's all right to put on boy's clothes and play for a short time every day, but I wouldn't be a really, truly boy, not for anything in the world. They call me England's pet boy. But I'm perfectly satisfied to be one of the weaker sex. Why don't I want to be a boy? Oh, because—well—because—for one thing I simply can't get used to the pockets in boy's clothes. And if I were a boy I would have to play football and get my bones broken, else I would be called 'Cissy.' I would have to chew tobacco and smoke a pipe for the same reason. And think of it. I would have to shave. Just imagine me with whiskers—ugh! No, thank you, I am perfectly content to be a woman. And I don't want to vote, either. These English suffragettes haven't any of my sympathy. I want to stay in the United States. I just love it. It is so big and wide. And alive."

Tom Bates is touring the small burys with a vaudeville show.

Blossom Seeley, who has lately been playing soubrette parts for Kolb and Dill in Oakland, took poison in her apartments, at the corner of Ellis and Fillmore streets Thursday night, and but for the prompt action of Doctor Tillman at the central emergency hospital she would now be dead. The cause of her despondency is said to be a love affair with Mike Bernard, who plays the piano at The Hague. At last reports the girl was in a fair way to recover. Last season Blossom and Bernard appeared over the big vaudeville circuits and scored quite a hit, as both are clever vaudevillians.

C. L. Cole, Alex Pantages' general manager, who has been in town the past few weeks, will leave Monday for Seattle with Sam Harris. When they arrive there they will take up the matter of a new Market street theatre with Mr. Pantages.

Board of Censors for Nickelodeons

The moving picture ordinance forbidding nickelodeons and other show places from exhibiting films depicting crimes of violence or improper scenes has been passed to print by the Board of Supervisors. Attorney F. V. Meyers, for the associated nickelodeon owners, opposed the inclusive sweep of the bill as regards "scenes of violence." He said the moving picture theatres of San Francisco might some day wish to depict the exploits of a mighty hunter and traveler repelling the onslaughts of a savage African tribe." He thought the murder scenes in Shakespeare ought not to be discriminated against by a discerning Board of Supervisors. Connolly called his attention to the fact that the "crimes of violence" depicted in nickelodeons were not Shakespearean tragedies, but vulgar assaults and that the spectators were usually in large part children. He said the board of censors to be appointed on each by the Mayor, the Police Commissioners, the Board of Education, the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children and the nickelodeon proprietors, would pass upon all pictures before presentation, and their verdict would protect the owners. The board unanimously passed the bill.

Cleopatra vs. Salome

La Loie Helene, who appeared at the Empire last week in Cleopatra's Death Dances, gives her opinion of these two famous characters. I found her in her dressing-room, not looking a particle like an Egyptian princess, enveloped as she was in a modest and becoming kimono, and in answer to my question as to which of the two dances she liked the best, she flashed me a bewildering smile, interpolated with,—"Because I think it is nicer"—not only from an artistic but a moral point of view as well. During the whole season that I appeared in my Salome dance I can't say that there was any time that I enjoyed it as I do my present dance, for the simple reason that it seemed impossible for me to put forth a sincere effort. It appeared as being unnatural. I couldn't conceive the idea of a woman having such a cruel and fiendish nature as to gloat over such a revenge. Now, in my dance of Cleopatra I endeavor to portray a pathetic and beautiful side of nature. I want to depict a poetic and graceful being that will call for the approval of the most critical and not their censure. Yes, I like my Cleopatra best. Don't you."

LOIE HELENE.

Clune Vodville Circuit Is Important Factor

Los Angeles, April 8.—I am enclosing you herewith copy of our ad, which you will please run continuously until further notice. This ad is to be one inch double column. Kindly get same in your next issue and mail bill to suit your convenience. We now have four theatres of our own, for which we are booking, and in addition to this we are giving performers about ten weeks' consecutive time. Every indication points toward our having about twenty weeks in the very near future.

Correspondence

Eureka.—Theatre Margarita (Shaw & Gorton, mgrs.)—The Raymond Teal company is breaking all records at this theatre. This is a very strong company presenting the best musical comedies seen here. This is by far the best musical show ever seen in Eureka. The company are all good. The two Dutch comedians, William Friedlander and Cassius Knight, keep the audience in a roar of laughter. The chorus is very good, as is also the soubrette, Nan Halpin, and the soprano singer, Evelyn Constance. Raymond Teal doing blackface is great. The company was booked for six nights, but owing to business they will remain at least two weeks. This week, The Girl from Bagdad, written and composed by William B. Friedlander, the young musical comedy producer, who also plays the principal comedy role, has proved the brightest bit of musical comedy ever seen here. Next change, The Man Behind. The Gorton stock company closed their engagement here last week. While here they made a host of friends and presented the very best of plays. As a whole the entire company was one of the strongest seen here. Iva Shepard, the leading lady, was one of the cleverest and prettiest women we have ever had here. Her work was without fault in the many different roles she played while here. Some very good acting was also done by Messrs. Murray, Fisher, Stanley, MacQuarrie, Empire Theatre (J. Van Sant, Jr., mgr.)—This week good vaudeville and moving pictures. The sketch team, The Claytons, presenting The Matador, was very good; business good. Three other moving picture houses to fair business.

Astoria, April 12.—Astoria Theatre (F. M. Hanlin, mgr.)—Last Saturday evening The Gingerbread Man was the attraction, and the house was crowded to the doors. The performance was an exceptionally good one. The company is a strong one and the singers, dancers, musical numbers and illusions were right up-to-date. The characters of The Gingerbread Man, Margery, as the mechanical doll, and Macharatus Fudge, were far above the average. The choruses were in splendid form and the marches admirably executed. The moon scene illusion and other specialties were the best ever seen in Astoria. Next Saturday night Lillian Russell in Wildfire is the attraction, with advanced prices, followed on the 24th by Norman Hackett in Classmates.

SELIG.

Spokane, Wash., April 10.—There was but one attraction at the Spokane Theatre, week of 4; that was Florence Gear in Marrying Mary, 10-11, supported by a clever company and played to good business. Girls is underlined, 15-17; The Right of Way, 18-20. At the Auditorium the Jessie Shirley stock presented Milton Nobles' play, From Sire to Son, George D. McQuarrie and Jessie Shirley playing the leading roles. Charles Clary, Jack Amory, Frank McQuarrie, Laura Adams and Ethel Von Waldron had congenial parts. Considering it was Holy Week, business was fair. Easter week, The Light Eternal, followed by Charlie's Aunt. Big business continues at the Orpheum. Angela Dolores and company are headliners. Other good acts are Lew Sully; the Melnotte Twins, assisted by Clay Smith; Harry Tsuda; Leander De Cordova and company; Hawthorne-Burt; Robert Rosaire; Phil E. Doreta, and moving pictures; big houses. Week 11: Russell Brothers; Frederick Allen and company; Five Juggling Normans; Francini-Olloms-Pag; Andy Rice; Real Color Photography; Delmore Sisters. An excellent bill at the Washington which drew good houses, with Harry Leclair as headliner. Others were Williams and Walkers' Chocolate Drops, with King, Bailey and Four Dusky Belles; Cal Stewart; Hasse and Marietta; El-Burto, and moving pictures. Bill for week of 11: Fox and Chrystal; The Elite Four; Mlle. Nadje; Cowboy Williams; Grover and Richards. At the Pantages The Gainsboro Girl was topline. William D. Gilson sang illustrated songs; Loraine Buchanan and Robert Hall Russell; The Bruno-Kramer Trio; Fred Rivenhall; The Boldens, and motion pictures; fair houses. Week 11: Mr. and Mrs. Ed Lucas; Four International Comiques; Marithon Comedy Four; Hoyt and Marion; Del Costo Duo.

Alcazar Theatre

With its usual excellence, the stock company is presenting the never failing old reliable Under Two Flags—the version that Dave Belasco and Blanche Bates made famous. In her way Evelyn Vaughan is just as good as was Miss Bates. She makes Cigarette a very human, a very lovable child of the desert and of the barracks, who would rise to the demands of a love for a good man. Unlike many actors, Miss Vaughan does not make of the little vivandiere a virago and scold. And the part gains from this difference. Bertram Lytell certainly surprised everyone by the real vitality of his Bertie Cecil. We have never seen the part before presented with so many likable and manly characteristics, and have heretofore regarded it as a fault of the part, but now it seems that every part has some good qualities. Burt Wesner, as the money shark, Baroni, was exceptionally clever, and Howard Hickman, too, commanded attention because of his Chateauray. Louise Brownell was very indifferent in the bad part of Lady Venetia. Bessie Barriscale did the small part of Baroni's daughter most skilfully. Adele Belgarde was handsomer than ever as the Countess of Warminster, and John Maher was extremely likable as Duke. One fault was noticeable throughout. Bertram Lytell pronounced Chateauray with the true French accent, the rest of his colleagues gave it as though it were English. One or the other should obtain. They were all friends together and it is inconceivable that two pronunciations would be given in the same circle. The music was most enjoyable and the scenery good.

DeGogorza Fights Back

New York, April 12.—An effort to force his wife to fix the exact date of his alleged desertion is being made today through a court motion by Emilio de Gogorza, the baritone. Mrs. de Gogorza, who is suing for a limited divorce, has charged Mme. Emma Eames with shattering her domestic happiness. Decision was reserved by Justice Dowling.

Jose Has Strong Company

The Richard Jose company gave a scene rehearsal of Jane in the Van Ness Theatre last Thursday. It was altogether a successful affair. Mr. Jose has gathered together a strong company to play the farce, much stronger than he had last season, and his own singing is as wonderful as ever. Manager Fred Cutler has some fine new scenery painted and carries all the "props" used. The company leave town today and will undoubtedly duplicate the wonderful record of last season.

Broadway Theatre

Oakland's new family theatre, The Broadway, continues upon its prosperous career. This week the play has been The Heart of the Blue Ridge, and the very favorable impression created the first week has been decidedly reinforced by the work of the company this week. Priscilla Knowles is a charming heroine, and Roy Clement a manly and likeable hero. Al Hallett, Jack Bennett, Fred Munier, Georgia Woodthorpe and Mrs. Al Hallett contribute largely to the success of the piece. Manager Guy Smith has a winner.

Changes In the Firm of the Francis-Valentine Co.

The pioneer poster and show printers, The Francis-Valentine Company, effected a reorganization last week by adding to the firm Mr. James Gamble, who for some years has been a big figure in the local financial world. Ever since the fire The Francis-Valentine Company has been making gigantic strides, and today is one of the largest show printing firms in the country, and noted for its promptness and general reliability. By the new move Mr. Gamble becomes President; John Roche, Vice-President, and E. G. Hoeber, Secretary and Treasurer. For forty years, Messrs. Roche and Hoeber have worked side by side, beginning as young men in the firm which they now control, and such has been the growth of the business that for some time they have felt the necessity for a little relaxation from the strain they have been under. So, when Mr. Gamble made overtures for a block of the company's stock, they gave up (for a pretty consideration), and now the individual work will be greatly lessened. One of the first moves will be to move to a new building to be erected specially for them next to the Valencia Theatre, and which they will occupy in the near future. Mr. Gamble is heavily interested in the show business, being Vice-President of the Valencia Theatre Company, and a heavy stockholder in the Princess Theatre Company.

The Theatrical Stage Employees' Union has elected the following officers: President, George Sauer; vice-president, L. H. Jones; recording secretary, William G. Rusk; financial secretary, Benjamin Williams; treasurer, H. ## No Pirating OF Morrison's Faust

As I have secured the rights to Morrison's Faust, and will present it with an elaborate production in the West next season, I hereby warn all stock or road managers against producing this play.

W. C. GORMAN.

Valencia Theatre Notes

Paul McAllister, the new leading man of the Valencia Stock Company, intended to leave New York for this city last week, but learning that E. I. Sothorn was going to produce If I Were King, the play in which he opens here, at Daly's Theatre on Monday night, the eleventh, wired Manager Walter Hoff Seely for permission to stay over and witness the initial performance. This Seely cheerfully did and Mr. McAllister arrives here with a vivid impression of the production and Sothorn's interpretation of the role of Francois Villon.

San Francisco theatre-goers are delighted with the announcement that George Osbourne, than whom this city never knew a more popular actor, has signed for a season with the Valencia Stock Company, and will make his reappearance in the city of his adoption as King Louis, in the coming production of If I Were King. Mr. Osbourne has appeared here but twice since the fire, once with Maude Adams in L'Aiglon and last year for one week with Henry Miller in A Tale of Two Cities. He has been enjoying himself in his ranch near Fresno, but expresses himself as being delighted at getting back in harness again.

It has been definitely decided that Mrs. Fiske and her company from the Manhattan Theatre, New York, will open at the Valencia Theatre in her wonderful success, "Salvation Nell," for the two weeks beginning Monday evening, June 21. This play of the fumes, written by a Harvard graduate, has proven one of the most remarkable things ever done by America's representative actress, and is being greeted with acclaim in all of the principal cities of the country.

Hoyt's always interesting satire on politics, A Texas Steer, will follow If I Were King at the Valencia Theatre and will give Paul McAllister, the new leading man, a chance to display his versatility as Maverick Brand.

Gerald Harcourt, the popular young comedian of the Valencia Stock Company, has to "hide his light beneath a bushel" in his characterization of Fana, the dog nurse, in Peter Pan. As an animal actor Mr. Harcourt is pronounced success and his unique antics create unbounded merriment among the young folk.

The Orpheum

Next week will not only be a red letter one in theatricals, but it will also mark an important incident in the rehabilitation of the city, the opening of the new Orphum on Farrell Street. The program for the coming week will be given next Sunday afternoon and evening at the Ellis Street Orphum, and will be continued Monday night at the new Orphum. Grigolati's Aerial Ballet, famous all the world over and for several years a feature at Drury Lane Theatre of Sleeping Beauty and the Beast, Mr. Bluebeard and Humpty Dumpty, will make its first appearance in the most effective of its diversissements, commencing with a butterfly ballet by Mlle. Florita, the premiere aerial coryphee and concluding with a gorgeous dove ballet in which live doves are used for the final pictures and effects. Frank Fogarty, the Dublin minstrel and one of the cleverest monologists in vaudeville; Margaret Moffatt, an exceptionally talented actress in Sewell Collins' satirical comedy, Awake at the Switch; Arcadia, a beautiful colorature soprano and a gifted violiniste; Peter Donald and Nita Carson, Scotch comedians, singers and dancers in a sketch called Alex McLean's Dream; and Paul Sander's miniature circus, in which remarkably intelligent dogs impersonate horses, ponies, lions, etc., will be the other novelties. The program will also include the Sandwinas, Gordon and Marx, and a series of Orpheum motion pictures showing San Francisco before the fire. There will be no matinee next Monday, but thereafter matinees will be given daily.

Valencia Theatre

Peter Pan, J. M. Barrie's delightful story of the boy who wouldn't grow up, has once more taken San Francisco by storm. All of our old theatre goers are unanimous in agreeing that this is a wonderfully clever production. George Foster Platt, the Valencia's talented stage director, has certainly demonstrated that he is a master in his chosen profession and succeeds in presenting a succession of pictures and effects that leave one bewildered by their beauty and cleverness. From the time that the curtain goes up on the nursery of the Darlings, after which come the Never, Never Land, the home underground with the forest above, the deck of the pirate ship, and the final scene showing Peter gayly piping his lay in his house in the tree tops, there is one continual feast for the eye and ear. The music, under the direction of Herman Heller, being no small feature of the production. As for the fantasy itself, it is, as one enthusiast has described it, "As intangible as a dream, as sweet as childhood's innocence, as pure as mother's love, and as charming as your first sweetheart. It is moonbeams and children, fairies and music, terrible pirates and Indians, and it is quite by itself in its blitheness and joy. If you were ever a real child and wore a paper cap and carried a great wooden sword to storm a formidable fort bristling with the enemy across the street, you will understand Peter Pan." The cast is excellent in every particular and uniformly good, so good, in fact, that it would be unfair to single out any one for individual praise. Peter Pan, with all its beauties will be continued for another week with the regular matinees Wednesday, Saturday and Sunday, and a special performance Thursday afternoon. The curtain goes up at 2:15 and 8:15 sharp on all performances. If I Were King, E. H. Sothorn's great success, will be produced in elaborate style Monday evening, April 26.

Alcazar Theatre

One of the valuable plays secured exclusively by Frederic Belasco since he went to New York is The Regeneration, which will be given its first presentation by a stock company next Monday evening at the Alcazar. Early this season it was produced in Wallack's Theatre by Liebler & Co., and the original cast included Arnold Daly, Edwin Arden and Helen Ware. A play of ethics only, its subject matter is taken entirely from the palpitating hive of social pariahs, the New York Bowery. The author, Owen Kildare, has written a score of clever stories depicting the life of the lower strata of the metropolis. One of his best stories, My Mamie Rosie, is the foundation for The Regeneration. The Regeneration mirrors in realistic fashion a phase of life which all students of sociology admit exists. With the very rise of the curtain we are introduced into a den of thugs who would not hesitate to add murder to their category of crime. Of this gang Owen Conway is the leader. Brute strength, not superior intelligence, has made him so. While a fashionable slumming party is visiting this den, members of his band attempt to snatch the purse from the hand of Marie Deering, head of a near-by settlement school. When she makes an outcry, she is dragged into the den. The slummers recognize her as a friend and come to her rescue. But she has no need of their aid. As soon as she recovers from the first shock of the attack made upon her she shows her strength. Her grit and bravery, her coolness and self-possession, her remarkable personality, are too much for Owen Conway. He withers before her look of pity and orders his followers to release her. A plan to rob one of the slummers is also frustrated by this girl, and when the visitors are permitted to depart unharmed she has something to say to Owen. She arouses in him the better instinct of his nature and promises to help him to a better life if he shows any inclination to learn the ways of civilization. In the Alcazar production of this remarkable play, Bertram Lytell will be seen as Owen Conway and Evelyn Vaughan as Marie Deering, with the full strength of the company in the cast and most elaborate scenic production.

American Theatre

Norman Hackett will present Classmates for the last times this Saturday afternoon and evening and at the Sunday matinee a dramatic event of unusual importance will be ushered in, when Right's Might, a play by Frank McGlynn and Jack Gleason, will be presented for the first time on any stage. Right's Might deals with love, honor and politics, and from all accounts is packed full of interest from beginning to end. The big scene is enacted on the floor of the Senate and those who have witnessed rehearsals are unanimously of the opinion that the enthusiasm of the authors and producers of the drama is well justified. There are twenty-nine speak-parts in the piece and a splendid cast has been secured for the initial production. Rose Sheridan, new to San Francisco but with an excellent Eastern reputation as an actress of ability, will be intrusted with the leading feminine role, Madelaine Winston, the daughter of a multi-millionaire. Maybelle Thompson, who will play the part of Samuel Lemkins, an awkward, sympathetic country boy, is well known on the Pacific Coast, having starred in Nell Gwynne and other similar roles. Thomas MacLarnie, whose splendid work in this city has won him many admirers, will play James Stoddard, the leading role, an ambitious man of the political world who becomes a senator. The story of his love for Madelaine Winston and of the honor of his old guardian and friend, Major Joel Hardy, played by Frank McGlynn, furnishes the plot of the drama. Norval McGregor will portray a gentlemanly villain, Chas. Bynton, a state senator and political manipulator. Charles Place is cast for a bluff, slangy senator, Jameson, and Francis Murray will play Chas. Winston, father of Madelaine. Elaine Davis, Ora Harris and Ione Bright, all talented and pretty young actresses, will have congenial roles and there are a number of splendid character roles, in each of which will appear actors of well known ability, among them Howard Nugent, William Brewer, Norman Phillips, Louis Jellison, Edmund Bracht, George Morgan, Thomas Caulifield and others.

A keen interest is being taken in the play and the demand for seats is large, owing in no small degree to the immense popularity of the authors, it being safe to say that no two men in this city have a larger circle of friends than have Jack Gleason and Frank McGlynn.

I. P. Wilkerson's Minstrels of Today and Musical Comedy Company will follow Right's Might at the American.

Personals

ALBERT GARCIA ANDREWS, who plays the role of the uncle in Otis Skinner's production of The Honor of the Family, was for fifteen years in the support of the late Richard Mansfield. His performance is a real artistic treat.

MRS. IDA B. HEAZLIT died at the Lidgerwood Hospital in Spokane, Wash., Thursday, April 1, of blood poisoning. She was well known to the profession, being the mother of the Heazlit Trio, and for three years owner of the vaudeville theatre at Seaside, Ore. She is survived by two daughters and a son, Mrs. Robert McKenzie, Ella and Dey Heazlit. The remains were interred at Aberdeen, Wash., members of the T. M. A. lodge officiating as pall-bearers.

THE actors of San Francisco and Oakland are fast becoming a family crowd, and the teachings of former President Roosevelt have evidently deeply impressed them. Last Monday week in Oakland the wife of Louis Bennison of Ye Liberty stock presented her husband with a fine lusty girl, and some few weeks ago Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Friend added a son to the family circle. In San Francisco, the friends of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Belasco are looking forward to the occasion which will introduce them to their first born.

THE funeral of F. Marion Crawford, the American novelist, took place April 12. The ceremony was exceedingly simple. The little town of Sant Angelo, Italy, was filled with well-known persons from Rome, Naples, Capri, Sorrento and Florence, who had come to pay a last loving tribute to the memory of the dead author. The public buildings of Sorrento, as well as many private houses, displayed flags at half mast. Mr. Crawford's body, inclosed in a double coffin, bearing on the outside his name in golden letters, was carried from the Villa Crawford to the Capuchin church by sailors from his yacht, the Alla. A beautiful marble figure representing Mercy has been placed on the top of the grave.

The American's Summer Plans

Preparations are going on apace for the summer season of Minstrelsy and Musical Comedy to be inaugurated Sunday afternoon, April 25. I. P. Wilkerson's Minstrels of Today and Musical Comedy Company, as the organization is to be known, is rehearsing day and night, and an entertainment is promised that will make amusement-loving San Francisco sit up and take notice. For the minstrel first part, in which there will be twelve male voices and a "megaphone chorus" of Madrigal boys and girls. Puerl Wilkerson, well known here, will act as Interlocutor, and Al Jolson, late principal comedian of Dockstader's Minstrels, and one of the funniest men who ever put burnt cork on his face, and Emil Subers, the Georgia Sunflower, who made a great hit here at the Orpheum last year, will be two of the four end men. John H. King, who rivaled George Evans for funmaking honors in George Cohan's Honey Boy Minstrels, will give his famous wench impersonations, and among the vocalists will be Matt Keefe, the phenomenal tenor, Will Oakland, whose contra-tenor voice reminds one of Dick Jose's tones; Frank Figone, a basso from the Dockstader show, and Oscar Eaves, a distinguished baritone. In the cast of About Town, the first burlesque to be presented, will be Ella Smyth, a lyric soprano who was in the original cast of The Earl and the Girl; Alma Golde, a vivacious soubrette from Lew Field's The Girl Behind the Counter; Lew Auger, a German comedian from the same company; John Costano, a versatile comedian, and many other fun makers. There will be a chorus of twenty girls and four men, and an augmented orchestra which will play the latest and most popular selections. The setting for the minstrel first part will be one of the most unique and beautiful ever seen in San Francisco.

Blanche Hall Combination of Kid and Grown Up

The Prince Chap will be given soon at the Burbank in Los Angeles. Blanche Hall will do what no other leading woman in the country could do—in the second act she will play the girl of 14 and in the third the grown-up young woman. And she will look both parts, too—and act them, well, we guess.

Oakland to Have Another Theatre

There is a prospect that Oakland will presently become the site of a new theatre, which will be as first-class in its appointments as any playhouse in the United States. The projected enterprise is not a Shubert move, but it is undertaken at the behest of interests which have a close relation with the great Eastern managers allied with Charles Frohman. Lee Shubert is of the notion to enter the San Francisco dramatic field, and also has an eye on possibilities on the east side of the bay, and he is to begin active work right away in the matter of competing in California with the business industry directed by Al Hayman, Klaw & Erlanger and their associates. F. R. Porter is representing the element which designs to establish another superb theatre in Oakland within the next twelve or eighteen months, and to be located on Broadway, near Telegraph Avenue.

Spotlights

The musical entertainment which F. P. Adams, the jester of the New York Mail, and C. Henry, the short story writer, are contriving for Harry Askin, has its basis in a quasi-fantastic sketch of Mr. Henry's which appeared several weeks ago in Collier's Weekly under the name "He Also Serves." The story is about an educated Indian with a fondness for rum, and the adventures constituting the action befalling him while on a visit to his native tepee. John E. Young, now the featured member of the company playing The Time, the Place and the Girl, will be comedian of the play, appearing as Hunky McGee, a crafty denizen of Broadway, with a typical O. Henry vernacular.

Brandon Tynan, Dolson Mitchell, Cyril Young, Francis Powell, Percy Lyndal, Robert Coleman, Florence Fisher, Mrs. Jacques Martin, Evelyn Weilding, Alice Seymour and the little Misses Dale and Hill are among the people in Madame Alla Nazimova's supporting company.

The town of Kipling has just blossomed out in Canada, where there is only one town of Shakespeare. The nearest the United States comes to having a Shakespeare on the map is the town of Shake, in Oregon. For some inscrutable reason the great English dramatist was never popular among the new town-namers in North America, although we have in the United States thirty Miltons, three Goldsmiths, four Dickenses, thirty odd Scotts, twenty Byrons, two Tennysons and one Thackeray. Notwithstanding the Browning clubs, there isn't a Browning on the American map.

The Earnest Shuter Amusement Company opened a tour of the Northwest in Victoria last week in George Broadhurst's The Mills of the Gods. The company passed through here from Los Angeles, en route to the North. The company is composed of Monroe Salisbury, Oscar Briggs, Harvey Earl, Grace Rauworth, Wm. Harris, Earnest Wilks, Alfred Russell, in the principal parts.

The mix up in the names of the new playhouses which Russell & Drew and Sullivan & Considine are now building in Seattle has been straightened out. Manager W. M. Russell has decided to name his playhouse, at Fifth and Lake, the Adelphi.

Nat C. Goodwin has two new plays for his repertoire to be done at the Van Ness Theatre next month. They are called The Master Hand and A Native Son. The latter is a play with a young Californian as its principal character. Edna Goodrich is said to have an especially good part in the piece.

San Francisco is to have three weeks of The Merry Widow's time.

Bureau for the first week in April shows a decided increase over the same period in March, and from the present outlook, Thomas McGrath, who has charge of the bureau, feels confident that his prediction as to the large number of registrations expected before May 1 will not only be fulfilled, but the grand total will exceed by several hundred the figures previously mentioned. Since April 1 five (5) life members have been added to the list. The full list of 302 life members is now ready for publication and will be sent to the dramatic papers early next week.

Pretty Peggy made such a hit in Minneapolis that it will be kept on for a second week. This is the story in brief that comes West concerning one of Arthur Aiston's stock bread-winners. Arthur is reaping a pretty harvest this season with his collection of fine plays in stock.

The Richter Theatre of Santa Rosa will be closed Sunday night for a complete remodeling, and will be reopened in about four weeks.

Harry Hollingsworth is going to tempt fate by putting in a stock at Prof. Kenney's theatre in Petaluma. The company will contain, besides Mr. Hollingsworth, Iva Shepard, Harold Kiter, Burt Chapman, Chas. Bates and Zoe Bates. The company opens tonight.

The Princess is preparing The Chinese Honeymoon for its next presentation to follow The Umpire. Fred Mace will have the role which Thomas Seabrooke created in New York and which Mace succeeded to and made a hit with in New York—that of Mr. Pineapple. May Boley will have the part that Kittie Barry was seen in, that of an English slavey. It will be a character like that which Miss Boley made a hit in when she played in The Girl from Paris and sang Mary Jane's Top Note at the Princess.

Raymond Teal has duplicated his elsewhere success in the Margarita Theatre in Eureka by playing to capacity all the week.

Ollie Mack is planning big. He wants eight road companies en tour, as follows: Night on Broadway; Shooting the Chutes; His Honor, the Mayor; Girl from Yankeeland; Finnegan's Ball; Around the Town; English Daisy; and Max Bloom in Sunny Side of Broadway. Walt M. Leslie will be general representative.

The Del Lawrence company figures on opening in Victoria in June.

The Sixteenth Street is still running a picture show with the sometime prospect of returning to stock.

One of the annoying incidents in Arthur Cunningham's trip through Canada was the pirating of the Kerry Gow, just ahead of his appearance there by a company managed by W. E. Burnham. After a couple of appearances of the pirate, measures were taken to shut out the unauthorized performances.

Donald Blanchard will head his own company next week, playing down the valley to Los Angeles and then returning by way of the Coast. His company consists of the Mack Sisters, Blanche Marlin, Eunice La Ferrin, and Tom Helmick. Fred Oakley will do the advance. The plays to be used are A Cowboy's Sweetheart and The Lunatic.

No Nevada Divorce for Virginia Harned

On April 13, Judge Pike of the Washoe County District Court today announced his refusal to entertain jurisdiction of the celebrated proceedings begun last July by Virginia Harned Sothorn, the actress, for divorce from her celebrated husband, E. H. Sothorn. Judge Pike's decision, it is conceded, settles beyond question the fact that Virginia Harned Sothorn can not secure a divorce from her husband unless either she or her husband comes to the State and takes up such a residence here as proves conclusively the bona fide intention to remain here. The particular point settled is that on complaint filed by a non-resident plaintiff with process served on a non-resident defendant who happens to be temporarily in the State, no jurisdiction is secured for the purpose of allowing a divorce decree. Such was Mrs. Sothorn's case. She never came to Nevada, so far as can be learned, contenting herself with signing her petition in the East, forwarding the same to Nevada, where it was opportunely served on Sothorn while he happened to be in Reno. Mrs. Sothorn relied on a part of the divorce law which allows a decree based on service on the defendant in the county where he "may be found." Judge Pike declares that this means "where he may be found as a bona fide resident of the State."

Fischer Has Leased the Victory Theatre

E. A. Fischer, the popular musical comedy manager, is to reestablish a theatre in this city. In fact an extended lease was signed on Thursday by Mr. Fischer, whereby the Victory Theatre on Sutter Street, between Fillmore and Steiner is transferred to him, and the playhouse will hereafter bear his name. Preferring to wait until conditions became normal, Mr. Fischer immediately after the fire secured a house at Los Angeles, which he has conducted with marked success for three years. But his faith and admiration for San Francisco never wavered and at the first opportune moment he accepted to return to his first love. It was at his O'Farrell street theatre that Mr. Fischer introduced the popular comedians Kolb and Dill and other stellar lights enjoyed lengthly and remunerative engagements under his management. The new company, headed by Ben T. Dillon, will open on Monday, May 3, in Chas. Alphins' successful laugh creator Poppyland. Up to last week it was figured that Mr. Fischer would take over The Novelty Theatre, but a hitch occurred at the last moment and the deal was declared off.

Arthur C. Aiston Back in New York

Arthur C. Aiston has returned to New York City after a ten weeks' Western trip, and is now located in his new office in the Long Acre Building at 1505 Broadway. In the same building are located the offices of Stair & Havlin, the United Booking Offices, Litt & Dingnoll, Al H. Woode and many other important theatrical managers. On his trip Manager Aiston stopped at nearly every important city between New York City and Seattle, going thence to Tacoma, Portland, San Francisco, Los Angeles, Salt Lake City, Denver, Omaha, Lincoln, St. Joseph, Kansas City, St. Louis and thence direct to New York City. He closed between forty and fifty contracts for his plays to be presented by the various stock companies between now and the first of August, besides meeting hundreds of old friends in nearly every one of the towns visited. Manager Aiston is now at work on his new production, As the Sun Went Down, by George D. Baker. The tour will take in a visit to California and the Northwest.

The Orpheum

The program for next week at the new Orpheum will be headed by Lillian Mortimer, a clever actress who has starred with great success in the East in several plays of her own composition. For her present vaudeville tour she has written a thrilling little play of life in a little village in Virginia, entitled Po White Trash Jinny, which affords her a splendid opportunity to present an excellent character sketch as the title role. She is admirably supported by an excellent company, which includes that sterling actor, Guy Durrell. The Four Amatis Sisters will reappear after quite an absence and are sure of a cordial reception. They present a musical offering that is unique and charming and one of the quartet, Gisela, is said to be the possessor of the widest range in the world, covering three and a half octaves and extending to B over high C, or, to be more technical, B Altissimo. The Amatis Sisters play on different pianos at the same time, and their programs include selections by Von Weber, Flotow and Wagner. Knight Brothers and Lillian Sawtelle will contribute a singing and dancing act of an eccentric character. The dancing of Miss Sawtelle is delightful, and more diverting comedians than the Knights are not in existence. Next week will be the second of Grigolati's Aerial Ballet and their latest flying novelty, Butterflies and Doves. It will be the last of Margaret Moffat and company in Awake at the Switch; Arcadia; Paul Sandor's Miniature Cirque, and of the Dublin Minstrel, Frank Fogarty, in his quaint, humorous and human observations. A new series of motion pictures will pleasantly close a delightful entertainment.

Alcazar Theatre

The heart-warming epic of youth, Old Heidelberg, will be revived next Monday evening, with a cast that would assure a successful run even if the play were not equipped with the most elaborate scene settings ever provided for the production. Old Heidelberg was adapted from the German for the late Richard Mansfield, whose most successful vehicle it was. Its story treats of an episode in the career of Prince Karl of Saxony-Karlsburg. It is a time-honored rule of the court that the heir apparent to the throne must spend at least one year of study at Heidelberg, and when young Prince Karl, who has been reared in seclusion, arrives at the famous university with his aged private tutor, all the pent-up vigor of his youth comes out and he becomes a real boy and falls in love with Kathie, the pretty daughter of an inn-keeper whose establishment is frequented by the students. The lad's real identity is kept a secret from all except the college faculty, and he is reveling in his new-found freedom when the death of the king calls him to the throne. Kathie is left behind, broken-hearted, but soon after he has been crowned his yearning to see her impels him to return to Heidelberg, where he finds that his former happy life there can never be repeated. All the old familiarity of his fellow-collegians has disappeared, and he is treated as a king by all who meet him. So he bids farewell to Kathie and the boys and goes back, a dissatisfied monarch, to rule his people. The scene of his parting with the girl is the prettiest bit of sentiment ever staged.

American Theatre

The last performances of Right's Might, the interesting play by Frank McGlynn and Jack Gleason, will take place this Saturday afternoon and evening, and at the Sunday matinee I. P. Wilkerson's Minstrels of Today and Musical Comedy Company will inaugurate a summer season which promises to be decidedly interesting. The very best burnt cork artists obtainable have been engaged, and for the opening program the end men will be Al Jolson, late of Dockstader's Minstrels and one of the best comedians ever seen in San Francisco; Emil Subers, "The Georgia Sunflower," well known here from his clever work at the Orpheum; John H. King, fresh from Cohan & Harris' Honey Boy Minstrels; Tod Bloom, a renowned fun-maker; Eddie Mazie, very popular here, and the Forbes Brothers, one of the best singing and dancing teams before the public. The vocalists who will be heard from the charmed semi-circle are Matt Keefe, a San Francisco boy who comes covered with Eastern triumphs with the Honey Boy Minstrels; Will Oakland, the contractor who made such a hit here last season with Dockstader's Minstrels; Tell Taylor, the favorite baritone, who sings his own songs, and Frank Figoni, the basso. The cast for About Town, described as "a whoop in one act," and which is a condensation of one of Lew Field's greatest successes, will include several names prominent in musical comedy, including Lou Anger, German comedian, late of Lew Field's company; Robert Wilson, a singing comedian; Charles Flynn, who plays Irish comedy roles, and Edward Castano, also from Field's show. Ella Smyth, the prima donna soprano of the aggregation, promises to create a sensation here. She is just one inch under six feet in height, is possessed of a brilliantly cultivated voice, pretty face and stunning figure, and has in addition a splendid stage presence and lots of ability. Anna Golde, the sourette, was one of the big hits of The Girl Behind the Counter, and is as dainty in her work as she is clever. There are twenty comely and shapely girls in the chorus, which has been carefully drilled by Stage Director Bobby Harris.

Valencia Theatre

The last performances of J. M. Barrie's delightful fantasy, Peter Pan, will take place this Saturday and Sunday afternoons and evenings, and on Monday night If I Were King, dramatized by Justin Huntley McCarthy from his popular novel of the same name, will be staged on an elaborate scale. If I Were King will serve to introduce to San Francisco, Paul McAllister and Florence Oakley, the new leading man and woman of the Valencia stock company, and to reintroduce an old, tried and true favorite, George Osbourne. Mr. McAllister comes direct from a series of New York dramatic triumphs, Miss Oakley is one of the best of America's younger leading women, and Mr. Osbourne may safely be said to be the most popular actor who ever appeared in this city. The rest of the cast will include all of the Valencia favorites, with Grace Travers in the important role of Huguette de Hamel. Numerous supernumeraries, a wealth of stage accessories and forty-five distinct characters are employed in the production, which will be the most elaborate yet attempted by this theatre of great achievements. Stage Director George Foster Platt says so, and he is a man of his word. Hoyt's always welcome A Texas Steer will follow If I Were King at the Valencia.

Richard Carle, Crippled from An Accident, Entertains Portland With His Work

PORTLAND, ORE., April 19, 1909.—HEILIG (Cal. Heilig, mgr.; Wm. Pangle, res. mgr.)—Richard Carle made his first appearance here on the 15th in his latest play, Mary's Lamb. Mr. Carle was suffering from an accident, which happened to him on his trip from San Francisco to this city, whereby he was bruised and crippled. However, he lived up to the good reputation that had preceded him, and gave to us a very enjoyable performance. True, he could not indulge in dancing, which is one of his long suits, still his comedy work was away above par. His support was very good, especially Miss Rhoda, who is an old favorite of Portland theatre-goers. Last night Lillian Russell opened her engagement in Wildfire, and every person who saw the play left the theatre in a pleasant frame of mind. The play is highly amusing, bright and well acted. Miss Russell proved herself to be an actress of much ability, and of course, it is not necessary for me to comment upon her personal appearance, it is too well known to all of us. Her support was good in all respects, especially Simeon Wiltie and Ernest Truex. Coming: The Mills of the Gods and Norman Hackett.

BUNGALOW (George L. Baker, mgr.; Milton Seaman, business mgr.)—The offering at this house for this week is a double bill, the premier piece being The First Born, the peer of all Chinese dramas. This play has been produced in this city on numerous occasions, but it has been some years since, and the present production is the equal of any of them. It must be remembered that it is no easy matter to offer and produce a play in which all characters are Chinese. In yesterday's offering Sydney Ayers and Izatta Jewel were cast to the leading parts, and both sustained their respective roles in good style. Earl Dwire was cast as the Chinese doctor; let me see, if memory serves me right, George Osbourne created that part; well, Dwire did well with the role; of course he was not a second Osbourne, but no complaint can be made of his acting of the part. James Gleason was the pipe mender and played it in his usual high class style. Howard Russell in a bit seemed to have the best Chinese dialect. The other play introduced in the double bill was Sheridan's Ride, written by Carlyle Moore. It follows along the idea of the play Shenandoah. It was a good finisher though to the First Born, and the audience seemed to enjoy the double bill. Next week: The Private Secretary.

BAKER (George L. Baker, mgr.; Milton Seaman, business mgr.)—Black Patti and her Troubadours are with us again. They opened yesterday and at both performances drew big houses. It is generally conceded that Black Patti has got it on any one of her race as far as warbling is concerned, and she lived up to that reputation yesterday. Her support is good, including as chief comedian Tim Owlsey. This house is dark after next week until Ferris Hartman opens a season of comic opera.

ORPHEUM (James H. Errickson, mgr.)—Fannie Rice was the bright spot in last week's bill at this house. Her mimicry is of the highest order, and that of Roosevelt and Taft went with a scream. Sharing honors with Miss Rice was Miss Lillian Mortimer in Poor White Trash, Jinny, a rip roaring melodrama that also made a hit with the audience. The Amatis Sisters are also a pleasing act, as well as the sketch team of Collins and Brown. For this week Manager Errickson announces the following bill: Angelea Dolores is the headliner, and the balance of the bill includes Lew Sully, Melnotte Twins and Clay Smith, Hawthorne & Burt, Persse and Mason, Rosaire and Doretta, and Helen Herndon.

LYRIC (Keating & Flood, mgrs.)—Sapho was presented at this house yesterday and drew packed houses. Ralph Belmont and Virginia Duncan played the leading parts and handled them ably. Lillian Griffith as Fifi and S. M. Griffith as Uncle Ceasrie are well cast and gave good accounts of themselves. The company as a whole are giving a good account of themselves, and the management are keeping up their end from a scenic standpoint.

GRAND (James H. Errickson, mgr.)—May Ward and her Dresden dolls are the feature act for this week, and this act is supplemented by V. L. Granville, Duff & Walsh, Norton & Russell, Meeh Trio and Harry McDuffee.

Pantages has Lafayette's acrobatic dogs for their feature act for this week. A. W. W.

Lotta Wins Suit

Lotta, the popular actress of former days, who presented this city with Lotta's fountain, was given judgment by Judge Murasky last Monday for stocks and accrued dividends worth $46,544, against F. E. Sawyer, as administrator of the estate of the late Edwin Fretwell, who was president of the American National Bank. Lotta M. Crabtree—the full name of the plaintiff—sent to San Francisco about $300,000 to be invested by Fretwell. The greater part of it he used in the purchase of shares in the American National Bank, of which 2,538, valued at $210,000, stood in the name of Miss Crabtree. The suit was in regard to 652 of the shares. The widow of Fretwell, Mrs. Annie S. Fretwell, claimed that these shares, worth $20,000, and dividends which have accumulated, worth $20,544, belonged to the estate. The evidence did not, however, substantiate this claim, Judge Murasky found. Mrs. Fretwell said her husband bought the stock with the proceeds of the sale of two pieces of real estate belonging to him, and not with money belonging to Lotta Crabtree. The testimony showed, however, that the land was the property of Miss Crabtree. Judge Murasky ordered that the shares in the Western Pacific Land Company, for which the bank stock has since been exchanged, be

New Theatre for San Bernardino

Twenty-four thousand dollars had been signed up in stock subscriptions on the proposed new theatre for San Bernardino last Saturday evening when the boomers for the new playhouse called it a day's work, and abandoned the matter until the following week. This is a preliminary subscription for stock in the corporation that is projected to build the new playhouse on the west side of E street, south of Third. R. F. Garner and John E. Ward became interested, went down on the paper for substantial subscriptions themselves, and then began falling on the necks of the property owners and capitalists interested in that quarter of the city, with the result that the fund was given a most substantial boost. While $24,000 was all that had actually been signed, they declare that $35,000 is in sight, and profess every confidence in the immediate success of the plan to build a new theatre in San Bernardino, which M. B. Curtis, the theatrical man, who is figuring in the plan, says will play rival attractions to those sent out by the theatrical trust, managed by Klaw & Erlanger. It is admitted that these shows cannot be had, for the reason they are under contract for the ensuing season to Mrs. Kiplinger, and are likely to stay with her as long as she is directing the fortunes of the D street house. The trust stays by its own.

The co-stars, Nat C. Goodwin and Edna Goodrich, will follow Nazimova at the Van Ness Theatre. Two new productions will be offered. One of them will be A Native Son, from the pen of James Montgomery, and Goodwin pronounces it the best vehicle he has had since When We Were Twenty-One. His role is that of an energetic Californian.

The Morals of Marcus will be played by charming Marie Doro, when that star comes here for the first time as one of Charles Frohman's stellar lights.

Jack Dodge, San Diego's Best Known and Most Popular Citizen, Sends Some Cheering News

My Dear Farrell: Your DRAMATIC REVIEWS have got my boys demoralized, they have given up selling tickets from the box office window and are devoting their entire time to rustling for subscribers to the only dramatic paper on the coast, I refer to your valuable publication of THE SAN FRANCISCO DRAMATIC REVIEW. Well I hope they will get every man, woman and child in our enterprising city to subscribe for your journal as it is deserving of the support of all. Mailed you this morning copy of our morning Union, giving us the glorious news of the near opening of the Tia Juana race track and the greater intelligence which makes glad the hearts of all true San Diegans, including even the most pessimistic, the early completion of a new outlet to the East, I refer to the construction of the San Diego and Arizona Railway. Brother Farrell, this will make San Diego one of the greatest show towns in the country. You hear me, they will all be booked here for a week instead of one and two nights before long. Yes, my dear fellow, we are feeling exceedingly good here and why shouldn't we. Come down and visit us and see us in our new clothes. We will soon have in addition to our "Bay'n climate" many other things that will make you all sit up and take notice. We are going to give Jim Post and his "Buty Korus" a grand reception when they come down here at the Garrick for the summer. The people want Jim and his comedy company and if he makes good, which I am sure he will, he can stay all summer. Regards to all friends and believe me always to be a well wisher of Chas. H. Farrell and the DRAMATIC REVIEW. Fraternally yours,

Pleasure Seekers Throng Idora Park

Through expert management, Idora Park, in Oakland, has been reopened and is achieving a greater success than the most sanguine predicted. Patrick Conway's band give delightful open-air concerts afternoon and evening. Vaudeville attractions, the children's playground, various concessions and divers amusements are heavily patronized. The new garden grill is one of the chief items of interest, dinner parties being numerous. From San Francisco and other nearby cities hundreds of visitors are carried to the big pleasure ground. During the coming week the large band will give daily changes of program at the open air concerts, which form one of the main attractions, furnished without charge to the park's patrons.

Belasco and Erlanger

The story is being circulated that David Belasco has consented to go on with the all-star gambol of the Lamb's Club, playing a part in a sketch with William Gillette. More remarkable still is the fact that Abe Erlanger will go along as the business director of the tour, and as Belasco will be the general stage director, the two old-time enemies will be thrown into intimate contact for the first time since their breakaway of years ago. All sorts of theatrical possibilities loom up in view of this contingency. The Lambs expect to clear $100,000 on the one week tour, and will devote this vast sum to the building of a new clubhouse.

Spotlights

The Shuberts have announced that Madame Nazimova is to open the new theatre which they are now erecting in New York on 39th street, near Broadway. Nazimova will be seen there in October in a new play which she has had in preparation for some time and which is as yet unnamed.

The Valencia Theatre management has secured for early production a most important play in The Traitor, by Thomas Dixon, Jr. No drama of recent years has caused so much discussion as this and wherever it has been produced in the East it has created a profound sensation. It is a story of the Ku-Klux Klan, of the Reconstruction period, and is absorbing in its interest, one of the striking scenes being a trial by jury in which eleven of the twelve jurymen are negroes.

Mrs. Fiske and her New York company will present Salvation Nell at the Valencia Theatre for the two weeks beginning Monday, June 14, instead of June 21, as previously announced. Charlotte Thompson, for a time a brilliant member of the DRAMATIC REVIEW staff, is playing an important part in this wonderful drama of the slums. Holbrook Blinn, another Californian, is Mrs. Fiske's leading man.

Somerset Maughan's new play, The Noble Spaniard, may not prove to be as great a success as some of the author's previous efforts, but it is likely to make a revival of the early Victorian fashions of women's dress, says a cable from London. The charming costumes worn by the actresses have made a decided impression upon the audiences at the Royalty, and between the acts more than one lady was heard to announce her decision to have her dresses made for the coming summer on the lines of those depicted on the stage.

LONDON, April 17.—There has been considerable trouble in the Academy of Dramatic Art, which was founded by Beerbohn Tree. George Bancroft, son of Sir Squire Bancroft, who has held the post of secretary at $2,000 per annum, is retiring owing to certain dissensions within the club, and the name of Hall Caine's son, Ralph, is mentioned as the probable successor. Mr. Tree's Dramatic Academy, when it first opened, drew a number of vain women who were in no need of money, but desired to display their charms on the stage. It was impossible to refuse them, because they were ready to pay a year's course—but these undesirables who crowd out the young and promising actresses have now been weeded out, and some of the pupils have already appeared with great success in the one-act plays now being produced by various dramatic societies.

When A Texas Steer, which will follow If I Were King at the Valencia Theatre, was first produced at the California Theatre in this city, Congressman Julius Kahn, then an actor of no mean ability, played Brassy Gall. Tim Murphy played Maverick Bran-der, and pretty little Flora Walsh, Charles Hoyt's first wife, was Bossy. In the coming Valencia production Paul McAllister and Florence Oakley will play the two last roles.

The Merry Widow is still the most talked of success in the musical line now being offered in America and abroad. It is being sung in no less than six different countries. San Francisco will greet the Widow on the Fourth of July, and Henry W. Savage promises to send her here in as perfect a form as he has anywhere else in America. Not since the early days of Florodora has a musical attraction been awaited here with such eagerness as is this one.

Polly of the Circus is coming to San Francisco this summer and will be played by the New York cast, headed by Edith Talieferro. The production can be accounted one of the distinctive hits of the past few seasons and the star of the cast has made for herself quite a name.

The Irish vs. The Dutch Will Be the Title of a Theatrical Controversy for Honors and Big Money in Los Angeles—See Announcements from the Grand and the Majestic

Los Angeles, April 22.—With Kolb and Dill to open at the Majestic Theatre next week and Murray and Mack at the Grand the week following, it looks as if we would be busy. A feature of the first performance of the Murray and Mack company will be a travesty on The Dollar Mark. The burlesque will be known as Mr. Easy Dollar Mark.

George Webb, who was seen on a number of important roles at the Belasco Theatre last fall, and who has recently come from the Alcazar company, will join the Belasco organization next week. Also, Louis Morrison will succeed Ben Graham in the character assignments at the Belasco.

Edna Sidney, leading woman of the Gaity company, which held forth at the Grand Opera House last summer, is in town on a visit to her sister, Mrs. Giblyn, wife of Chas. Giblyn of the Burbank stock company.

Dick Ferris will have a company at the Metropolitan Theatre in Minneapolis, where he will begin his regular summer stock engagement June 1.

Elise Schuyler, well known to Los Angeles theatre goers as a comedienne of unusual ability, will appear at the Majestic with Kolb and Dill.

W. J. Elleford, the well-known manager, who has been spending the winter in Los Angeles, will leave this week for Honolulu, where his company is playing an engagement at the Orpheum Theatre.

Manager H. C. Wyatt of the Mason Opera House and the celebrated Russian actress, Madame Nazimova, accompanied by Mme. Nazimova's manager, A. H. Canby, ran foul of the minions of the law last week, and as a result P. S. Corrigan, a chauffeur who was driving the party back to town after a trip to Long Beach, sustained at least two unpleasant half hours in the police court, and, I believe, a reprimand from the judge. The party were returning to the city, when at Hoover and Washington streets Patrolman Hall thought they were moving too swiftly. Accordingly he stopped them, but after their promise to be represented in court next day, and warning them against further speeding, he allowed them to proceed. Corrigan was the only member of the party to appear in court.

AUDITORIUM—For the past four seasons the Shriners of Southern California have been doing things in the amusement line. Their charity fund always needs replenishing. This year, under the direction of L. J. C. Spruance, the Shriners have changed from comedy to something worth while. They have secured the services of the Ben Greet players, the best known of all the Shakespearean repertoire companies and the Russian Symphony Orchestra of New York City, with Modest Altschuler as conductor. In selecting the instrumentation Mr. Altschuler has arranged his musicians so as to secure not only artistic effects, but in a manner in which the musical interpretation will give added weight to the work of the dramatist. Ben Greet brings with him a carefully selected company which includes D. T. Crittenden, A. H. Allen, Frank Darch, Edward Arnold, Leon Brown, J. S. Crawley, Percival Seymour, R. Flood, LeGai Robinson, Earl Snyder, Grace Mills, Irene Rooke, Violet Vivian, Milton Rosmer, Ruth Vivian and George Vivian. The plays to be given are Midsummer Night's Dream, Romeo and Juliet, The Tempest, Everyman and As You Like It.

BELASCO—Another week of The Dollar Mark at the Belasco Theatre and the crowds do not seem to get any smaller. It looks as if this was going to break the record made by The Girl of the Golden West. The cast remains unchanged.

BURBANK—Salomy Jane is the offering of Mr. Morosco's company at the Burbank Theatre for the week and they are giving us a very pleasing revival of the play. The scene is laid in California and the story is founded on incidents in Bret Harte's idyl of the same name. Blanche Hall, in the title role, is a very sweet and lovable character and plays the part in her usual effective manner. William Desmond, as "The Man," has small opportunity for acting but he does his little well. A. Byron Beasley is as forceful as usual in the part of Jack Marbury the gambler. The three children in the cast do admirably and furnish some of the most pleasing scenes of the play. These parts are taken by Manon Welsh, Mildred Laroux and Harry Glazier. Frederick Gilbert, a recent addition to the Burbank company, does good work as Rufe Waters. Henry Stockbridge is cast as Colonel Starbottle, John Burton as Yuba Bill, and Charles Giblyn as Larabee. David Edwin, who is cast as Red Pete, and who in the play meets his death at the end of a rope, is distinguishing himself as a lightning change artist capable of "doubling in brass" or most anything else, for after concluding a very satisfactory presentation of his character in Salomy Jane, he dashes to his dressing-room, changes his clothes and make-up, and in some magical manner manages to reach the Majestic some ten minutes or so after his "death" in ample time to give a very clever performance of the Frenchman in the last act of The Lightning Conductor. His transportation from the Burbank to the Majestic in so short a space of time was a puzzle for a time, until it was noticed that Dick Ferris' chug-wagon had formed a strong attachment for the stage entrance of the Burbank, exhibited each evening at about the time Edwin was "hung." Maybe though it is just that Dick's chauffeur likes the brand they serve in the Burbank cafe; maybe.

MASON—The Mason is dark this week. Beginning Monday, April 26, Nat Goodwin and Edna Goodrich will appear in two new plays, The Master Hand and A Native Son.

MAJESTIC—Again we have Florence Stone and Dick Ferris with us for a week at the Majestic Theatre. This week they play The Lightning Conductor, which was a great success during the Ferris engagement at the Auditorium. The story of the comedy sets forth the misadventures that befall Miss Molly Randolph, a young, pretty, and rich American girl, who, under the chaperonage of her aunt undertakes a motoring tour through France. Miss Stone in the rich American girl and Dick Ferris is the Hon. John Winston. La Cigale Ferris has a small part in which she makes the most of her opportunity to show her ability as an actress. The supporting company includes Carrie Clarke Warde, William Yerance, Harry Mestayer, Willis Marks, Hale Studebaker, Margo Duffet, Carol Marshall and Jessie Norman.

GRAND—Ferris Hartman and his genial company of players are giving us a very pleasant revival of Richard Carle's opera, The Mayor of Tokio. The company do full justice to the piece, and Hartman himself, as Marcus Kidder, is funnier than ever. Emil Kruschke as the Russian spy also makes a hit. Joseph Fogerty as the mayor and Grisella Kingsland as Madam Stich the wardrobe mistress, do work deserving special mention. Muggins Davis and Walter DeLeon both do some excellent work and they are particularly good in their dance. Christine Nielson continues to please with her singing and responds to the usual number of encores. The chorus is attractively garbed and sings well.

ORPHEUM—Tom Nawn and company head the bill at the Orpheum this week. Mr. Nawn is assisted by Mrs. Nawn and Charlotte Appelle in an amusing playlet entitled Pat and the Genii. Several clever and beautiful animals are introduced in Sibon's Novelty Circus. James H. Cullen appears in his comedy recitatives. The Four Puncherries, European acrobats, present a novel act well costumed. The hold-overs include The Palace Girls and James Clemons; the Blessings in balancing feats; McDonald and Huntington and Ray Royce.

LOS ANGELES—Coin's canine comedians, presenting It Happened in Dogville, head the bill at the Los Angeles Theatre this week. The dogs play an entire one-act comedy without the appearance of any one upon the stage. Mareena, Navarro and Mareena are extremely clever equilibrists. J. Bernard Dyllin pokes a good deal of good natured fun at Theodore Roosevelt in his song, Just Like Teddy Did. Other acts on the program are furnished by Lightning Hopper, cartoonist; Sarah Louise Cogswell, soprano; and Black and Grant, singing comedians.

EMPIRE—With a clever cross section of musical comedy the two Stoddards are headlining the bill at the Empire this week. The pair never fail to produce a laugh at the crucial moment and their act is one of interest. Salinda, the wire comedy artist of the bill, is mirthful in midair, as well as pleasing in his juggling feats. The Southern Quartet furnishes plenty of melody of popular sort in their act, Sunny Africa. Ben Davis supplements the smile producers of the bill with his monologue, while Al Frank has a specialty deserving mention as well as the illustrated songs and moving pictures.

FISCHER'S—The Fowlers, acrobats of more than ordinary ability, are the features of the bill at Fischer's for the week. Robert Thomas, miracle and mystery man, deserves second place on the bill, for some of his feats with the black art are amazing. Pretty little Winnie Baldwin is an attractive member of the program with her songs and fetching dances, while Mlle. Syma, the dancing contortionist, wins her share of applause. Komar, the wire comedian, proves an entertainer of class, both by his line of talk and his actions while dangling in midair, while Trevathan W. Smith has some new illustrated songs, and the moving pictures, as usual, complete the bill.

UNIQUE—Billie Ken, a new musical comedietta built around the Billiken fad is Director Frank B. Blair's offering for the patrons of the Unique for the week. It is a continuous laugh from start to nish. Will Armstrong is cast as O'Grady and sings Bridget McCue; Miss Elwood, as Mrs. O'Grady, has a catchy song. If the Wind had only Blown the Other Way; Miss Parker as Rosy O'Grady sings Gay Butterfly. John Martin, as the German friend, has a good song entitled Always Knocking on My Family Tree. The bill is opened by Irene Earle in illustrated songs and J. P. Wild with interesting travelogues.

WALKER—A collection of good acts appears at the Walker Theatre. DeShields heads the bill with his aerial cycle act on the slack wire. Bessie Evans, the clever little soubrette, is pleasing in her songs and her up-to-date monologue. Louie Brothers, hand balancers, Roman ring experts, etc., almost outdo Sandow himself in their tremendous muscular development. Stanley and Uline, in their sketch, The College Boy and the Porter, do some good singing. Warren Woodson is an imitator of birds and animals. The Boothe-Gordon Trio, styled Comedians Awheel, may be just back from the London Hippodrome, but their act is not up to the mark. Joseph Manley sings a new song and motion pictures complete the bill.

FLORENCE D. EMERY.

Princess Theatre

The Princess offers an exceptionally attractive programme next week in George Vance and Howard Talbot's comedy, A Chinese Honeymoon, which ran for an entire season at the New York Casino. It will be elaborately and picturesquely staged, and the cast will be of unusual excellence. Fred Mace, May Boley, Helen Darling, Zoe Barnett, Ethel DuFre Houston, James S. Stevens, Budd Ross, Bert Phoenix, Oliver LeNoir and all the Princess favorites will be congenially placed. The beautiful girl chorus will be in attractive evidence in new and handsome costumes. A great show is promised.

Correspondence

New York, April 11.—New operettas may come, new operettas may go—many of them the sooner the better—but so long as there is any love of good music and of real humor left such a minor masterpiece as Audran's Mascot is pretty sure to fill an audience with joy. Last week in the New Amsterdam Theatre, where Raymond Hitchcock appeared as the central figure in this old-time favorite, a crowd that packed the house encircled most of the songs twice, and even three times, and laughed till it was tired over the antics of Lorenzo XVII and his adventures with the pretty turkey-tender, who brings him luck till the tide turns with a vengeance. Mr. Hitchcock never had much of a singing voice, but is an excellent comedian. His Lorenzo is as disreputable and amusing an old scapegrace as can be remembered in the part these many years. It is a "fat" part for any comedian, and he makes it tell without resort to any excess of horseplay or too much local color. The reading of the treatise on mascots, Lorenzo's courtship of Bettina and the deposed Prince's effort as a wandering musician, who knows he can't play but does his worst, kept the audience laughing. Mr. Hitchcock's support includes Flora Zabelle, who, as Bettina, acts with vivacity. The famous Gobble song had to be repeated three times. Edward Favor as Rocco played a good second to the star, and Edgar Atchinson-Ely, as Frederic, sang his couplets with much taste. Estelle Wentworth was a pretty Flammata. The production is an elaborate one as to chorus and costumes, and there was some mighty good choral work in the finale of the first act and the pages' song that opens the second. After the second act, Mr. Hitchcock made a little speech of thanks, in which he said he was so bad at talking out of his part that when he succumbed to the temptation his audience was always sure of one laugh—at him. His audience laughed with him. * * * Grace George and her company, for the first time here this season, revived Divorçons last week at a special matinee in the Hackett Theatre, and kept a large audience laughing through the three acts of Sardou's famous comedy. Miss George's Cyrienne is recognized as a portrayal in which grace, vivacity and arch humor prove to be delightfully effective. The petulant impatience of the scene in the first act with Des Prunelles and her recital of her many wrongs were as usual most amusing. Mr. Worthing as Des Prunelles was again capital, and Max Freeman's waiter can hardly be improved upon. Last Monday's matinee audience at Weber's Theatre was treated to a singing lesson, a throat examination and some hearty laughs. They were all part and parcel of a play called The Climax, which was produced here for the first time. The author is Edward Locke, and the incidental music, which is a very essential part of the plot, was composed by Joseph Breil. It is a novel idea the plot unfolds, as it revolves amusingly and interestingly about a set of vocal chords. A girl from a village in Ohio is possessed of a voice, and she comes to New York and studies singing with a distant relative, an Italian, who had once been a famous tenor. Full of ambition for the operatic stage, she refuses to even contemplate marriage to a young doctor, who has been her devoted admirer ever since childhood. He attempts to dissuade her from her career, for he believes the stage no place for a perfect lady. But—here the plot thickens—her voice is not quite right and there is need of a slight operation, which is performed by a colleague of the doctor. And then, by means of mental suggestion and an atomizer he persuades the girl to believe she has lost her voice. Then she readily consents to marry him and has her trunk packed and her wedding dress on when she finds that her voice has returned. The doctor admits his deception, and the girl sings a sentimental song, and you are sure she is going to pursue her artistic career. But her voice is broken by sobs, for she loves the physician. Upon that scene the curtain falls and you have several guesses as to the outcome of it all. But never mind, for while the curtain is up there are amusing episodes, some sentimental passages and some that are sheer sentimentality. The idea is far from stale, and the lines are very good. There are only four characters and all were well acted. Leona Watson, as the girl with the voice, was admirable, and she had the voice and knew how to use it. Albert Brunning, as the singing teacher, refrained from over-acting and still made much of his part, while Effingham A. Pinto, as his son, was full of the "artistic temperament" and displayed it convincingly. Then there was William Lewers, as the physician, who did little but of acting. The music is sentimentally attractive, too. * * * The Brass Bowl, dramatized by Winchell Smith from Joseph Vance's novel of the same name, was produced in Court Square Theatre, Springfield, Mass., last week. The play is full of action and the love interest and comedy are not neglected. Cyril Scott, who has the leading part, plays the role of Mr. Maitland, a young millionaire, and also that of handsome Dan Anist, a cracksmen. In the dual character he has great opportunities. He had to make many rapid changes of costume in portraying these widely different parts. Lillian Kemble as Sylvia Greame has a strong role which she plays well. * * * Mary Mannering appeared for the first time at the Belasco Theatre in Washington in The Truants, an English play by Wilfred G. Coleby, which was produced in England by Lena Ashwell. The atmosphere is decidedly English, the scenes being laid in Kent, and there are dramatic situations involving a frustrated elopement, a mystery of parentage and a thrilling dilemma for the heroine. There was a large audience, and Miss Mannering was very well received. In the company are Zelda Sears, Robert Conness, White Whitlesey and Mary Nash. * * * When J. E. Dodson decided after a rather long absence from the New York stage, to return in The House Next Door, he made no mistake. J. Hantley Manners' comedy, announced as taken from the German, proved a most entertaining piece of work, and the "star" quickly convinced the audience that filled the Gaiety Theatre last evening that the author had given him a part for which he was peculiarly adapted. It was known that The House Next Door dealt with social relations of the Jew and the Gentile, and the audience appeared, when the curtain rose, to be decidedly more anxious to see how the subject would be treated than it was to see how Mr. Dodson would act. But that feeling of curiosity speedily gave way to interest in the player's presentation of an exceedingly irascible English baronet, proud of his ancestors, his birth and his country, hating the Jews with every breath he drew, with empty purse and owing the very roof over his head to the Jew he hated most of all, who lived in the house next door. Mr. Dodson, the Sir John Cotswold of the play, was ably supported. Thomas Findlay, as Sir Isaac Jacobson, M. P., was a Jew who respected high birth, but with his own proper pride of race and achievement. William J. Kelley, as Sir John's son, Regan Hughston, as Sir Isaac's son, Mabel Roebuck and Annie Marinoff made a very acceptable quartet of sweethearts, while Herbert Standing as a breezy Presbyterian among the Jews, helped a lot in keeping up the fun. In short, Jew or Gentile will surely enjoy a visit to The House Next Door. * * * William Faversham and Walter Damrosch will make a joint production next season of the Greek tragedy, Orestes. An English version has been made by Richard Le Gallienne, which will be used in conjunction with Mr. Massenet's music, originally composed for the Count de Lisle version of the music play. It is the purpose of Mr. Faversham and Mr. Damrosch to present Orestes at matinees during the run of the former's production of Stephen Phillips' Herod at the Broadway Theatre. The cast of Orestes will be made up from Mr. Faversham's company and Mr. Damrosch and his New York Symphony Orchestra will provide the music. * * * E. H. Sothern gave his familiar and acceptable rendering of Justin H. McCarthy's play of romance and adventure, If I Were King, at Daly's Theatre last Monday, and pleased a large number of his admirers with his well-sustained portrayal of duty and honor aroused in a vagabond with glorious services for a crafty and almost senile king, all for the love of woman far above the deceit and guile of the Louis XI time in which they all live. Mr. Sothern was assisted by a company of capable actors. Gladys Hanson looked quite regal as the noble and pure-minded Katherine de Vaucelles, and in the galleys scene at the end was truly convincing in her interpretation of what sacrifice by a woman of rank means to many a braver who has proved himself a man and saved a kingdom to its people. Virginia Hammond deserves an especial word of praise for her work as the vagabond girl dying for the love of the vagabond man who had grown to too great a height for her love and devotion. The play was staged with the care that Mr. Sothern usually displays on his productions and the spectacle was presented in a manner that marks the high level which the work of this excellent actor has reached in recent years. * * * Going Some is the title of a new comedy by Messrs. Paul Armstrong and Rex Beach, produced for the first time in New York last week in the Belasco Theatre by the Messrs. Shubert. The title is a Western expression, whence come both the authors. After the fall of the final curtain the large and enthusiastic audience was glad the authors had come from the West, glad because they have written a wholesome, clever comedy that is a winner, if applause and laughter are fair barometers of the rise and fall of enjoyment. Just where Mr. Armstrong began and where Mr. Beach left off matters not. The collaborators have written a play that, while it is made comic by all sorts of familiar stage means, is nevertheless true to life and enjoyable. The whole plot—and there is one of sufficient size to be noticed—hinges on a footrace to be run in New Mexico by a fly young man—athlete from Yale, who poses, but cannot run. The cowboys at Flying Heart ranch stake their all in J. Wallingford Speed of Yale, against Skinner, the fleet cook of the rival Centipede corral. Skinner throws the race to Speed for money and the young bluffer wins the young woman with whom he has fallen in love. The comedy lines come fast and furiously. There is cowboy slang, New York sporting lingo and Mexican dialect that is refreshing on Broadway. The scenes are all laid in New Mexico and have the real flavor of ranch life, with only its comedy trimmings, save when the "bad man" of the Flying Heart ranch insists on exhibiting his shooting hardware. Seldom has a company better cast been seen in a modern comedy in New York, surely not for many months. It would be unfair to one to say another member of the cast carried off the honors. Lawrence Wheat, as J. Wallingford Speed, the pink tea foot racer; Walter Jones, as his trainer, and Oza Waldrop, as his sweetheart, were excellent; so was Herbert Corthell as a college man from California. Culver Covington, as a Yale intercollegiate champion runner; George Leach, as a "bad man," and E. L. Fernandez, as a cow puncher, were types that made one scent the plains. Going Some will enjoy a long tenancy of the Belasco Theatre, because it affords amusement and laughter for four rapid-fire acts. It does not point a moral nor preach a sermon; it simply causes enjoyment, and that, as they say in the West, is "going some." * * * It takes two to make a marriage, and by the same rule of arithmetic—with logic added—it takes two happy ones to make a happy marriage happy. If this seems to be a puzzle look in at the Garrick Theatre some night and see how happy Clyde Fitch makes The Happy Marriage. Last Monday night's performance was the first here of this new comedy, and the happy marriage really consisted in wedding Clyde Fitch's clever lines to a clever situation. At the close of the play, when the audience called the author before the curtain, he modestly thanked it for the applause, and added: "We hope another happy marriage has been made by wedding us"—meaning the author and company, of course—"to the audience." The Happy Marriage is a very interesting play. There is the customary amount of Fitch froth on the dramatic goblet, and what there is bubbles effervescently, and what is beneath the froth is quite worth drinking and pondering over. Doris Keane was the wife, and she acted excellently, her naturalness being one of the most appealing features of the evening. Mr. Arden, as the husband, was admirable in his unromantic presentation of the character of the business man. Milton Sills was the matrimonial "butter-in," and he did it as fervently as possible. Then, besides others, there was the fine old Annie, who gave advice in brogue that would have been just as good in any other language—she was acted by May Donahue. The stage settings were handsome. The Happy Marriage ought to raise a generation of happy theatregoers. * * * The New York Hippodrome began last week the fifth year of its history. The performance was the 1909th in the big playhouse. Since it opened, nine productions have been made, and on an average of 900 persons have been employed every season. * * * Summer has come. The calendar may say differently, but the signs are here. At the Herald Square Theatre last week the first so-called "summer show," The Beauty Spot, was produced. It's a musical play, and Reginald De Koven wrote that end of it, while Joseph W. Herbert did the libretto. And as it is impossible to have a summer play without a comedian that necessary role is filled by Jefferson De Angelis. The Beauty Spot will entertain you and its tunes jingle merrily, and there are girls, girls, girls, in costumes that are so long that they have to be lifted and in others that require no such care, girls in bathing suits—in fact, everything that belongs to a summer attraction. The lines are snappy and bright most of the time. The stage pictures are pretty, too, and there are some novel effects. Mr. De Angelis was amusing as General Samovar. The little Miss Marguerite Clark, as his daughter, was charming in her pretty poses and graceful dancing. Viola Gillette, as the same Samovar's wife, was the focus of about as many opera glasses as were in the audience. George J. MacFarlane, as an American painter, sang sonorously, and Frank Doane, as Chickoree, his negro valet, added a touch of the burnt cork comedian that went well with everything else that goes well with a summer show. There was a lot of dash to the dancing, and the Boulevard Glide probably will be talked about. The song, She Sells Sea Shells, invites many a tongue twist. And what actually is The Beauty Spot of the title? It's a mole that is talked about but isn't seen because it's on a woman's knee. * * * Robert Mantell moved from the New Amsterdam Theatre to the Academy of Music last week, and opened his repertoire with Julius Caesar. Mr. Mantell presented a powerful interpretation of the role of Brutus. His supporting company was the same as that seen at the New Amsterdam, including Marie Booth Russell, Lillian Kingsbury, Edith Campbell, L. Rogers Lytton, Ethelbert Dukes, Fritz Leiber and Guy Lindsay. The Fourteenth Street audience gave Mr. Mantell a royal welcome. He continues at the Academy for several weeks. ROB ROY. Chicago, April 20.—Six Chicago theatres figure today in charges of violating the child labor law. On the complaint of Edgar T. Davies, chief of the department of factory inspection, warrants charging misdemeanor were issued against M. Cory, manager of the Chicago Opera House, and against Augustus Pitou at the Illinois Theatre. Managers of the People's, Marlow, Thirty-first Street and the New Grand Theatre will answer charges of violating the child labor law in the municipal court. This round-up of theatres is the result of a vigorous campaign waged by the factory inspection bureau during the last few weeks. It was undertaken in an effort to determine just how much child labor was employed in Chicago theatres, and is of particular significance at present in view of the fact that theatrical interests have now before the Legislature a bill to nullify the law prohibiting child labor in the play-houses.

Carson City, April 21.—Carson City Opera House (Charles Peters, mgr.)—Charles J. Le Moine, in A Husband on Salary, April 20, played to a small house; 29. The Merchant of Venice; The Burgomaster fifty people, May 5. M. E. S.

El Paso, Texas, April 19.—El Paso Theatre (Crawford & Rich, mgrs.)—House dark for week ending April 17. Coming, April 24, Nat C. Goodwin and Edna Goodrich, in The Master Hand. Crawford (Crawford & Rich, mgrs.)—April 18, the Streeter-Bryan stock company opened for an indefinite run. The opening bill was The Princess of Patches. I shall review this next week. Majestic (Frank Rich, mgr.)—April 21 marks the closing date of the Majestic Musical Company at this house, as Manager Rich is putting this company out for a road tour. They have played to capacity business during their entire engagement and have given good satisfaction. Vaudeville comes back into its own at the Majestic, starting April 25. The Unique Theatre—This house is now under the management of Mr. Baskins and is playing vaudeville.

GEO. A. MANSFIELD.
Laramie, Wyo., April 19.—Nothing doing the past week. Bachelor's Honeymoon, Tuesday 20th. A. D. K.

Tonopah, April 18.—Arthur J. Aylesworth returned from Reno yesterday, where he has been for the last few days arranging for an engagement in this city and Goldfield of the Allan Curtis Musical Company of twenty-two people. He was successful in his negotiations and the company will open at the Butler Theatre, Monday night, April 26, and will remain here for two weeks. The performance consists of one complete musical comedy each evening and the program will be changed every other night. Manager Aylesworth guarantees the attraction to be one of the best companies of its kind ever brought to Tonopah. When they first opened in Reno they were scheduled to play a four weeks' engagement, but owing to the drawing qualities they were persuaded to stay and when they leave for this city they will have played nine consecutive weeks in the northern city.

Boise, Idaho, April 19.—Mr. and Mrs. C. K. Van Anker of the Jolly Della Pringle company at the Turner Theatre were questioned regarding their plans for the coming season. They gave assurance that it was their intention to maintain a first-class stock company through the summer and the autumn season in Boise. "Boise is off the main line—has not yet many real attractions and has to depend on stock companies for its amusements," said Mrs. Van Anker, whose stage name is Della Pringle. "It is the aim and one ambition of our Boies to please the public and we feel that we are making good all our promises," continued the jolly actress. "To give them more than their money's worth." At the theatres the following are next week's shows: Turner Theatre—Jolly Della Pringle company all week in slice-splitting comedy, Ios of a Travelling Man. Rex Theatre, near corner Tenth and Main—Moving pictures and illustrated songs. Boise Theatre, corner Seventh and Main—Moving pictures and illustrated songs. Star Theatre, on Main between Sixth and Seventh—Moving pictures and illustrated songs.

San Diego, April 21.—Charles (J. M. Bates, mgr.)—April 20, Alla Nazimova in A Doll's House played to a large and fashionable audience and her coming proved to be one of the dramatic events of the season. Her support was satisfactory in every respect. April 27, Rear Admiral Robley D. Evans, April 28-30, Burns-Johnson light riotous. May 1, Otis Skinner. May 2-3, Richard Joss in Jane. May 4, James Post and Bette Warren in Mr. Murphy in Paris. Saturday (S. A. Palmer, mgr.)—Week of April 19, The Edward Armstrong Musical Comedy company in The Servant Lady. This piece has a strong plot, interpolated with several catchy songs. Ethel Davis, as the Servant Lady, acts her part in a dramatic way and more than pleases. She sings Mother Won't Listen to Father Steve and Mademoiselle Mail, in her usual pleasing manner. The comedy is handled by Edward Armstrong as Koot Innet, an advertisement George Dehn as the seminarist cook Willie Fry and Barney Williams as an English tourist. This trio keeps the house in a continual roar of laughter. Olga Stebb, the new soubrette more than made good and no doubt will become quite a favorite. She sings several songs in a beautiful manner. The balance of the cast do full justice to their respective parts. The change is well received and show good stage management. Opera (Swarts & Urban, mgrs.)—Sullivan & Considine vaudeville. Browne and Emerson, eccentric comedy company have a good act and please. William Marx even chatter does well. John McCallie novelty juggler; Collan and Smith, the college boys with dancing feet. Georgia Gaudin and company in the farcette Too Many Ladies proved to be the hit of the bill. The latest moving pictures conclude a good show which is playing to good houses. Gen'l (Walter I. Eulerson, mgr.)—Manager Eulerson has an unusually attractive bill at this popular playhouse this week, the headliner being H. H. Bosley and Lanchester, who have a comedy singing act which is distinctly above the average. That the audiences appreciate their act is shown by the numerous encores to which they must respond at every performance. The balance of the bill includes the Morrisons in a comedy sketch; Miss Nelson a whirlwind tumbler; Maude de Alma contortionist; and motion pictures. Empire (H. H. Bosley, mgr.)—The bill as presented at this house is a good one and is composed of the following: The Sugimotos, Japanese acrobats; Joe Murray, vocalist; Libby Blondell, novelty entertainer; motion pictures and illustrated songs. The Sugimotos and Miss Blondell were well received, and the house played to good business throughout the week. Gaiety (R. O. Gordon, mgr.)—Vaudeville. Evelyn Wells, soubrette; Forcher, novelty bicyclist and monologist; Warren Ellsworth, singing and talking comedian; the LaMarr Sisters, juvenile sketch; illustrated songs and motion pictures, conclude a fair show. Fair business. The Union and Bijou offer good motion pictures and illustrated songs to fair business. CARL E. LUNDQUIST.

Fresno, April 22.—The Empire Theatre celebrated a gala event last night. The occasion was the first presentation of a new play by Mrs. George Osbourne, wife of the well-known actor. The play is a brilliant comedy and is called The Awakening of Monsieur Beaufort. To the author belongs first honors, for Fresno has had few opportunities of seeing so clever and artistic a drama presented, and it was with the sincerest enthusiasm that every one in the house echoed the call for the authoress when the curtain fell upon the second act. She responded to the ovation and the stage was a veritable flower garden laden with the tributes of congratulation sent to the playwright and the members of the cast. Brimming over with significant lines and dramatic situations of splendid intensity, the three acts told a thrilling tale of passionate love, perfidy and duplicity, innocence and pathos that was wonderfully blended into a harmonious whole and invested with a charm of Parisian atmosphere that gave it the necessary lightness to relieve the more intense situations. The problem that confronts the audience works itself out skillfully, dramatically until the fall of the curtain when Monsieur Beaufort, in reply to the question by the small Ninon, who asks: "Will mamma come back?" answers: "Perhaps, perhaps." Then one is left to decide, and has a sense that this is the fitting close, the artistic and also the right one. The character of Monsieur Beaufort was admirably played by George Osbourne. In the second and third acts he rose to dramatic heights, carrying the audience with him. In the dramatic scenes Alta Phipps played magnificently. She has never done more earnest, serious work than in the role of Marguerite Beaufort, which calls for strong emotional work. She was charming to see and wonderfully equipped to fulfill the demands the part makes upon the talents of an actress. She scored a triumph in the role and shared with Mr. Osbourne in the dramatic achievement of the occasion. Never in amateur nor professional productions has a Fresno audience seen a more gifted, charming ingenue than Bonnie Carter, who surprised and delighted her friends last night with her abandon and ease that she gave to the role of Adrienne, the ingenious French girl fresh from convent walls. Playing opposite Miss Carter was Chauncey Southern—an excellent foil for this pretty French girl. He was boyish and frank and played up delightfully to the caprices of the bewitching Adrienne. Leslie Virden of the Redmond company was good as the insinuating, worldly wise Madame Delaunay. If prominence takes precedence in the mention of characters, the name of little Miss Ranche Barton wife of Manager Robert Barton of the Barton Opera House, should rank first in the list. She played one of the important parts in the play and played like a veteran actor and not as though it was her stage debut. Every line was spoken clearly and was heard to the back row, and her childish perception and understanding of her role gave her the full sympathy and applause of the big audience that listened fascinated by her pretty lines so daintily spoken. She looked like a big French doll and made one of the decided hits of the evening. Sidney Payne of the Redmond company played excellently the role of Pierre. He has a splendid dramatic voice and an appreciation of the requirements of the role that made him a success from the beginning. The two small parts were played by Mr. and Mrs. Redmond. Special scenery had been painted for the occasion, and the children's party was enlivened by a charming dance done by Miss Grace Osbourne, whose beauty and abilities have been before appreciated among her friends. She repeated last night the pretty parasol dance that she did at a recent performance. On Tuesday the stock company produced Niobe, and El Redmond scored his customary comedy hit. Alta Phipps was a stunning Niobe. Charles Gunn, Chauncey Southern and Sydney Paine were good in the support. At the Novelty, the James Post company is pleasing large audiences with the special and original Post brand of comedy. This week the piece is Fooling the Farmer. Millar Bacon is next to Post and Joe Hayden the big hit of the show.

Colton, April 16.—The building of an opera house in the Hub City is being agitated by that well-known man of the stage, M. B. Curtis, who is spending some time in the city. He is supported by several local men who believe that a playhouse here could be made a paying venture by placing it with other towns in a circuit out of Los Angeles. While several owners of property here have been approached for an option, it is said there is nothing definite determined upon, and the launching of the venture will depend upon the amount of stock subscribed by local people.

San Jose, April 19.—San Jose is at a standstill theatrically. Joseph DeGrasse did very poor business at the Victory and the same may be said of Admiral Evans with his lecture. Richard Jose broke the gloom on Sunday and Monday by playing to record-breaking business. At the Jose, Manager Berovich is offering splendid vaudeville, but business, except for Saturday and Sunday, is discouraging. There is talk of Raymond Teal playing here for ten weeks, opening in the near future.

Long Beach, April 19.—Tonight the Byde-a-Wyle Theatre, Long Beach's cosy home theatre, will open for a season of musical comedy, presenting The Loan of a Wife, under the direction of that clever comedian and producer, James T. Kelly,

H. Ellsworth of this city received an ovation when he appeared with the Lucier Trio at Pantages. Sacramento Day is to be celebrated April 24 by the giving of an airship ascension by Roy Knabenchue, athletic contests, baseball, motor boat racing on the river, concluding with an electrical display at night on the river. Pantages Theatre, week starting Sunday matinee, April 18—Seymour and Dupre, combination vaudeville; Lucier Trio, harmony singers; Prince Albert, educated horse; Great Johnson, ventriloquist; Housley and Russell, comedy playlet; Kiltie Duo, Scotch instrumentalists; Marty, comedy juggler; Edouard Scott, baritone.

The Shuberts will not build a theatre in this city, neither is it likely that they will organize a stock company here for the purpose of erecting a theatre. This information was given to Secretary Crane of the local Chamber of Commerce by a representative of the Shubert Brothers Monday when he went to San Francisco for the purpose of trying to induce them to come to this city. The representative explained to Secretary Crane that his company would not consider the proposition of building a theatre here, but would stage shows in this city providing they could lease a theatre at a nominal price. Secretary Crane said that he was not given much encouragement, as the Shuberts did not seem at all anxious whether they established a theatre here or not.

Nevada City, April 21.—On Thursday night, Arthur Cunningham will show here in Kerry Gow. On Saturday, Joseph De Grasse will be seen in The Merchant of Venice.

Florence Oakley

San Francisco will be introduced to a new leading woman who comes with the record of unquestioned ability and positive personal triumphs in a number of our largest and most discriminating theatrical centers. For the past two seasons Miss Florence Oakley has been the reigning stage favorite in Los Angeles, and the Valencia Theatre management is to be congratulated upon its success in securing Miss Oakley, when several other cities were making alluring offers for her services. Miss Oakley is a young actress of wonderful personal charm, exceedingly good looking, and possessed of unusual versatility. She can run the gamut of emotions from intense pathos to the lightest and most effervescent comedy and everything she does is characterized by a positive vitality that is the heritage of youth and artistic temperament.

Loving Cups Presented At the Orpheum

A scene, indicative of sincere esteem, was enacted Monday afternoon in the managers' offices of the Orpheum, when Morris Meyerfeld, president, and Martin Beck, general manager of the Orpheum Circuit, were presented with handsome loving cups, the gifts of the employees of the Orpheum Circuit. John Morrissey, local manager, made the presentation speech in behalf of the givers. Mr. Morrissey referred to the kindness with which Orpheum employees are treated by the heads of the institution, and for the thousands of workers who contributed to the gifts he wished Messrs. Meyerfeld and Beck long life, prosperity and much happiness. President Meyerfeld replied that he gratefully acknowledged the expression of kindness from his employees, "but," said he, "I had rather set my face against anything of this kind. The faithfulness of the service that is rendered this company is worthy of all the remuneration and kindness which we can bestow. I had much rather see my employees dispose of their income in other ways more directly beneficial to themselves. It is for us to show our gratitude to you, and not you to us. But since you have chosen this very graceful and generous way to express your sentiments to Mr. Beck and to myself I accept the token in the spirit which prompted you, and I feel honored at being the recipient of so beautiful a gift." Mr. Meyerfeld then referred to the fact that there are fewer changes in the personnel of the Orpheum staff than take place in any other similar company, and said it will always be the policy of the Orpheum to tie its employees to their duties as in a labor of love. "And when our faithful employees grow old they are not tossed aside like an orange squeezed for its juice. Already we are caring for a few whose age has passed the limit of their vigorous usefulness; they are living in comfort and we hope they will distance the psalmist's limit of three score years and ten, by many comfortable winters." Martin Beck indorsed Mr. Meyerfeld's expressions and accepted his loving cup with thanks. The cups are beautiful specimens of the jeweler's art. They are heavy silver, handsomely engraved and inscribed "To M. Meyerfeld, Jr., our president, by the employees of the Orpheum Circuit of theatres, as a mark of their devotion, esteem and appreciation upon the occasion of the dedication of the new Orpheum, San Francisco, April 19, 1909." The gift to Mr. Beck was similarly inscribed, with a change of the name and official position.

Van Ness Theatre

To night Otis Skinner and his imitable impersonation of Colonel Philippe Bridau, in The Honor of the Family, will say good-bye to San Francisco for the season. Nothing more artistic, nothing more enjoyable, has been seen here in many years. Alongside the star's fine work, that of Percy Haswell deserves special mention. She is a leading woman of beauty, of fine methods and a most fascinating personality. Some progressive San Francisco manager ought to induce her to come here for a special season. She is most uncommonly good, and San Francisco would soon develop a Haswell craze that would become memorable in San Francisco theatrical annals.

Valencia Theatre

The last week of Peter Pan will conclude tomorrow night, and the beautiful performance of this wonderful play will live long in the memory of our theatregoers as one of the great triumphs of the Valencia Company. For a stock production, with the necessarily limited time for rehearsal, the achievement has been a marvelous one. Effie Bond, as Peter Pan; Robt. Homans, as Capt. Hook; Charles Clarke, as one of the pirates; Edith Lyle, as Wendy, and the youngster who plays Michael have won individual triumphs. Next week, If I Were King, introducing Paul McAllister, the new leading man, and Florence Oakley, the new leading woman.

Princess Theatre

This is the last week of The Umpire, the baseball musical affair that has hit San Francisco theatregoers harder than any offering yet made by the new company. Fred Mace, as The Umpire, carries the biggest part of the show and he is genuinely funny. The chorus, too, comes in for a large approval. Next week, a gorgeous presentation of A Chinese Honey-moon will be made.

American Theatre

When Jack Gleason shied his castor into the ring of dramatic authorship, the general public, particularly that portion of it which knew Jack as a baseball magnate and all-round sportsman and good fellow at large, was very much disinclined to take him seriously. Instead of respectful interest there was a marked tendency to laughter at his promise that Right's Might was a powerful and stirring play. Be it written, therefore, in all honesty and candor, that Gleason and his co-author, Frank McGlynn, "put one over" on the unsuspecting, and really did turn out that same powerful and stirring drama in Right's Might. The play deals with the grafting, boodling attempt of an established and monopolistic railroad corporation to prevent the passage by the legislature of a franchise to a new and opposition road. The hero, a young and rising politician, is partially enmeshed in the toils of the corruptionists, led on by a desire for wealth that he may wed the lady of his heart, daughter of a wealthy banker. However, at the eleventh hour and fifty-ninth minute, his conscience re-asserts itself, and in a forceful, ringing speech before the Senate, he exposes his own infamy and the tactics of the boodlers, to the end that he succeeds in passing the franchise and vindicating his own good name. Such in brief is the plot, and, although its development savors much of the melodramatic and its lines in places of old-fashioned didactic preachment, yet the play is full of strong situations and undoubtable interest. Possessing these merits, it suffers, through faults common enough in the work of seasoned dramatists, let alone in maiden efforts, but, albeit, faults not irremediable. There is a plethora of dialogue, some of it unnecessary and really unessential to either situations or characters. Also there are unessential characters in the long cast who, while they add color to the setting, are not vitally important in the play and deter from the clear development of the plot. Summing up, it would seem that a revision of the manuscript with these alterations in view, by a master technician and a modernizing of some few of the lines, should produce a play whose proper presentation would spell success. As the young politician, Thos. McLarnie, long and favorably known to San Franciscans, through his very excellent work at the Valencia, has a role full of mild heroics and strong speeches. By his naturalness and tact, he avoids many of the pitfalls suggested by the lines. In his speech before the Senate and in his strong scene with his political sponsor and foster father, Major Hardy, Mr. McLarnie does himself distinct credit. Frank McGlynn has a part much to his apparent liking, as well as one to which his personality and physique suit him admirably in the role of Major Joel Hardy. Honest, plain, unpretentious farmer-politician is this Hardy—fearless and loved by all. Somehow the polished roughness of the man, softened by his big heart, loyal trust and generous love, makes the character smack of Abe Lincoln. In the strong denouement scene, when his young protegee tempts him and begs that he stay away from the Senate on the day the railroad bill is to come up, Mr. McGlynn accomplishes acting that stamps him artist. There are several good "bits" in the play, notably character parts, "types," handled for the most part right well. Thos. Caulfield is an irresistible Irishman, whose wooing of pretty Ione Bright, cast as a housemaid, is most effective, with its Celtic ardor. Maybelle Thompson does a good piece of work as the illiterate country youth, anxious for a "chance at knowledge." Rose Sheridan, as the heroine, is provided with but small acting opportunities, as is pretty Ora Harris, who plays at being Major Hardy's daughter. It is essentially a man's play, Right's Might, and revamped somewhat should make a strong and profitable offering.

Alcazar Theatre

The Regeneration, by Owen Kildare, is a drama of somewhat mixed motifs in which a conglomerate of all the emotions, from grim, naked soul truths to comedy, pathos to joy, and problem to precept, struggle for the mastery in creating and gripping the interest of the auditor. Real, very real, it is for the most part, despite certain crudities of construction which it is surprising should not have been eliminated by Arnold Daly and his managers when the play had its run at the Majestic in New York. In the role of the human derelict, Bowery tough, thief, and what-not, Bertram Lytell has another opportunity for displaying his versatility, and the general excellence of his acting is apparently surpassed in his interpretation of Owen Conway. The ironical pathos of his first attempt at prayer after the beginning of his regeneration through love for Marie Deering, a settlement worker, moves one almost to tears—tears that struggle against the laughter which, in view of the undoubted sincerity of the character, would almost be sacrilege. Evelyn Vaughan does some well-shaded acting as the girl from the outer world whose labors in the settlements bring her into contact with the derelict. Howard C. Hickman presents another composite picture in his role of Skimney, the Dip. His furtive, shifting eyes, quick-turning head and suave yet stealthy manners accord well both with the general public's idea of the pick-pocket and with the characteristics by which the guardians of the law generally size up such gentry. John B. Maher, as an Irish tough, is well to the fore, while Ernest Glendinning, Will Walling, Louise Brownell and Christie McLean are also worthy of especial mention. The cast as a whole is rather better than usual, and the play should attract liberal attention. It is of especial interest in view of the fact that it is stated, Kildare, in writing the character of Conway, was to a marked degree, autobiographical. The necessity for withdrawing the successful play at the end of a comparatively short run to make way for other contracted bookings at the New York Majestic, induced worry, which it is said was responsible for the playwright's loss of sanity. He is now an inmate of an asylum in the Empire State.

A Tragedy Re-enacted

The patrons at the National this week are unconsciously witnessing a tragedy of real life at every performance. Eva Westcott, who is making such a sensation in her tragic act, A Butterfly Wife, calls forth many a remark regarding her clever work, some such as "Isn't she terribly realistic in the scene where she finds her husband dead?" The same scene appealed to me as it did to many others, and I could not resist expressing personally my appreciation and enjoyment of her work. Going behind, I found a little lady who acknowledged my introduction with a sad smile, and I marveled that one so fragile represented so much strength and energy. In answer to my remark regarding her realistic work in the tragic finale of her act, she said: "Yes, many others have said the same thing, but they don't know how much realism there is in it for me. My husband, now deceased, was well known on the vaudeville stage as Tom Browne, the wonderful double note whistler. He always booked his act with mine and incidentally played the part of the silent husband at the desk. He was a sufferer from heart trouble, and one evening during the progress of the act he was stricken as he sat at the desk, of which I was not aware until the time came where I am supposed to find him dead. Imagine my horror upon approaching him to find him in fact apparently dead. I had the curtain rung down immediately, and he was conveyed to the hospital, where he succumbed. Now you can understand why my work is so apparently real. I do not act that scene; I live it. It is the tragedy of my own life. Not the whole act, for I do not include the extravagance. I am only endeavoring to portray a moral lesson on that subject, and I am sure that I am succeeding. I wrote the act with that idea and first produced it in London at the Palace Theatre, where it was an immediate success. In New York City it ran for sixty-seven consecutive performances upon its first presentation. No, I am my own manager, business representative, author of my act; in fact, I am the whole thing. Not so bad for a little woman as I, is it?" Best of all, Miss Westcott is an artist, unaffected and natural, and a delightful little lady to meet. Here's to more like her.

Robert Homans Surprises His Friends

When Robert Homans as Pirate Hook stepped on the stage at the Valencia last Sunday night in Peter Pan, Hermann Heller, the musical director, struck up the wedding march from Lohengrin; instead of the incidental music. Homans had become a benedict in the afternoon. After the matinee performance he disappeared, and when he came to light again the ceremony making him a married man had been performed by Rev. Cecil Mar-rack of St. Stephen's church, in Fulton Street, near Fillmore. The bride was Mrs. A. J. Maynard. When Homans as the terrible pirate recited his line in the play, "No fair woman's lips have even plucked the roses from my cheeks," the players on the stage with him "booed" loudly, and that circumstance, with the playing of the wedding march and a shower of rice from all parts of the stage, nearly upset the thespian, who recovered his composure with difficulty, though his blushes were concealed discreetly under the grease paint of his awesome pirate makeup. The wedding was a surprise to his fellow-players. Nobody knew of his impending marriage, and so, when he came to the playhouse, hoping to carry still further the secrecy attending his marriage, there was little opportunity for his fellow-players to do much to acknowledge the occasion. Mr. Homans is very popular with the company, and he received many good wishes and encouraging handshakes during the week. THE DRAMATIC REVIEW extends best wishes.

Personals

Just as the Angelus was ringing Monday evening, the wife of John Ford presented her lord and master with a bouncing baby boy. Mr. Ford is the moving picture operator at the National Theatre.

Bert Levey will book all acts for E. A. Fischer's San Francisco house when he opens here in the near future. Levey is now booking all acts for the First Street Theatre, Los Angeles, formerly Fischer's.

THE LECTURE tour of Admiral Evans has been a dismal failure in California for the local managers, who guaranteed $500.00 per lecture. In this city, the lectures were sparsely attended, and in San Jose the Admiral drew only $130.00.

The Opening of the New Orpheum

When on Monday night Morris Meyerfeld and his associates opened the beautiful new Orpheum, he gave the down-town movement an impetus that means more to the district that has been rebuilding than any other influence. The new Orpheum and the land on which it stands represents an investment of something close to $1,000,000.00, and is a commendable enterprise that is deserving of the greatest possible credit. The theatre itself is a gorgeous palace of amusement, by far the finest theatre in the West and a model for the entire country. The opening was attended by a large and fashionable crowd, and considerable ceremony. John Morrissey, who has been with the house from its inception and has carefully nursed it from its first struggles, officiated as master of ceremonies and introduced Mayor Edward R. Taylor, who spoke in felicitous vein. Zelig DeLussan was specially brought out to sing The Star-Spangled Banner for the occasion, and with that the programme was formally opened. Ray's Players presented a happy and entertaining burlesque, entitled A Roman Travesty. Paul Sandor and his canine circus, with some good ventriloquial asides, was an uncommon and clever affair. Arcadia, an attractive young woman, sang several songs pleasingly and contributed some really excellent violin solos, her bowing being noticeably good. Margaret Moffat and company have the big thing in the sketch line in a playlet called Awake at the Switch. Miss Moffat, who is evidently an experienced actress, has a delightful personality, and her work is very much on the order of Rose Stahl in The Chorus Lady. Her support is well selected and the playlet is both cleverly written and unique in conception, showing, as it does the everyday vexations connected with the public telephone service at one of the substations. Elsie Fay, Miller and Weston, holdovers from last week, repeat their fine dancing act, and The Sandwinas, the little fellow and the big, graceful strong woman, still held interest in an act that has now been seen here three weeks. Frank Fogarty, who is an extraordinarily good story teller, regaled his audience with a flow of Irish stories and observations. Grigolatis Aerial Ballet was a fitting climax to the evening's performance. The grace of the flying dancers and the beautiful combination of lights conspired to form an effect that was indescribably beautiful. As a reminder of the former days, a series of pictures showing old Market Street before the fire were flashed on the screen. San Francisco is proud of its Orpheum and its public spirit, and may the prosperity that has been its portion for years continue in ever-increasing measure.

Pantages-Empire

A Class-A programme is in evidence at the Empire this week, and increased attendance shows its appreciation of one of the best programmes at this house this season. The Armanis contribute one of the most refreshing acts seen in a long time. They are all instrumentalists and vocalists of more than ordinary talent and are able to render several delightful operatic selections that are thoroughly enjoyable, whether you understand them or not. Their work has a swing and snap to it that compels appreciation. Signor Ciociano's rendition of Maritana "overture" on the mandolin shows him to be master of this instrument, and generous applause greets his efforts at every performance. The scenic equipment of the act is a decided feature in itself. Wentworth and Vesta, with their dog Teddy, are a trio of comedy acrobats that are a clever and amusing feature of the bill. Hearn and Rutter contribute some enjoyable singing and dancing. Mrs. Maud Evans, formerly the wife of Lieutenant-Commander Evans, U. S. N., who is making her vaudeville debut this week, is a little lady with a very pleasing stage presence and vivacious air that promises well for the future. But would suggest, in a well-meant spirit that she choose, instead of a coon song, one more adapted to her talents. Two of the funniest black-face comedians seen in a long time are to be found in West and Mack. They keep the audience in continually good humor every moment they are on the stage. Se-Hara gives a mystifying exhibition of thought transference that is most baffling.

If you have any lost relatives, stolen articles or uncertain love affairs that you are desirous of solution, see Se-Hara. She guarantees to solve them for you. Motion pictures complete the programme.

The Wigwam

The usual high-class and satisfying programme greets the patrons of this popular house this week. The Marco Twins head the bill and are about the funniest knock-about comedians that ever happened. They keep the audience convulsed with their ridiculous antics. Rawson and June introduce their novel act, consisting of throwing the Australian boomerang and spears. Hetty Urma is a dainty little singer and dialect change artist that will please you. Alice Davenport & Co. have a tragic act entitled, Now. Miss Davenport is a clever actress with a clever company in support. The act is out of the ordinary, therefore interesting. Ellsworth & Lindon appear in a farce, His Day Off, where hubby, trying to make himself useful about the house, gets into all kinds of trouble. Miss Lindon does very clever work, and Ellsworth also, but he is not quite up to snuff when it comes to handling comedy. But the act is good. Elmer Tenley has a new bunch of ridiculousness that makes an entertaining feature of the bill. Joe Watson has a bunch of parodies and jokes that call for many a hearty laugh and make you forget your troubles. A great line of moving pictures completes a programme that is all and more than you want to ask for.

The National

A most gratifying roster of talent is to be found at this staple house this week, and turn-'em-away attendance is in evidence at every performance. A delightful surprise, as well as an awakening for some, is to be found in A Butterfly Wife, at the hands of Eva Westcott. The act was seen here just previous to the earthquake and created a sensation, and Miss Westcott returns to us to reap new laurels as an actress of great power. As the wife, first frivolous and care-free, then petulant and then on to a tragic awakening, Miss Westcott runs the gamut of human passions in a manner commanding admiration. In less capable hands, the thin line between the comedy and tragedy of the act would be utterly ruined, but Miss Westcott meets all the requirements, and her interpretation is superb. Many a smile is brought forth as numerous traits of little wifery are recognized, both by hubby and wifery, and many an accusing glance the latter gets from former throughout the audience. Miss Westcott is able to act and still take your mind from the idea that you are only witnessing acting. She is naturalness itself, and her handling of the tragic finale of the act is refreshing in that it is not torn to tatters. It is a star's vehicle, and a star handling it. It is a treat. May we have more like it. Delmore and Oneida present some clever work in their balancing pole act. Rose Stevens comes in for a warm welcome as a holdover, and has a new line of vocal selections that are making her even more popular. Cross & Co. present a farce act that calls forth many a laugh, but is a little drawn out. Dispensing with a great deal of the dialogue would be a decided improvement in the act. Joe Flynn has a line of foolish talk that calls for numerous laughs. Manuel Romaine & Co. present a musical skit that is a sure winner. Mr. Romaine has a sweet tenor voice which he knows well how to handle, and you'll find yourself humming his songs as you leave. Sadie Palmer is a little lady that contributes some clever dancing and singing to the act and able support is given by young Foley with his happy smile. Carlisle's dogs and talking pony is a feature of the programme. Dan, the talking pony, saves the act by his wonderful intelligence and mathematical knowledge. He is the cleverest piece of horse flesh presented for some time. Unusually good moving pictures complete a splendid programme.

Marie Nelson, known as the little girl with the big voice, late prima-donna in Piff-Paff-Poof, The Toy-maker, The Honeymoon, and also in the same capacity with Sousa's Band, will jump direct from New York City to make her first appearance in California, opening at the National, May 2.

Star Theatre

It looks as though another winner in the vaudeville has sprung into life in the Mission. That former white elephant, known as the Globe Theatre, was opened this week as a five and ten-cent vaudeville house, and a large and increased attendance is in evidence at every performance. It takes a good many people to fill the house, but you have to look pretty closely to find the empty benches. A rattling good show is to be had for little money, and the Missionites are taking advantage of the fact. The programme is composed of good high-class acts and a wide range of variety is to be found in conjunction with the interesting moving pictures. The Lazelles contribute some clever singing and dancing stunts. A high-class musical attraction is to be found in the Melbourne Brothers. Their act is neatly costumed and their work is refreshing. The Bernsteins also contribute some clever work in the song and dance category. The Barrell Jumpers win well merited applause for their work. The comedy of the evening is supplied by Clayton and Glennon, assisted by their clever donkey, Jasper, in the amusing burlesque, The Matador. The act is in capable hands, and the costuming is good, but a detraction from the atmosphere of the playlet is to be found in the scenery, which is hardly appropriate for a scene laid in Mexico. It is hardly possible that a bull fight in Mexico would be held in the backyard of a building resembling a New York tenement. Good motion pictures complete a big show for little money.

Vaudeville Notes

Pearlita, the danseuse, had the misfortune to sustain a painful injury while dancing on the stage of the Broadway Theatre of Nevada City, April 15th. She was in the midst of one of her alluring dances when she suddenly collapsed and fell to the floor of the stage. She was immediately assisted to her dressing-room and a physician sent for. An examination disclosed the fact that some of the cords of the left knee had been injured. She will be only temporarily disabled.

The Armanis, appearing at the Empire this week, in their beautiful vocal and instrumental scene, A Night in Naples, are all well known upon the operatic stage abroad. Signor Armani, baritone, was for a number of years under contract to Mascagni, the great Italian composer, and also in support of Schumann Heink at Beyreuth. Signor Barile, tenor, was for a number of seasons at the Royal Opera House, Naples. Rella Calace, contralto, is also well known on this side of the water, having been leading prima donna contralto for the Savage Opera Co. for several seasons. Signor Ciociano, mandolinist, has the reputation of being one of the finest mandolin players on the continent. His playing in the act ably upholds the contention. Rosa Carmela is also a clever player upon this instrument. The scenery carried in the act was painted by Bertin, of the Grand Opera House, Paris.

A new theatre will be erected at Sixteenth and Church Streets, to be called The Haymarket. It will be devoted to vaudeville. Mortimer Dodge has been promoting the scheme.

Ola Hayden, the once phenomenal female baritone, who joined Jim Post's Company in Fresno a couple of weeks ago, was taken ill on the stage a week ago last Saturday, and was removed to a hospital, where a severe operation was performed. Although at all times in imminent danger, Miss Hayden rallied, and is rapidly improving, and as soon as she is able will rejoin Mr. Post's Company. Her father, Joe Hayden, is with her, and the sick girl is receiving every care.

Siebert and Lindley, assisted by Howard Foster, are playing S. & C. time, presenting Her Own Mother. They will be in San Francisco in a few weeks.

The N. Y. Hippodrome show, an aggregation of vaudeville performers, piloted by Tom Bates, stranded in Livermore, Sunday.

Saharet, conceded to be the world's greatest danseuse, who will shortly make her appearance in San Francisco, was discovered by Archie Levy in a peculiar manner. Quite a number of years ago when Fred Bogner was an equal partner with Gus Walters in the old Orpheum, and later sold out his share to Walters and started the old Alcazar as an opposition vaudeville house, he secured the services of Cyrene, at that time a well known and famous dancer, as a special attraction. Mr. Randolph, her husband, and Bogner had a controversy over the financial question, and Cyrene refused to appear. This left Bogner up in the air for some one to fill her place. Saharet, then known as Clara Campbell, had just arrived from Australia with her mother, and was appearing at the Mid-winter Fair in a resort known as the 49er. Mining Camp. Levy went out to the camp and engaged her. He rehearsed her to go on that night at the Alcazar. The next difficulty was a name appropriate for a feature attraction. In the old property room down stairs Levy found an old bible. Picking it up and casually opening it his eyes lighted upon the words—Saharet at the well. Right there and then Levy gave her the name of Saharet, which she has retained ever since.

Opening Sunday matinee at the National, a high-class programme of variety will be presented. The Marvellous Brindamour, world's champion handcuff king and jail-breaker, will head the bill. Mr. and Mrs. Robbins present their great sketch, The Counsel for the Defense. Madame Doherty's trained dogs, consisting of eighteen snow-white poodles; "Waltz-me-again" Geo. Wilson, the millionaire minstrel; McDermott and Raymond, peerless comedy entertainers; Iva Donette and her canine pickaninny; Emerson & Co., inventors of new songs and dances; the very latest in moving pictures, will complete the programme.

A decidedly high class program will be on the boards at the Wigwam opening this Sunday matinee. The headliner will be found in that diminutive specimen of a massive beast, Little Hip, who has been the drawing card wherever he has appeared. The Wurttemberg Bros. will present some foot juggling that will make you sit up and take notice. Ann Crewe & Co. in My Lady Raffles will hold intense interest. The Atlantic City Four will render some delightful and tuneful musical and vocal selections. The Four Haydens, exceedingly clever tight-wire artists. Tom Dugan, Mueller & Mueller and high class moving pictures will conclude the program.

Irene Ormsby, a protege of Archie Levy, now playing on Broadway, closes her eastern engagement this Saturday night and will leave immediately for the coast under contract to Sullivan & Considine.

At Valley Forge Is a Box-Office Winner This Week at the Broadway, Oakland

The season for regular traveling attractions was opened at The Macdonough, Monday evening, when Dan Sully and company presented a western comedy, entitled, The Match Maker. Mr. Sully is an actor of ability and gives the principal role a good rendition. The play will continue the balance of the week and will give way to Otis Skinner for a three-night engagement. At Ye Liberty Salomy Jane is drawing fairly good houses and is giving general satisfaction. The play, which is founded from Bret Harte's story of the same name, contains many characters familiar to California history. Landers Stevens as the gambler and Katherine Mulkins as Salomy Jane had the two principal characters, and sustained them well. Henry Shumer as Colonel Starbottle, Geo. Webster as Yuba Bill, Elmer Booth as Red Pete, E. L. Bennison as Low and Lillian Elliott as Lize Heath were all responsible for some fine character work. The scenery, especially that of the famous redwoods, was exceptionally realistic. Mrs. Temple's Telegram will follow. Manager Guy Smith is wearing a continuous smile these days, and well he might as the Broadway is packed at every performance. Valley Forge, a drama relating to the American revolution, is the offering, and is given a good presentation. The members of Smith's stock company, which is headed by Al Hallett and Priscilla Knowles, Jack Bennett and Roy Clement, also do good work and are entitled to special mention. A tableau scene depicting Washington crossing the Delaware makes an immense hit. The Eight Melanes, holdovers from last week are still the big hit at the Orpheum although this week's new comers comprise some good numbers. Joly Violetta and The Parisian Dancers receives many encores. The other numbers are S. Miller Kent, Charles Matthews, Step, Mehlinger and King, Messrs. Gordon and Marx, Miss Adeline Dunlap, Frank McCormack, The Four Casting Dunbars, A Picture. Pat Conway's Band has made such a great hit at Idora that the management have extended their engagement for six weeks. The following fine program is making good at the Bell and resulting in packed houses: Little Hip, Mueller & Mueller, Ann Crew Co., Atlantic City Four, Tom Dugan, Wartenburg Bros. The Bach festival will take place in the Greek Theatre, Berkeley, the 22d. There will be nine soloists and one hundred and twenty-five voices. It will be one of the musical events of the season. Admiral Bob Evans spoke at Ye Liberty on the 20th and gave an interesting talk on naval affairs and the entertainment was the best that the Club has ever given. Manazist. Every seat in the house was sold their annual concert at Ye Liberty, prospects. The Orpheus Club gave ger Bishop, who has left town for a short vacation, announced prior to his departure the following future plays: The Prisoner of Zenda, Alabama, The Great Divide, and The Road to Yesterday. LOUIS SCHEELINE.

Correspondence

Marysville, April 17.—At Marysville, April 17, Lillian Russell in the racing comedy, Wildfire, played to a packed house. The company, scenic effects and all were first class, and Miss Russell as the dashing widow was superb, and Wildfire made a decided hit here. On Monday evening Norman Hackett as the star will be seen in Classmates, which is an American drama worth seeing. MARCUSE.

Eureka.—Margarita Theatre (Shaw & Gorton, mgrs.)—The Raymond Teal company is still playing to capacity business, changing plays every third night. This company is marked as the strongest seen here for a long time. This week they are presenting Too Rich to Marry. The Swedish Singing Society is booked for 27th. Empire (Jas. Van Sant, Jr., mgr.)—Vaudeville and moving pictures to good business. Charles Royal and wife are presenting a very pretty sketch. Goodhure, a banjolist, was also good. Moving picture houses all doing well.

Spokane, Wash., April 16.—Florence Gear appeared at the Spokane Theatre in Marrying Mary, 10-11, to good-sized audiences; good show. Clyde Fitch's latest and most successful comedy, Girls, 15-17, is surely a winner. Girls is delightful, and the girls themselves are delightful. They pleased four good-sized audiences; 18-19, The Right of Way; 20-21, Harry Beresford. The Light Eternal, played by the Jessie Shirley company at the Auditorium, was well patronized. Miss Shirley took the part of the Princess Artemia and George D. McQuarrie as Marco Valerius. The rest of the company were well cast. Next, Charley's Aunt. The Russell Brothers and Andy Rice share the honors at the Orpheum this week. Others are the Frederick Allen company; the Delmore Sisters; McGinnis and Clifton; Francini Olloms; the Five Juggling Normans, and moving pictures, to big business. Mme. Nadje was topline at the Washington. Others were the Elite Four; Mildred Grover and Rick Richards; Cowboy Williams; Fox and Crystal, and moving pictures. Large audiences witnessed the good show at Pantages. Mr. and Mrs. Edward H. Lucas, topline; the Four International Comiques; Hoyt and Marion; the Marathon Comedy Four; the Del Costa Duo; Wm. D. Gilson, and moving pictures. The moving picture houses all report business improving. SMYTH.

Vancouver, B. C., April 12.—Phenomenal success marked the production of Rob Roy at the Empress Theatre during the week ending April 10, in which the members of the Scottish Dramatic and Musical Association collaborated with Walter Sanford's players. At the fall of the curtain at the matinee on Saturday, Mr. Lamberton addressed the members of both companies as follows: "Ladies and Gentlemen—I have to assume a new role in addition to the one in which I am presently clothed. On behalf of the Scottish Dramatic and Musical Association, I have to ask you, Miss Vane, to accept a little memento of our work together during the past week. It has been a genuine pleasure to us all to have been associated with Walter Sanford's players in this production in which you have filled, to the unbounded satisfaction of ourselves and the public, a role difficult even to an actress of Scottish birth and much more so to you. We ask you to value our little gift, not according to its cost, but as a token of our appreciation of the way in which you have adorned and portrayed the part of Helen MacGregor. Rob Roy, instead of being entwined with a garland of roses, as is described in the drama, is now crowned with Myrtle. In asking you to accept this memento I do so in the double role as vice-president of our society and as the oldest clansman of the MacGregor. Sons and daughters of Gregarach, three cheers for the wife of our chief. Mr. Lamberton, who was made up to represent a patriarch with snow-white hair, then handed to Miss Myrtle Vane a very pretty Scottish brooch, set with a cairngorm and Scotch pebbles cut in the shape of thistles. Miss Vane, who was much surprised by the gift and its unexpectedness, warmly thanked the donors in pleasing terms, stating her intention of wearing the brooch at the evening's performance. Three cheers (and a tiger) for Mr. Sanford's leading lady closed a very pleasant little ceremony.

Astoria, April 19.—Astoria Theatre (F. M. Hanlin, mgr.)—Saturday evening, the 17th, Lillian Russell and her company produced the racing comedy, Wildfire, to a very large audience, and all were loud in their praises of the cleverness of the production and the popularity of the actress. Lillian Russell proved that she has many admirers in Astoria. The play is a splendid one, filled with modern repartee and strong characters. Miss Russell is seen to excellent advantage. She is wonderfully attractive and is always greeted with enthusiasm by her large audiences. Next Saturday the great and only Norman Hackett in the popular play, Classmates, will be the attraction, followed the next evening (Sunday) by Black Patti in the comic opera, The Blackville Strollers. SELIG.

Tacoma, Wash., April 13.—The Right of Way at the Tacoma Theatre, April 4-5, with Guy Standing and Theodore Roberts as co-stars, was one of the finest attractions of the season. Well acted, adequately staged, it was thoroughly satisfactory from every point of view and enthusiastically received by representative audiences. The company had the misfortune while en route from Portland to have their baggage-car broken into, and suffered the loss of costumes and properties to the value of several hundred dollars. Harry Beresford, with a capable supporting company, appeared here 11th in an enjoyable comedy, entitled Whose Your Friend. The lines were clever and Mr. Beresford sustained the excellent impression he had made on former visits to this city. The Tacoma will remain dark until the 23d inst., when it will reopen for the two nights' engagement of Lillian Russell in her racing comedy, Wildfire. Another April attraction will be Norman Hackett in Classmates. 28. Whatever the McRae players produce is sure to be well done, and last week's bill was no exception. Shakespeare by a stock company at popular prices is a bold undertaking, and the Star players deserve all the good things said of their work in The Taming of the Shrew. Mr. McRae played the part of Petruchio, using the Booth version, and as he and Miss Oswald (the Katherine) have often appeared in this play on the road, they were on familiar ground. Miss Oswald made a captivating Katherine, and her delivery of the epilogue could not have been better. Too much praise cannot be given to Ed Lawrence, who, in the role of the servant Grumio, added to his already long list of clever characterizations. Another good bit of character work, assisted also by clever make-up, was furnished by Robert Webb Lawrence as the tailor, Allen J. Holuber as Hortensia, John McCabe as Baptista, Denton Vane as Lucentio and Thomas Sullivan as Gremio, deserve special mention for their work. The rest of the large supporting company was suitably cast. Realism is the predominating note in this week's bill. Shore Acres, from the opening scene on the farm, with its pigeons, postman's horse and cart and little boat drifting into the harbor, to the last scene, where the stockings are filled on Christmas eve. Of course, the piece de resistance was the turkey dinner in the second act. Manager McRae had provided the real thing for all the accessories to the dinner scene, which went big. John McCabe carried off the honors in the role of Uncle Nat Berry, and was the kind-hearted, lovable old man to the life. Sharing honors with him was Robert Webb Lawrence, who as Martin Berry gave a forceful and masterly representation of the part. Erba Robeson as Ma Berry caused much laughter, as did Ed Lawrence in the role of Joel Gates. His four-year-old son, Teddy Lawrence, who appeared as Maudy Gates, was the recipient of much applause. Miss Oswald gave a vivid portrayal of the young daughter, Helen. Denton Vane and Bertha Corray, as two of the children in the Berry family, were clever. The whole company, in fact, deserve the greatest credit. Miss Van Tassel as the family "help," Mr. Holuber as the young doctor, Mr. Percival and Mr. Sullivan as the captain and postmaster, are all worthy of special mention. Next production, The Prisoner of Zenda. E. F. Stafford, for a number of years resident manager of the Tacoma Theatre, was in the city this week renewing old friendships. This season he is manager of The Mills of the Gods company, which plays at the Tacoma 25-26. The big act at the Grand this week is May Ward's Eight Dresden Dolls, nicely costumed and with tuneful songs well sung; the act is a winner. The Meeh Trio do some wonderful hand-balancing and weight lifting. Norton and Russell in a series of lightning changes and V. L. Granville in a playlet portraying six or seven different characters were interesting features. Gaynell Everett was good in clog dancing. Next week: Nita Allen and company in a one-act comedy; Quaker City Quartet; Lewis and Young, singing and dancing comedians; Bonnie Gaylord; Frank Bush; George F. Keane, song illustrator. At the Pantages, Lafayette's dogs were a whole show in themselves, going through a series of clever tricks that were marvelous. Harland and Rollison pleased with an eccentric musical act, including some good imitations. Morgan and McGarry's dancing act was enhanced by the singing and acting of six chorus girls. The Chartres Sisters also sing well. Scott and Wilson provided some amusing comedy and Bert Vincent singing My Dream of the U. S. A. completes a good bill. April 19—The Four Dordrens, team of acrobats; Cesar Rivoli, in impersonations; Alton and Oleaser, in The Sacrifice; Signor St. Clair, harp soloist; Quigg and Nickerson, musical artists. A. H.

Actors' Fund Membership

The financial affairs of the Actors' Fund, which are now being directed very ably by Thomas McGrath, of the Registration Bureau, are receiving a decided impetus just at present. In a letter received from Mr. McGrath this week, the editor of the DRAMATIC REVIEW received the full membership list of the fund. Mr. McGrath writes very entertainingly and his letter is worth perusal by our readers. It is as follows:

In looking over the early financial affairs of the Actors' Fund I find that the first four (4) members registered as life members were Messrs. A. M. Palmer, Edward Harrigan, William Henderson and William H. Mallory; that was on September 14, 1882, since which time the list has had a gradual increase, but in no single year have so many names been added to the list in a given time as occurs this year, when in the short space of eight weeks twenty-two names have been added to the list of life members, the total of which now stands at 304. This should, and no doubt will, be increased to at least one thousand by Thanksgiving of this year—the beginning and end of the annual membership year. It was suggested a few weeks ago by Mr. William Harris that an attempt be made to increase the number of life members to 1,000; that would mean in round figures $100,000. That amount to be placed in a sinking fund, the interest only to be used. Said interest would amount to $2 per year at least—a sum sufficient to cover his dues as long as the fund were in existence. In other words, by paying $50 for a life membership in the fund, his dues of $2 each year would be earned by investment of the original amount, and from the present outlook nothing but a great national calamity would necessitate the using of that sinking fund. I hope the members of the profession will think seriously of this project, as it saves them the possible annoyance of having to pay the $2 each year and also puts the fund on a sound financial basis. The thanks of the Actors' Fund officers and the profession at large are certainly due to the dramatic papers of New York City and other cities.

T. M. A. Benefit

At the Princess Theatre on Wednesday afternoon, May 26, '09, will be held the sixteenth annual benefit in aid of the sick and charity fund of San Francisco Lodge, No. 21, Theatrical Mechanical Association. Tickets will be 50c and $1.00. Talent from all the theatres playing in San Francisco that week will appear. The committee is working very hard to make this a great success.

The Players Good

S. Ferry McKean of The Players has received the following appreciative letter: "The people of Palo Alto were very much pleased with the Players, in fact, everyone agrees that it is the best company that has played here, and I wish to say that whenever you have any open time my house is yours. Your productions were complete; your company all ladies and gentlemen; your plays well worth seeing and well acted. In fact, I consider that you have the best repertoire show on the road today. Let me know when you are coming back."

Sincerely,
ROBERT A. HAZEL

Jose is Repeating Last Year's Record Business

Dick Jose and his company, playing Jane, tried the show on the dog at Livermore last Saturday and just to prove that the silver-voiced Dick can draw from even the dead ones, it is to be mentioned that even the graveyard opened up and packed the Livermore theatre for the occasion. At San Jose on Sunday night Mr. Jose opened to $401.00 and on Monday played to $743.25, breaking the house record at the price—and San Jose has been a very bad boy this season, as many of the big shows will testify.

General Oregon Notes

The Wm. V. Mong company opened a stock engagement in Marshfield, the opening bill The Clay Baker, business good.

Robert Hildreth is organizing a repertoire company to play a circuit of theatres in Washington and Oregon. Leo Linhardt has been engaged to play leads. Mr. and Mrs. Hildreth will play character leads. The manager of the Kelso, Washington, opera house is backing the company; opening date April 26th.

The Bell Boy musical comedy company is laying off in Portland. The manager has been "wild-cating" the company, antagonizing local managers, and after leaving Marshfield could not get bookings, John Cort refusing to give them a trial. Several members quit, thereby weakening the company. It is said that the organization will close in Portland. * * * It is reported Virginia Thornton is soon to join the Lyric stock in Portland, to play leads. * * * The stock company playing Albany, Ore., with Margaret Bell as leading woman and Florence Davenport in heavies, closed on April 17. Miss Bell is soon to marry a prominent attorney of Albany. * * * Lee Willard and company reports improvement in business. He opened Tillamook, Ore., April 20. Excellent business reported. Opening bill, The Silver King. * * * Arthur C. Fox, recently in advance of Lee Willard is now in Seattle, trying to interest capital in organizing a dramatic company to play the Alaskan towns during the summer.

George E. Lask

George E. Lask has been engaged by Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Drew to manage and direct the company they are sending to London to present The Naked Truth at the Coliseum, sailing from New York on the Minneapolis on the 24th. Mr. Lask will also rehearse the Wright-Lessing Company that will present the one-act operatic fantasia in Paris, Berlin and Vienna. Mr. Lask has under consideration the production next season of several dramatic and musical offerings, including one of the stage directorships of Henry Russell's Boston Grand Opera Company at the New Opera House. Since his return to New York from San Francisco in October, after an absence of two years and a half, he has been busily engaged in several successes and stock companies in Philadelphia, Boston and Kansas City, making special productions. His present trip will take him away from New York for nearly two months.

CHESTER FRENCH was taken ill last week and is now confined in the Fabiola Hospital of Oakland.

Personals

CARROLL JOHNSON, George Thatcher and Lew Sully are some of the lights of minstrelsy who will appear in rapid succession at the American during the season.

THROUGH an error last week we announced the closing of Helen Hale at Ye Liberty Theatre in Oakland tomorrow night. It should have read Helen Holmes.

Miss Morris showed no trace of her recent illness except in unusual pallor. She did the sleep walking scene from Macbeth with great power and her voice showed the flexibility and sweetness that distinguished her at the height of her career.

CLYDE GRANGER, who has been one of the bulwarks of the Del Lawrence Company in Sacramento and elsewhere, has been compelled to give up work, owing to a nervous break down.

WILLIAM L. THORNE is next season to be Charles B. Hanford's leading man.

COL. STONER, who is this season ahead of Richard Jose, is doing his usual fine advance work. The Colonel is one of the most experienced and most capable agents known to the West, and Mr. Jose is to be congratulated on having such a fine boomer ahead of his show.

ADRIAN VON PLANK, who was shot five times at Bakersfield, Cal., about three months ago by a husband, who found him in his wife's room, died in Portland last Saturday from the wounds. Von Plank was a member of the Cunningham Stock Company when the trouble occurred.

PHIDDIS M. PAGE, one of the old school of actors, is soon to close with Lee Willard Company and will go direct to Seattle. Mr. Page, besides being an actor, is also a portrait painter. He has a concession at the Yukon Exposition and will exhibit his masterpiece, Roosevelt in the Jungles of Africa. He has been offered a very liberal offer for this picture but refused hoping to reap a rich reward in exhibiting his conception at Seattle.

Press Club Gives Show At Van Ness

The Van Ness Theatre was crowded Sunday afternoon at the Three Years After entertainment given by the Press Club. Every seat was occupied, and the show lasted five hours. Otis Skinner, one of America's greatest actors and at present playing at the Van Ness in The Honor of the Family, scored a hit as a monologist. He apologized for not being able to deliver a monologue, and in the course of his apology kept the audience applauding incessantly. His recitation of a poem written by an old newspaperman was well received. Sarah Edwards, the contralto, contributed two new songs. Little Alma Tuchler sang two songs and danced to great applause. The Press Club Quartet—Nathan Landsberger, "Good Old Nat," Miss Nevada Heffron and Mrs. Margaret Evans—completed the first portion of the entertainment. The Parting of the Ways, a sketch presented by John Graham, Carl G. Murray, Martin Nelson and Miss Lillian Fischer, opened the second portion. It is something new in the list of short performances, the ending being a complete surprise. It was well received. Signor Joaquin Warrall's renditions of the prologue from I'Pagliacci and the Toreador song from Carmen were encored several times. Mme. Telula Evans-Burrill, formerly prima donna with the old Tivoli, gave many of the old Tivoli patrons a touch of homesickness when she appeared after an absence of many years. Haig Patigian, a well known California sculptor, drew a lightning sketch of a marine scene. John Carington rendered two baritone selections and Robert Murray gave some exhibitions of Scotch dancing. The Scottish quartet, consisting of Marion Stirling, Margaret Stewart, Malcolm Morrison and J. Anderson Wylie, proved to be one of the best acts. Saturday night, April 24, the entertainers who entertained last Sunday will be entertained by the members of the club in their new quarters, which are about ready to be occupied.

Ernest Filkins Married

Miss Jessica Ray was married to Ernest C. Filkins of the theatrical firm of Holland & Filkins at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Holland, 3125 Groveland avenue, Chicago, Wednesday, April 14, 1909. Mrs. Filkins was formerly a member of E. H. Sothorn's company. For the past two years she was leading woman of the Chase-Lister Company, a well known stock organization. With her marriage Mrs. Filkins retires from the profession. The DRAMATIC REVIEW extends congratulations and best wishes.

Dustin Farnum Would Like to Smash Howard Gould

Chicago, April 21.—"Some one should smash Howard Gould in the face—if it were not for the fact that I might annihilate him, I would do it myself." This was the principal part of Dustin Farnum's answer today to charges made by Gould that the actor was too friendly with his wife. Farnum is to give his deposition tomorrow in the law offices of Louis E. Ehle in defense of Mrs. Gould, who was Katherine Clemmons, the actress. She is being sued for divorce by her husband. The actor, who is playing the leading part in Cameo Kirby, is said to be one of the most athletic men on the stage. "Any man who makes such charges against a woman as are made by this Gould person is a despicable coward," said Farnum. "I met Mrs. Gould about eight years ago in New York. She and other prominent women asked me to take part in a charity affair. I played a short sketch with Miss May Robson. After that I met Mrs. Gould accidentally at different times. I never was alone with her in my life. That automobile trip mentioned by Gould was as harmless as anything in the world. There were four women besides myself and the chauffeur in the party. I accepted the invitation because I love automobiling. We went from Philadelphia to Atlantic City, and I enjoyed the trip. At Atlantic City Mrs. Gould was taken ill and was confined to her room. But this illness was not the result of 'booze,' as he declared. We did not have a single drink of intoxicating liquor on that trip. I met Mrs. Gould again in Connecticut when I was playing in The Virginian. I attended a dinner party at which she was present, with four or five others. I don't remember whether we had anything to drink or not. It is not unusual for women to take a drink of wine at a dinner party, and Mrs. Gould and the other women present might have had a number of drinks for all I know. I never was infatuated with Mrs. Gould, and I am sure she was not with me. Why, she was an actress when I was a boy. I was attending the Massachusetts Institute of Technology when I first saw her on the stage. It is silly and absurd that our names should be connected in this divorce case." Farnum said his deposition would be a denial of every charge. The actor declared that if there was any way to secure redress from Gould he certainly would put the matter in the hands of his attorney. "I don't think I can get back at him," said Farnum. "He really has not made any charges, but has worded his intimations in such a way that he could not be held liable." Delancey Nicoll, attorney for Gould, arrived in the city in the afternoon. He will question Farnum at the hearing. Attorney Ehle was commissioned by the New York Supreme Court to take the actor's deposition.

Great Friars' Festival

The National Association of the Friars will give their second annual festival at the New York Theatre on Friday, May 14, 1909, and will issue this year, as they did last, an official souvenir program, except that it will be in every respect a much more beautiful and attractive program than the one produced under the rush and hurry of last year. They propose to make this one a real art souvenir. The Friars is an association of the theatrical managers, advance agents, dramatic critics, newspaper men, and others directly or indirectly interested in the theatrical business. Practically every man prominent in this line, both in New York City and throughout the country, is a member of this Club. Its influence is powerful and far reaching. It numbers among its members quite a few excellent artists and cartoonists, many of whom have already consented to contribute original drawings for the cover and to illustrate the pages of the program, and through their friendship and influence it is expected to secure drawings from a number of other well known artists who are not members of the Club. These beautiful drawings and wash paintings will be distributed through the advertising pages in order to insure a careful examination of every page. This in itself will enhance the advertising value of the program, while the cover, which is to be done by an artist who has painted many of the beautiful covers of Scribner's, Harper's and The Ladies' Home Journal, but whose name will not be mentioned at present, and the attractive way in which the entire souvenir will be illustrated and printed will certainly mean that every copy will be treasured by its recipient as a thing too beautiful to be thrown away. The New York Theatre, at which the festival is to be held, is the largest auditorium in New York City. Every seat will be sold for this performance. The audience will not number less than three thousand people, and the intimate relations which exist between the members of the club and the news-

Charity Fund Benefit

The big theatrical event of the season will take place at the Princess Theatre, Tuesday afternoon, May 4, when the eighth benefit in aid of the Charity Fund of the Associated Theatrical Managers of San Francisco will be given. Before the fire these benefits were given annually, and, on account of the deserving character of the cause and the splendid program invariably offered, standing room was always at a premium. Since the fire, however, the managers have rested on their oars, but of late the calls for relief from unfortunate members of the profession have been so many that the treasury has been depleted, and they now have determined to call upon the always generous San Francisco public for assistance. Not that every one who purchases a ticket will not receive his full money's worth and "then some." A program is in course of preparation that will excel anything ever offered in the city and the best features from the current bills at the Van Ness, Alcazar, Princess, Valencia, Orpheum and American Theatres will be presented. The entertainment will be started up with a lively first part by I. P. Wilkerson's Minstrels of Today, from the American, and there will follow in rapid succession acts of a most varied and meritorious kind. Mme. Nazimova and her company will assist; the Alcazar and Valencia stock companies will contribute acts from plays; the Princess will give something from A Chinese Honeymoon, and the Orpheum and members of the American Musical Comedy

Company will contribute some splendid vaudeville acts. The overture will be played by the combined orchestras of the city, and the performance will, as usual, be continuous. The price of seats will be reduced to a dollar and a half instead of two dollars as hitherto, and tickets are on sale at all of the principal theatres.

Statue of Edwin Booth

PARIS, April 17.—Frederic Mac Monnies is at work in his studio at Giverni on a statue of Edwin Booth, which is to be erected in front of the Players' Club in Grammercy Park, New York. The famous actor will be represented in the role of Hamlet at that moment when he stands looking at the medallion portrait. The artist is working from a photograph taken years ago by Sarony, only three copies of which were ever printed. Two disappeared, and the last known copy of this photograph was in the possession of the actor's daughter, Edwina Booth Grossmann, who brought it over to Paris and gave it as a birthday present to her son upon his coming of age. The studio of the great tragedian's grandson is really a Booth museum, containing tables, chairs, prints, sketches and costumes inherited from Edwin Booth. Mac Monnies is immensely pleased with the suggestive photograph. He said: "It shows the living Booth. It is so full of action, even in its repose, that I could hope for no better photograph to work from."

THE benefit performance at the New York Theatre last Saturday netted $3,200 for Clara Morris, who made a speech of gratitude at the close. Over fifty actors, most of them stars, took part.

London Scores the Devil

London, April 19.—The Devil, a play by Henry Hamilton of the United States, was produced at the Adelphi Theatre last night. The critics treat it very severely as a rather dull production. The Daily Telegraph describes it as "fustian and foolishness." The critics all are more concerned over the censor having permitted the play than in a discussion of its merits. J. T. Green, a well-known writer on things theatrical, says that the tendency of the play is pernicious. "It is so sordid," he added, "that I turn in wonderment to the censor who placed the ban on Monna Vanna for the spirit of a line and passes the same thing vulgarized in The Devil."

Latest Pacific Coast Shubert Dope

Abe Cohn, manager of the American Theatre, is now the Western representative of the Shuberts, and he announces that within a week one of three provisional sites for a local playhouse will have been selected, and the work of constructing a $250,000 theatre will be begun. A $300,000 theatre is to be constructed in Oakland, in Broadway, near Fifteenth Street, and the Oakland postoffice building. A new theatre is also to be built in Bakersfield, possibly one in Stockton, and the Shuberts will control the new playhouse which the Elks are about to build at Sacramento. Plans have been matured for the construction of a new theatre in Los Angeles. "We have three sites under consideration here for the new theatre," said Cohn yesterday. "They are the lot in Mason Street adjoining the proposed Columbus Theatre, a lot in Ellis Street, near Powell, which runs back to the Orpheum, and the site of the old Alcazar Theatre. The Shuberts are prepared to spend $5,000,000 in this campaign. I will be their Western manager and will have charge of the territory west of the Mississippi. There will be houses in Denver, Salt Lake City, Los Angeles, Bakersfield, Fresno, Stockton, San Jose, San Francisco, Oakland, Sacramento, Portland, Tacoma, Seattle, British Columbia cities and Butte, Mont. The new house to be built in Oakland will have a seating capacity of 1,800, and will cost $300,000. On the night of Monday, August 30th, the Shubert season will open here at the American Theatre in Market Street, with Clyde Fitch's farce, The Blue Mouse, as the initial attraction. The original New York production will be given. The Blue Mouse will be followed by James T. Powers in Havana, Eddie Foy in Mr. Hamlet of Broadway, and possibly by Blanche Bates in The Fighting Hope. Then four attractions from the Maxine Elliott Theatre, New York, will come. Every show will be produced with the original New York company."

Ethel Levy to be Countess

Paris, April 24.—Ethel Levy, the American actress, may soon realize the sentiment of her former husband, George Cohan's song, I'm to Marry a Nobleman for the Sake of His Family. Her friends say that the one great and only real love affair of her life is now on, and those who thought her affection for her first husband so deep-rooted that never again would a man interest her, have been disappointed, and a shaft from Cupid's bow has come with a coronet upon it for her. Her friends in Paris say that the lucky man of all her ardent admirers is none other than Baron Robert de le Bouilliere. The Baron was best man for the late Duc de Chaulnes at his wedding in New York. He represents one of the oldest families and is heir to one of the most respected titles of France. Miss Levy has made a wonderful success on the Paris stage. She has just concluded a seven-week engagement with a London Theatre at $700 per week. Friends here have noted a change in her manner and the forsaking of her apparent purpose to drown a great sorrow in wild gaiety. For she no more haunts the cafes, but has forgotten her past sorrows and is content and happy in a new-found love affair.

Gift for New Theatre

It has been learned that William K. Vanderbilt, one of the founders of the New Theatre of New York, has offered to supply the artistic decorations for the foyer, which is to occupy the front facing Central Park on the second floor, and which will be one of the features of the endowed playhouse. Mr. Vanderbilt proposes to give five paintings for the ceiling and other artistic treasures for the beautifying the room. At either end of the apartment the floor is to be raised somewhat, and it is proposed to give high class concerts there during the entr'actes. The directors want it known that the seats for the New Theatre have not been oversubscribed. Aside from the single tier of twenty-three boxes and about 250 foyer stalls immediately above them, all the seats in the house are still available for public subscription. And it is announced that even the boxes, which are to be the property of the founders, will be available for the public, except on subscription nights.

Miss Adams Honored by Yale After Play

Maude Adams has been elected an honorary member of the Yale Dramatic Association. Her election was announced in the Grand Opera House, New Haven, Conn., last week by Max Parry, president of the association, at the end of a performance of What Every Woman Knows, which she and her company had given, at her expense, to raise money for a theatre which the association hopes to build. No audience could have been more enthusiastic than that which Miss Adams faced. She is a favorite at Yale, and the undergraduate body filled the galleries and made a demonstration of their appreciation of her appearance. The remainder of the audience was socially brilliant. Dr. Arthur T. Hadley, president of Yale, and his party occupied a box. Miss Adams was called before the curtain after each act, and once she thanked the Yale men for inviting her to appear. As the curtain fell on the last act the entire audience rose and cheered. The curtain was raised again and revealed great masses of flowers, in which violets were conspicuous, that had been rushed in from the wings, the gifts of many friends. Mr. Parry then stepped out of a box and, addressing Miss Adams, announced her election and presented to her the

Personals

ATHUR CUNNINGHAM will probably be seen at the Valencia Theatre in June.

BEN MACQUARRIE is the new stage director with the Lyric Theatre stock of Minneapolis.

EVELYN VAUGHAN, who has been so brilliantly successful at the Alcazar this season, has signed for another season.

CHARLES ROSA, the well-known scenic artist, is painting the productions at both the American and Princess Theatres.

FRANK B. HOWARD is arranging a Coast tour for The Colonial Tourists, an organization of vaudeville and comedy performers.

EDDIE MOWRY, ahead of Culligan's reorganized Nashville students, was in town last Monday getting time from the Great Western Theatrical Circuit.

FRANK PERLEY, the well-known theatrical manager, married Jeannette Myers a few nights ago in New York. Miss Myers was last season with Rose Stahl as a chorus girl.

FRANK FANNING is now managing the old Grand Theatre in Vancouver and is operating a stock company there. Week before last he produced Polly of the Circus.

OLLIE COOPER has temporarily retired from the profession. She has entered St. Mary's Academy in Salt Lake, where she will pursue her studies for a long time.

BERTRAM LYTELL has five weeks more at the Alcazar before leaving for the East. Mr. Lytell has just contracted to buy the interest held by Frank Curtis in their big Napa County ranch.

PEURL WILKERSON, who is standing sponsor for the minstrel and musical comedy combination at the American this summer, is being backed by Ottinger, the former ticket broker, who has on numerous occasions dipped into the show game.

DUSTIN FARNUM has made a big hit in the production of Cameo Kirby, which was written by Booth Tarkington and Harry Leon Wilson. May Buckley is a member of the supporting company.

ALFRED ALDRIDGE, who has been East the past two years, and who was this season with Julia Marlowe, is home on a summer visit. He returns in August to join the Sothern-Marlowe Company.

CHARLES MARRIOTT, Hilda Gilbert and Reginald Holmes left Monday for Victoria to join the Edmund Gardner stock at the Victoria Theatre for the summer. The company expects to open on May 10th.

OLLIE MACK and his partner in comedy, Charles Murray, have left Chicago for Los Angeles. The Murray and Mack rehearsals will commence next Monday at the Grand Opera House in that city. Florence Leslie will have charge of the dancers, while A. S. Foot will direct the vocal efforts of the organization. The first Murray and Mack performance will be given Sunday afternoon, May 2d. The bill will be A Night on Broadway, in which Max Bloom, Lillie Sutherland, George Fields, Bessie Tanehill and others will assist the pair of Irish laughmakers.

SARAH EDWARDS, the comic opera contralto, was divorced Tuesday of last week from H. M. Wright, a stock broker of Oakland. The suit was brought on the ground of wilful neglect. She testified that she was married to Wright in Scranton, Pa., in 1903, but that for short periods he had neglected to support her. For the last year and a half she declared she had to depend on her own exertions for a livelihood, stating that her husband, while nominally a company promoter and stock broker, rarely worked. She said that she separated from him 16 months ago. Her testimony was corroborated by Lillian May and Charles Kastenbein. Wright did not contest the suit. Sarah Edwards was a member of the Princess Theatre Stock Company some months ago.

Rob Roy Tells of Rose Stahl's Wonderful London Success

NEW YORK CITY, April 25, 1909. —The Gay Life made the audience laugh a good deal last Monday at Daly's Theatre. Its title is well chosen. The play, which was having its first New York performance, was written by Roy L. McCardell, a newspaper humorist of long standing. Mr. McCardell apparently started out to show up Bohemia of the 30 cent table d'hote variety and to dramatize the Hon. Dopey McKnight, who for some years has been figuring in a series of newspaper sketches from Mr. McCardell's pen. Thomas Thorne was the Dopey McKnight, and he made a real character out of that sentimental defective whose chief desire was to invent a burglar-proof egg. One really felt sorry for Dopey. Katherine DeBarry was the amusing Mama De Branscombe, whose third husband was such a charming man when stewed but the very devil when sober. Consuelo Bailey was the Altoona young person who made the stage slambang—one wondered how. The piece is full of gags, some of them funny, some new, some old.

Miss Julia Marlowe is rehearsing here with E. H. Sothern's company in Baltimore for their forthcoming joint engagement at the Academy of Music in New York. On Saturday night Miss Marlowe will play Ophelia to Mr. Sothern's Hamlet at the Academy of Music here. The week following Miss Marlowe will appear as Ophelia in Washington and the week after in Philadelphia. At the Academy of Music in New York, in the limited season they will appear there, Mr. Sothern and Miss Marlowe will appear in Romeo and Juliet, Twelfth Night, The Taming of the Shrew, The Merchant of Venice and Hamlet.

Robert Mantell began the seventh week of his present appearance in New York last week with a performance of Macbeth at the Academy of Music. It was an apparently interested audience that almost filled the Academy, and there was more than the usual amount of appreciative applause. Possibly one reason for the uninterrupted attention was the fact that the version which Mr. Mantell uses is in no way tedious. It is prepared from the prompt book of Edwin Booth. The curtain rose promptly at 8 and the performance lasted less than three hours. Marie Booth Russell's Lady Macbeth was admirably suited to the Macbeth of Mr. Mantell. Others prominent in his support were Fritz Leiber as Macduff, Ethelbert Hales as Banquo, Alfred Hastings as Duncan and Lillian Kingsbury, Edith Campbell and Julia Blanc as the Three Witches.

Rose Stahl produced The Chorus Lady at the Vaudeville Theatre, London, England, last week, and had a whole-hearted reception from a thoroughly appreciative audience. Patricia O'Brien's humorous phrases and colloquialisms, even the slangiest of them, did not seem too abstruse or far fetched to tickle a London audience, which laughed and applauded and called Miss Stahl before the curtain repeatedly. The critics are only tolerant toward the play, but are unstinted in their praise of Miss Stahl's art, some placing her next to Ada Rehan in the list of American comedienne who have charmed London audiences.

The Climax, by Edward Locke, produced in Weber's Theatre last week, will be presented as the regular attraction in the Majestic Theatre next week, under the management of Joe Weber. The engagement of Beverly of Graustark, recently announced for the Majestic, has been postponed.

There was a large audience in the Grand Opera House last Monday when Adeline Genée began what is to be her last New York engagement in The Soul Kiss, the musical play in which the Danish dancer from the foreign music halls has been seen here for two seasons. She received hearty applause after each of her dances. Others who appeared in their original roles were Messrs. Ralph C. Herz, Lee Harrison, Barney Bernard, John B. Park and the Misses Vera Michelen of San Francisco and Stella Tracey.

Back from a six months' tour to Australia, Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch is again in New York. The play, written by Mrs. Flexner from Alice Hegan Rice's novel of the same title, was seen and applauded at the West End Theatre last Monday. Helen Lowell appeared in her original role of Miss Hazy.

Charles Cherry, in The Bachelor, which will leave Maxine Elliott's theatre to make way for The Blue Mouse, will be the offering for the week of May 3 at the West End Theatre.

On Monday, May 3, The Blue Mouse will move to Maxine Elliott's theatre from the Lyric Theatre, where it has run for six months. It will continue without interruption through the summer. On May 3 the New York premiere of The Great John Ganton, with George Fawcett in the title role, will be given at the Lyric. The Great John Ganton is a dramatization, in four acts, by J. Hartley Manners, of Arthur J. Eddy's well known novel of the Chicago stock yards, Ganton & Co. Mr. Fawcett is featured.

Paid in Full

Paid in Full, the play by Eugene Walter, which, under the Wagenhals and Kemper management, has been a dramatic wonder, is at last, for a brief period, retired. Five companies have been playing it, a couple of them for two years, and the other three since last summer. Seventy-eight consecutive weeks is the record of the original New York Company. Sixty-

Henry B. Harris Breaks the Bank at Monte Carlo

Henry B. Harris is "The man who broke the bank at Monte Carlo." He broke it three weeks ago, and he got away with his winnings. Now Mr. Harris didn't know any more about roulette than he does about ping-pong. He watched some of his friends play and lose. Then he became interested and he laid two 100 and one 50-franc notes on a number. The wheel turned and the little ball span, and Mr. Harris looked up to see that it had fallen on his number. He was paid 8,750 francs, about $1,750. He tried it again and again he was paid $1,750. As a matter of fact, Mr. Harris knew so little about the game that he didn't know what he had won; had he been paid $750 he would have accepted the amount without a murmur. He went right on dropping 250 francs in notes over the table, and he won so fast that one of his friends had to count and hold the money. Crowds flocked about to watch him, and, of course, the "pikers" began to "trail" him. Every time he put a note on a number others were piled high on it, and the crowd was carried along on his luck. It was not many minutes before Mr. Harris had 120,000 francs—$24,000. Then the dealer stopped. Every other roulette table stopped, too. Roulette was done for the day. For it is a rule at Monte Carlo that when a game loses 120,000 francs it closes for the day. The managers are unwilling to give a man with a lucky streak a chance at more than that amount. When Mr. Harris rose the next morning Al Hayman and Henry Dazian, two New York friends, heading a delegation of other Americans, awaited him. "We have prepared a little souvenir of this occasion," said Mr. Hayman. "The Americans, who have been trying to do what you did, now offer you this banner. 'Henry B. Harris, the first American to break the bank at Monte Carlo.'"

Personals

BILLIE BURKE will take Love Watches to London, and upon her return will bring it to the Van Ness Theatre.

MARION TIFFANY is visiting her parents in Los Angeles.

LOUIS THOMPSON, juvenile man of the Broadway Stock in Oakland, closed last week.

HARRY GIRARD, known as the composer, is in Los Angeles visiting his mother, Mrs. William Pfaff. Mr. Girard may remain there, and it is just possible that he may be in charge of a big musical comedy undertaking in that city this summer. Mr. Girard is the composer of the Alaskan music.

MARGUERITE CLARK who has made the biggest hit of her career in The Beauty Spot, which will run all summer at the Herald Square Theatre, New York, is to be starred by Comstock and Gest next season in a comedy with music now being written for her by Joseph Herbert.

MADAME NAZIMOVA has been particularly successful in the presentation of Hedda Gabler, having appeared in the role in many countries and in several languages, and from all accounts has won great praise for the originality and interest that she gives this temperamental character.

PAUL McALLISTER, the leading man, Florence Oakley, leading woman, and George Osbourne, the valued actor, are distinct additions to the Valencia Stock Company. With George Foster Platt as stage director there is really nothing in a dramatic way that may not be satisfactorily presented by this enterprising management.

KLAW & ERLANGER have acquired for production early next season a play entitled Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm, by Kate Douglas Wiggin and Charlotte Thompson. The play is founded upon two books, Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm and The Chronicles of Rebecca, written by Miss Wiggin. A clever young actress will be engaged for the title role. The character appeals through its quaintness and the story is one of healthy simplicity.

OLD time theatre-goers have noted a marked resemblance between Florence Oakley, the new leading woman of the Valencia Theatre Company, and Margaret Mather, for many years America's reigning favorite in the role of Juliet. Miss Oakley, in the comparatively small part of Katherine de Vaucelles in If I Were King, has already made a marked impression, and as Bossy in A Texas Steer, a part in which she delights, she will show her great versatility.

EUGENE PRESBREY has completed the new play which Klaw & Erlanger have obtained for Maclyn Arbuckle for next season, entitled The Circus Man. Mr. Presbrey read the play to Mr. Arbuckle last week and he is delighted with it. Meantime, while he is playing the fat sheriff in The Round Up, he is looking for an elephant, not for a pet, but to use as a "prop" in The Circus Man. There are thirty-five speaking parts in the play, which will be on the same big order as Klaw & Erlanger's The Round Up and Ben-Hur.

FERRIS HARTMAN IS TO RETURN TO LOS ANGELES

LOS ANGELES, April 20.—Kolb and Dill have "arrived" in town and are keeping Joseph Montrose and his assistants busy at the Majestic Theatre. Murray and Mack make their appearance at the Grand next week, and then there will surely be something doing every minute. Several familiar faces will be seen in Murray and Mack Company. The opening bill will be A Night on Broadway. Ferris Hartman and Manager Blackwood have arranged for the return of the comedian to the Grand Opera House in September. The opening bill will be King Dodo. Christine Nielson has been confined to her home by illness for the past two weeks and has been unable to make her farewell appearance with the company this week. The long run of The Dollar Mark is cleverly described by a local critic as follows: "Belasco: The Dollar Mark, still running like a prairie fire in dry grass before a high wind, and the end of the grass not in sight."

BELASCO—The Dollar Mark is in its eighth week. This equals the run of The Girl of the Golden West. The people still want it, so there is no telling when this most successful play will be taken off. Louis Morrison, the new character man, makes his first appearance this week in the part formerly played by Burke Clarke. George Webb, another new member of the company, plays John Livingston, Bennett Southard's role.

BURBANK—That old but popular farce-comedy, Are You a Mason? is the bill. Henry Stockbridge assumes feminine attire and identity in the character of George Fisher, stockbroker. William Desmond, as Frank Perry, gets into a serious matrimonial misunderstanding. The honors should be evenly divided between Mr. Stockbridge, A. Byron Beasley as Hamilton Travers, and John W. Burton, who as Amos Bloodgood portrays the part of an old man with a dark past. The dialect work of Carrie Clarke Warde in the character of Norah, a cook, is worthy of praise. The rest of the cast is in able hands.

MAJESTIC—Kolb and Dill and their company are making a pronounced hit at the Majestic Theatre, and The Politicians will be offered again next week. Adele Rafter, prima donna of the company, has a very sweet soprano voice which she uses well, and besides this she can and does act. Percy Bronson is the juvenile man of the company. He has a good voice and is heard in several solo and chorus numbers. The whole performance is most pleasing.

MASON—Nat Goodwin and Edna Goodrich are appearing at the Mason Opera House this week in three new plays, The Master Hand, A Native Son, and The Easterner. The Master Hand is a comedy-drama of New York high life, written especially for Mr. Goodwin and his associate star. This play gives Mr. Goodwin plenty of opportunity to occupy the stage, and when he is the center of the picture, everything goes well. Miss Goodrich, as the young New York society girl, carries her role well. She shows a marked improvement in her acting; this is noticed particularly in her scenes with Mr. Goodwin. The supporting company is not as good as might be expected. Zeffie Tilbury as Mrs. Belle Randolph, and Arthur Behrens as Steve Dawson do the best work.

GRAND—Ferris Hartman is closing a long and successful season at the Grand, with a revival of It Happened in Nordland. This is the best offering of the company, and Mr. Hartman himself is seen to better advantage than in any other piece. Walter DeLeon as Prince George has two good musical numbers, Absinthe Frappe and Loves A B C. Oscar Walch as Hugo von Arnim has small opportunity to use his voice, but he does that little well. Muggins Davies and Josie Hart also do good work; in fact, each member of the cast is most acceptable.

ORPHEUM—The Orpheum offers a strong musical bill this week, and a number of athletic acts which are well costumed and clever. Foremost among the newcomers is Zelig de Lussan, beautifully gowned, smiling, gracious and vocally delightful. The Melanis, an octette of Italian singers and instrumentalists, is a picturesque feature of the programme. Charles Matthews, a champion jumper, makes some sensational leaps over the piano, several chairs and tables and in and out of barrels, with apparent ease. The bill includes two aerial acts, the newcomers being the Four Casting Dunbars, who close the programme, while the holdovers, the Four Poncherrys, appear with the first curtain. James H. Cullen is once more in evidence with his peculiar brand of humor, and Tom Nawn presents the same playlet he used here last year. The Silbon novelty circus remains this week.

LOS ANGELES—The best act of its kind ever presented at the Los Angeles Theatre, and one of the very best ever seen on any Los Angeles stage, is the acrobatic turn of Les Georgettys, which closes the bill at this house. Les Georgettys are four in number—two men, a woman and a boy. The boy is the star performer of the quartette. Don Leno's Happy Youngsters make their appearance in a musical sketch called Examination Day in Township High School 3. The skit is amusing, and its several musical numbers are attractively sung. Two of the boys are exceptionally clever dancers, and the girls are pretty. Elmer Tenley makes a ten-strike with his monologue. Alice Davenport and her company put forward a dramatic sketch entitled, Now. The title is wholly inappropriate, but the sketch itself is interesting and it is well played by Miss Davenport and Carrie Pryor. Flora Browning and Kellar, the whistler, offer an amusing turn in The Hunter and the Maid. Kellar's bird calls are exceedingly good, and Miss Browning sings acceptably.

EMPIRE—The Great and Only John L. Sullivan is the top-notch on the bill at the Empire this week. After a clever and diverting monologue he exhibits the physical prowess he has husbanded through all these years by sparring three rounds with his partner, Kilrain, with whom he waged the battle of 1884. Trixeda and Robinson give a feature song and dance act, in which both show their ability as lightning change artists. Agneau and her two dancing boys are interesting. Their clogging is little short of marvelous. Jack Atkin brings some humor of the newer sort to Empire patrons, while Marty, the comedy juggler, is well received. Al Franks has a specialty song.

FISCHER'S—Good vaudeville is the term most applicable to the Smith-Warren-Fischer bill of the current week. Georgia Gardner and her little company of Thespians in that highly humorous sketch, Too Many Darlings, is the one big hit of the bill. Stith and Stith are not at all bad in their original and unique plate twirling and spinning, while Flo Morrison, the pretty comedienne of the week, is worth seeing in her dainty dances and attractive singing. De Vau and Lotta have a most entertaining act of fun and novelty, entitled The Pipe Dreamer and the Directoire Gown. A pleasing feature is the trained doves, who carry flags, while Miss Lotta in the latest in sheaths is worth seeing. Trevathan W. Smith has several new illustrated songs with human interest themes, while the moving pictures complete a well-balanced bill.

UNIQUE—A very entertaining and laughable musical in one act, entitled A Pair of Schemers, is the offering at the Unique. The old, old story of two lovers with stern and objecting parents is the groundwork of the plot. Will Armstrong is cast as Tim McGuire, the father of the girl, and when he is not making laughs, sings Oh, Oh, Doctor, and a duet with Miss Atkins. Frank Blair makes his first appearance with the company and is decidedly good in his role. John J. Martin is well cast as the lover and makes a hit with his song. Miss Elwood, Miss Atkins, Miss Parker and Mr. Sellars all have some good song numbers. The program opens with the usual illustrated songs by Miss Earle.

WALKER—There is a new women's orchestra at the Walker Theatre this week. Sheridan and Vernon give a very funny version of how an up-to-date office is run while the boss is away. Evelyn Wells is called the "queen of whistlers." She is dainty and charming in her original whistling. Mons. J. W. Valle gives some imitations of the pipe organ, bagpipes, bugle calls and drum and fife. Cornell and Fisher, a one-act comedy, entitled The Stock Broker. Joseph Stanley sings several songs and Cummings and Morley return with a new comedy sketch called Woman's Rights.

FLORENCE D. EMERY.

SAN DIEGO, April 28.—Garrick (J. M. Dodge, mgr.)—April 27, Robley D. Evans in lecture was greeted by a large house; 28-30, Burns-Johnson fight pictures; May 1, Otis Skinner in The Honor of the Family; 2-3, Richard Jose, in Jane. James Post and Buty Korus in Mr. Murphy in Paris. Pickwick (Scott A. Palmer, mgr.)—Week April 26, the Armstrong Musical Comedy Company, in The Astronomer. This piece is chock full of laughs and it is about the best thing the company has yet attempted. The comedy is handled in a first-class manner by Edw. Armstrong as Uranus Mercury, a terrestrial tramp; George Rehn, as B. L. Planet, and Barney Williams as Prof. Comet, a scientist astronomer. Ethel Davis is cast as the professor's daughter, and, while she doesn't have a great deal to do, she does it well. She sings Love Me Like I Want to be Loved in a captivating manner. Dainty Olga Steek as Mrs. Star Moon Planet does full justice to her part. Her song, Molly from Mexico, proved to be one of the distinctive hits of the performance. There are a number of catchy songs contained in the piece, among them are Old Man Moon, by Barney Williams; I Was a Hero, by George Rehn; Good By, Flo, by Ethel Davis and Walter Spencer. The feature of the performance this week is the novelty rope dance by Swan Wood. This is the best dance Miss Wood has put on here. Manager Armstrong has made several additions and changes in the chorus and the improvement is very noticeable, as there is more uniformity and the girls work better together. The scenery, costumes, etc., are up to the Pickwick standard. Good business continues to rule. Queen (Swarts & Urban, mgrs.)—Coin's Dogs are the headliners at the Queen this week. This act proved to be one of the best ever presented at the Queen. The balance of the bill is as follows: Black and Grant, singing comedians, please. The Booth-Gordon Trio, comedians a-wheel, have an act which is only ordinary. Sarah Louis Cogswell, soprano, renders several songs in a pleasing manner. Latest moving pictures conclude a good show which is playing to good business. Grand (Walter Fulkerson, mgr.)—The Stoddards in a bit of musical comedy head the bill at the Grand, and they more than please. Bessie Evans, singing comedienne, please. Ben Davis, monologist, keeps the crowd in good humor. Maude De Alma in illustrated songs and moving pictures concludes a good show. Good business. Next week, John L. Sullivan and Jake Kilrain. Gaiety (R. O. Gordon, mgr.)—Vaudeville. Christine Dene, La Sorrella Dance; Martin Howard, dancer; Sisters La Marr, dainty soubrettes; Belle Barron, character soubrette. Illustrated songs and moving pictures conclude a fair show. Empire (W. W. Bosley, mgr.)—Aubrey Carr and Libby Blondell in sketch head the bill at the Empire. They have a good act and please. CARL E. LUNDQUIST.

PHILADELPHIA, April 25.—As just the sort of summer entertainment that it pretends to be. The Candy Shop, which was presented at the Garrick Theatre this week, probably will make good in New York, where summer amusement seekers are not over particular so long as things are kept going at a lively rate, and fun and frivolity are the prevailing elements. The show now is in a formative state with the talents of the large company only slightly utilized, with the evidently capable chorus of handsome women and pretty and sprightly young girls too little employed. John L. Golden, who wrote the lyrics and the music, has had too little call made upon his abilities, but, of course, as in all musical shows, there are many opportunities for the introduction of special numbers. The plot of The Candy Shop doesn't matter much, and in the second of the two acts, Playwright George V. Hobart loses the story completely for a lot of foolery that has a background in a pleasure park at Coney Island. The piece is beautifully mounted and there are several songs that caught the fancy of the audience. At the close of the first act the appearance of a crowded Coney Island trolley car brought a storm of applause. The Candy Shop has the right sort of start, but snap and ginger are not yet sufficiently in evidence in the show. A Stubborn Cinderella was given at the Chestnut Street Opera House, Monday evening. John Barrymore has the principal part as Mac, who impersonated a sculptor and won the fascinating and long unloved Lady Leslie, a role very well taken by Sallie Fisher. The Cats-paw opened at the Walnut Street Theatre Monday evening and scored a deserving hit. While it is revamped from The Panic, which was seen at the same house earlier in the season, it contains only a few of the features of that drama. The Cats-paw is powerful from almost the beginning and the last two acts of the four, in which the story is told, are especially strong. While the first part of the opening scene is not as strong as it might be, the play brightens up before the end of the act. The second act has several very intense moments. Emmett Corrigan, who is cast in the leading role, barely, if at all, outshines Wilson Melrose, who takes the part of Jim Wilson, the cowboy millionaire. Miss Ethel Clifford has the heroine's part, and portrays the daughter of a society leader excellently. A theme of thin texture, rather elaborately embroidered, is The Fighting Hope, the determination of a wife to free her husband from a jail sentence which she believed him to be serving in the place of another, really guilty. That she, the mother of two children, after eight years of married life, should fall in love to be the guilty cause of her husband's incarceration, might be possible, but that she should only awake to a recognition of the despicable craven in the husband, after so many years, and under such conditions, is an arbitrary extension of dramatic latitude so illogical that even so strong an actress as Blanche Bates and so fine an actor as William Faversham could scarcely cover the thinness of the theme with the skillful embroidery of their art.

Mrs. Leslie Carter in Kassa entered upon her concluding week at the Broad Street Theatre. Mrs. Carter has several strong scenes and she has a very capable leading man in the person of Charles A. Millward. The Three Twins at the Forrest Theatre is continuing its joyous success. The show has many novelties in the way of special dances and tableaux, and the songs are immensely popular. Clifton Crawford, the star, is a host in himself, while Bessie McCoy, Eva Fallon and others preserve an artistic balance. Thelma, a romantic drama in four acts, founded on the novel of that name by Marie Corelli, was presented by the Orpheum Players at the Chestnut Street Theatre. The role of Thelma is one to which Marion Barney is particularly adapted, and she looked and acted an ideal daughter of the dead and gone Vikings. George D. Parker, as Sir Philip Errington, the young Englishman in love with Thelma, played well his part, which was rather a thankless one for this newest member of the stock company, for any man, in fact, to try to fill the place of so popular a leading man as William Engersoll.

CALVIN M. FRANKLIN.

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah, April 26.—SALT LAKE THEATRE—Dark during the week. COLONIAL THEATRE—The Burgomaster is the attraction at the Colonial. Although this is the second visit this season the Burgomaster has drawn good houses. The Orpheum presents a good bill with Fanny Rice as the headliner. The bill is as follows: Fanny Rice, Violet Black & Co., Kitabanz troupe, The Teddy Bear Girls, Chinko, Herbert Mitchell and Minnie Kaufmann. BUNGALOW THEATRE—The Willard Mack Company presents Carmen in a pleasing manner. Mr. Mack has been severely ill, but is now on the road to recovery. His illness was due to nervous breakdown and complications. McEwan is again at the Grand with his bewilderment of hypnotism and tricks. McEwan is very popular.—GLEN SMYTH.

RIVERSIDE, April 23.—Loring Opera House (Frank C. Nye, lessee and mgr.): Apr. 22, Madame Nazimova, as Nora, in A Doll's House, before a large and critical audience. Her support was fair. 28, Daniel Sully in The Matchmaker; May 5, Richard Jose in Jane.

LOMPOC.—Lompoc Opera House (Perry Banks, mgr.): Jackson-Berger Stock Company, Apr. 19-24; good attraction; company and repertoire of the best. Friday's feature bill, The Devil, with C. Rea Berger in the title role, was scenically and artistically a perfect production. Miss Jackson possesses a beautiful voice, and her vocal numbers are features of every bill. Apr. 29, Dick Jose and company in Jane.

WATSONVILLE, Apr. 21.—This city will soon have moving picture shows galore. The enormous increase of business of the La Petite Theatre is undoubtedly the cause. Manager Chapman of the Opera House opened as a picture show on Apr. 4th, presenting pictures, illustrated songs and vaudeville to good business. The vaudeville feature last week was The Stoddards, and this week The Biehls. As an extra inducement for Saturday night business, a free dance is announced after the second performance. The La Petite Theatre (Mrs. Jas. G. Piratsky, mgr.) is playing to capacity right along. Last week's vaudeville features were Dick Parks, "that Minstrel Man," and Frances Dainty, slack wire artist and trick bicyclist. This week, Rusner and Gous. Mr. F. L. Dean, formerly of Sacramento, has rented the store on the corner of Main and Maple, and will open a moving picture show some time in the future. He has not decided on a name as yet. Exclusively pictures and songs, no vaudeville. Mr. Dean was formerly in the grocery business. Dramatic attractions have been exceedingly scarce since the installation of moving pictures. Nothing theatrical since The Gingerbread Man, until last night, when The Call of the West happened. Of this, the least said the better. Richard Jose in Jane comes, 22d. Col. D. P. Stoner, the old reliable publicity promoter, ahead of Jose, paid your correspondent a pleasant call. The Colonel gets younger every year.

F. J. BURDICK.

LONG BEACH, April 20.—It is the common talk on the streets that with the re-opening of the Bentley Grand on Monday, May 3, many old and familiar faces will be seen in front of the footlights. In plain English Charles King, Majorie Rambeau and Chester Stevens will once more delight the audiences and make hosts of new friends. The management of the theatre will neither affirm or deny these rumors, but it is a safe bet that this guess will be found to be pretty close when the curtain goes up on that new stock company. It is also reported that a well known and popular young business man is to be the manager of the new company and will have full control. Mr. King and Miss Rambeau and their company are in Santa Ana this week. It is authoritatively stated that Evelyn Selbie, the pleasing leading woman at the Grand, will sever her connection with that institution at the end of this week, having accepted an engagement with the Law of the Desert Company. Miss Selbie has made many warm friends in Long Beach during her short stay with the Bentley company, and her departure will cause considerable regret. F. M. Clark, manager of Byde-a-Wyle Theatre, and James Kelley, stage manager of the playhouse, were exonerated from the charge of disturbing the peace this morning in Justice Hart's court. The complaints were issued at the instance of Gladys Newman, who was one of the chorus ladies in the Byde-a-Wyle show, but who is now unattached because of the misunderstanding. Gladys came to Judge Hart with a tale of woe, stating that Manager Clark had told her to get out and other things when she could not "get the hand" of a step which Mr. Clark was anxious to teach her. Manager Clark admitted that he told her to vamoose and threw in a few words of commendation for her ability before the footlights to boot, but he also volunteered to give a sample of the language the chorus lady used when she was fired. The court excused him from this and dismissed the case.

JAMES GUY USHER, a few weeks ago, surprised his friends by marrying an Eureka girl. Mr. and Mrs. Usher are spending their honeymoon in Fresno, where Mr. Usher is working with the Post Company at the Novelty Theatre.

At the Spokane The Right of Way, as presented by Guy Standing and Theodore Roberts and a capable supporting company, was one of the strongest dramas seen here in a long time, and drew large houses. Harry Beresford (21-22), in Who's Your Friend, amused two fair houses. The house will be dark till April 30. May 1-2—The Mills of the Gods. Charley's Aunt at the Auditorium drew the usual good houses. Frank McQuarrie, as the bogus Aunt, did some clever work. Week of 25, When Knighthood Was in Flower was witnessed by a large audience on the opening performance. Miss Shirley takes the part of Mary Tudor; King Henry is played by Jack Amory; Geo. McQuarrie, as Charles Brandon, Mary's suitor, acts the role of modest bravery. Charles Clary, Frank McQuarrie, H. Gilbert, Less Greer, Dan Edson, Laura Adams, Ethel Von Waldron, Mable Dalton and Delia Chillman are all good in their impersonations. The Orpheum had an all star bill 18-24. Marshall P. Wilder made a hit in his original jokes. Lulu Beeson, in her sketch A Night in El Paso, was above the average. Lillian Burkhart, in A Passing Fancy, was very clever, and Countess Rossi and Paulo, in At the Performance, were good. Another good bill this week—Thos. H. Ince, Sunny South; Frank Coombs, Muriel Stone, Dorothy Drew, Post-Russell, Wells-Sells. The Washington had an excellent bill. De Butz-Tossell headliner; others were Sidney Grant, Harry Borgoyne, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Forbes Co., Zay-Holland, and Saona. 25, week—Burt Sheppard, Toma Hanton, Al Cameron Co., Burt Anderson, Kessler-Dunn. Les Apaches Dance was the big card at Pantages. Other good numbers billed were Paganinni's Ghost, Aneta Primrose, May Duryea Co., Wm. D. Gilson, The Franz's. 25, week—The Five Musical Lovelands, Pederson Bros., McGloin-Shelley, Dan Harrington, Scott-Whaley, and Cleopatra.—SMYTH.

TACOMA, Apr. 24.—A benefit for the proposed labor temple was given at the Tacoma Theatre, Apr. 20th. It took the form of a vaudeville entertainment, and amateurs and professionals combined. The greatest dramatic hit of the evening was The Old Guard, as played by Henry McRae, Margaret Oswald, Denton Vane and Thos. Sullivan. It was given a finished rendition. From the Grand Theatre appeared Frank Bush, who told amusing stories; Geo. Keane, in illustrated songs, and the Quaker City Quartette. From the Pantages came Signor St. Claire, harpist, and Quigg and Nickerson, in a musical act. Other contributors from the Star Theatre were Denton Vane, heard to advantage in two song hits, and Robert Webb Lawrence, in monologues and recitation. A large and fashionable audience greeted Lillian Russell in her racing play, Wildfire, which opened at the Tacoma last night. The play is splendidly staged, and Miss Russell is not only delightful in her acting but more charming than ever in appearance. In the supporting company, which is an unusually good one, Will Archer deserves special mention. Apr. 25-26, The Mills of the Gods; 28, Norman Hackett in Classmates;

May 1-2, Richard Carle in Mary's Lamb. Denton Vane, who has been such a success in juvenile roles at the Star Theatre, will leave Tacoma on May 1st for California, to play an engagement in musical stock at the Unique Theatre in Los Angeles. Mr. Vane is an unusually versatile young man and possessed of great personal magnetism and intelligence that has won him much sincere admiration during his stay here. He is prominent socially, and will be missed by a host of loyal friends and theatre patrons, all of whom join in wishing him good luck in his new field, and congratulate Los Angeles on this decided acquisition to its ranks of players. The McRae players successfully presented The Prisoner of Zenda, affording numerous members of the company golden opportunities for some excellent acting, and of which they were quick to take advantage. Allen J. Holuber was strong and convincing in the dual role of Rudolf Rassendyl and King Rudolph. His touches of comedy were harmonious. Robert Webb Lawrence and L. Brigham Percival did well in military roles, and John McCabe and Thos. Sullivan were effective in their villainous roles. Miss Oswald was sweet and womanly in the role of the Princess Flavia and, as usual, was handsomely gowned. Miss Van Tassell has not had so good a role for some weeks, as she has in Antoinette de Mauban and depicts the role with power and vigor, besides looking the part to the life. Denton Vane, besides furnishing some amusing comedy finds time to sing a "Tacoma" song composed by Mrs. Katherine Cook Johnson of this city. Next week, The Road to Yesterday. Frank Bush, appearing at the Grand, has a never-failing fund of humorous stories. Other laughs are furnished by Lewis and Young, who also dance cleverly, and Bonnie Gaylord in monologues. The Quaker City Quartette sing unusually well. Nita Allen and company in a sketch, Car 2, Stateroom 1, furnish amusement of a suggestive kind. Apr. 26, King and Bailey, coon comedy; Monetta Five; Miller and Tempest; Vera Lawrence; El Barto, wizard. At the Pantages, the Four Dordeens, in an acrobatic act, are easily the peer of any act shown here. St. Claire, harpist, is entertaining, as is the musical act of Quigg and Nickerson. Caesar Rivoli is good as a character change artist, and Dawson and Whitfield get many laughs with their jokes. Alton and Oliver have an unusually strong dramatic sketch that is well acted. Gainsboro Girl, singing and dancing act; Fred Rivenhall, singing comedian; Lorraine Buchanan, and Robert Russell, in drama; Musical Bentley; The Boldens, singers and dancers; Bruno Kramer; trio of gymnasts. A. H.

ASTORIA, Apr. 27.—Astoria Theatre (F. M. Hanlin, mgr.): Apr. 26, Norman Hackett and company produced Classmates to large audience. In the afternoon Mr. Hackett delivered a lecture at the Astoria High School. Mr. Hackett has a pleasing personality. His subjects were student life at West Point, the life of Shakespeare and his plays, closing with illustrating what he says was a hobby—the better use of the English language. Last night the Black Patti Company was seen by large house. Next, Ferris Hartman Opera Company and a Message from Mars.

with me. You really would be absolutely amazed at the progress of Seattle and the Alaska-Yukon Exposition. It is far beyond the ordinary idea and from the present showing it is going to be a huge success. Business in general seems to be good in Seattle, but in the smaller cities in and around the Sound district is decidedly poor.

When Love is Young

ARTHUR FOX WRITES: Seattle, April 22.—I am at present in Seattle looking over the Alaskan prospect, and I must say from all indications that that territory offers more inducements and good possibilities than any others I know of. I want to get in touch with some one who has a good, well balanced stock company of actors and who wants to make the trip with me this summer. From the outlook there is ten to fifteen thousand dollars in such a trip. I do not meditate going to Nome alone this year, but to Juneau, Douglas, Skagway, White Horse, Dawson City and Fairbank, and I want an organization of about ten acting people. If you know of any one who would like to make this tour put them in communication

Charles Swickard, the well known New York adapter and producer of high class attractions, to whom we are indebted for The Fires of St. John and Kelcey and Shannons' vehicle of several years ago, the famous military drama, Taps, who is an acknowledged authority on the German drama, particularly that of Sudermann, will in the near future, as previously announced in these columns, present to the public an entirely and original new drama, entitled When Love is Young. Judging from present indications and past performances there is a rare treat in store for the dramatic epicure. Mr. Swickard will in this, his latest drama, introduce to the public a new star, Virginia Shelton, the clever and exceedingly pretty young ingenue.

Paul McAllister

Paul McAllister, the new leading man at the Valencia, made his first San Francisco appearance in If I Were King, and as Francois Villon had an opportunity to disclose a magnificent presence, a delightful elocution and a capability in romantic roles that will develop into a wonderful popularity here. In New York, where Mr. McAllister is regarded as one of the best actors in the country, he has a great following. He is spoken of as an actor of unusual versatility, and his showing this week demonstrates the possession of artistic capabilities and a broad and sympathetic understanding.

Blanche Bates to Tour West Managed by Fred Belasco

Blanche Bates next season will act in the syndicate houses, says a wire from New York, and the news is confirmed here by George Davis, Fred Belasco's partner and the Alcazar's business manager. When her present season in The Fighting Hope ends, two weeks hence, she will take a short vacation trip to Europe, returning in time to begin a new tour on August 1, which will take her to all the leading cities of the western states and along the Pacific slope from Seattle to Los Angeles. Though she has only recently begun a new 10-year term as David Belasco's star and will continue to appear in a play the rights of which he controls, she will make the trip under the management of Fred Belasco. It is not known just what Belasco's business arrangement is with his brother, but it is known he will conduct Miss Bates' tour and that she will be booked by Klaw & Erlanger in cities where the Shuberts have no theatres.

Lillian Russell Given Poison

But for the presence of mind of Louis Thoms, a waiter, Lillian Russell might have met death by poisoning in Tacoma on the 23d. Miss Russell had ordered a glass of Poland water and was in the act of drinking when the waiter rushed into her room, dashed the glass from her hand and ran gasping back into the kitchen, where he fell on the floor in convulsions. Upon investigation it was found that by mistake a solution of formaldehyde had been poured into a Poland bottle by one of the servants on the car.

Fischer and His Theatre

The new Fischer's Theatre on Sutter street, between Fillmore and Steiner streets, will inaugurate a season of permanent musical comedy Monday night, with a presentation of the successful satire Poppyland, with book, lyrics and music from the prolific pen of Chas. Alphin, whose music is being whistled all over America. As the title implies, the action is placed locally and fairly scintillates with local quips and shafts that are uppermost in daily discussion. The real strength of the construction lies in the number of strong character delineations in several lines. A particularly artistic portrayal is credited to Ben T. Dillon, the popular comedian, as the broken-down gambler who is addicted to opium, and possesses a fund of colloquial expressions that is highly humorous. The other members of this capable organization embraces Will King, Dorothy Raymond, Tracey McDermott, Nellie Montgomery, Frank Vack and Mildred Manning, together with a trained singing and dancing chorus of sixteen. There will be ten musical numbers offered, which includes catchy airs as The Eminent Mr. Peck, Logical Girls, Monsieur Le Count, I Want to be Like Lovelorn Juliet, The Way to Win a Woman's Heart, The Queen of Bavaria, The Dainty Artist Model, and The Girl Worth While, each vying with the other for popular favor. There will be two performances nightly, at 8 and 9:30 p. m., and matinees will be given on Wednesday, Saturday and Sunday at 2:30. The prices will be 15 and 25 cents.

Robert Hildreth is organizing a company in Portland for repertoire. Laura Heimlich has been signed for leads.

Van Ness Theatre

In the last four year New York and the East have been taking a decided interest in a new Russian actress who possessed a wonderfully unique and magnetic personality, and who, despite a certain unpreparedness for English demands in the way of pronunciation, was worthy of the most serious consideration. In the four years of waiting to see this personality, the English language has become a second nature to this wonderful little woman, and now her power can be thoroughly appreciated. Opening with A Doll's House, which has been seen here many times, Mme. Nazimova at once exacted strict attention and gave a portrayal of Nora that was entirely different from any we have seen. She is a born actress, with an instinct for technic that is very evident in every move and every sentence she puts forth. In fact, Mme. Navimova is acting all the time. In the lighter scenes she showed herself to be an exquisite comedienne, and her work in these lighter moods rather overshadowed what she did in the more strenuous emotional demands later in the play, although it must be confessed that whatever she did was exceedingly clever and absolutely spell-binding. The audience was enthusiastic and very appreciative. The supporting company was fully capable and decidedly good work was done by Brandon Tynan, who embodied the narrow and selfish and self-satisfied spirit of Helmer with every semblance of reality. Next week, Mme. Nazimova will be seen in Hedda Gabler and in Mme. Coquette.

Valencia Theatre

In securing Paul McAllister and Florence Oakley for leading roles with the Valencia Company, it seems that the management builded exceedingly well. Mr. McAllister, by his work in the opening bill, If I Were King, confirms and more than justifies the excellent reputation which preceded him, while Miss Oakley, although she is provided with but a meagre acting role, evidences an ability bounded by no severe limitations; her histrionic talents, accentuated by a youthfulness, beauty and magnetism, should go far toward making her the favorite here. She has been in Los Angeles and eastern cities, where she has worked. Justin Huntley McCarthy's fanciful play is an idyllic melodrama, whose forcefulness as an heroic picture is enhanced in its appeal to the public by the poetic romance of its love tale. It is one of the strongest melodramatic dramas of the age, beyond doubt, and for its principal male character, Francois Villon, offers abundant opportunities for a display of widely divergent abilities, running the scale from light comedy to the more serious and powerful heroics suited so well to the raiment of swashbuckling days. Mr. McAllister's opening performances evinces the fact that as a poetic lover, tavern roysterer and bravo-swordsman, he is very much in his element, and his work in the later acts is marked by a finish and reserve power that makes for convincingness and a pleasing interpretation. Second only to Mr. McAllister's worthy work is the Louis XI of that rare old actor, George Osbourne, back behind the footlights again after a considerable resting time spent on his Fresno raisin ranch. Mr. Osbourne's king is admirably portrayed. Mr. Osbourne observes the obvious throughout his part, shading and maintaining his eccentric characteristics with remarkable consistency. His reappearance has been the occasion of numberless ovations all week. Gerald Harcourt does a good bit as the court fop, while the drunken thief, Guy Tabarie, of Charles Dow Clark is a bit magnified into worthy prominence by good work. The only feminine role of prominence aside from that of Lady Katherine de Vaucelles, so well handled by Miss Oakley, is Huguette de Hamel, nicknamed The Abbess, courtesan, light-o'-love and faithful love of Villon in his lowly estate. In this part, Grace Travers does herself proud, and evidences a capacity for good work on a rapidly increasing ratio that surprises even her best friends and admirers. There are a host of them who like to see her. They certainly do, in this role—and she's worth seeing, too. The horde of minor characters are in competent hands, and the play is well mounted and staged.

Princess Theatre

Living up to the splendor of its former productions, the management has put on A Chinese Honeymoon with regal magnificence, and the performance is in every way enjoyable. Stage Director Temple finds plenty of opportunity to work out some charming ensembles, and the spirit with which the piece is sung brings out much responsive plaudits from the audience. Fred Mace, who has grown into one of the greatest comedy successes we have ever had in San Francisco, gives a very laughable portrayal of Mr. Pineapple. Budd Ross, that artistic and reliable actor who never slights a part, is clever as the Lord Chancellor. Helen Darling presents a very handsome and pleasing Soo Soo, the Emperor's niece. May Boley makes another positive comedy hit in the rich part of Fi Fi, the waitress. The ability possessed by Miss Boley to develop a comedy situation and to touch it up here and there with little bits of burlesque, finds ample opportunities in this part. Zoe Barnett, who plays Mrs. Pineapple, is rather colorless and indifferent in the character. Ethel du Fre Houston has the role of Official Mother-in-Law, and plays it capably. James Stevens, as was to be expected, sang his songs delightfully, and was good in the part of Tom Hatherston. Oliver Le Noir, who in the last few years has been intrusted with some big parts, made considerable out of the character of Hang Chow, his bearing and big voice being nicely suited to such a part. Jennie Metzler was a dainty and pleasing Yen Yen. The Princess chorus, the pride of San Francisco, was in admirable form and deserves a great share of the praise accorded the performance.

Alcazar Theatre

In the course of time such an excellent organization as the Alcazar company develops a special affection and interest in certain plays. Of these plays, is Old Heidelberg, which is being given this week. Many times has the Alcazar company offered this piece, and each time they have given a marvelously compensating performance. Associated in all these has been the beautifully finished characterization of Dr. Juttner by John Maher, which stands out in local achievements as an artistic portrayal of exceeding worth. This week Mr. Maher is repeating his former successes in the part. Bertram Lytell assumes the role of Karl Heinrich, the young prince, and is altogether satisfying. Perhaps he makes the youth a little too unsophisticated in the first and second acts, but otherwise his idea of the part is wholly pleasing. Kathie as played by Evelyn Vaughan is a dainty and most delightful performance. In the long list of characters demanded by the play Burt Wesner, as the old waiter; Will R. Walling, as Lutz, the valet; Walter Belasco, as old Ruder; Ernest Glendinning, Walter Whipple, Adele Belgarde and Christie MacLean, each did excellent service in presenting accurate characterizations. Old Heidelberg has the spirit and charm of youth and can always be counted upon to please when worthily presented.

American Theatre

Peurl Wilkerson has brought back to San Francisco the spirit of the old days when Charley Reed and Billy Emerson were minstrel kings and the entire amusement world had its minstrel interest centered in the western city by the sea. In the old days minstrelsy was the king of amusements, and now if a good show—yes, a great show—can bring back that interest, the American Theatre will do a smashing good business this summer, for never has such an aggregation of minstrel talent been gathered together in one show. Just think of this all-star troupe—Al Jolson, the king of blackface monologists; John King, a singing black face humorist who is at the head of his kind; Emil Subers, another clever and well-known end man; Matt Keefe, the native son and yodler par excellence; Will Oakland, he of the exquisite voice and only rival of Dick Jose; Tell Taylor, the Beau Brummel of ballad singers, and the two Forbes boys, who are splendid dancers. The first part went with a dash and was a tremendously enjoyable affair. The musical comedy afterpiece, boiled down from Joe Weber's About Town, was not so successful. There are clever people in this end of the show, but there seemed to be no goods to deliver. We would suggest that as there is such an abundance of fine comedy talent in the first part, that Mr. Wilkerson use them in reviving the old "nigger" acts. They

Vaudeville

The Orpheum

The new theatre is having a most beneficial effect on the vaudeville offerings of Myerfield et al, this weeks olio being well up to the standard of excellence set by the bill for the opening last week. Every number is good and as a whole the list of attractions is far superior to the usual selection as an average, high though that average has been. The person who couldn't find many a hearty laugh and much keen enjoyment in the antics of the clever dogs who comprise Paul Sandor's Miniature Cirque would be indeed hard to please. With their quaint "horse" makings and agile demonstrations of intelligence the little animals are extremely diverting, and the necessary touch of realism and comedy is added by their exhibitor's well done ventriloquial efforts. Surely it must have been in some melodious and harmonious Arcadia that the young woman of that nome de theatre learned to play the violin, for she extracts all the "linked sweetness" from that king of instruments one might associate with the woodland wilds of a country beauty spot. Also she sings, but mostly, and be it confessed "bestly," she plays the violin. The comique eccentricities of the clown member and the good dancing of his two co-workers make the number contributed by Knight Brothers and Marion Sawtelle well worth while. Their singing is merely incidental to their excellent foot work. Margaret Moffat and her company have an amusing skit in Awake at the Switch, wherein the lady herself demonstrates that a telephone girl is not necessarily "a dead one," even though she isn't the wisest in the world, and her assistant, "Claude," displays the early buddings of a goodish comedian. Gisela Amatis and her three sisters are genuine musicians. Miss Gisela herself shows all the indications of one day becoming a phenomenal vocalist, and she plays the piano with her sisters as well. Their selections are of an unusually high class. The real dialect of the dear old Southland, together with oodles of Southern "color" (meaning atmosphere), combine with some very acceptable acting to make Po' White Trash Jinny, by Lillian Mortimer & Co., a distinctive sketch. Both Miss Mortimer and her support are excellent and the sketch carries a plethora of pathos, comedy and genuine heart interest. There are Irishmen and Irishmen, but Frank Fogarty is certainly the money as an Irish monologist. His stuff is for the most part right new, and he is making a lot of friends by his quaint and effective delivery. The lighting effects and its novelty makes Grigolatis' Aerial Ballet, featuring Mlle. Floretta, entertaining. Good pictures complete the bill.

Pantages-Empire

One of the most delightfully entertaining bills of the season is to be found at the Empire this week. A tragic little act dealing with love and hate of the Italian quarter is offered by Christine Hill & Co. Antonio, a young Italian, returns from working in the railroad camps to claim his promised bride and finds that his letters have been intercepted by his supposed friend, who has taken advantage of his absence and Angelina's extreme poverty to marry her. Antonio learns the truth from her and also that she is ill-treated, and impetuously he flies with him to Italy. At this moment Luigi, the husband, comes on the scene with a drunken crony and Antonio conceals himself and witnesses Angelina subjected to further ill-treatment. He confronts Luigi with his treachery and threatens to kill him if he ill-treats Angelina again. He then prepares to go. Luigi strikes Angelina. Antonio returns, a knife fight is the result. In the mix-up the lamp is overturned. Luigi's pal tries to knife Antonio in the back but is frustrated by Angelina. In the darkness Luigi and his pal come together and kill each other by mistake and then to Italy for Antonio and Angelina. The piece is cleverly constructed and holds intense interest throughout its rendition. Miss Hill gives a convincing performance of Angelina and is accorded good support by her company. Maud, billed as the original Hec-Haw mule is kicking her way into popularity with leaps and bounds at every performance. The efforts of the aspiring claimants for the dollar prize to ride her bring screams of laughter at their various and futile efforts. She is about as slippery a proposition to ride as a greased pig is to catch. J. Aldrich Libbey and Katherine Trayer are making a great hit in their amusing operatic vehicle, The Debutante. Libbey is one of those big good natured rascals that you can't help liking, and has a rich baritone ranging on to a strong sweet tenor which he certainly knows how to handle. He is a natural born comedian and keeps the audience in continual good humor. Miss Trayer has a voice of exceptional power and is heard to advantage in several well known selections. A lively operatic duo closes their refreshing act. The Norrises introduce their clever one-man band in which one person is the whole thing. James Keane contributes some clever recitations which call for several encores. Among them is Lasca, better known as the Stampede; The Convict's Dream, The Face on the Barroom Floor and several others. His work is highly appreciated. Petronneff, the Russian violinist, displays a masterly touch on his instrument.

The National

Brindamour is displaying his proclivities as a jail-breaker to mystified audiences at every appearance, at the National this week. The prettiest little act of heart interest presented this season is to be found in the Counsel for the Defense. While dealing with the pathetic side of nature almost entirely, the vein of comedy and dry humor running through it forms an amusing feature of the bill that makes you indulge in that feeling "that this isn't such a bad old world after all." Mme. Doherty's poodles are very much in evidence with their remarkable intelligence. Iva Donetti, as the old colored washwoman, introduces some novelties in the comedy line of an appreciative nature. Geo. Wilson and Joe Godwin, monologist, both have their own inimitable manner of getting into the good graces of their audiences, and a hard time of getting away when they get started. Jack Burnett & Co., in the Downfall of the Mercury, have a comedy playlet with plenty of good comedy situations, the advantage of which is sadly neglected. Moving pictures complete the programme. Next week promises to be one of the strongest presented by this popular house. V. L. Granville, in his Protean act, promises to be a strong feature. May Ward and her eight Dresden dolls; Duff and Walsh, in clever singing and dancing; Meeh International Trio, in interesting feats of strength and acrobatic bar work; Norton and Russell, said to be the best character change artists ever presented at this house; Manning and Dixon, in their comedy talking act; Marie Nelson, singing comedienne; Tom Dugan, monologist; motion pictures complete the roster.

Mrs. J. W. Considine of Seattle, wife of the big vaudeville magnate, captured the first prize in the recent Vancouver horse show, with Quaker Maid and Dorothea in class 85, horses in heavy harness, 15.2 and under. Her other two horses, Sunshine and Belle Brandon, secured the second prize. In the runabout class, mare or gelding, 3 years old and over, 14.3 and not exceeding 15.2, Quaker Maid, exhibited by Mrs. Considine, won the blue ribbon.

Estelle Forsythe, well and favorably known on this coast, is shortly expected here to spend the summer, after an absence of nine years.

Emerson & Summer open in their laughable farce, Almost, at the National this Sunday matinee.

The Wigwam

A small circus, a condensed melodrama and several delightful vocal and instrumental selections, go to fill the roster of Manager Harris' house of continued popularity. The headliner is a little fellow, not quite three years old, who, nevertheless, is delivering the goods, and also the programmes at the door, where you will find him as you pass in. Little Hip is the name of this precocious infant, and he is delighting the old as well as the young at every performance. Another big headliner is to be found in My Lady Raffles of real melodramatic intensity, as presented by Ann Crewe & Co., which holds the interest throughout. The acting of the piece is of a high order, and Miss Crewe proves herself to be an actress of exceptionally emotional powers, and is accorded good support. The Wurtenberg Bros. have a foot-juggling turn which is a surprise to the most seasoned vaudeville patron. The Atlantic City Four render some tuneful and melodious musical and vocal numbers. Mueller and Mueller have a nice line of songs, but Mueller sings higher than nature's endowment allows him, and Mueller runs to the other extreme. What's the trouble? Get together and even up. The Four Haydens, tight-wire artists, are as clever a team as have been seen in some time. Tom Dugan as a mirth-provoker has an original line of talk to hand out that makes him a winner. Motion pictures of an exceptionally high standard and entertaining nature complete an A-1 programme in every respect. Next week's offering promises to be a prize-winner, headed by Eva Westcott, in her tragic success, A Butterfly Wife. Miss Westcott has created a sensation wherever she has appeared, and her appearance is awaited with interest. Carlisle's dogs in pantomime and Dan, the talking pony; Delmore and Oneida, in plastic poses on a balancing perch; Joe Flynn, monologist; Iva Donetti and Canine Pickaninny; Seymore and Dupree, in a high-class musical and dancing turn; the eight Russian Dancers, and the Millers in song and dance specialties, together with moving pictures, will complete the bill.

Vaudeville Notes

Irene Dillon, for the last seven years principal soubrette with J. C. Williamson in Australia, is in the city, accompanied by her mother, on her way to New York to sign up for one of the principal musical comedies for the coming season.

Archie Levy has been the recipient of several very flattering offers to go to New York and accept a managerial position with one of the large eastern agencies. Mr. Levy says that no inducement could take him from John W. Considine, with whom he has been associated for eighteen years. He is satisfied.

Libbey & Trayer, the popular team at the Empire this week, are well known operatic stars, having first played in this city in the production of the Little Tycoon at the Old Bush street theatre and also with Heinrich Conreid, the well known producer of the Metropolitan Opera House in New York (now deceased), in Poor Jonathan, Mr. Libbey playing Rubigold, the leading tenor role, and Miss Trayer Harriet, the prima donna. They have also paid us two successful visits on the Orpheum circuit, as headliners.

The moving picture operators' union, recently admitted to the San Francisco Labor Council as an auxiliary to the theatrical stage employes, has asked the council to assist it in the matter of having every nickelodeon employ only members of the union, and the council will use its influence to have every such place display, at the entrance, the label of the new organization.

Ben T. Dillon, the Irish comedian who has been playing in Los Angeles a couple of years, after inspecting several acreage subdivisions near that city, decided that he was best pleased with Inglewood Rancho, and purchased several acres there a few weeks ago.

Clayton & Glenn have booked for the opening of the New Hart Theatre at San Mateo this Saturday night in their burlesque, The Matador.

The Orpheus Comedy Four are about as funny as they make 'em. All have good voices and a bunch of foolish work that more than gets the desired effect. Good motion pictures complete the program.

Maud, the Hee-Haw mule at the Empire this week, has been doing her present stunt for the past eleven years. She is still there with the goods as many find to their sorrow that try to win that dollar.

Sam Mendolsohn is busily engaged in completing the details for the construction of his new house in Vallejo. Plans have been completed and immediate construction of the building will be commenced. Seating capacity will be 1,200. Vaudeville attractions booked in his house will hereafter play some town in the vicinity. The new house will play combinations.

Ed Homan, Sam Harris, Archie Levy and John W. Considine will form a happy family group and leave the fore part of next week on a fishing trip in the vicinity of Lake Tahoe. Look for fish stories in these columns in the future.

It looks as though, with the full houses, Sid Grauman is getting in the Mission, that he is going to win in the game for established success at the Star. Increased attendance is in evidence at every performance as a compliment to his usual hustling proclivities. The headliner for the week is Zaco, a lady who allows a seven-passenger automobile to run over her while carrying a full complement of passengers. The exciting part of the performance is the scramble among the youngsters of the audience climbing on the stage to get a free ride. Don Fulano as an educated equine displays remarkable intelligence, but it is plain to be seen that his work is not a labor of love. Kelly and Davis, colored entertainers, have a long-drawn-out turn with a large amount of useless and non-essential talkfest that could be easily dispensed with. A song and ordinary dancing complete their efforts. Pearson and Joell, billed as the Chinese Nuggets, are good entertainers in their line. Chas. Oro & Co. offer a comedy sketch which brings forth many a laugh and is a pleasing addition to the bill. Will Sommers, the crazy dancer, is all his title implies. He is a clever stepper. Moving pictures complete an excellent programme.

On May 1st, Archie Levy will have rounded out his twenty-fifth consecutive year as a booking agent, which makes him, without fear of contradiction, the oldest established agent in the country. Mr. Levy has devoted his entire life to the theatrical business, and it is needless to dwell upon the success of his indefatigable efforts. The legions of friends and business associates scattered throughout the country are a flattering testimonial of the esteem and confidence in which he is held by all that have dealings with him. The Dramatic Review extends congratulations on past successes and best wishes for continued prosperity.

Mabel McKinley, the well-known vaudeville artist, will pay us a visit in the near future under contract to Sullivan & Considine.

Christine Hill, appearing at the Empire this week in her own act entitled Fate, will open at the American Theatre, Chicago, shortly after September 1st. The act will be booked by William Morris.

The Thalia

An exceptionally strong galaxy of talent is to be found at the Thalia this week. The Eight Russian Dancers and Singers introduce a decided novelty in the dancing line that wins unanimous approval from their audience. Ohiyro displays decided cleverness as a foot juggler. Lucille in poses plastique is seen to great advantage in her line. As a contortionist, La Belle twists her way into approval by her clever work. In her sensational interpretation of the Salome dance, Eva Roland is creating a sensation. Motion pictures, together with several other features of the programme, completes a programme that is away above the average. Next week, The Four Haydens in their clever tight-wire act; Genera Cheol, equilibrist; Amoretta, singer and dancer; Georgie White, coon shouter; Hern and Rutter, singers and dancers; Bonny Conny, in song and dance specialties; Eva Roland, as a holdover in her sensational Salome dance. Moving pictures, with several other turns, will complete the bill.

The Orpheum

The Orpheum bill for next week is particularly novel and attractive. It will witness the first appearance in vaudeville of Mrs. Horton Forrest Phipps, a young society dancer. Mrs. Phipps will assume the nome de theatre of La Valera and her contribution to the program will consist of the Spanish dances La Manola, La Banda and La Tarantella. She will wear several costly, picturesque and characteristic costumes. Angela Dolores, an attractive and clever young actress, will, with the assistance of her own company, present a witty farce by Edgar Allen Wolff and Ida Von Troutman, entitled Cupid at Home. The Melnotte Twins, two handsome and talented girls, and Clay Smith, a clever and amusing comedian, will indulge in a singing and dancing sketch which they term Artistic Nonsense, and Hawthorne and Burt, two song and dance comedians, will create lots of fun. Gordon and Marx, the Dutch drolls, will return for next week only, which will be the last of Lillian Mortimer and company, who will present the diverting comedietta The Arrival of Betty. The Four Amatis Sisters and the beautiful Grigolati's Aerial Ballet will finish their engagement with this bill. A new series of Orpheum motion pictures will conclude the performance.

Alcazar Theatre

Most of the dramatic quips and manners which constitute "Barrieism" are amply invested in Quality Street, which will be given its first presentation in a stock theatre next Monday evening at the Alcazar. Folks who saw this comedy presented by Maude

Adams and her company two years ago in the Van Ness playhouse pronounced it the best thing in her repertoire. The four acts mostly have to do with Phoebe Throssel and her sister Susan. They dwell in a quaint street in a small English town, and the time is of the Napoleonic wars.

Child life, with which Barrie is more familiar than any living playwright, is not omitted from Quality Street. It is deliciously presented in the school-room scene in the second act. Evelyn Vaughn will have the part created by Miss Adams, and that she will play it delightfully need not be told any one who saw her as Babbie in that other Barrie gem, The Little Minister. Mr. Lytell promises to be more than interesting as Dr. Brown, and the rest of the Alcazar favorites will be favorably fitted in the play.

American Theatre

When the Minstrels Come to Town it is a signal for a general jollification and the advent of I. P. Wilkerson's Minstrels of Today have certainly marked an epoch in the history of amusement-loving San Francisco. Not since the good old days of Emerson and Reed at the Standard Theatre on Bush street has so clever an aggregation of burnt cork performers, bright comedians and sweet singers been gathered together in this city and large and delighted audiences are the rule at every performance. The musical comedy, About Town, which follows the minstrel entertainment, is of a high order of excellence, and the talented leading people and score of pretty girls that are included in the cast form a pleasing contrast to the first half of Mr. Wilkerson's offering. At the matinee this Sunday, which begins the second week of an undoubtedly prosperous season, many novelties will be offered by the principal comedians, Al. Jolson, John King and Emil Subers. For the week beginning May 9 several new faces will be seen in the first part, and Tid-Bits, a new musical comedy, will be substituted for About Town.

Valencia Theatre

The last performance of the spectacular historical comedy-drama, If I Were King, will be given at the Valencia Theatre this Sunday afternoon and evening, and on Monday night Chas. H. Hoyt's ever welcome A Texas Steer will be presented for the first time in San Francisco by a stock company. The spirit of real comedy pervades all of this author's plays and in A Texas Steer that humor which was particularly his own is shown at its best. The story of the bluff Texan, Maverick Brander, elected against his will from a Texas district to Congress, who arriving at Washington finds himself the mark for grafters, office seekers and society sycophants, and, who, at first whirled out of his natural self in the excitement of his new surroundings, finally decides to be his own master and control the situation, instead of being controlled, is familiar to theatre-goers. It is to Hoyt's great credit that the situations, characterizations and dialogue of A Texas Steer are as fresh today as when first offered. Paul McAllister will take a long jump from the poetical hero of If I Were King to the role of Maverick Brander and Geo. Osbourne will drop the robes of Louis XI to become Major Yell, companion of Col. Blow and Col. Bragg, played by Robert Homans and William Wolbert. Charles Dow Clark will have a great part in Fishbeck, the gentleman of color, who wants to become Minister to Dahomey and Gerald Harcourt will be capitally east as Captain Fairleigh Bright. Florence Oakley, the new leading woman, will be in her element as Bossy, a part she has played many times with unfailing success; Lillian Andrews will be her mother and Grace Travers and Edith Lyle will have the remaining feminine roles. Sporting Life will follow A Texas Steer at the Valencia.

Vaudeville Notes

John W. Considine will arrive in town Sunday, May 2d, with headquarters at the office of his representative, Archie Levy.

Ed Homan, of the American Theatre; Sam Harris, Wigwam Theatre, and Archie Levy have a big proposition on hand and in all probability there will be big doings in vaudeville on Market Street in the near future.

"Hats Off to You, Jimmy Gleason," Says the Wise Man of Portland

—HEILIG THEATRE (Cal. Heilig, mgr.; William Pangle, resident mgr.)
—The attraction following Lillian Russell at this house was the play entitled The Mills of the Gods. This piece had been previously produced by the Baker Stock Company in this city and accordingly the road company did not receive much patronage. The company was fair, but not the equal of the local company in the play. Last night Norman Hackett opened his engagement in Classmates to a fair house. We all remember the sterling work of this actor when he was the principal support of James and Warde in tragedy, and those of us who saw him last night had nothing but words of praise for him in his new field. The play was interesting throughout, and his support was good. BUNGALOW THEATRE (George L. Baker, mgr.; Milton Seaman, business mgr.)—One of the best known of farce comedies, The Private Secretary, was presented at this house yesterday. It has been a great many years since we had the pleasure of witnessing this English comedy, but those of us who have seen it before were all drawn towards this theatre yesterday, well knowing what a good entertainment was in store for us. As for the work of the company they are all to be commended. First of all this week comes James Gleason who is cast as the Secretary. Hats off to you, Jimmy! You truly do yourself proud in the role. It is superfluous for me to say anything more relative to his work—it was one of the very best things that this talented young actor has ever given to us. William Dillis also has a fat part, and Dills is not slow to take advantage of any chance given to him, especially in the comedy line. Mrs. Mina Gleason as the aunt who has leanings towards spiritualism is also much in evidence. The play is put on up to the usual high standard of the management. Next week—When Knighthood Was in Flower. BAKER THEATRE (George L. Baker, mgr.; Milton Seaman, business mgr.)—This house is dark and will re-open shortly for a season of comic opera given by the Ferris Hartman Company. ORPHEUM THEATRE (James H. Erickson, mgr.)—A good bill was dished up by the management the past week, and although Angelea Dolores in the playlet Cupid at Home was featured, it looked like Lew Sully stole the honors from her. Sully was a big hit at every performance, and his songs went well. Another act that is worthy of particular mention was Rosarie and Doretta. The impersonation act of Helen Herndon was also above the average. Commencing this evening the bill is Russell Brothers as headliners and the balance comprises Five Juggling Normans, McGinnis & Clifton, Francini-Diloms and Page, Fred Allen & Co., Andy Rice and Delmore Sisters. LYRIC THEATRE (Keating & Flood, mgrs.)—The play this week is entitled The Hills of Carolina, and deals with the doings of moonshiners. The play is well constructed, and the company gave a good account of itself throughout. Virginia Duncan was well cast in the leading role, and the comedy work of Lillian Branscomb and Herbert Ashton was of a high order. Lillian Griffith and S. M. Griffith were well cast, and Rupert Drumm, who portrayed the heavy role, was roundly hissed. The play gives a good chance for the management to give a good production and nothing is lacking in that line. GRAND THEATRE (James H. Erickson, mgr.)—The Quaker City Four are the headline act and the balance of the bill includes Nita Allen & Co., Frank Bush, Lewis & Young, Bonnie Gaylord and Harry MacDuffee. Pantages has Rivoli, character change artist, for their headline act, and the specially added act is the Four Dordeens, in acrobatic stunts.

Sally Cohen Almost Gets Jealous

Sally Cohen, an actress in the company of her husband, John C. Rice, had a bad scare in Cleveland last week. The manager assigned the Rices to a new dressing room, giving the older and smaller one to a ventriloquist. Mrs. Rice went at once to the new room and after waiting a long time for Mr. Rice, when she had dressed, reflected that he might not have heard of the change of rooms and hurried away to warn him about making up. The finale of the story she tells as follows: "On opening the door of the old room, imagine my horror at seeing my husband in semidishabille and apparently deep in conversation with a strikingly beautiful woman in evening dress? She was a stranger to me, and the way she was smiling up into my husband's eyes fairly made my blood boil. 'Oh, so here you are!' I said in my most freezing tones. And he, with a cool villainy that astonished me beyond measure, put on a very mystified air and pretended not to understand me. I cannot describe how I felt. We had been married twelve years, you see, and it was the first time—I thought, with a choking sensation, of my 10-year-old daughter away at boarding school, and wondered how it would affect her. My thoughts were not very clear. How it would have ended I can't say, if the ventriloquist hadn't suddenly entered and put an end to my misery by wheeling that impudent dummy lady into the corner. And then we had explanations, of course, and a good laugh. But I can tell you that dummy lady caused me a very uncomfortable quarter of an hour."

Scandal

With characteristic vigor, Charles Frohman has followed up his hold upon the American rights of Henry Bataille's new play, Le Scandale—greeted enthusiastically by Parisian critics—by obtaining the English rights as well to the piece. Le Scandale is said to be not only the best piece of work that has thus far come from the author of La Femme Nue, but it is hailed as one of the most interesting plays the French stage has seen in years. The story is that of an affectionate mother, honest and of middle class life, who falls a victim to the wiles and plotting of a scoundrel, who puts to base uses an ascendancy gained too easily. It is in reaching a tremendous climax, one of pardon so far as the husband is concerned, that the playwright has shown extraordinary acumen and feeling.

Merry Widow Coming

It is understood that Henry W. Savage is to make his first trip West when The Merry Widow opens at the Van Ness Theatre on the Fourth of July. The famous manager has sent here some of the best attractions of recent years but his multitudinous interests in the East have prevented his coming West. The Merry Widow has just commenced an all summer run at Chicago. It is a return engagement there.

Personals

CLARKE BURROUGHS is now leading man for the Hulburt Stock of Santa Rosa.

GENEVIEVE BLINN has been signed as leading woman for Forepaugh's Stock of Cincinnati.

ORRAL HUMPHRIES is spending a few weeks at Orr's Hot Springs in the Mendocino mountains.

YORK STATE FOLKS will be staged at the Valencia Theatre, following the run of Sporting Life.

HARRY GIBSON has temporarily changed from agent to manager of a picture show in Placerville.

OLA HUMPHREY is due in London from Australia early in June, and will be seen in a new production.

JOHN ROCHE, of Francis-Valentine Company, left Wednesday for a two-weeks' stay in Southern California.

HARRY MARSHALL is in Victoria, getting up the scenery for the stock season of the Edmund Gardner Co.

GEORGE MATISON is a great favorite in El Paso, where he is playing leads at the Crawford Theatre.

ONE of the hits of Beverly of Graustark, produced week before last at the Alvin Theatre, Pittsburg, was made by Crosman Sedley-Brown, son of Henrietta Crosman and Sedley Brown.

ED REDMOND will move his stock company from the Empire Theatre in Fresno to the Victory Theatre in San Jose on June 5.

MARY HOLMES, who was several years ago with one of Manager Reed's shows, has joined Daniel Sully's company to play the female lead.

THE RIGHT OF WAY has had a good season on the Pacific Coast. Guy Standing and Theodore Roberts, the co-stars of the attraction, will appear together next season in a play which Klaw & Erlanger will have ready for them before the summer rehearsal time begins.

It is said that Edna Goodrich has a splendid role in the new Goodwin-Goodrich production called The Master Hand. The beautiful young actress is given opportunity not only for the display of gorgeous costumes and costly jewelry but for the exercise of histrionic talents of high order. Goodwin plays the role of John Bigelow, the Wall street magnet, in this play.

chise League which was recently held in London. In opening the meeting, Mrs. Ryley made a speech in which she declared that actresses belonged to a favored profession inasmuch as they worked side by side with men and received equal pay with men for their work.

HARRY F. ERTHEILER, business manager of Henry B. Harris' The Lion and the Mouse Company A, died at the St. Barnabas Hospital in Minneapolis, April 5, at 9:30 a. m.

HEINRICH CONRIED, former Director of the Metropolitan Opera House in New York, who suffered a stroke of apoplexy several days ago, died peacefully in Meran, Austria on April 26.

If Robert Edeson has his way the first real African hunting and jungle play will be written by Theodore Roosevelt, and the drama will be produced for the season of 1911 with Edeson as the star, representing Roosevelt in wildest Africa. Mr. Edeson went to Washington recently to consult as to the propriety of making a novel proposal to Mr. Taft's predecessor. As a result of that consultation he sent a cable to Mr. Roosevelt at Naples asking him if he would consider an offer to write a play with his hunting experience as a basis for Mr. Edeson's use season after next.

It seems that Charles Frohman has selected Hattie Williams to inaugurate next season his new policy for The Garrick Theatre, New York, which is henceforth to be made the home only of comedies, and to be occupied the year round by Hattie Williams and William Collier. Miss Williams' first appearance in several years in straight comedy was effected on Monday evening, April 26th, at the Van Curler Opera House, Schenectady, New York, when Mr. Frohman presented her in a new three-act comedy entitled The Marriage of a Star, which is freely adapted from the French of Alexander Bisson and George Thurner by Paul M. Potter. It is described as a jolly, wholesome play with not an objectionable line in it.

Spotlights

The Shuberts announce that they have resumed business relations with the New York Press and the Morning Telegraph. Asked about this Lee Shubert said: "I do not believe in fights with newspapers. My interests are too large and varied for unnecessary disagreements with the papers. I wish to say, however, that the Morning Telegraph approached me on Monday through Mr. William E. Lewis and agreed to treat me just as they treat all other managers."

King Dodo will be one of the big attractions for the Coast next season. The Three Twins will be another.

• Fire of unknown origin on April 18 wiped out four buildings in the business section of San Lucas, a small town sixty miles south of Salinas. Among the buildings was the Nance Opera House.

The Land of Nod company was closed in Pittsburg by the sheriff.

The International Attractions Syndicate, with fine offices in the Pacific Building, is dead. The "Syndicate" was top heavy with too great a name. Maurice Tobin had too much optimism and money was slow in coming in. A brief and not glorious career is the obituary.

The Jackson-Berger Company is playing Lompoc this week.

A few weeks ago the Fifty Miles from Boston Company was compelled to use a special train to make a jump. There was a delay of 30 minutes at a junction point, whereupon the manager, with traces of anxiety, demanded of the conductor: "What's holding us?" "Waiting on the rest of the troupe," he replied. "I've got all the people but not the animals. See, here's my instructions," and he produced a telegram which read: "At Stoneway Junction take on 'Fifty Mules from Boston.'" ### The Triumph of Art

The music and the future pass,
The ecstasy of actors sway
Over a thousand stranger hearts,
That weep, and laugh, and pass away.

Vivid and keen as love's first kiss,
Realization of youth's first dream,
Yet brief—false as a harlot's heart—
This is the triumph—the art supreme.

Morris and Blaney Sever Relations

William Morris, who has a circuit of vaudeville theatres independent of the so-called Vaudeville Trust, severed business relations last week with Charles E. Blaney, and as a result Blaney's Lincoln Square Theatre, New York, will be dark. Mr. Morris announces that he has forever eliminated that theatre from his chain of playhouses. Coincident with his withdrawal from Blaney's Mr. Morris obtained possession of the new German theatre in Fifty-ninth street, and hereafter will maintain that playhouse as a vaudeville theatre. He has called it the Plaza Music Hall. It opened under the new management on Monday with the attractions which had been billed for Blaney's. On Wednesday night of last week Mr. Blaney received notice of Mr. Morris's intention to withdraw from the Lincoln Square, and the performers were notified at once that they would have to appear at the Fifty-ninth Street playhouse instead. The news that Mr. Morris had obtained the new German theatre was a surprise to Broadway. The Shuberts had been negotiating for the playhouse for the last few weeks, intending to make it a "combination" theatre at which to present their Broadway attractions at popular prices. The theatre, which only opened last fall, is one of the best in New York, and it was planned to present there only high class German attractions. The support from the German population of the city was not forthcoming, however, to the extent anticipated, and it is said that the theatre was conducted at a loss. The Shuberts, it is said, will now seek to obtain possession of the German theatre in Irving Place. The break between Mr. Morris and Mr. Blaney, it was said, came as the result of many disagreements between them. This statement was made by Mr. Morris: "Blaney's Lincoln Square Theatre was one of the houses the operation and actual management of which William Morris, Incorporated, did not control, and was the one house on the extensive Morris Circuit the owners of which failed to agree absolutely with the Morris interests as to what constituted the highest standard and policy of conduct. Blaney's Lincoln Square theatre had, previous to the Morris invasion, been the home of melodrama with which the name of Blaney was for years associated. Controversies as to the policies of management and control became frequent. Mr. Morris and Mr. Blaney, failing to agree upon a means that would achieve the ends of the Morris policy of management, Mr. Morris decided to withdraw."

VIOLA GILLETTE, who plays the part of Niche in The Beauty Spot, the new summer success at the Herald Square Theatre, New York, has been best known for her impersonation of boy's parts. She refused a flattering offer to create the part of a Prince in a Drury Lane pantomime, to accept the part she is now playing so well.

The Big Theatrical Benefit Performance

Theatre-goers of San Francisco and vicinity are eagerly awaiting the eighth benefit in aid of the charity fund of the Associated Theatrical Managers, to take place at the Princess Theatre next Tuesday afternoon at precisely half past one. Aside from the deserving character of the benefit, the program to be given will go down in the amusement annals of the city and when the curtain finally descends just in time to let you get home for dinner an entertainment will have been offered worth fully five times the admission price. The performance will be, as is always the custom, continuous, and will be opened by I. P. Wilkerson's Minstrels of Today, from the American Theatre, in their brilliant first part, replete with clever comedy and good singing. Mme. Nazimova and her capable company from the Van Ness will contribute a bit of Ibsen and the two splendid stock companies from the Alcazar and Valencia will enter into friendly competition with their respective renditions of the school scene from Barrie's delightful Quality Street; and the dinner scene from Hoyt's A Texas Steer. The talented principals and chorus of the Princess Musical Comedy Company will present the best parts of A Chinese Honeymoon, and jolly May Boley will be seen in one of her inimitable specialties. The very best talent from the vaudeville world, including Mrs. Horton Phipps, the Kirmess dancer, will be supplied from the Orpheum, and Arthur Cunningham, than whom there is no more popular singer in San Francisco and who has just returned from a starring

A number of peculiar interest will be the rendition of Tennyson's The Lady of Shalott, which has been given a charming musical setting by Albert Elkus, and which will be read and sung by Miss Alice Colman, the well known vocalist, accompanied by the composer. Will L. Greenbaum is going to help out the cause by contributing Ten Minutes in Berlin, one of the best portions of the Burton Holmes' travelogues, and Jacob Altschuler, the viola soloist of the Russian Symphony Orchestra. There will be several distinct surprises on the program and the overture, by the combined orchestras of the city, will be a rouser. Seats are going with a rush at the Princess box office and standing room will undoubtedly be at a premium.

Dick Jose Will Be Managed By Paul Liebler

Paul H. Liebler has closed negotiations with Richard J. Jose, California's great contra-tenor, whereby he will star under the former's management the coming season in a new play called Silver Threads.

Spotlights

is a Broadhurst comedy.

During Madame Nazimova's engagement in Southern California she was the guest of the Potter Country Club at Santa Barbara, and made extensive automobile trips through the adjacent country. It is unlikely that she will some day become a resident of California like Modjeska, the other famous foreign actress who learned the English language and remained in this country.

Both John Drew and Ethel Barrymore are to make long jumps from the eastern coast to this city, when Charles Frohman sends them here for their respective engagements at the Van Ness Theatre. Miss Barrymore comes first and will bring her latest success, Lady Frederick.

In London, and generally under the caption of Stars and Stripes, they have coined a new phrase; "Frohmanizing the Stage," apropos of the fact that Charles Frohman at present has attractions in six London theatres. At The Alhambra he is presenting the new labor play, Strife, by John Galsworthy; at The Haymarket, Bevis, a new comedy in three acts by Hubert Henry Davies; at The Garrick, Samson, with Arthur Boucher in the title role; at The Duke of York's, J. M. Barrie's comedy, What Every Woman Knows; at The Comedy Theatre, W. Somerset Maugham's comedy, Penelope, with Marie Tempest in the title role, and at The Hicks Theatre, The Dashing Little Duke, with Ellaline Terriss. In commenting upon the situation the latest London Referee says: "Our dramatists, our actors, our theatres, are all under the star spangled banner. In short, everything which is comprehended in the British drama (dramatic critics, of course, always excepted), may be said to be so largely under Mr. Frohman's influence that it really looks as if nothing but the national theatre can hope to escape from the clutches of the almighty American manager. The Haymarket, where Mr. Frohman lately brought out the new comedy Bevis, by Hubert Henry Davies, is the last—or perhaps the latest—of the London theatres to be added to the enormous interests which Mr. Frohman represents in the theatre world. The American manager makes himself very much at home at The Haymarket. He might have been connected with the theatre for years for all the change he has introduced into the house. You don't notice that he is there, but he gets there, and it seems after a while just as if he had been there all the time." Further along in the notice the writer, with a deliciously naive, unintentional humor, notices that "the special influence of Charles Frohman in the management of The Haymarket, consists in the insistence on the mechanical business of twittering birds in the third act of Bevis. Certainly the birds were no better than a nuisance the other night at The Haymarket. If an actor will say that he heard the birds singing when he arose at dawn, he may convey that idea in a few words more clearly than it may be done by blowing through a reed into a bowl of water. The theatre is not a toy shop."

She Sells Sea Shells

One of the funniest and best numbers in the Leather Spot, the new summer success at the Herald Square Theatre, New York, is the song by Jefferson De Angelis in the first act, She Sells Sea Shells. This particular juxtaposition of sibilants has always been a linguistic tangle. It was once proposed as a test of a man's sobriety and it was so hard for a perfectly sober man to say that it was certain that a tongue thick with liquor must balk at it. But every night Mr. De Angelis gets away with it without a break, but the "beauty" girls who are with him and who have to join in the chorus are getting so that they can hardly talk without a lisp. Here is a verse and the chorus. If you think it's easy just try to read it fast:

The sea-shells she sells are a terrible sell.

And the song is a "sell" also;
I think I may say it will go very big
But I fear I am all that will go.
I've suffered from lock-jaw and stick-jaw as well.

In trying this chorus to sing,
It's making me lisp, but I shay to myself,

The shong's sure to go with a shwing.
I'm dreaming of sea-shells when I am in bed;

I only wish she would sell matches instead.

CHORUS

She sells sea-shells on the sea-shore,
The shells she sells are sea-shells I'm sure.

For if she sells sea-shells on the sea-shore,

Then I'm sure she sells sea-shore shells.

Revival of the Mascot

Klaw & Erlanger's revival of The Mascot at the New Amsterdam Theatre in New York is a big success, both artistically and financially. The Mascot was written by Edmond Audran. It was first produced at the Paris Bouffes, December 29, 1880. Eben Jordan of the firm of Jordan & Marsh, the builder of the Boston Opera House, was in Paris at the time and acquired the rights for the American production. He returned to Boston in the spring and submitted the book and score to Helen Grayson of the Grayson-Norcross Opera Company, then playing Audran's Olivette at the Gaiety Theatre, Boston. Mr. Jordan played the music in his rooms. The opera was accepted at once for production. A translation of the book and an adaptation of the score were made by I. W. Norcross. An orchestration was made by John E. Brahm. The original music director was John Snyder. The opera was first produced by the Boston company in April, 1881. The claim has been made frequently that the first English production was in London. That city, however, did not hear the music till October 15th, at the Comedy Theatre, after the opera had been sung at Brighton on September 19th. The original cast was as follows: Bettina, the Mascot, Helen E. H. Carter; Fiametta, daughter of Lorenzo XVII, Lily West; Pippo, a shepherd, Seth Crane; Lorenzo XVII, Prince of Piombino, Harry Brown; Rocco, a farmer, Harry Haskell; Frederic, Prince of Pisa, James E. Conley; Matheo, innkeeper, James E. Miller; Sergeant Parafante, Charles J. Ross; Physician, Ed Morris. The New York opening occurred May 5th at the Bijou Theatre. Some changes had to be made in the cast, which was as follows: Bettina, Emma Howson; Fiametta, Lily West; Pippo, James E. Brand; Lorenzo, Harry Brown; Rocco, Paul Bown; Frederic, Charles Thompson; Matheo, John Craven; Sergeant, George M. Palmer; Physician, Ed Morris. Harry Brown, who was a star for many years afterward, is prominent in vaudeville. Emma Howson, the sweet and charming Bettina of the old time, is dead. Lily West, the Fiametta, is an accomplished newspaper writer, under the name of Amy Leslie, of the Chicago News. John Brand, who sang the role of Pippo, subsequently became a business man. Ed Morris, who was the Doctor, lost his grip entirely. Even his existence today in the land of the living is in doubt.

Financial Decadence of Paris Grand Opera

Things have come to a crisis at the Paris Opera, and the new management, MM. Broussan and Messenger, have been forced to appeal for new funds. They are engaged in trying to find $100,000. In eleven months $140,000 has been lost. The situation has been rendered more acute by a letter from one of the shareholders, addressed to the Minister of Public Instruction (under whose control the opera comes), requesting that the company be wound up. In this letter, which is published in the papers, the writer makes serious allegations against the manner in which the opera has been conducted, both artistically and financially. Contrary to what was generally believed, the receipts have shown a notable falling off. The subscriptions have declined by $170,000 from the figures of the preceding year. On several evenings the receipts were less than $1,800, a sum inferior to that paid to many a leading singer for one performance in New York. One of the first acts of the new administration was to provide a new stage setting for Gounod's Faust, on which over $35,000 were spent. The decline of the Paris Opera is shown by the fact that owing to the crisis, Richard Strauss has decided to withdraw Salome, which was to have been produced in May. "The opera is ill, not merely financially, but musically," says a Paris correspondent. "No person of real musical culture can sit through a series of performances without realizing that there is something lacking in the way in which operas are presented on this sumptuous stage. The artists are often inferior, and, according to some critics, the 'mise-en-scene' leaves something to be desired. Colonel Mapleson, the operatic impresario, discussing the decline in the fortunes of the Paris Opera, has the following to say: "The whole story lies in a nutshell. In the first place the manager is bound by the 'cahier des charges,' a long list of regulations and obligations. He is not allowed, for example, to use the same costumes for two operas, even though they belong to the same period. That is one instance of stupidity. Then he must give free seats whenever they are required to all the ministers, their secretaries and officials of any standing, and to the members of the municipal council and their wives. So that it often happens when they are refusing money at the box-office, 2 or 30 per cent of the house is paper. Thus the subvention they speak of is really no subvention at all, and the manager, in order to make ends meet, has to invite a lot of rich men, and men about town, to subscribe more capital. In return for their subscription these men not only have seats at the opera, but they are also allowed the run of the artists' dressing rooms and the foyer des danses, and they insist upon engagements for their special friends. The result is that there are no funds and few opportunities for engaging great artists like Melba and Tetrassini, and there has not been a single prima donna or a single tenor of any note there this season. How can you expect the opera to go on under such conditions? Many artists, notably Emma Eames, have in the past declined to continue to sing at the opera owing to the conditions that prevail. In the chorus it is the same. Frequently one hears a mother say to her daughter, who is in the third line, 'Be nice to M—,' mentioning one of the subscribers, 'and perhaps he will get you in the front line and you may have a solo.' At Covent Garden, London, and in New York all this is impossible. At Covent Garden, too, there are but twenty-six or twenty-seven employees, whereas in Paris, M. Gailhard, the late director, told me, I think, there are 800 or more! My father and I some fifteen or sixteen years ago offered to take the Paris Opera House, asking for no subvention and paying a rent for it on the understanding that no one had free admission. This proposal did not suit the Municipal Council, and consequently it fell through. President Carnot, however, quite approved of the idea, but said he had no power. That Paris still loves good music is shown by the fact that whenever Paderewski or Kubelik or any great instrumental or vocal artist goes there, there is never a spare seat, and when Jean de Reszke gave a series of Siegfried performances at the Opera to oblige his old friend M. Gailhard there was a profit of something like $60,000." In regard to the present trouble one gathered that it is no fault of M. Messenger, the artistic director, who went to Paris from Covent Garden, for the purse-strings are held not by him but by M. Broussand. Indeed, Colonel Mapleson recalled an occasion when M. Messenger, unable to make an important engagement that he desired, left the Opera in a state of excitement and burst into tears. M. Messenger, however, is no worse off than his predecessor. "M. Gailhard," Colonel Mapleson added, "fought hard against this rotten system, and after fifteen years' management I don't suppose he retired anything but a comparatively poor man as the result of his earnest labors. Until they alter the present conditions the Paris Opera can never be what it ought to be."

George Caine's Husband Wants All the Kisses

Chicago, April 28.—A lingering kiss, the finale of the last act of the Prince of Tonight, now playing at the Princess Theatre, has robbed the company of its prima donna. Georgia Caine, who repeatedly has sung through three acts to fall into the arms of the prince at the close of the third, will quit the cast soon, it was announced today. She is booked to sail from New York on May 10 with her husband, Alphonse B. Hudson, a broker, for a six months' automobile tour in Europe. Hudson doesn't like the kiss, and is said to have insisted that his wife terminate her engagement in Chicago. "Yes, my husband wants me to quit the stage," said Miss Caine. "But I can't do it all at once. I might do it slowly. To tell the truth, my husband and I never had a honeymoon, and we are going to have a long, beautiful one now."

Messrs. Martin & Emery have purchased from Charles B. Dillingham the exclusive rights of The Red Mill, and will put out two companies in this piece next season. They will also offer two companies in Parsifal, and will star Lee Kohlmar in a new play.

Olive Fremstad Rescued in Scant Attire

Asheville, N. C., April 25.—Mme. Olive Fremstad was the heroine in a real life drama this morning, the hero being an unidentified fireman whose retiring nature inclines him to withhold his name and address. But he rescued Mme. Fremstad, for she says so herself. It wasn't much of a fire, but it caused an early morning and informal party to be enjoyed in the palm room of the Battery Park hotel. It was thoroughly an undress affair. Night garments prevailed as wearing apparel, although some of the guests carried more substantial garb in their hands ready to don them when an opportunity afforded. The flames were all in the laundry house and it is a detached building, but no one in the excitement and dark stopped to consider things, and soon trunks began to be thrown out of the windows. Then the scared patrons ran into each other in the hallways and on the stairs as they scampered blindly to places of safety. Some time between the first cry of fire and the gathering of all in the palm room the saving of Mme. Fremstad took place. The exact moment of the thrilling rescue is not known. Standing in shivery and shimmery dish- abille, with candles casting a wierd reflection upon the ground, the frightened guests were assured by the hotel people that the conflagra- tion in the washroom had been con- quered. Then all went out to see the sunrise.

Geraldine Farrar Hissed in Pittsburg

Pittsburg, April 28.—Geraldine Farrar, the star of the Metropolitan Opera Company, who a year ago stirred the wrath of the American people by declaring art was an un- strengthened urchin in this land, to- night inflamed an elite Pittsburg au- dience by a display of artistic tem- perament—or temper—and ended the opera, Madame Butterfly, in an uproar of indignation. Miss Farrar developed a storm of abuse by her attitude toward an infant whom she employed in the last scene. The child began to whimper at the time Miss Farrar was singing a frantic relinquishment of mother love to a father's care, all of this prior to her own suicide. When "Baby" Carroll cried the star was disturbed. She tried to hush the infant, and failing, became excited by the crash of brass music which resulted from the ef- forts of the orchestra leader, Arturo Tescaninis, to drown the effect, she clasped the child closely, still sing- ing, and changed the business of the scene to permit her to walk the stage. Then, according to eye wit- nesses, the child began to scream and the star, provoked beyond all control of impulse, grasped him by the neck and muffled his face in her kimono. A woman, richly gowned as becomes one of the first families of a city, arose from her seat and cried "shame." This was the signal for a general hissing protest throughout the house. The women made the violent protest, crying to one another concerning the actress' conduct. The men, naturally, voiced the women's plaint. The climax came when Miss Farrar, entirely be- reft of self-composure by the storm of protest directed against her, rushed toward the wings and in her extremity tossed the infant out to a stage hand in waiting. This action was oil to the flame of fury that was raging throughout the house. None could see that a maid caught the child, and the general supposition was that the infant had been ruth- lessly thrown aside. After the per- formance persistent efforts were made to secure Miss Farrar's version of the scene, but she would not talk. Her mother, also, was extremely reticent. Mrs. Patrick Carroll, how- ever, the mother of the "prop" in- fant, had much to say. "My baby's neck is bruised where she shut off its wind," she said. "I was willing to trust him to the singer because she looked a kind and gentle woman, but she choked off his cries and bruised him. I think I'll have the law on her."

Jose's Singing Still in Power

A thing of joy is Jane. Last even- ing at the Victory there were chuckles, titters, giggles and bursts of laughter over the fun and merriment on the stage which must have gladdened the hearts of the players in their efforts to please. A very compact and well rehearsed com- pany are these nine people in the roarily funny comedy of Jane. The heroine of Jane is brilliantly played by Lillian Hayward. Susie Howard, Mary Duncan and Minnie Mayfield played minor roles very acceptably. Robert Lawler made the most of a difficult part, and Arthur Hill, Alfred Rowland and Hobart Cavanaugh gave able and spirited support. But the real star of the evening was Richard J. Jose, the world-famous contra-tenor. Mr. Jose's part in the program was in- troduced as an entr'acte, and con- sisted of five songs with harp ac- companiment. Mr. Jose's voice, ever sweet and ever touching, was at its best last evening, and his singing was a treat to all present. The first song was The River of Life, with its haunting waltz refrain, and this was followed by that old, old favorite, When You and I Were Young, Mag- gie, which was charmingly rendered. In response to an encore, Silver Threads Among the Gold was sweetly intoned, and this was fol- lowed by that pathetic and tear- compelling ballad entitled Daddy. The audience clamored for more, and to their great delight the singer responded with one verse of Dolly Gray, which was sung as only Richard Jose can sing it.—San Jose Mercury.

Terry McKean's players are using The Devil, Divorcons, The Price of Peace and The Jolly Drummer for a matinee bill. The show is extremely classy and, without qualification, pleasing all along their route.

Blanche Bates Plans Unique Auto Trip

NEW YORK, April 25.—"I shall not spend a single moment in a hotel if I can help it," said Blanche Bates, today, in telling of her proposed transcontinental journey in an auto- mobile equipped with all the inven- tions and mechanisms of the most modern type. Portable tents will be pitched by the roadside and lighted at night by electricity by the car. The cooking will be done by electricity. The most remarkable of the modern contrivances will be a radio wireless telephone. Messages may be sent when the car is speeding at the rate of fifty miles an hour.

Modjeska's Fortune Shrunk

The will of the late Mme. Helena Modjeska, which has been filed for probate, was executed on August 26, 1906, and leaves $4,000 to a sister in Poland and $1,000 to each of the children of Ludwig Opid, of Los Angeles, a nephew. The balance is left to her husband, Count Bozente. The value of the estate evidently has dwindled since the will was made, as last week it was placed at $5,000, consisting of three acres of land at Tustin, Orange County; silverware, and a note for $1,000.

FRED S. CUTLER WRITES: Our business is simply great; a little behind last year in some places, but enough greater in others to make the two weeks' total far in advance of corresponding time of last season.

Valencia Theatre

Hoyt's highly hilarious and best comedy, A Texas Steer, will be seen for the last times this Sunday afternoon and evening, and on Monday night Sporting Life will receive a stupendous production. Written by Seymour Hicks and Cecil Raleigh, Sporting Life is one of those monster scenic melodramas, filled to the brim with startling effects, which have from time to time been imported into this country from England and which have invariably made deep impressions upon the American theatre-going public. The cast includes thirty-two speaking parts and the full strength of the Valencia Stock Company will be called upon for its rendition. Paul McAllister will, of course, play the Earl; Robert Homans will be Malet de Carteret, a highly villainous individual; George Osborne will be Isidore Andread, a kind-hearted Hebrew money lender; Charles Dow Clark will revel in the part of Sergeant Doxey, a Scotland Yard detective, and William Wolbert will have another strong character bit as a race track tout. Florence Oakley will be cast as the adventuress, Olive de Carteret; charming Edith Lyle will be Woodstock's sweetheart; Norah and Grace Travers and Peggy Monroe will have congenial roles.

American Theatre

For the week commencing this Sunday afternoon everything will be changed from beginning to end and an entirely new routine of comedy sections. For a change the vocalists and interlocutor, who have hitherto been appearing in white face, will hide their handsome visages with the same kind of burnt cork used by the end or "corner" men, as they call them in Australia. Noe J. LaVigne, the baritone, who is making his first appearance in the charmed semi-circle, will sing The New Born King, by Geibest, and Frank Figoni, the basso, will be heard in Bullard's always welcome Stein song. Will Oakland, the contra-tenor, will sing a lot of "new" old favorites, and San Francisco's own Matt Keefe will vary his Tyrolean yodelings. Al. Jolson, who has established himself as an unqualified favorite, will be heard in many songs new to this city and will also spring his quota of surprises. John King, whose "Transmagnificandamyuosity" is the talk of the town, will sing Shoveling Coal, and Emil Subers, the Georgia Sunflower, promises an unusually amusing effort. The first part will be brought to a close with A Visit of the Darktown Band, in which, as the leader, John King will give one of his unrivaled wench impersonations. Wilkerson's Musical Comedy Company will produce, for the first time here, Tid-Bits, a Frivol, in one act. Robert Wilson, Lou Anger, Edward Castano, Arthur Thorn, Edward Flynn, Ella Smyth, Anna Golde and Bertie Starrett will appear. The costumes will be entirely new and beautiful, and the solos and concerted vocal numbers will include all of the recent New York successes.

The Orpheum

Those who are grumbling about hard times should visit the beautiful new Orpheum, where large audiences are in evidence at every performance. For next week the inducements are certainly very strong. The Russell Brothers, who have been too long absent and who have no superiors as fun-makers, will present their screaming farce, Our Servant Girls, in which they impersonate a couple of hired help and give character delineations and impersonations of real people. With them is associated Flora Bonfanti Russell, a handsome girl and an accomplished toe dancer. The Five Juggling Normans, agile club manipulators, who perform astounding acrobatic feats; Frederick Allen, formerly with Charles Frohman companies, supported by Bertha Van Norman hour of downright jollity concludes and other capable people in the fanciful novelty, His Phantom Sweetheart, and Francini-Olloms, Europe's most accomplished xylophonist and concertinist, and a clever acrobat and juggler, who plays his own accompaniment while turning twenty-four somersaults, are other novelties which cannot fail to please. Next week will be the last of Angela Dolores and company, the Melnotte Twins and Clay Smith, Hawthorne and Burt and La Valera (Mrs. Horton Forrest Phipps), whose terpsichorean triumph is positive. A new series of Orpheum motion pictures will conclude the performance.

Alcazar Theatre

There is fun, action and color in every scene of The Boys of Company B, which is to be revived at the Alcazar next Monday evening. When it was played in the Sutter Street house last season standing room only was obtainable ere the week expired, and another series of highly remunerative performances is assured, for the demand for its revival has been strong and insistent. Rida Johnson Young, author of Brown of Harvard, wrote The Boys of Company B, and thus supplied a vehicle that enables every member of the Alcazar company to exhibit most effectively his or her best comedy talent. The militiamen are a jolly, wholesome lot of young fellows who can give and take a joke and are prone to flirting, and the women are natural, everyday women. In the first act they are all assembled in a New York gymnasium, where they are preparing for Company B's annual camping out up the Hudson, and half an hour of downright jollity concludes

The Actor Folk of Los Angeles Are Planning a Real Actors' Ball

LOS ANGELES, May 6.—The actors' ball is a much-talked-of event among the theatrical folk just now. It will be given at the Goldberg-Bosley assembly hall on May 28th. This is the first actors' ball that has even been given here, and from the present indications it will be one of the events of the season. Olga Stech, who is well known to Los Angeles audiences through her excellent work with the company at the Unique, has been engaged to join the Kolb and Dill forces. Miss Stech is now playing in stock in San Diego. Florence Stone, Hobart Bosworth, Eugene Nowland and Harry Mestayer are the principals who will appear in the Gamut Club's production of The Violin Maker of Cremona, at the Auditorium on the evening of May 13th. The play is a famous one by Francois Coppee, and Coquelin achieved celebrity in the principal part. Nowland will have the Coquelin role. Dorothy Bernard, who is one of the most popular members of the Belasco Company, is to marry, and the happy man is none other than her old friend, A. H. Van Buren, ex-leading man of the Belasco Company. We understand that they are to be married in the fall and will live at Jamaica. Florence Reed will make her first appearance at the orphanage benefit to be given Friday afternoon at the Belasco Theatre. The management has donated the use of that playhouse, together with the services of the members of the Belasco Theatre company, while the management of the Grand Opera House has tendered the professional services of the Murray and Mack organization in the first act of A Night on Broadway.

BELASCO—Is this the final week of The Dollar Mark? That is what the management tells us, but then you never can tell. Anyway, this is the ninth week.

BURBANK—The Prince Chap is being given in fine shape by Mr. Morosco's Burbank Company this week. The story of the play is familiar to 48—Galley 18.

Dramatic company, although it has not been put on by a stock company. The story is simple and wholesome and at the same time entirely probable. In the first act the part of Claudia is taken by little Elsie Walters, and she does exceedingly well. Blanche Hall plays the part in the acts following, and she meets all the requirements of the part. William Desmond, in the title role, does some exceptionally fine work. Aaron Beasley is cast as Jack Roddy, the Earl of Huntington, and Lovell Alice Taylor as Alice Travers, the sculptor's fiancée. The rest of the company all have parts that seem to be just suited to them.

MAJESTIC—Kolb and Dill are playing The Politicians for the second week at the Majestic Theatre.

MASON—Otis Skinner and his company are appearing at the Mason Opera House this week in The Honor of the Family. This is a play in four acts, after Balzac, adapted by Paul M. Potter. Mr. Skinner, always a favorite with the local theatregoers, only adds to his popularity by his portrayal of the character of Col. Phillippe Bridau, the dashing bravado. Mr. Skinner is surrounded by a most able company, and the acting is artistic in every detail. Percy Haswell plays Flora, the leading feminine role, effectively. Her scene with Mr. Skinner in the third act is deserving of special praise. A. G. Andrews is very good as Rouget, the miserly invalid, and Frederick Sargent does good work as Gilet, the handsome young lover. Sarah Padden makes much of the part of the serving maid. The entire action of the piece takes place in one room, and the scenery and appointments are carefully chosen to represent the period and circumstances of the play. All the parts are well handled, and the performance is most pleasing.

GRAND—Murray and Mack and their company make their first appearance at the Grand Opera House this week in the "musical gayety," A Night on Broadway. Why call it A Night on Broadway? No one knows; the only apparent reason being that every play must have a title; hence this one. There is no plot to the "gayety," but there are a lot of jokes and songs by principals and chorus. Some of the jokes are moss covered, but they get the laughs, and the house likes them, so what more can we ask? Bessie Tannehill has several very good solo numbers, and Lillie Sutherland makes a hit in her song, Stage-Door Johnnie. Dolly Graham and the Marquis Ellis Quartette sing effectively When You First Kiss the Last Girl You Love. Beatrice Whitney is a newcomer. She "puckers up her lips and whistles." The chorus shows excellent training all the way through, and the costumes for both principals and chorus are very attractive.

ORPHEUM—S. Miller Kent and his company head the bill at the Orpheum for the week. Mr. Kent is well known here and needs no introduction. He and his company present a comedy sketch entitled Marriage in a Motor Car. Adeline Dunlap and Frank McCormack present another another playlet called The Night of the Wedding. Lew Sully, the former minstrel man, is on the bill for some songs and a few jokes. Joly Violette, an eccentric Parisian dancer, gives some imitations of foreign celebrities. The holdovers are Mlle. Zelig de Lus-san, the Casting Dunbars, Mathews and Reece and the Eight Melanis.

LOS ANGELES—The feature act at the Los Angeles Theatre this week is provided by the Marco Twins, a clever pair of comedians. One of the "twins" is six feet three in height; the other, a dwarf, three feet six. "Lanky Jim" also is a contortionist. The dwarf is just a dwarf, but he is as funny as Franz Ebert, and several times as lively. There are also other good things on the programme. Manuel Romaine, an old-time minstrel balladist, and his company present a musical novelty in two scenes. Ellsworth and Lindon offer an amusing comedy sketch entitled His Day Off. Mueller and Mueller sing well and fortunately sing songs that are worth while. The travel pictures show scenes in present-day Mexico.

EMPIRE—Manager Fulkerson has a bevy of able juvenile artists for the current week's bill at the Empire. The Kiltie Duo, a Scotch masterpiece, is one of the best, for the pair give a number of good songs and dances. The Morrisons have a neat bit of comedy-drama. Another team is the Armenta Brothers, billed as whirlwind tumblers. Symo and Syma are stellar attractions, with their novelty dancing and contortion feats. The Johnsons have a black-face comedy singing and dancing act. Illustrated songs and moving pictures supplement the programme.

FISCHER'S—A one-act musical burlesque, The Devil's Grotto, and a vaudeville act make up the bill at the First Street theatre this week. Some old favorites are seen in the cast, which includes Hugh Metcalf, Billy Onslow, Flo Morrison, Lillie Garnett, Rose Burbank and Fred Gamble. Alberta Lane, who heads the olio, has a very sweet voice, which she used to good advantage; Ethel Jones is attractive in a soubrette act and specialty, and J. W. Valley makes music with his accordion. Moving pictures and illustrated songs complete the bill.

UNIQUE—Dick's Troubles, a one-act musical comedy, under the direction of Frank B. Blair, is amusing patrons of the Unique this week. The plot concerns a young man, a rich uncle and a borrowed wife and child, loaned by a friend for the occasion. Will Armstrong as the accommodating friend sings A Hundred Girls for Him, and Ben Sellars appears in solos and in a duet with Miss Elwood. John J. Martin makes a hit with Somebody Said That Somebody Told Him So. Miss Atkins sings The Prima Donna. Little Miss Parker as the maid sings I Wish I Had a Pal Like You and Lonesome. The cast is completed by Miss Hoyle as a burlesque queen.

WALKER—J. Harry Pieper, manager of the Walker Theatre, has a pleasing bill to offer this week. Crawford, Ilmer and Crawford company presents a tabloid drama called Pards, which is of the West Western in its atmosphere. Mlle. Martella gives a drapery dance, which is out of the ordinary. Walter Berlin delivers a new "bunch" of funny stories and imitations. He is a firm believer in "always leaving them laughing when he says good-bye." Bessie Nielsen, a winsome miss, shows good taste in her violin selections. M. Aduo, billed as a gymnast extraordinary, does some clever stunts on the trapeze. Joseph Manley has a new illustrated song, True Blue. New comic and instructive motion pictures complete the bill.

PORTLAND, Ore., May 3, 1909.—HEILIG (Cal. Heilig, mgr.; William Pangle, res. mgr.)—This house has been dark since the date of Norman Hackett and remains in that condition until Nazimova opens here. Ben Greet's players are also an early booking.

BUNGALOW (George L. Baker, mgr.; Milton Seaman, res. mgr.)—When Knighthood Was in Flower is the bill for this week at this house. It was presented yesterday to good houses. Izetta Jewel portrayed the role of Mary Tudor and left nothing to be wished for at her hands for her acting of the part. Sydney Ayers was good as Charles Brandon, captain of the guards. Donald Bowles is back in the cast this week and played the part of Caskoden up to his usual high standard. Louise Kent played Anne Boleyn in her usual faultless manner. Two parts well sustained were those of Queen Katherine, as played by Mrs. Mina Gleason, and Henry VIII, portrayed by William Dills. Both entered into their respective parts with a feeling that clearly showed that they well appreciated the lines of their roles. Next week, Merely Mary Ann.

BAKER (George L. Baker, mgr.; Milton Seaman, bus. mgr.)—This house is dark. Ferris Hartman and his opera company open soon in It Happened in Nordland.

ORPHEUM (James H. Errickson, mgr.)—A good bill was presented the past week. The Russell Brothers were the headliners the past week, and their comicallities were well liked. Andy Rice in Yiddish impersonations was way above the average, while Frederick Allen & Co., in the playlet, His Phantom Sweetheart, gave us some good acting. The Five Juggling Normans were also a good turn in their line. Commencing today the bill is as follows: Lillian Burkhart & Co., Marshall P. Wilder, Countess Rossi and Paulo, Lulu Beeson Trio, Dierick Brothers, Flo Adler and Coe & Boyd.

LYRIC (Keating & Flood mgrs.)—The offering for this week at this house is At the Old Cross Roads. It opened yesterday and was well received. Isabell Duncan gave a fine rendition of the octoroon, as did Lillian Branscomb in the part assigned to her. Rupert Drum played the heavy role in good style, and Herbert Ashton in the lead was eminently satisfactory. The play is well produced and the management have spared no expense from a scenic standpoint.

GRAND (James H. Errickson, mgr.)—William & Walker Chocolate Drops are the feature act for this week and the balance of the bill includes Monetta Five, Cowboy Williams, El Barto, Hasse & Marietta and Harry MacDuffee.

J. Aldrich Libbey and Trayer Katharine

"Pantages Theatre, Sacramento, May 2.—J. Aldrich Libbey and Katharine Trayer sang delightfully, giving one particularly rich Italian opera selection. Miss Trayer's solo was also good, and Mr. Libbey's popular song called forth a storm of applause."—Sacramento Daily Union.

Correspondence

CHICAGO, May 4.—Mrs. Anna Sinton Taft, wife of Charles P. Taft of Cincinnati, and sister-in-law of President Taft, is made a defendant in a bill of injunction filed here by Mort H. Singer, president of the La Salle Theatre Company. The bill asks that Mrs. Taft, owner of the theatre property, be restrained from interfering with the theatrical company's possession, and asks the extension for five years of a lease which expired yesterday. It is alleged that Mrs. Taft and Charles W. Murphy, president of the Chicago National Baseball Club, have entered into a conspiracy to defraud the complainant of his rights, and to operate a theatre for their own benefit. Last season it was known among a few well informed theatrical men that there would be trouble over the La Salle lease. H. H. Frazee at one time figured on acquiring it, and may do so yet.

STOCKTON, May 5, 1909.—Last Saturday evening marked the passing of Sullivan-Considine vaudeville in this city for a time at least. The Novelty, the pioneer vaudeville theatre here, has gone into straight moving pictures. This house had a long run in the vaudeville line, and when they announced pictures as the attraction it was a big surprise to everybody. The Forrest Theatre continues to run, offering Pantages vaudeville. G. Archambault, who opened this house under Pantages bookings, has severed his connection with the house. The Bell Theatre, which was opened for about four weeks with 5 and 10 cent vaudeville has closed on account of no business. It seems about time that Stockton's efficient humane society would interfere and stop some of these would be theatrical magnates who have some money and no brains from throwing good money away. Gentle reader, Stockton will support one vaudeville theatre only. The four moving picture houses now running report fair returns.

LONG BEACH, May 5.—Manager Clark of Byde-a-Wyle has made a hit with his Beauty Chorus, and the house is winning back its old-time patronage. Three of a Kind abounds with fun and frolic. About the funniest thing in the bill is Frank Clark himself playing the juvenile lead and cornering all the love business. The Dickinson company, which has given way at the Grand to the King company, is slowly flitting henceward. Elmer Ballard and Miss Albert have gone to Los Angeles. Chas. Burnison is still here but will leave Monday. Dickinson has made no definite plans for the future. Charles Wheelock has left for Kansas City to play in stock, but Nick Cogley will remain and, it is reported, join the Beauty Chorus at Byde-a-Wyle, where he is sure to make good. The new King company will be composed of Charles King, Majorie Rambeau, Chester Stevens, Franklyn Hall, Lillian Burnett, Carl Berch, Frank Bonner, Lee Phillips, Josephine Dillon and Clara Williams. The opening bill will be Merely Mary Ann.

CHICO, May 3.—Indifferent business greeted the Frank Coley company Friday night, May 2, at the Majestic Theatre in their presentation of Utah. The comedy in the piece was well handled by Mr. Brattan, Mr. Kilbride and Lulu Barlow. Saturday afternoon A Runaway Match was played, and in the evening The Brixton Burglary closed the engagement.

SACRAMENTO, April 29.—An artistic production of A Midsummer Night's Dream was given by the Ben Greet Players and the Russian Symphony Orchestra at the Clunie, 27. The following are coming to the Clunie: Nat Goodwin and Edna Goodrich, May 7-8; The Burgo-master, 9; Otis Skinner, 13; Mme. Nazimova, 15. The Camellians, a local dramatic society, will give The Squaw Gentleman, 5-6. At Pantages, week April 25—Mrs. Maud Evans; Sa-Hara, mysterious thought transference; The Armanis, A Night in Naples; West and Mack, blackface comedians; Wentworth, Vesta and Teddy, acrobats and odd dog; Hearn and Rutter, wooden and soft shoe dancers; Edouard Scott, baritone. The Grand has Our New Minister this week. The Heart of Maryland next week.

SANTA ANA, May 5, 1909.—From a little storeroom a year ago last October to a big airdome, seating 1000, last June, Dr. A. M. Roberts now finds himself in his own pretty little theatre that he opened February 1, 1909. It is known as the Temple Theatre, covers a corner lot, 50 x 125 feet, is fire proof, on the ground floor, cost $20,000 and will seat 850 people. Dr. Roberts is ready to book road shows, vaudeville and Lyceum attractions. The house never closes. At present he is showing vaudeville pictures and illustrated songs. Santa Ana is a fifty-cent ride from Los Angeles, and combinations and acts can break jumps or fill in time while waiting for time out of Los Angeles. The staff of the Temple Theatre is Dr. A. M. Roberts, prop. and mgr.; Mrs. L. A. Roberts, asst. mgr.; Ferris Brown, treas.; Earl Elsworth, chief electrician; Prof. and Madam G. F. Andrist, in charge of music; Leon Le Chartiers, illustrated songs; W. B. Wilson, stage; C. L. Frey, door keeper; H. E. Murdock, advertising agent.

TACOMA, Wash., May 3, 1909.—Nothing further has developed concerning a site for the new Shubert theatre. John Donnelly, owner of the Star theatre, has been approached by different factions regarding his property, and while nothing has been done so far it seems more than probable that a new theatre building will grace the site of the old Star Theatre. E. F. Stafford, managing The Mills of the Gods, was for many years a resident of Tacoma, and was kept busy greeting old friends during his visit here. Denton Vane, of the McRae Stock Co., left yesterday for Los Angeles. His last week's stay was made pleasant by numerous social affairs, among them a smoker given by his young men friends at the Hotel American. Earl P. Adams, manager of the Mabel Paige Stock Co., in Florida, and who was shot and killed two weeks ago, was for many years a well known resident of Tacoma, being connected with the Tacoma Daily News. The Mills of the Gods, which appeared at the Tacoma April 25-26, proved to be an interesting melodrama, well acted by a well balanced company. Norman Hackett appeared, April 28, presenting classmates. Richard Carle made his first visit to Tacoma, May 1 and 2. He brought Mary's Lamb with him to delight Tacomans. Tonight The Gingerbread Man; 5th, Chicago Symphony Orchestra; 9th, Black Patti Troubadours. The Road to Yesterday was given a splendid rendition by the McRae players. Miss Oswald, as the enthusiastic young girl, with the romantic ideas of chivalry, was at her very best. Miss Van Tassel, as the gypsy, excelled. Miss Robeson was capital as the maid Nora. Bessie Llewellyn, as the aunt, was most satisfying. L. Brigham Percival and Laura Winston do well in heavy roles. Mr. Holuber did excellent work. The bill all this week—Sag Harbor, with Laura Winston playing the lead. At the Grand the Moneta Five pleased with their musical act, and King and Bailey with songs from Bandanna Land were a scream. Anna Miller was unusually pleasing in her songs, and Miller and Tempest offered a good tumbling act. As a wizard Elbarto was fair. The headliner at this house this week is Mme. Nadze, queen of equivoise. Cal Stewart, of phonograph fame, will be a good drawing card. No prettier staging in vaudeville has been seen here than that of the Gainsborough Girl. The accompanying song numbers were well done. Musical Bentley was well received. Feld Rivenhall was clever as a London Johnnie. The Bruno-Kramer Trio of gymnasts were interesting and novel. The comedy draws of Buchanan and Russell took well, and the Boldens, colored singers and dancers, were fair. Mr. and Mrs. Edward Lucas, in Scenes from Dickens, will be a big attraction at Pantages this week.

SPOKANE, Wash., May 5.—April 30-May 1-2, The Mills of the Gods, by George Broadhurst, presented by the Ernest Shuter company, showed a well-balanced cast and had the audience with them from the raise of the curtain until its final fall. Monroe Salisbury appeared in the leading role. The support throughout was good; fair houses; 5-6, Richard Carle; 7-8, Norman Hackett. When Knight-hood Was in Flower, under the auspices of the 150,000 Club, at the Auditorium by the Jessie Shirley stock; good houses. Next, The Love Route. The Orpheum had a well-balanced bill. Miss Casselli's dog act was one of the big acts. Other good ones: The Sunny South; Post and Russell; Coombs and Stone; Thomas H. Luce; Dorothy Drew; Wells and Sells, and motion pictures. 2-8, Mike Donlin and Mabel Hite; Claude Gillingwater; Billy Van; Meakin and Hand; Anderson; The Hamlins; Rockway and Conway. The attractions at the Washington were Burt and Sheppard; Tomia Hanlon; Al Cameron and company; Burt and Anderson; Kessler and Dunn; moving pictures. 2-8, Cooke and Rother; Clara Throop; Weston and Young company; Brenon and Downing; Martynne. La Lois Helene in her Cleopatra death dance was the big drawing card. Pedersen Brothers had a good turn. Others:

Scott and Whaley; Dan J. Harrington; Wm. D. Gilson; McGloin and Shelly; moving pictures. 2-8, The Three Saytons; Cluxton and Richmond company; the Four Lincolns; Walter Montague and company; Young and Brooks; Shale and Cole. Good business is reported at the moving picture houses. Ethel Von Waldron closed her engagement with the Jessie Shirley company, May 1, and will join a stock company in St. Paul, Minn. The second annual benefit matinee of Spokane Lodge, No. 47, T. M. A., took place in the Auditorium Theatre, 6. The Jessie Shirley stock company closes its engagement May 15, after a run of two hundred and ten consecutive weeks—United States record. The week of 9th the bill will be The Baby Chase, when C. F. Ralston will appear in the cast. Mr. Ralston joined with the company eleven years ago and will close with them. He left the company a year ago and has been in business in Portland, Ore.

Edna Goodrich

Goodwin and Goodrich

Next Monday the Van Ness Theatre will offer Nat C. Goodwin and Edna Goodrich in George Broadhurst's play, "The Easterner," written especially for Mr. Goodwin. Of Nat C. Goodwin may be said with the certainty of an affirmation by the entire theatre-going public that he is the most versatile actor, as well as the most finished natural and unctuous comedian playing in the Anglo-Saxon tongue. Thousands of his admirers throughout America go even further in their encomiums of his artistry and declare him to be the foremost living exponent of the art dramatic. By furnishing none but plays of the cleanest and most wholesome character and by giving his personal attention to all his productions down to the smallest detail, Mr. Goodwin has succeeded, therefore, in attaining a place in the affectionate regard of all classes among the amusement-loving public second to no actor on the contemporary stage. Stage beauties come, and, alas, they go, but to be generally acknowledged as being the most beautiful woman on the American stage at the present time, is a compliment which any member of the sweeter sex might well be proud to receive. With no intention of disparaging the charms of any of the other and older footlight favorites, it may safely be claimed that for perfection of face and form, and for that indescribable something which stamps its possessor as one of those few fortunate beings whom nature molds only when in her most beneficent mood, Edna Goodrich, now sharing stellar honors with her husband, Nat C. Goodwin, bears off the palm. Great writers have failed utterly in the task of convincingly putting in words the superlative charms of their ideals of feminine pulchritude and any like effort to fittingly describe the multifarious physical perfections of Miss Goodrich doubtless would be equally ineffective. Suffice it to say that the young star, now in the full bloom of youth and health may most readily be compared to that Queen of Floral Kingdom, an American Beauty Rose.

Vaudeville Notes

Bonita, leading woman with the Vine, Woman and Song Company, which went to pieces in Cincinnati, was arrested in her room at the Sinton Hotel early Wednesday morning of April 30, after a fight with the hotel clerk, and was locked up in a police cell. Bonita was charged with disorderly conduct. After languishing two hours in the cell she was released. Later, when her case was called in court, Bonita failed to appear. She had gone to New York in an early train. A fine of $5 and costs was assessed against her, and it was paid by her attorney. Previous to the arrest a desperate fight took place in an elevator of the hostelry between the woman, who was armed with a hatpin, and Night Clerk William Hetlich, Jr., and Watchman Adam Matz. Both Hetlich and Matz were severely stabbed during the scuffle, and physicians had to be called to dress their wounds. The trouble started when the woman tried to order drinks from the bar after midnight.

The reports of the tough element and thieves with Norris & Rowe's circus seems to have been well founded, says a Red Bluff paper. John Shults was short-changed out of $10 at the main ticket wagon and Everett Finley who deposited $20 at the ticket wagon was loser $15. Both men reported their losses to Marshal Slater who went to the management and demanded the return of the money. The money was refunded and the manager claimed that the ticket seller was stealing on his own account and that they had no idea of his rascality. Clarence Ruff was robbed of $3.50 by pickpockets and Earl Slater lost $2 in a like manner. Marshal Slater arrested a man in the act of trying to pick the pockets of Isaac Robinette and he was locked up and kept till midnight when he was released.

On May 1 Manager N. F. Haggerty of the Los Angeles Theatre, Los Angeles, retired after thirty years' experience as performer and manager. He has bought a ranch at Artesia, where he will cultivate the playful turnip, the lyrical strawberry, the melodramatic potato, and an ensemble of garden truck. Mr. Haggerty began his career in 1879 as a member of the famous Nelson family, the act being known as Nelsonia. Since then he has been in legitimate, circus, burlesque and minstrel work, as well as in the box-office, and the upstairs office of theatres, principally with Sullivan & Considine. He has taken care of his money, made good investments, and now has sufficient income to be free from the bread and butter worry.

Nell of the Music Halls, a one-act playlet, was before Justice Dowling of New York, April 25, on a motion of counsel for Michael B. Leavitt, who claims an interest in the play, to prevent Mabel Bardine, who presents the act, from sailing for Europe to fill engagements, so that he can examine her in a suit for an accounting. Leavitt alleges that he furnished the money in 1906 to buy the play from Marion Russell, who wrote it, and asserts that since that time Miss Bardine has paid him nothing. In reply she says he has no claim because he didn't live up to his agreement. Justice Dowling declined to issue an order for her examination, saying that he thought the plaintiff was in possession of all the facts and written evidence he needs. Miss Bardine is the former wife of Chris O. Brown, who used to be booking agent of the Sullivan-Considine theatres in San Francisco, but is now occupying the same position in New York City. Miss Bardine was also the wife of Carl Berch.

After a three days' tryout, Tony Lubelski decided on Tuesday night that vaudeville at the Novelty was impossible.

Peggy Monroe

Among the exceptionally talented actor folk who seem to run riot in California, there is none who has a surer hold on the future than Peggy Monroe, the petite and dainty soubrette who is a member of the Valencia Stock Company of this city. Miss Monroe has a very attractive and magnetic personality—a mobile face and a pair of most expressive eyes. She can portray the rollicking enthusiasm of youth better than any one in the West that just now comes to our mind. And in the midst of this abundance of vitality and attractive cheerfulness, there is ever a haunting suggestion of the ability to bring into play the more serious and pathetic emotions. We prophesy that the near future will see Peggy Monroe lifted to a high pedestal in the field of true soubrette work—the best example of which was illustrated by the vivacious Lotta, whose place since her retirement has never been filled on the American stage.

Nat Goodwin Calls Down Critic for Harsh Criticism—Audience Applauds

Los Angeles, May 2.—Nat Goodwin, who, with Edna Goodrich, his wife, and company finished a week's engagement here last night took occasion from the stage to reply to the critic of the Graphic, a weekly magazine. His reply was: "Damn them." In a curtain speech tonight Goodwin said: "As for this obscure critic and publication, which attacks me and my wife and my company, all I wish to say is 'damn them.'" The audience applauded.

Belasco and Fiske Make Up With Klaw & Erlanger

NEW YORK, April 30.—This was a field day for Klaw & Erlanger, the biggest and most far reaching in its results, and the most significant in its bearing upon the theatre and dramatic art in this country that has occurred in twenty years. Not only did Klaw & Erlanger conduct into the syndicate fold their most ancient and bitterest enemy, Harrison Grey Fiske, and his allied interests, but they also opened amicable business arrangements and booking privileges at their 300 theatres with their other determined opponent, the redoubtable David Belasco. And then, to make the sweep of the theatrical checkerboard clean, Charles Frohman, who is allied with the syndicate, announced that beginning with next season James K. Hackett, another old enemy of Klaw & Erlanger, would appear as a star under the Frohman management. Harrison Grey Fiske has given out an authoritative written statement fully confirming the report of the agreement in so far as it concerns Klaw & Erlanger and Belasco and Fiske. The new arrangements give Belasco and Fiske the right to book with anybody—even with the Shuberts. The agreement was foreshadowed last week when it was announced in THE DRAMATIC REVIEW that Fred Belasco had made an arrangement with Klaw & Erlanger to book Blanche Bates in Pacific coast cities.

Ralph Stuart Goes to Salt Lake

Denver.—The Denver Auditorium, in which the Democratic National Convention was held last year, will be used this season for the production of a number of the Shubert theatrical attractions.

Annual Benefit

The Managers' Annual Benefit Performance, given at the Princess Theatre last Tuesday, netted about $1,400. The following programme was presented: Overture, Princess Theatre Orchestra, Selli Simonson, Director. I. P. Wilkerson's Minstrels of Today, in a condensed first part—Interlocutor, Mr. I. P. Wilkerson; bones, Mr. John King, Mr. Leonard Russell, Mr. Hal Forbes; tambos, Mr. Al Jolson, Mr. Eddie Mazie, Mr. Fred Forbes; song and dance specialty, the Brothers Forbes; Longest Way Around, Silver Threads Among the Gold, Mr. Will Oakland; Transmagnificandamynuality, Mr. John King; Yodle song selections, Mr. Matt Keefe; a little bit of everything, Mr. Al Jolson; grand finale, California for Mine; Mr. Raymond H. Bone, musical director. The Melotte Twins and Clay Smith, in Artistic Nonsense, from the Orpheum. Pianologue, Miss Nevada Heffron. Remarks, Mr. Geo. Osbourne, from the Valencia Theatre. Belasco & Mayer presented the Alcazar players in the second act of Quality Street by J. M. Barrie. Hawthorne and Burt, in Vaudeville Comicalities, from the Orpheum. Recitation, Mr. Brandon Tynan. Valencia Stock Co., presenting the third act of A Texas Steer. Ten Minutes with the Burton Holmes Travelogue, subject Berlin, delivered by Mr. Wright Kramer. The Lady of Shalott, poem by Alfred Tennyson, read by Miss Alice Colman; musical setting played by Mr. Albert I. Elkus, the composer. Viola solo, Mr. Jacob Altschuler, of the Russian Symphony Orchestra. Barytone selections, Arthur Cunningham. The Princess Theatre presents excerpts from the second act of A Chinese Honeymoon. The stage was under the direction of Edward P. Temple, of the Princess Theatre, assisted by Francis Powell, Van Ness Theatre; Fred J. Butler, Alcazar; George Foster Platt, Valencia; Harry Orndorff, Orpheum; Bobby Harris, American. The press work for the Associated Theatrical Managers was handled by Philip Hastings.

The Central Theatre is having trouble with the stage hands' union. The house has been using four musicians and two stage hands. The union demands four stage hands. Manager Howell refused to accede, so on Monday the Union started to boycott the theatre.

The Shuberts have taken over from Russell & Drew of Seattle their new Alhambra Theatre of that city, paying a handsome bonus for the privilege.

Van Ness Theatre

Mme. Nazimova will conclude her engagement here tonight. This second week has been a particularly good one in point of receipts, and it has given the Russian actress an opportunity to assert her comedy pre-eminence. This is shown in her work in Comtesse Coquette, a rather poor and decidedly broad French translation, which, however, what it lacks in construction offers the actress abundant abilities in her best line. And, moreover, the people have relegated the plays to a second consideration, for the Nazimova triumph is entirely a personal affair. In Hedda Gabler, the other play presented, the actress showed most of the qualities so vividly brought out in A Doll's House, her Hedda being probably something more consistent and convincing than her Nora. This engagement has firmly established Mme. Nazimova in the good graces of our theatregoers, and she may now be reckoned an old friend who will always be welcome.

Valencia Theatre

There's a sarcastic humor in the Hoyt brand of comedy which, while it digs under the surface and makes you think seriously as you laugh, yet leaves no sting or lasting hurt. Other dramatists have attempted to attain the same effects through their work with but indifferent results, and Chas. Hoyt's comedies remain peers and alone in their particular class. All of this by way of preface to the statement that A Texas Steer is well worth while from both the laughing and the thinking standpoint. Moreover, the Valencia players are giving a mighty satisfying performance of the old satire on the political and personal honesty of our national statesmen (with a capital S). There are "Brassy Galls" and "Major Yells" in modern politics today as there were in the earlier times of which the play tells and the forcefulness of the humor makes it ever apropos. As Maverick Brander, Paul McAllister is happier after his transfiguration into a denizen of Washington than during his first two acts. The "roughness" in its unpolished state is hardly as convincing as the bluff and hearty character of Brander demands. However, as a finished whole, Mr. McAllister is quite satisfactory and merits much praise for the delineation of a character it would appear somewhat out of his line. George Osbourne, Robert Homans and Wm. Wolbert as the trio of Texan investigators, are quite the real thing, Mr. Osbourne being particularly effective in his assumption of the southern courtesy and importance, even under the supposed effect of copious libations. Charles Dow Clark adds another to his list of worthy achievements by his conception of Fishback, negro politician and seeker after the office of Minister to Dahomey. Gerald Harcourt is a comely Capt. Farleigh. The women of the cast all do themselves proud. Florence Oakley, as the vivacious "Bossy" Brander, is well nigh ideal. Her part runs the gamut from pathos to boisterous comedy, and the little auburn haired "Bossy" seems equally at home whether in the khaki and leggings of Texas or the silken "creation" of Washington society. Likewise Lillian Andrews is capital as Mrs. Brander. The attractiveness of Grace Travers is charming in the role of Mrs. Campbell, Bossy's friend, while the "bit" of Edith Lyle is excellently done. Throughout there are evidences everywhere of careful directorship and the staging and mounting are beyond criticism.

Princess Theatre

The second and last week of A Chinese Honeymoon will end Sunday night, after which a brand-new type of musical comedy as far as San Francisco is concerned, will be offered in Piff, Paff, Pouff. The leading part will exactly fit Fred Mace, who has appeared in it in the East, and May Boley, James Stevens, Budd Ross, and the clever company will have congenial parts. Stage Director Temple has put in some extra clever business, and a rattling good show, very much after the nature of The Umpire, may be looked for. Until Sunday A Chinese Honeymoon will continue the attraction, and it is a show well worth seeing.

American Theatre

The second week of minstrelsy and musical comedy has brought about some few changes in the programme. The musical comedy has been brought forward to open the show, and the minstrel first-part now closes the entertainment. The musical show is going much smoother than last week and is proving to be a much more enjoyable feature than was anticipated. The chief interest, however, centers in the minstrels, whose ability is causing all kinds of favorable comment. By all odds it is the best minstrel show we have been blessed with. Two or three changes have been made in the circle. Tell Taylor and his ballad are missing, and Noe La Vigne is heard instead. Mr. La Vigne is one of the big hits of the show and is about the finest singer that we have heard in this city for a long time. He has a splendid ringing baritone of quality and cultivation. Mr. Stromberg sings the finale, California for Mine, in place of Clinton Montgomery and the Brothers Forbes, dancers; Tod Bloom, Emile Subers and John King do some excellent black-face comedy work. Matt Keefe still charms with his warbling, and Al Jolson, "the little boy from the West," who has both the East and the West going, is demonstrating his wonderful ability. Pearl Wilkerson, in statue-like repose, still does the interlocutor act. As great as this performance is, there is evidently a change in the style demanded of modern amusements, for the company will close a week from Sunday night, to be followed probably by Arthur Cunningham in a revival of several popular Irish plays. Nothing definite is to be announced about the Cunningham engagement as yet, however, because the auburn-haired Arthur is doing a little flirting and may be seen at the Garrick.

Alcazar Theatre

The genius of that Scottish wizard of playwrighting—Barrie—was never shown more conclusively than in Quality Street, which is being delightfully offered this week by the Alcazarans. Another author would have marked out the story of the play most ordinarily, but Barrie has woven within its delicate structure a wealth of sentiment and fancy and unexpected moments. And the play has the advantage of a beautiful portrayal of Phoebe by Evelyn Vaughan, which would cheer its creator's soul could he see it. The whimsical, dainty, sentimental humor of the part is caught cleverly by Miss Vaughan, and is most satisfying. Bertram Lytell, too, by a dashing, vigorous depiction of Captain Brown, surprises his friends. This present week sees this fine actor getting more than usually farther away from his natural style, and the result is emphatically cheering. Ernest Glendinning, always a serious, thoughtful young actor, does Ensign Blades most interestingly. Burt Wesner, John Maher and Howard Hickman, as the three determined lovers, were pleasing. Christie McLean puts to her credit the best characterization she has furnished this season in her depiction of the elder sister, Susan. She has endowed the dear old maid part with charming feeling and absolutely natural traits. The youngsters introduced in the second act furnished a charming feature of the performance. The music of the orchestra was as pleasing as ever, and the interior of the Throssell house most artistically conceived. Next week, The Boys of Company B.

Correspondence

SAN DIEGO, May 5.—Garrick (J. M. Dodge, mgr.): May 1, Otis Skinner and company gave an artistic performance of The Honor of the Family to a large and very appreciative audience. Richard Jose and company in Jane played to two good-sized audiences, May 2-3, and pleased. Mr. Jose does not take any part in the play, but sings several old songs between the second and third acts, as only Jose can. James Post and Buty Korus opened the summer season on May 4th in Mr. Murphy in Paris to a packed house. Mr. Post as Murphy proved himself to be a clever comedian, a look at him being sufficient cause for laughter, and he more than lived up to what his advance man said of him. Joe Hayden, as Michael O'Brien, also proved himself to be an A-1 laugh-provoker. Guy Usher as Michael O'Brien, Jr., and May Ashley as Maggy Murphy both did full justice to their respective parts. Myrtle Alzora made a sprightly and vivacious French maid. Millar Bacon, an old favorite here, plays the part of Captain Billows in a first-class way. He sings Coming Around the Horn in his usual inimitable manner. The chorus is composed of young women who are good to look upon and who work hard. The costumes, scenery, etc., are deserving of praise. Next week, The Best Man Wins. Pickwick (Scott A. Palmer, mgr.): A lively comedy, with musical trimmings and spectacular effects, is the attraction at the Pickwick this week. Ida from Idaho is the title of the bill, and the Armstrong Musical Comedy Company is handing out fun fast and furious. Edw. Armstrong as Alkali Ike from Arizona, Barney Williams as Jake, and George Rhen as Jerry, a section boss, are the chief purveyors of the funmaking. Walter Spencer is also responsible for a goodly portion of the funmaking. Ethel Davis as Ida handles her part in a sprightly and vivacious manner, her song, No, No, She Can't, being one of the hits of the performance. Olga Steck handles her part in her usual clever manner. She sings Sweethearts in a pleasing manner. Roscoe Karns, a San Diego boy, made his debut with the company as Jeweler Grouch, and did very well. There are a number of catchy songs interpolated. The chorus is well dressed and sing and dance well. Capacity business. Grand (Walter Fulkerson, mgr.): The headliner at the Grand is the Great and only John L. Sullivan and his sparring partner, Jake Kilrain. The other acts are as follows: Trixeda and Robinson, character change artists, who have a good act; Jack Atkins, tramp comedian, pleases; Joe Marty, comedy juggler, does some new stunts; Clara Dagneau and her dancing boys have a good act that is well dressed. Moving pictures conclude a very good show. Empire (W. W. Bosley, mgr.): The Empire has an unusually good bill this week. The Hyman Sisters are the headliners, and they have a pleasing act. The two Aspiralls, comedy sketch, keep the audience in good humor. Lew Fields and Miss De Lacour please. Moving pictures conclude show. Queen (Swarts & Urban, mgrs.): The bill as presented this week is an unusually attractive this week is unusually attractive. Hetty Erma, England's Pet Boy, character impersonations, was well received. Welch and Earl, the two in white, have a fair sketch; Flora Browning, the girl with the diamond heels, assisted by Kellar, the whistler, have a pleasing act. Gaiety (W. O. Gordon, mgr.): The Gaiety has only a fair show this week. J. B. King, tramp equilibrist; E. F. Allison, musical act; Ola Hayden, soubrette; Alma Erickson, petite dancer.

OAKLAND, May 5.—Alabama, at the Liberty, is given a superb production. Webster and E. L. Ben-nison were excellent and were the exact opposite in appearance and action to the two Northerners, Captain Davenport and his agent, Mr. Armstrong. These two roles were sustained by Landers Stevens and George Friend in their usual satisfactory manner. Elmer Booth, as Decatur, was responsible for some clever character work. The Macdonough will reopen, 8th, with Ferris Hartman in It Happened in Nordland. At the Broadway, melodrama is still in full sway. To Die at Dawn, a four-act play, depicting life amongst the Kentucky Moonshiners, is drawing good houses. Al Hallett as a tramp is the life of the show and is accorded good support by Jack Bennett, Roy Clement and Priscilla Knowles. Georgia Woodthorp also had a role very much to her liking. The Orpheum has a real hit on the programme this week. I refer to Frank Fogarty, who styles himself the Dublin Minstrel. Margaret Moffatt in Awake at the Switch also shared the honors. Paul Sandor's miniature circus; Arcadia Knight Bros. and Martin Sawtelle; The Sandwinas and Fred Ray's Players compose the remainder. Business is normal. Pat Conway's band is making a real hit out at Idora Park, and the park is the scene of a merry throng every night. At the Bell, Brindamour, the handcuff king, is the big smoke. Edwin Barnes executes some fine ragtime, and Geo. Wilson, the minstrel man, displays a good bunch of interesting stunts. Mme. Doherty and Mr. and Mrs. Robbins fill out a good programme.

LOUIS SCHEELINE.

The Orpheum

Two hold-overs numbers, that of Lilian Mortimer & Co., repeating Po' White Trash Jinny, and the Sisters Amatis, provide really the best entertainment on an average bill this week. A pleasing novelty is the dancing of La Valera (Mrs. Horton Forrest Phipps). Mrs. Phipps is a graceful and agile dancer, whose lithesome movements are well suited to the type of Spanish dances presented. Her personality and generous acquaintance has quite as much to do with the enthusiastic greetings she is receiving as has the merit of her work. Gordon and Marx, who are sub-lined as the Weber & Fields of vaudeville, present the same old "lean and fat Dutch" act, enlivened with but few new jokes, and appeal to the audience by means of the well worn kick in the stomach. They sing some parodies on popular songs that are good. The Amatis Sisters continue to turn out classical music on their grand pianos, and Miss Gisela exhibits her altitudinous execution of flute notes during her singing of an Offenbach selection from Tales of Hoffman. A pair of pretty and cuteish young women are The Melnotte Twins, who are assisted in the singing of some trivial nonsense, styled "artistic," by Clay Smith. The trio also offer some well rendered dance steps, and meet hearty approval. An amusing Twenty-first Century playlet is Cupid at Home, well played by Angela Dolores and company. Miss Dolores personates an up to the second "clubby woman who has relegated to the shoulders of her husband all household cares, and who "wears the trousers." The ruse by which the down-trodden male extricates himself from the slough of despond into which her tactics have thrown him, is well executed and amusing. Harry English, as the husband, and Edward Moran, as an officious bell-boy, are well suited to their parts. Hawthorne and Burt, another pair of sidewalk conversationalists, have some new patter and a lot of old. They are neither the best nor the worst of their type. Grigolati's Aerial Ballet, motion pictures and some good orchestra music complete the program.

Fischer's

"Papa" Fischer (E. A.), he of O'Farrell street fame, is back in San Francisco again with a Fischer theatre and brief as his regime has been (he opened the re-modeled Victory, re-christened Fischer's, last Monday night), Herr Fischer has already resumed his wonted place in the hearts and affections of the theatre-going public. It's a mighty good little show that our Teutonic impressario has brought us from his Los Angeles house. Poppyland is the name of it, and by nationality it is musical comedy (comedy, lyrics, music and all being from the facile pen of Charles Alphin, who is serving as producer and musical director with the Fischer forces). The plot of the comedy—but what's the use? Who ever paid any attention to the plot of a musical comedy, anyhow. Still there is a plot which has to do with the misadventures of a broken down gambler, addicted to the opium habit. This character provides Ben T. Dillon, well known and beloved of San Francisco audiences, with a part well suited to his fun-making abilities, and he makes the most of them, too. He handles "dope" slang and sidewalk English to the Queen's taste, at least to the taste of The Queen of Bavaria, about whom he sings a song the chorus of which is lightened up by a pretty tableau effect—the Queen on her throne-couch, surrounded by slaves and assisting in the harmonies of the refrain. Will King makes an excellent foil for Dillon, his Hebrew in search of health pointing both pathos and humor. Dot Raymond as the Jew's daughter, nearly the matrimonial victim of the dope fiend, makes a most pleasing impression and handles a couple of songs with such brilliancy as to display a good soprano voice. Tracy McDermott, the company's leading man, has but meagre opportunities for acting but sings a couple of songs effectively and has an engaging personality, giving the impression that he is capable of much excellent work when opportunity affords. Frank Vack is a volatile and sufficiently verbose Frenchman; Mildred Manning plays a well made up old maid, and Nellie Montgomery, a vivacious, pretty and dashing soubrette, renders a conversational song well and does some dainty dancing. The song hits of the piece are somewhat numerous, probably the most notable being The Girl Worth the While, The Eminent Dr. Pest, Queen of Bavaria and That's The Way to Win a Woman's Heart. Herr Fischer's chorus of ten good looking women and a half dozen youths, are an important feature of the production. Also it may be noted that it is the best dancing chorus that has visited San Francisco for many a long day. In Mr. Alphin, his producer, author, musical director and general factotum, Mr. Fischer apparently has a treasure. A man of undoubtable ability, Mr. Alphin has written the books, lyrics and music for something like fifty musical comedies and is the publisher of over a hundred and a half song successes. Numerous floral offerings and two capacity houses marked the opening of Fischer's Monday night, and the tributes of applause that greeted the players together with the unanimous expressions of approval from the audiences upon leaving the theatre are ample evidence that Herr Fischer is "in good" and should meet with the success his sincere efforts for the proper presentation of worthy offerings entitle him.

Pantages-Empire

Manager Tiffany has an exceptionally strong card on tap this week, headed by Rayfette's Acrobatic Dogs, in one of the cleverest acts of it's kind presented for some time and well merit the generous applause they receive. The Chartres Sisters entertain will some good singing and clever whistling. Harland & Rollison are a couple of clever musicians, especially so on the concertina. Rance Smith has evidently been industriously rummaging in the bone orchard and utilizing the memories of the good old has beens for material used in his black face act. His dancing saves his bacon. Morgan & McGarry and their six dancing girls in a number of neat costume changes contribute a lively and amusing singing and dancing turn. Scott & Wilson with their novel and amusing acrobatic offering prove good laugh producers. Moving pictures conclude the program.

The Wigwam

One of the most pleasing and wholly satisfying programs of the week is to be found at Manager Harris' popular house in the Mission. "I guess you will stand now without hitching," is the remark I overheard a party make. It was not addressed to the pony on the program but to his wife as the curtain fell upon Eva Westcott's tragedy-comedy act, A Butterfly Wife, in which she portrays a lesson on economy that is thrilling in the extreme. Like a highly strung instrument, Miss Westcott responds to each and every emotion her character calls for, from the lightest comedy to the most tragic details and is equally surprising in both. A truly remarkable and clever specimen of animal intelligence is Dan, the talking pony with Carlisle's pantomime company. Mazeroff's Russian Troupe, in their native songs, dances and instrumental offering form an interesting and novel feature of the program. Clever character song and dance work is indulged in by Miller & Miller. Joe Flynn as a monologist is a winner in this week's high class bill. Sensational jumping is a feature of Seymour & Dupree's clever turn, The Jumping Chinaman and the Soubrette. Delmore & Oneida in plastic poses on a balancing pole are well received. The usual high class motion pictures complete the bill. Next week: Mr. and Mrs. Robyns in The George C. Jones, singer at a Sacramento vaudeville theatre, and Bessie Duke were married last Saturday evening between songs. The two were to have been married on May 2d by Judge Hughes, but the judge found it impossible to be in town, so the couple agreed to an earlier wedding. Jones sang his big hit, I'll Be Back in a Minute, but I've Got to Go Now, and hastened away to meet his bride to be. They were married and half an hour afterward Jones was back singing Because I Love You.

J. Bernard Dyllin is playing Visalia this week and will be seen at the Wigwam, this city, next week. Mr. Dyllin has been most successful in the South with his act.

The National

An assemblage of exceptionally clever talent is to be found at the house of Grauman this week. Though not advertised as being the headliner, V. L. Granville in his original sketch, Twixt Daylight and Dawn, is the feature of this week's offering. Mr. Granville handles the dramatic personae of his act, depicting no less than six different and distinct characters in a decidedly artistic and versatile manner. The great rapidity with which the changes of costume and character is accomplished is a feature in itself. The act of May Ward and her Dresden Dolls, aside from scenic equipment, is ordinary, the dancing a little better than the average. It takes more than a display of feminine underpinning to make an act a success. Tom Dugan, The Funny Messenger, has an original way of amusing his audience. He is funny. Morton & Russell are a couple of very clever lightning change artists. The Meeh International Trio make you sit up and take notice with their weight lifting and acrobatic work. Duff & Walsh are a couple of clever dancers, especially so in their team work. Manning & Dixon in a Smash-up in Chinatown have a great bunch of pipe dreams. Their song, The Lobster is the Wise Guy, has made a great hit. It contains more truth than poetry.

The Thalia

Continues to offer a strong card of attractions and this week is exceptionally so. The Four Haydens, tight wire artists, are about as clever as one would wish to see in their line of work. Genera Cheol contributes some clever equilibristic work. Some clever song and dance stunts are handed out by Hearn & Rutter. Georgie White is some coon shouter. Georgie makes good. Amoretta contributes her share of clever singing and dancing. Bonny Conny in song and dance specialties and Eva Roland in her successful Salome dance, with moving pictures and other features complete the bill. Next week: Wentworth, Vesta and their dog Teddy in comedy acrobatics; Seymour & Dupree in sensational jumping and dancing act; Rose Stevens, vocal selections; Georgie White, coon shouter; Margerite Ruse, operatic soprano; Lucille, poses plastique; Eva Roland; motion pictures and other features.

Vaudeville Notes

Jessie Morris, the pretty little blonde now heading May Ward's Dresden Dolls, playing the Sullivan & Considine time, joins one of Joe Hart's musical numbers next season.

Tudor Cameron, the well known acrobatic comedian, is in the city.

The Bell Theatre, Stockton, opens its doors tomorrow night, playing Sullivan & Considine acts.

John W. Considine was in Los Angeles for a few days on business connected with his fast increasing circuit. He returned last Thursday and will leave immediately for the north. After a few days spent looking over his northern holdings he will depart for New York where he is due at an early date, and then for the "big doings."

Saharet, the dancing sensation of two continents, who made her first professional appearance in San Francisco at the old Alcazar under the tutelage of Archie Levy, is at present the leading attraction at the Fulton Theatre, New York. Saharet will be seen in San Francisco in the near future.

Schemanski, the well known capitalist of San Francisco, Jacob Hyman and Henry Hyman, retired merchants, are at present negotiating for the construction of a theatre on Market street. Plans for what promises to be the most magnificent theatre in the country have been submitted for approval and construction may begin any day. The above named gentlemen are all well known in financial circles as business men of decided acumen and tenacity of purpose, with success as their motto. We can look for big things stirring on Market street in the near future.

Aside from being an accomplished portrayer of tragic roles, Eva Westcott, at present appearing at the Wigwam Theatre in her tragi-comedy act, A Butterfly Wife, is well known in comic opera, having played the principal soubrette role in The Prince of Pilsen in the original production in both New York and London.

V. L. Granville, appearing this week in his protean act, Twixt Daylight and Dawn, is well known on the continent, having played all the principal juvenile roles for a number of seasons for Ben Greet, Forbes Robertson, Beerborhm Tree and other well known celebrities of the drama. Mr. Granville is making his first appearance in America and has canceled his dates in London to remain with us indefinitely.

Carlyn Forrest, a chorus girl with the Kolb and Dill company, began suit for divorce last week from Ralph D. Forrest, a vaudeville performer. They were married in Oakland, December, 1906, and Mrs. Forrest charges her husband deserted her in January, 1908.

I hustled up that hustler, Sid Grauman, the other day and asked him how it was he was making a success of the Globe (now the Star) at present, and was unable to do so when it was first opened up. "Why? Because I didn't take into consideration the car strike. People after working all day and walking to and from their work are not much inclined to take another walk to go to a show. Isn't that logic? Doesn't the present opening attendance prove what I contend? I'll venture to say that anything (by that I mean a stock company or anything theatrically outside of vaudeville) but it would have to be good, would go in that house now. It is one of the roomiest, handsomest and best equipped houses in the West, and there is population enough in that district to warrant giving the best money can secure, and if the house isn't a paying proposition from now on I miss my guess." Sid Grauman is the manager in chief of the house, and with the shadow, success, which is ever dogging his heels, it is safe to say that he is about right.

Frank Fogarty is the best monologist that the Orpheum Theatre has presented and as a connoisseur of San Francisco hospitality he heads the list. He has been the guest of the Bohemian Club, the Elks, the Press Club, Knights of Columbus. The Pan Club has had him on a jaunt to Fairfax, where a breakfast was served. Postmaster Fisk has had him as a dinner guest. William Gallagher, president of the Pan Club, has entertained him

BERNARD OLCOVICH, father-in-law of J. Harry Pieper, manager of the Walker Theatre in Los Angeles, died last week in that city.

STELLA ADAMS left Wednesday for Los Angeles to assume the position of leading woman with the Unique Theatre stock in that city.

WHEN WILLARD MACK, the Salt Lake actor-manager, was forced to retire recently on account of illness, Thomas N. Heffron got up in the part of Syngali in two hours' notice after the first performance, and followed that stunt by playing the lead in Christopher Jr. after another two hours' hard study.

BESIDES ALL the prominent sopranos, tenors, contraltos, barytones and basses of this season, the management of the Metropolitan Opera Company of New York announce that it has engaged Alice Nielsen, formerly well known in comic opera and grand opera, who was last heard with the San Carlos Opera Company. Miss Nielsen, while she will be heard in New York, is expected to sing more often in the Boston Opera House. This also will be the case with Miss Frances Alda.

ADA LEWIS, the most unique of all our comedienues, is in town spending the summer. She will go East in August and look over several propositions looking toward the continuation of her future as a star. In the meantime, Miss Lewis, who is the delight of all her friends because of a most beautiful and unselfish nature, has taken unto herself a family, having adopted a little niece and a larger nephew, who have been lately bereft of both parents.

HOWARD NUGENT has been specially engaged to play one of the chief parts, Gen. Kendrick, in Northern Lights, with the Lawrence Company in Sacramento, next week.

WALTER DE LEON, is about to become a benedick. The news comes from the Hartman comic opera company, of which aggregation he is stage director as well as juvenile comedian. Miss Manie Davies, a sister-in-law of Ferris Hartman, is the bride to be, and the consent of her mother was required before the bans were pronounced. Miss Davies is not yet 18 years old. She was here at the Princess and was with the Hartman forces at Idora Park, where de Leon met her. The wedding ceremony will be solemnized at the Hartman home in Berkeley on the night of May 9, after the company concludes its engagement at the Macdonough theatre in Oakland. Mr. and Mrs. de Leon will remain with the Hartman company.

AN ATTEMPT to rob the apartments of Paul McAllister, leading man of the Valencia Stock, living at the Fairmont, was frustrated late last Saturday night largely by the blundering methods employed by the thieves. Mr. McAllister's apartments front on the arcade just off the Powell Street end of the hotel. A plank drawn from the yet incomplete University Club building, opposite the hotel, was used as a means of ascending to the apartment. Finding the window closed and locked, the would-be burglars attempted to smash the windows. Their efforts were clumsy, and the sound of broken glass awakened many of the guests. A telephone call for the house detective aroused the office force of the hotel. Before the officers had reached the scene, however, the thieves had slid down the plank and escaped.

New Yorkers See and Admire a Number of New Plays

NEW YORK, May 1.—Olga Nethersole appeared at the Savoy Theatre last Monday in a play called The Writing on the Wall. According to her curtain speech after the third act, it is the first American play she has produced. The author is William J. Hurlbut, whose first play was The Fighting Hope. He also was called before the curtain, but declined to express his thanks, so Miss Nethersole did it for him. At the same time she expressed her gratitude and delight at the applause the audience had bestowed upon the play. Miss Nethersole's acting will interest you beyond a doubt. She is the wife in the case and she brings her art and experience into play in the portrayal of the woman and mother, for her scenes with the child are very pretty. She earned and received a lot of applause on her return to the New York stage. The support was earnest and good. William Morris was the husband, and he was capital save when he was melodramatic, while the part of the lawyer was excellently acted by Robert T. Haines. Frank Craven was admirable as a conscienceless secretary to the husband, and Florence Huntingdon and Ben Johnson were amusing as an engaged couple who had few thoughts save clothes and money. The Writing on the Wall preaches a sermon and points a moral or two. * * * The Climax, an original and charming little play that recently began its New York career as a matinee attraction at Weber's Theatre four days in the week, is now the regular bill at Daly's Theatre. The public took so kindly to Edward Locke's work from the first that Joe Weber, who produced the play, began looking for a theatre where it could be given at all performances. None was available until last week, and then singularly enough one was found right next door, the withdrawal of The Gay Life leaving the stage of Daly's vacant. Mr. Locke put only four characters in The Climax, but they are all living, moving human beings placed in very interesting relations, and each one was admirably acted. Albert Bruning as the old Italian music teacher, Effingham Pinto as his son, charming Leona Watson as the pupil and William Lewers as the doctor who loves her, are a quartet that would be hard to improve upon. The incidental music, with Joseph C. Breil, was again a feature that was enjoyed. Applause and curtain calls were generously bestowed at Daly's.

* * * Senator West, a play dealing with American politics, by Henry Beach Needham, will be produced early next autumn by Klaw & Erlanger, who closed contracts for it last week. The author is a magazine writer who has lived in Washington for several years. He is an intimate friend of Frank H. Hitchcock, Postmaster-General, and traveled through the West with him last year, when he was chairman of the Republican National Committee. * * * After playing for many weeks at the Knickerbocker Theatre in George Ade's latest musical comedy, The Fair Co-Ed, Elsie Janis and her company moved last week to the Criterion Theatre to continue the New York run. She was greeted by a large audience, which seemed to enjoy the star, her imitations and the work of her supporting company just as much as did those who saw the play while it was at the Knickerbocker. One of the pleasant features of Monday evening was the presence of several army and navy officers who made up a theatre party. Some of the boxes were occupied by members of General Leonard Wood's staff from Governor's Island, while others were taken by a delegation of naval officers, including Captain Thomas B. Howard, Lieutenant-Commander John F. Hubbard of the Ohio, Lieutenant-Commander Herbert G. Gates and Captain Franklin S. Wiltse, all of the Ohio. * * * In the Columbia Theatre in Washington last week, The Whirlpool, a play by Maximilian Foster, was produced by Messrs. Wagenhals & Kemper. This was its first metropolitan presentation and it was attended by a large audience, in which resident and official society was well represented. The story is one of settlement work. Hilda Lingard (Katherine Grey), a sales girl, meets David Pell (Charles Waldron), a rich man's son who is studying for the ministry. Hilda repulses a manager in the department store and is discharged. A shop girl associate plots to compromise her in Pell's eyes, but Pell finds he loves her. The play was received with interest. * * * Having been unable to get a London theatre in which to present William Collier in The Patriot, Charles Frohman has arranged for the comedian's return to the Garrick Theatre on May 10th, where he will revive The Man from Mexico. * * * Buffalo Bill's Wild West and Pawnee Bill's Far East show began last week its season of three weeks in Madison Square Garden. Three rehearsals were held in the two days the show had been in the Garden before it opened, and both Colonel Cody and Major Lillie were pleased with the rough performances. Johnny Baker, the arenic director of the combined shows, superintended the setting up of the immense pieces of scenery, and now the rear end of the Garden looks like a scene in the desert. There is a cliff scene twenty-five feet from the ground and the horses have been trained to walk to the top of it.

Rob Roy.

Lambs Soon to Tour

The All-Star Gambol of the Lambs, which will begin in New York City on May 24 and end in Chicago five days later, will bring together in one entertainment a lot of well-known players, dramatists and composers. The Lambs, with a much less pretentious bill, gambolled over the country for a week eleven years ago, and picked up something like $67,000. It is expected that the coming gambol will yield $100,000, which will go toward paying for a site for a new clubhouse. The Lambs entertainment will include a negro minstrel show, clog dances and other specialties and scenes from well-known plays. Gus Thomas, the chepherd of the Lambs, will be the chief interlocutor in the minstrel show. His company will include these comedians: Willie Collier, De Wolf Hopper, Lew Fields, Joe Weber, Dave Montgomery, Eddie Foy, John Slavin, Andrew Mack, Digby Bell, Maclyn Arbuckle, Henry E. Dixey, Charles Evans, Nat M. Wills, Charles Hopper, Ignacio Martinetti, William Burriss, Clayton White and Raymond Hitchcock. The singers in the company will include Eugene Cowles, Frank Belcher of Oakland, Joseph Miron, George Hamlin, Donald Brian, Walter Lawrence, Neil McKay, John McClosky, George L. Moore, William Stewart, John Park, Melville Stewart and Scott Welsh. Other actors who will appear in the gambol are Wilton Lackaye, Robert Hilliard, Dustin Farnum, William Farnum, Harry Woodruff, Edward Abeles, John Mason, James O'Neil, Joseph Grismer, William Norris, Joseph Herbert, Cyril Scott, William Courtleigh, John Kellard, Arthur Byron, William Muldoon, Hassard Short, Thomas W. Ross and Charles J. Ross. Some of the others who will participate in the gambol are David Belasco; Charles Klein, who wrote The Lion and the Mouse and The Third Degree; William Gillette, author of Sherlock Holmes; Edward Milton Royle, author of The Squaw Man; Clay M. Greene; Eugene W. Presbrey, who wrote Raffles and The Right of Way; Henry Blossom, who wrote the books of Mlle. Modiste and The Red Mill; George Broadhurst, author of The Man of the Hour, and George V. Hobart. The Lambs will travel in a special train and will be accompanied by Victor Herbert with a band of fifty pieces. The entertainment in New York City on the 24th will be in the Metropolitan Opera House. The Lambs will gambol then to Hartford, Conn., showing there on the afternoon of the 25th. The itinerary after that includes a performance in Boston on the night of the 25th, in the Academy of Music, Brooklyn, on the afternoon of the 26th, and in Philadelphia in the evening; a matinee in Washington on the 27th and a night performance in Baltimore, a matinee in Cleveland on the 28th and an appearance in Pittsburg at night. On the 29th the Lambs will give two performances in Chicago. In each city there will be a street parade led by Victor Herbert and his band.

The Annual Meeting of Actors' Fund

The Actors' Fund of America, twenty-eighth annual meeting, will take place Tuesday, May 11, at 2 p. m., at the Gaiety Theatre, Broadway and Forty-sixth Street, New York. Election of officers for the ensuing year will take place. Reports of the president, secretary and treasurer will be read and a general resume of business for the past year will be presented at the meeting. All those who are connected with the theatrical profession, either in a business or artistic way, are cordially invited to grace the occasion by their presence. Thomas McGrath will have charge of the arrangements at the theatre and all will be made comfortable. He will have a corps of assistants to attend to the list of members and the books of the fund; Mr. Young will receive the dues of members who may wish to pay. The lower floor will be reserved exclusively for members; those who are not members will be seated in the balcony. No tickets are to be issued, but all who are interested in the work of the Actors' Fund are earnestly requested to attend. It is the hope of the officers of the fund and the largest gathering of professional people ever assembled at any theatre in New York, so that all may hear of the work of this greatest and grandest and broadest of charities, the Actors' Fund of America. The offices of the fund will be closed on that day (Tuesday, May 11th) from 1 p. m. to 3 p. m., after which hour the rooms will be open until 6 p. m. for inspection by all who wish to visit them.

WATSONVILLE, April 29.—The Raymond Teal Musical Comedy Company opened a two nights' engagement, Tuesday, 27th, presenting The Girl from Bagdad, to good business, and last night The Man Behind. This is the classiest little musical comedy company that has ever appeared in this city and were deserving of a great deal better business than they received. They have bright new costumes and a clever bunch of chorus girls. Raymond Teal is the cleverest monologist that has ever appeared here, and his Bull Durham captured the house. They open the Empire Theatre at San Jose on Sunday, May 2d, and the people of that city can look forward to a real treat. The La Petite Theatre continues to good business with pictures, songs and vaudeville. Mayo and Rowe, comedy sketch artists, are the headliners this week. The Opera House is playing to good business with pictures, songs and the Millers this week.
F. J. BURDICK.

JACK AMORY and Charles Clery, who have been members of the Jessie Shirley company in Spokane for several years past, will join James Neill in St. Paul in three weeks.

JEFFERSON DE ANGELIS, the leading comedian with The Beauty Spot, was the first American to organize a theatrical company to tour the Far East. He has agreed to write a volume of reminiscences of his trip through China and India for a well-known publishing firm.

Sedley Brown Goes to Minneapolis

Sedley Brown, after a good rest, once more restored to health and as they say in fistic parlance, "back again with natural weight and strong," is in the game again. He finished last week with Dick Ferris in The Lightning Conductor at the Majestic Theatre in Los Angeles, and has signed to go to Minneapolis with the curly auburn haired manager, to direct, opening in Decoration Day. Mrs. Brown (Carrie Clarke Warde) will also go to play characters. The Great Ruby is to be the starter and among the plays to follow will be A Navajo's Love.

Oliver Eckhardt and Noel Travers are organizing a show in Seattle, to open in Vancouver, Wash. next week. From there they will play over the Short Line into Colorado.

Lieblers Cast Their Fortunes with the Shuberts

NEW YORK, May 1.—Renewed interest in the theatre managers' fight came today with the announcement that Liebler & Co. would next season book 26 plays with the Shuberts. This was a surprise in theatrical circles, following the news of the Belasco-Fiske make up with the syndicate. The defection of the Lieblers, although a surprise to the Rialto, was not entirely unexpected by theatre managers on the inside. Among the best productions of the Lieblers for this season are The Man From Home, by Booth Tarkington, which has been playing here to crowded houses for nine months, and The Dawn of Tomorrow, in which Eleanor Robson has made a great success at Daniel Frohman's Lyceum theatre. Regarding the agreement which Belasco and Fiske reached with Klaw & Erlanger, Lee Shubert had this to say: "Whatever Belasco, Fiske and Klaw & Erlanger may do does not affect me, as the matter is absolutely indifferent to us. The Shuberts are strong enough to go it alone without any assistance from any one and we certainly are going to do it. This move on the part of the syndicate could not have found us better prepared. With our New York theatres and the ones we control throughout the country we will be able to book our own attractions without the least difficulty. Our main strength, however, lies in the large number of attractions and stars we control. These are the key to the situation and the managers of the one night stand theatres throughout the country use our attractions or close their theatres. I admit that the move was a complete surprise to me, but I repeat that it will not have the least effect on any of our plays."

MME. LILLIAN NORDICA, the news of whose engagement to George W. Young came as a pleasant surprise to friends of both last week while she was absent on a short concert tour, returned to New York from Canada. She received scores of cablegrams, telegrams and other messages of felicitation while on tour and many more awaited her on her arrival at the Plaza. She will be busy answering them for several days. Many came from friends in Europe. The prima donna said that no date has been set for her wedding. She has arranged to leave for Europe on May 4 on the Kaiser Wilhelm II. Mme. Nordica said: "I shall sing next season at the Metropolitan Opera House and several times with the company in the new Boston Opera House. My reasons for going abroad early next month are twofold, first to enjoy a rest after the longest concert tour of this country, Canada and Mexico that I have ever made, and secondly, to get some new costumes for use next season in the Metropolitan in the numerous roles I will sing. I do not expect to do much touring, but shall pass the time principally in London, Paris and Berlin. Just when I shall return has not been decided, but of course my homecoming will be in ample time for the opening of the opera season."

Fischer's Theatre

That the public are given to favoring well-known producers is shown in the case of Manager Fischer, who undoubtedly possesses their confidence to a marked degree, for nightly the new playhouse on Sutter Street has been filled, principally by former patrons who remember with pleasure the many rare tid-bits he proffered in the past. Poppyland has been a successful introduction and will be followed tomorrow night by the second of Mr. Alphin's successes, The Advance Agent. While the theme is of necessity on the line of burlesque, there is a strong dramatic story interwoven through the action that is interesting. There is the country Rube who is the victim of "green goods" sharpers; the East Side New York "hick," with his mixed patois; the country kids and villagers; the city heiress and burlesque queen. This conglomerate mixture of characters is the foundation for numerous highly laughable situations. Mr. Dillon will be seen as the Reuben, Messrs. King and Montgomery have congenial roles as the country kids, Tracy McDermott will be the slangy East Sider, while Miss Raymond and Miss Manning will fill the roles of the heiress and burlesque queen respectively. There will be no less than ten interpolated musical numbers, several of which are particularly catchy and tuneful. In addition to the evening performances there are matinees on Wednesday, Saturday and Sunday.

The Story of the Syndicate

By MARC KLAU

In the light of new complications in theatrical booking and the possible clash of K. & E. with the Shuberts, the following personal recital of the Syndicate formation by Mr. Klaw is interesting.

MARC KLAU

Shortly before Sir Henry Irving's last trip to America, Mr. Bram Stoker, his business manager, came to New York from London on a fast liner to arrange the American tour. Mr. Stoker arrived in New York on Saturday, came to the offices of Klaw & Erlanger that afternoon, and returned to England on the following Wednesday's steamer, bearing with him contracts signed and sealed for a thirty weeks' tour on this side. To the Englishman, accustomed to his deliberate system of booking a tour in the provinces, the rapidity with which this tour was arranged, together with all the details of the contracts, was almost incomprehensible.

The following May I happened to be crossing the stage of the Drury Lane Theatre in London with Mr. Arthur Collins, the manager of the house, while Sir Henry was conducting a rehearsal of The Merchant of Venice, with Miss Wynne Matthison as Portia. Sir Henry stopped the rehearsal long enough to permit me to pay my respects to him. Referring to the so-called American Theatrical Syndicate he said:

"What a wonderful plant you must have to have enabled Stoker to arrange the tour so quickly."

I laughingly told Sir Henry that our plant consisted largely of lead-pencils and rubber erasers, and that Mr. Erlanger and I very often referred to the institution as the "Rubber Trust."

The great booking agency, commonly known as the Theatrical Syndicate, was the inevitable outgrowth of the chaotic conditions which existed in the theatrical world before its formation and which made the operation of a theatre or an attraction the most precarious and hazardous of commercial enterprises. Less than a score of years ago an overwhelming percentage of the business of the theatre was conducted on the sidewalk, in hotel offices, cafes and, I regret to say, places of even less respectability. The manager who had a star, a play or an opera which he wanted to present to the public wandered over the sunbaked streets of New York in the dog-days of June, July and August in the hope of meeting some of the managers of theatres in order to book dates for the following season. The business was done with a small book and pencil, and with about as much dignity and system as a bookmaker registers a bet on a horse-race on Suburban Day. On the other hand, the out-of-town manager, lessee or owner of a theatre came to New York in the hope of meeting some one who had an attraction so that the time of his theatre in the small town where he lived might be properly filled. It was the era of curbstome management, and, like the curb stock market, was decidedly speculative.

In order that the reader may have an intelligent understanding of the technical details that follow, it may be well to explain that, in theatrical terminology, the lessee or operator of a theatre is called the "local" or "theatre" manager, while the man who has a traveling company is known as the "combination" or "producing" manager. The theatre, then as now, was an expensive establishment, and if a local manager from Detroit or Cleveland or Louisville found four or five out of a possible thirty weeks' season unfilled when he went back home in September, he realized that the loss entailed by this open time would come very near eating up his whole season's profits.

At that time there were a few booking agents, but the booking agent represented a few theatres and was unable to fill any appreciable time of a traveling company's season. In New York, the manager was an autocrat who dictated unbelievable terms to the traveling company. Few except the New York manager made a penny out of a New York engagement. Usually the New York autocrat took five hundred or a thousand dollars out of the gross receipts before any division was declared with the traveling company, even though the traveling company's expenses were as large as the theatre's. The local managers and the producing managers were at the mercy of each other. Many a local manager found when he got back home that the traveling manager with whom he had booked in good faith was holding the same time in one or more other theatres so that he could pit one against the other to get the best terms. To offset this, an unscrupulous local manager, who found when he got home that he could book a better attraction than the one already booked, deliberately canceled the first engagement. This caused the traveling company much trouble and expense in rearranging its tour.

Out of this chaos of conflicting interests sprang a desire for a larger booking agency which could offer consecutive seasons to both traveling and local managers.

Early in 1896 Mr. Al Hayman, who owned the Empire Theatre in New York; Mr. Charles Frohman, who leased and operated that theatre and who also conducted a booking agency which included in its representation a chain of Western theatres whose time was controlled by Mr. Hayman; Mr. Erlanger and I, who, at that time, were booking attractions for practically the entire South, and Messrs. Nixon & Zimmerman of Philadelphia, who were operating some of the best houses in that city, met by chance at a luncheon at the Holland House in New York. The three years following the panic of 1893 had brought about a great depression in the theatrical business as in other commercial enterprises, and at this luncheon we discussed the theatrical demoralization, the looseness with which contracts were entered into and violated, the big losses resulting from small traveling companies being pitted against each other in small towns which could only support one first-class attraction, and the useless traveling expenses which were piled up by sudden shifts and rearrangements of tours.

We decided, then and there, that the betterment of the whole theatrical business would be achieved if the bookings of all the theatres could be centered in one office. Within a few weeks we had organized those theatres which we ourselves were representing into one chain; had arranged that all the open time of these theatres should be on file in our offices, that they should be booked in connection with each other, and that the managers of traveling companies could apply there for time. It was understood from the start that, when time and terms had been agreed upon, the respective contracts should be submitted to the local managers for their approval and signature. This was the beginning of that great bugaboo, the so-called Theatrical Trust, as foreign to the popular idea of a trust as anything could possibly be. If during the past twelve years, this booking agency, so widely heralded as The Octopus, has become more and more powerful, it is only because it has rendered great service to its clients who have given it that power and who can take that power away any time they choose.

That memorable meeting at the Holland House marked an epoch in the history of the American theatre. Within a year a complete revolution had been effected in the methods of transacting theatrical business. Management became a dignified calling and was removed from the curb and the cafe. In compelling the fulfillment of contracts actors, authors and mechanics of all kinds connected with the theatre were assured of steady employment and honest returns.

The machinery which made possible the arranging of Sir Henry Irving's tour, as related at the beginning of this article, was at the command and within the reach of the smallest manager in a remote Texas town. In fact, that far-away manager does not have to come to New York, because his open time is on file in our office and we are able to know, by keeping in touch with him, what attractions are most desired for his section of the country. By "open time" I mean a memorandum of such weeks of the theatrical season for which he has not made engagements for attractions.

On the other hand, the traveling manager living in a remote part of the United States can come to New York and, within forty-eight hours, go back home with contracts signed for a whole season's tour safely stowed away in his pocket. Better still, he can stay at home and within a week have done all this by correspondence with us.

All this is done by the following very simple process:

In large books, properly printed and indexed for the purpose, we keep a record of all the theatres we own, operate or represent in the order of the cities in which they are located, and, consequently, "played." For example, Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington would be found on consecutive pages because they follow each other in the natural progress of a traveling company. Then there are other books arranged in the same way for cities of smaller size, which are played to fill in the time between the big cities, as it is not always convenient to go, for example, direct from Philadelphia to Pittsburg. This minimizes the cost of railroad fares, which, in view of the growing size of companies and the high rates under Interstate Commerce regulations, is a very important item of expense.

Let us assume, for the purpose of a concrete illustration, that Manager John Jones of Oshkosh comes into our offices to have a certain number of weeks booked at his house. We simply ask him when he wants to begin his season. If he says September 1, we say to him: "All right, your time will be filled."

We know from our books just what companies will be going West, and since we make the time ourselves we know just when to put these companies into Mr. Jones' house. It is important not to put too many companies playing the same kind of plays in the same territory at the same time. You must follow comedy with serious plays and then bring in a musical piece.

Since the theatrical business is so precarious, it follows that companies fail, new attractions spring up, theatres sometimes close, and there must inevitably be changes in a program set so far ahead. The result is that we are constantly shifting attractions around. Every Monday morning we go over our books to see what time is open. We might find that Charleston, Savannah and adjacent cities will need attractions for a few weeks, several months hence. We find from our booking that there have been few musical shows down there; so we book them in. If the star or leading woman in a company falls suddenly sick, and the time must be canceled, it takes swift movement to substitute a good piece in a hurry.

When a traveling manager comes in to have a tour booked the plan is also simple. We ask him when he wants to begin and in what section he wants to travel. If he should select the West we book his tour, first selecting the large cities, but not in consecutive order. Then we fill in the weeks between these cities with one-night stands in the smaller towns, always keeping in mind that there must be no conflict with similar attractions in the same territory at the same time.

In a word, the syndicate managers move theatrical companies like pawns, with the country as a chess board.

Presiding faithfully and relentlessly over these books at all times is my partner, Mr. A. L. Erlanger, who combines with a natural head for mathematics the most marvelous memory I ever knew. Many times at luncheon with his other associates and myself, when some question was asked about an attraction that was going on the road, I have heard him tell the exact whereabouts of fifty or sixty companies scattered all over the United States, and, I believe, he could do this for a whole year ahead.

Here is an example of the way his memory works: Shortly after the opening of Miss Mabel Taliaferro's New York season in Polly of the Circus, her husband, Mr. Frederic Thompson, joined us at luncheon one day. It was his opinion that Miss Taliaferro would have to go on tour shortly after Washington's Birthday. Mr. Erlanger, without a moment's hesitation, and between soup and fish, writing with a lead pencil on the back of the menu card, gave him a tour beginning with the week of February 22 and ending some time in May. When we got back to the office and looked into the time book we found that, in every instance, Mr. Erlanger was correct in the dates he had selected, and, in every instance but two, he had properly quoted the opposition attractions in every house of the cities in which Miss Taliaferro would play.

A conspicuous example of the advantages of our organization in a crisis was evidenced during the last yellow fever epidemic in New Orleans, when many companies scattered throughout various parts of the South were all making New Orleans and Texas their objective points. We quickly rearranged the time of these companies, sending them East and West. Then we made up a company of the actors and actresses quarantined in New Orleans, transforming them temporarily into a big stock company, and kept them there for weeks, thus enabling them to make a living and at the same time lightening the gloom of the stricken city. For this we received the grateful thanks of the most prominent citizens of the community. Without our organization in such a crisis hundreds of actors would have been thrown out of employment and many places would have been deprived of theatrical amusement.

After the great earthquake at San Francisco and before that, following the floods of the Ohio and Mississippi Valleys, we have given illustrations of the advantages of our system of booking attractions. Previous to the organization, these emergencies and disasters would have entailed incalculable loss to the managers and playhouses and actors. The traditional idea that the disbanded actor walks the railroad ties has been eliminated by the introduction of business methods into theatrical, and we have never had a company that did not retreat in good order if its season was unsuccessful.

In brief, the Syndicate is a clearing-house for the theatre manager and the play producer. It is the medium through which they do business with each other. Confining itself strictly to the matter of bookings, its influence upon stage productions has, of necessity, been neutral, beyond the fact that it has insisted upon reputable plays.

There has been a great deal of discussion this year, especially in New York, about vicious plays. Unfortunately we cannot have a pure food law for the drama that will label every play good or bad (incidentally, I should not want to be the Dr. Wiley of this task), but those performances which are clearly catering to pernicious tastes and instincts and whose advertisements clearly indicate the intent should be frowned upon. ing for the Syndicate, we will not book such plays in the theatres we own, control or represent.

Plays and actors continue to be good or bad, as they always have been and always will be. It is true that some of the members of the Syndicate are play producers, but they are individually responsible for the merits and demerits of their productions, just as other managers are.

The performance in the theatre may be artistic or it may be allied to art, but the business conduct of the theatre is, and must be, commercial. The theatre in the United States is still a private enterprise, without subsidies of any kind, and so long as it is so its business conduct must be carefully guarded and guided as in other commercial enterprises. The erection of a so-called New Theatre in New York may demonstrate advantages of an endowed theatre, but that remains to be seen.

The hue and cry that has been raised about the alleged "commercialization of the drama" is as illogical as it is ridiculous. The theatre to be successful must be conducted on a business basis. Even poets must be fed. So with all artistic enterprises. The greatest magazine, with a purpose so lofty and aesthetic as to be a real inspiration, must have a counting-room and business offices, just as the paintings of a Sargent or a Whistler must, at some time find their sale through the medium of an art dealer who is a business man. There will always be a conflict of opinion between the business and artistic sides of the theatre, just as there must often be between the editorial department and the counting-room of a newspaper.

The other night I picked up a magazine of the forties, and read an arraignment by a well-known writer of the time of the managers of New York and of England because they were giving too many performances of Shakespeare. It was claimed by the critic that penuriousness inspired this, and that they were simply producing the Great Bard's plays because there was no royalty to pay on them. According to this writer, the English stage of that day had become debauched by a lot of purse-proud individuals who had favorites to exploit and who foisted them upon the public irrespective of what the box-office receipts showed. A commercialism which makes the success or failure of a star depend upon public approval or disapproval seems to me to be preferable to the conditions existing then.

An attempt is made now and then to draw a parallel between the theatre and the railroad as a public institution. There is this difference to be remembered: a railroad takes up the public highway, which is yours and mine and everybody's. The theatre, on the other hand, does not take up one inch for which it does not pay—and, in most cases, it pays twice as much as anybody else would pay for the same thing.

The theatre, in my opinion, is not primarily, but incidentally, an educator of the public. It does not exist to dictate to public taste but to satisfy public demand, and by public demand I do not mean the "first-night" theatre-goer. I mean that great home-loving, respectable and intelligent majority which is often alienated from the theatre by distasteful plays.

There has always been a great deal of curiosity and misapprehension about the emoluments coming to us for the service we render as booking agents. It has been insisted for years that we get a percentage of the gross receipts. I wish we did. If such were the case we could make the critics of our so-called "commercialism" green with envy. Our payment has always been based upon profits. Whenever any local manager has come to us (and let it be distinctly understood that we have never solicited business in our lives) to have his house represented or booked by our institution, we have always based our commission on what we could earn for him. In other words, we have usually allowed him to deduct his rent and all other expenses and a good living salary for himself. After that we get a percentage of the remaining profits. In some of the smaller towns we have received as much as 5 per cent of the manager's share, which is vastly different from getting, as some of our critics have maintained, 5 per cent of the gross receipts.

To illustrate: Suppose an Uncle Tom's Cabin company plays an engagement in Geneva, New York. The company exacts 70 per cent of the gross receipts and the home house, or local manager, gets 30. A big house there would be five hundred dollars, of which the traveling company, on the basis just enumerated, would get three hundred and fifty dollars and the local manager one hundred and fifty dollars. Of this we should get the munificent sum of seven dollars and fifty cents, which is 5 per cent of the manager's share. Now, if we got 5 per cent of the gross receipts we would get twenty-five dollars, or 16 $\frac{2}{3}$  per cent of the manager's share, which is vastly different from getting 5 per cent of his share.

The question of terms between a traveling attraction and a local theatre has always been a matter of individual discussion and arrangement, and we never sign a contract for a theatre's season without the approval of the local or theatre manager and without submitting the time and terms to him. This should, once and for all, dispose of the accusation that the Theatrical Syndicate has made janitors out of the local managers. The managers are always the final arbiters and we are content to be the agent and not the principal. We do not care to assume responsibility for the conduct of the hundreds of theatres all over the country, the inside of some of which we have never seen.

It might be interesting, in this connection, to say that the capital involved in the various theatrical interests that we represent is more than sixty million dollars. This includes the values of the various playhouses, their leases or real estate, and the value of plays and productions.

In New York City the usual arrangement between a traveling company and a theatre is 50 per cent for the smaller attractions. This means that the theatre and the attraction share equally, the theatre furnishing its complement of stage hands, light, heat, ushers and orchestra, and the attraction furnishing the play, company and stage entertainment complete. Larger attractions usually have what we call a "sliding scale" of terms—that is, 50 per cent up to a certain amount after which the attraction gets 60 per cent. The scale usually changes after the figure is reached at which the theatre pays its expenses. After that figure the visiting company always gets the larger share. I often wonder when I see (and it is a pleasant sight, too) a long line of ticket-buyers at the box-office window, patiently sending their crisp two-dollar bills over the glass or marble slab, generously paying for goods before they have even seen them, whether they realize just where their money goes and how much of it stays in that box-office. I have always said that the settlement of the box-office at the end of a week reminded me of sifting money through a ladder and giving the manager all that sticks. Let us take the concrete case of a musical comedy play in a first-class Broadway theatre. The company probably has a salary list of thirty-five hundred dollars, and the manager is paying 10 per cent of the gross receipts as royalty for the privilege of presenting that particular piece. If the receipts of the week are ten thousand dollars, which is a fine average, he is paying one thousand dollars royalty, which, added to the salary list, makes forty-five hundred dollars. His other incidental expenditures will usually run his expense account for the week to fifty-three or fifty-four hundred dollars. The theatre, on the other hand, in addition to its regular staff of employees, is probably paying for fifteen or twenty extra union musicians, will find its expenses ranging from thirty-five to thirty-eight hundred dollars. Now add fifty-four hundred dollars, the traveling manager's expenses, to the thirty-eight hundred dollars expenses of the house and you have a total of ninety-two hundred dollars. In other words, you get a total of eight hundred dollars to be divided between the manager of the playhouse and the manager of the traveling attraction, giving each one slightly over 10 per cent on the money he has risked for that particular week. When a play fails as a rule there are no assets. It is a failure generally of one hundred cents on the dollar, because the scenery and property that go to garnish it cannot be sold for much more than junk. There is no doubt but that in this country many an indifferent play has been saved from absolute failure by a favorite star, and many a good one has failed for lack of a star. It is easier to advertise a person than a play under the present press system, which encourages hero-worship and feeds on human interest. So the manager should not be blamed for the starring system which, at times, I must confess, is developed at the expense of good casts and plays.

Los Angeles Is Now Going Musical Comedy Mad

LOS ANGELES, May 13.—We are to have more musical comedy, Manager Morosco's Burbank Company opens next week with The Circus Girl. It looks as if the town was going crazy over musical comedy. Kolb & Dill are playing to capacity houses at the Majestic at every performance, and Murray and Mack at the Grand are doing the same thing. It is safe to predict that The Circus Girl will run at least two weeks. The management of the Belasco continues to smile at the series of crowded houses that greet The Dollar Mark. There is no talk of withdrawing the piece as long as the people want it. Next Sunday night will mark the one hundredth consecutive performance of the Broadway play. This is truly a distinction. The Los Angeles Orphanage benefit performance took place at the Belasco Theatre Friday afternoon. It was notable for brevity and promptness, which can very seldom be accredited to benefits, and it also served to introduce to the public Miss Florence Reed, the new leading woman of the Belasco Company. Another newcomer making her first appearance in Los Angeles was Mrs. Mary Reed, Canadian soprano. Others appearing on the program were Adele Farrington, Mrs. Albert Carlos Jones, Fay Bainter, Mrs. Matinee Loeb-Evans, the Women's Orchestra and members of the Murray and Mack Company.

The Ferris Stock Company is to play the summer season at Minneapolis. During the engagement there they will put on several musical comedies. Edna Mason goes with them to help with the singing. Carrie Clark Ward and Sedley Brown will accompany Mr. Ferris east as usual. Thurston Hall is to be the leading man. The Violin Maker of Cremona, with a classical musical program, will be given tonight at the Auditorium under the auspices of the Gamut Club. The cast includes Florence Stone, Hobart Bosworth, Eugene Nowland and George A. Lynch. Lewis S. Stone will enjoy a three months' vacation during the summer. George A. Bovyer has arrived in town from New York to take charge of the Los Angeles Theatre and to look after the local interests of Sullivan and Considine. Mr. Bovyer succeeds Francis Haggerty, who will retire from the theatrical business. C. V. Rorhand, representing W. A. Brady and the Metropolitan Lithographing Company, is in Los Angeles for the purpose of making drawings or the lithographs to be used with the forthcoming production of The Dollar Mark, which will take place at the Savoy Theatre, New York, next September.

BURBANK—Our New Minister is the offering at the Burbank Theatre this week. This is a strictly moral play in which right triumphs and love finds a way. It portrays the events consequent upon the coming of the new minister," Thaddeus Strong, to Hardscrabble, a New England town, and the opposition he met because he befriended Lem Ransom, a returned convict. While the play makes no exacting demands of any of the actors, it furnishes each one with a good part and a very pretty story is told. William Desmond makes a very proper minister and Blanche Hall as the convict's daughter does all that is required of her. Louise Royce is well cast as Dorcas Tattleby, the village gossip. A. Byron Beasley is the ex-convict and Harry Meystayer the village detective. Henry Stockbridge does some good character work as Skeezicks, a New York lad. The balance of the cast is well taken care of by the other members of the company.

BELASCO—The Dollar Mark has entered upon its tenth week and it continues to pack the house at every performance.

GRAND—For their second week at the Grand Murray and Mack are repeating their show of last week, A Night on Broadway. The piece now goes with a rush and the chorus is doing much better work than at the first performances.

MAJESTIC—Kolb and Dill are certainly making a hit in The Politicians. This is the third week of the piece and it is more popular today than it was the first week. However, Manager Oliver Morosco says that the piece will be withdrawn next Saturday night. The next offering of these popular comedians will be Playing the Ponies.

ORPHEUM—The bill for the week at the Orpheum is composed for the most part of sketches. Margaret Moffet plays the part of a telephone operator in a Metropolitan hotel in Awake at the Switch. There are two other men characters and Claude—but none of these compares in importance with the telephone girl's mirror, buffer and bangs. Joseph Graybill and Louis Wood are efficient in the supporting roles. Gordon and Marx, billed as the "Weberfields of Vaudeville," do clever work in their skit called The Unsocialist Party. Mehlinger and King are vocalists and dancers of note. The Sandwinas, athletes, are notable chiefly for the marvelous strength and physique of the woman member of the team. The holdovers include Joly Violetta in eccentric dances, Lew Sully the minstrel man. Adeline Dunlap and Frank McCormack in the sketch The Night of the Wedding, and S. Miller Kent and Company presenting Marriage in a Motor Car.

MASON—The Mason Opera House will remain dark for three weeks and will be thoroughly redecorated. The new fountain, with real, live goldfish, has been promised. All of these interior improvements will be completed when Ethel Barrymore opens in Lady Frederick.

LOS ANGELES—Animal actors provide the novelty act at the Los Angeles Theatre this week. Carlisle's Dogtown Pantomime, and Tom, a trained pony of surprising intelligence, sharing honors. Wartenburg Brothers present an unusual foot juggling act with music which they themselves play on mandolin and guitar. Hetty Urma, a young woman of pleasing personality and decided ability in character roles, offers a musical number, singing English, German and French songs, each in appropriate costumes. Joe Flynn, author of Down Went McGinty, entertains with new songs and a few jokes. Welch and Earl offer solo and duet dancing and singing.

Delmore and Oneida have an acrobatic act.

EMPIRE—John L. Sullivan and Jake Kilrain are at the Empire for another week of monologue and three-round sparring contests. Reed and Arbuckle are past masters at the art of fun making with their round of Irish and German comedy dialogue, while Housley and Russ have a neat bit of comedy well worth seeing. Hearn and Rutter have a series of eccentric dances, and the Grace Sisters singing and dancing soubrettes, share the honors with Bessie Evans. Al Frank's specialties, and the motion pictures supplement the bill.

FISCHER'S—Fischer's eight new Roly Poly girls make their first appearance this week at the First street theatre in The Scarecrow Dance. The work of these girls does credit to the efficient training of Pearl Jardinere. Billy Onslow and Fred Gamble furnish the most of the fun in the burlesque, The Four Tramps. Hugh Metcalf is clever in the part of an easy mark, and Millie Ganett and Lulu Smith make attractive housemaids.

UNIQUE—Stage Struck is the title of the one-act musical comedy at the Unique for the week. Would-be actors who are staying at the country home of Major Dennis Sheridan, decide to give a play. Major says, "No." In the endeavor to circumvent him many funny situations are evolved, interpolated with songs. Will Armstrong is cast as Sheridan and sings Would You Like to Change Your Name from Miss to Mrs.? Jack Martin makes a hit with his song, Hang Out the Front Door Key. Miss Baumann returns to the Unique and Arthur Vane comes as a new member of the company. Both of them have good solo numbers. Miss Parker sings The Philippine Maid, and Miss Atkins has a character role. Miss Earle has some new illustrated songs.

WALKER—There is both excellence and variety to the bill at the Walker Theatre this week. Heading the bill is Clara Dagneau and her dancing boys. Tony Ryder's famous troupe of educated monkeys entertain the grown ups as well as the children. Edytha Taylor is a winsome little soubrette who is a newcomer here. Harry Cornell does some clever work in imitations. Miss Alberta Lane has a pleasing soprano voice which she seems to know how to use. Ernest Allison also has a musical act. Joseph Manley has a new illustrated song and there are new motion pictures.

Warnick Horne is now installed as treasurer of the Orpheum Theatre. Henry Sonnenberg, former treasurer, was in Honolulu for a number of weeks, and is now in the general office of Martin Beck, in Chicago.

FLORENCE EMERY.

Actor Societies May Amalgamate

Amalgamation of the Actors' Fund of America and the Actors' Society of America will be perfected if suggestions made at the annual meeting of the Actors' Fund last Tuesday are carried out. Joseph R. Grismer, who presided, proposed that the two consolidate and erect a large building to house all the theatrical organizations of the city. Thomas A. Wise, president of the Actors' Society, approved the proposal. F. F. Mackay told of the progress of the actors' home, maintained by the Fund, saying that 79 old actors had been received in the eight years of its existence, while 30 are now quartered there.

EDWARD LADA, the fine musician who presides over the Alcazar orchestra, is planning a trip to Honolulu.

NEW YORK, May 6.—The Candy Shop, mounted in the most approved Charles Dillingham manner with billows of lingerie and yards and yards of pretty girls, opened its season at the Knickerbocker last week. The program described it as a summer entertainment. George V. Hobart had written the libretto and John Golden had composed the music. The Candy Shop is a string of songs and variety features interpreted by as many clever performers and conspicuously prominent musical comedy names as the management could bundle together into one cast. William Rock and Maude Fulton, who headed the cast, worked very hard. They changed their costumes at least a dozen times and contributed many new dances which were up to the standard which they had established for themselves before they became headliners in vaudeville. Miss Louise Dresser, looking more than ever like a quintessentially buxom charlotte russe, played a dashing young widow and sang one song all in black and another later on in black and white. Both her costumes were so beautiful that you remembered them half an hour after you had forgotten what either of her songs was about. Her one little chance to do a bit of burlesque acting came in the Coney Island scene, and here she acted so well that you got more annoyed than ever at the authors for not having given her more to do. The one big real moment in The Candy Shop came when Mrs. Annie Yeamans first put her foot on the stage. The roar fairly rose at the fine old artist. And yet they say that New York isn't loyal to its old favorites. It was a good two minutes before Mrs. Yeamans could speak a word. Her role gave her very little opportunity, but she certainly made the most of it, and before the end of the evening she even joined in a little jig with Mr. Rock and Miss Fulton. Frank Lalor, the chief comedian, the only member of the cast who had any material to work on, played so listlessly that he became uninteresting. The Coney Island scene was a remarkable piece of stagecraft, novel, ingenious and very beautiful. No management could have done more for a play's success. A little girl, called Bliss Milford, scored the one real hit last night by her singing of a Sherlock Holmes song with a dark lantern chorus, which was exceedingly pretty. State Manager Latham's stage pictures were charming, and the girls worked like little Trojans.

The World and His Wife came back to New York last week. Mr. William Faversham presented the play, by Mr. Charles Frederic Nordlinger, from the Spanish drama by Jose Echegaray, at the Broadway Theatre. It was a return engagement, the play having been seen earlier in the season at Daly's. It was the first attraction in the Broadway since Mr. Lew Fields became the lessee, on May 1, with the Messrs. Shubert as managers. Mr. Faversham and his company were warmly welcomed in their familiar roles. Miss Julie Opp as his leading woman was beautiful and acted with charm. Mr. H. Cooper Cliffe, Mr. Morton Belten, Mr. Lionel Belmore, Miss Olive Oliver, Mr. Harry Redding and Mr. Berton Churchill were the others in the excellent company.

It's one of those good, honest, stirring shirt-sleeve dramas, is The Great John Ganton. The author is Mr. J. Hartley Manners, who has dramatized Mr. Arthur J. Eddy's novel. The first performance here was given last night in the Lyric Theatre, with Mr. George Fawcett in the title role. Mr. Fawcett, sterling actor, was not only the star, but he was also the speechmaker. They called him out after the third act, and he bespoke his gratitude at appearing in New York again and thanked everybody in sight and some who weren't. After that the play proceeded. The audience seemed to enjoy the play hugely. It was right down on the ground most of the time, the central figure being the head of a big Chicago packing firm. John Ganton rolled an unlighted cigar in his mouth as he revolved big business schemes in his head, and he made money hand over fist. Then his son came home from college with new fangled ideas about life and business and things and fell in love with the daughter of a man whom Ganton hated. Just to mix matters a bit more, the son lost a hundred thousand in the stock market. The father turned him out of doors with a check to pay his debts and the remark slung over his shoulder: "Well, I'll say this for you—you're no piker." But old John Ganton's heart was not so strong as his brain, and when he went under with a weak heart he came to his sentimental senses. He took back his boy, insisted that he marry the girl he loves, and all's well that ends well with the final curtain. There is a lot of human interest about the play, and Mr. Fawcett is responsible for most of it. When he came on with tousled hair, shirt-sleeves and unbuttoned collar, you knew he meant business—and he did. You believed in him. That was the clew. To say that he acted well is just to repeat trite things, but he appeared really to be the Ganton of the stockyards, and he was simply capital. Words of brutality and of wisdom came flying from his lips, and you believed in the sincerity of both, and when his heart melted that was convincing, too. And the support was very good. Mr. A. H. Van Buren was excellent as the son, Will Ganton, and Miss Laurette Taylor, as the girl, made an agreeable impression. Miss Jane Peyton, as the girl's sister; Mr. Frederick Burton, as Ganton's confidential man, and a lot more, did good work, and the play moved smoothly against the background of effective settings. If you're seeking human interest, you'll find it in this play; and in the acting of Mr. Fawcett you will see a remarkable bit of "character" work.

They moved The Blue Mouse from the Lyric Theatre over to Maxine Elliott's little brown and gold playhouse last Monday. The farce comedy, by Mr. Clyde Fitch, from the German of Messrs. Engel and Horst, seemed to go even better in the smaller theatre. Miss Mabel Barrison as the Blue Mouse; Mr. Harry Connor, Miss Lucielle La Verne, Mr. Jameson Lee Finney and the others of the familiar cast appeared and were heartily applauded.

Klaw & Erlanger made a contract yesterday with Max Rogers to star the latter next season in a new play by Aaron Hoffman with music by Max Hoffman, entitled The Young Turk. The idea of the play, it is said, will be founded on the recent troubles in the East, and it will be in the nature of a musical comedy. One scene of the play shows the revolutionists go-

ROB ROY.

PORTLAND, ORE., May 10.—The Heilig has had a seige of darkness for almost two weeks now, and by the time it reopens, next week, it will cover a space of about three weeks since any attraction has played that house. After the opening again of this theatre, it must be admitted that the dramatic outlook is a very interesting one. Madame Nazimova opens her engagement at this house on the 17th in repertoire. Following Nazimova come Ben Greet and his company. In conjunction with the Greet Company, the Russian Symphony Orchestra will appear. Bungalow Theatre (George L. Baker, mgr.; Milton Seaman, business mgr.): The stock season is drawing to a close at this house. The plays they are offering are the very best obtainable, and they have not been a bit slow in producing one high-priced royalty play after another. As a result, the business is big. Last week, When Knighthood Was in Flower did a big business, and this week Merely Mary Ann seems fair to run ahead of the former play. The play was produced in a manner that equaled the well-known production Eleanor Robson made on this Coast. Izzetta Jewel portrayed the slavey and gave a first-class account of herself, just as good as one could expect from a stock leading lady. Sydney Ayers as Lancelot, the composer, is to be congratulated for a fine, even performance. It was one of the best things this gentleman has given to us. To most of us present at yesterday's production, it seemed that Mrs. Mina Gleason came pretty close in stealing the honors away from the leads. She was cast as Mrs. Leadbatter, the proprietress of the lodging-house, a character role, and everyone knows how well that lady fits into parts of that stamp. In yesterday's production she had her first opportunity for several weeks, and, of course, was not slow in taking advantage of them. She did not for a second forget the role that she was impersonating, not even to the dialect of the part. William Dills was also well cast, and the same can be said of Maribel Seymour. Next week, The Little Minister. Baker Theatre (Geo. L. Baker, mgr.; Milton Seamon, business mgr.): This house reopens next Sunday with the Ferris Hartman Opera Company in It Happened in Nordland. The company remains for three weeks. Orpheum Theatre (James H. Erickson, mgr.): The verdict arrived at by the patrons of this theatre the past week was that Manager Erickson presented to vaudeville lovers the very best bill that we have had at his house since he took the management of it. There were virtually three headliners—Marshall P. Wilder, Countess Rossi and Paulo, and Lillian Burkhart and company. The former in his monologue seemed to go best with the audiences. The playlet offered by Miss Burkhart was not a world-beater, but was entertaining enough to satisfy the most of us. The singing of Countess Rossi was also a hit. Flo Adler was also a very bright spot on the bill with her songs. Commencing today the bill is Thomas Ince and company; Caselli's Midget Wonders; Johnson and Wells and company; Coombs and Stone; Wells and Sells; Baader-La Velle Trio, and Dorothy Drew. Lyric Theatre (Keating & Flood, mgrs.): Ten Nights in a Barroom was revived by the stock company yesterday. Herbert Ashton portrayed the role of the drunkard, and he and Charles Connors carried off the honors. Others in the cast who gave a good account of themselves were S. M. Griffith, Ralph Belmont, Lilly Branscomb and Rupert Drum. Grand Theatre (James H. Erickson, mgr.): The headline for this week is Mr. and Mrs. Forbes in playlet, and the balance of the bill includes Grover and Richards; Miller and Tempest; Cal. Stewart; Variety Four, and Harry McDuffee. At Pantages the headline act is Mr. and Mrs. Edward Lucas in Scenes from Dickens. The Sells-Floto Circus is due here the latter part of this month.

TACOMA, Wash., May 9.—Fire which broke out shortly before three o'clock this morning completely destroyed the Star Theatre building and for a while jeopardized the Tacoma theatre situated just across the alley. The fire is believed to have been incendiary. Windows in the Tacoma theatre on the alley side were cracked and the roof scorched. The heaviest loss falls on Henry McRae, manager and lessee of the theatre. He carried no insurance and lost valuable manuscripts which were of even greater loss to him than scenery, costumes and other theatrical effects consumed. Only last night, the scenery and costumes for the production of Janice Meredith which was to have been this week's bill were stored there. The safe contained between three and four hundred dollars. Mr. McRae still holds the lease on the Savoy Theatre and it is probable that he will produce his plays in that house pending other arrangements. The Star Theatre building was a structure erected twenty years ago, and was converted into a theatre and opened as the Olympic in December, 1892, by the R. E. French Co., which included besides Mr. and Mrs. French, such capable stage people as Eleanor Barry, Beatrice Lieb, Sam Morris, Homer Johnstone, Margaret Marshall and many others equally well known. It has been managed at different times by well known managers, including John F. Cordray, E. E. Keel, and Dean B. Worley, local manager for Sullivan and Considine. Already arrangements are under way for big benefit to be tendered the McRae company, which will probably take place on Thursday of this week. The Gingerbread Man, as delectable as ever, came back the 3d and 4th, to the Tacoma, and duplicated his last year's hit. Fred Nice dances better than ever, if possible, and is still the same great favorite. Carrick Major and Ross Snow are still with the company. Rose Murray as Margery Daw is extremely clever. The chorus was well trained and the scenic effects pleasing. On the 5th the Chicago Symphony Orchestra was greeted by an enthusiastic audience. May 21-22, Mme. Nazimova; 24-25, the Ben Greet players. The McRae Players presenting Sag Harbor duplicated the hit they scored a few weeks ago in Shore Acres. A unique act was that of Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Lucas at the Pantages, which they portrayed scenes from Dickens' popular novels, and well deserved the favorable commendation it received. The Four International Comiques were laugh getters. The Town Brothers in an eccentric act, and the Del Costa Duo singing act took well. Al. Luttinger and Company presented a well acted dramatic sketch of Western life. Next week: Les Paches de Paris Company of 17 people; Otto Sheda, novelty musical act; Anita Primrose, lightning change act; May Duryea Company in a play; marvelous Franz, bicycle act. Mlle. Ladje was an enormous hit at the Grand and sharing honors with her as popular Cal Stewart of phonograph fame. Trover and Richards entertained with piano selections and song songs. Fox and Crystal scored a laughable burlesque and the Variety Four sang well. Next week—Harry Le Claire, the Bernhardt of vaudeville; the Elite Four, in a musical act; Zay Holland, violinist; Siebert and Lindley company, in a play. Mabel McKinley will shortly appear at this theatre. A. H.

FRESNO, Cal., May 12.—Barton Theatre (R. G. Barton, mgr.)—It Happened in Nordland, 6, poor performance to fair sized audience. Burns-Johnson Fight Pictures, 8-9, to small houses. Novelty Theatre (A. J. Hotchkiss, Prop. and Mgr.)—Inaugurated Vaudeville on 3d and has been doing good business. Week 10-15, Luna Cooper, prima donna, excellent voice; H. Tyler, Xylophonist, very good; Kelley and Davis, fair entertainers; Little Hip, the baby elephant, pleased and is easily the best drawing card for the show. Empire Theatre (E. Hoen, Prop. and Mgr.) Redmond Stock Company, indefinite.

L. W. WILSON.

TURLOCK, May 8.—S. Terry McKean's Players, headed by Walter Newman and Bertha Foltz, played three nights. Monday was Paid in Full; Tuesday, The Devil; Wednesday, Divorcons. The Players pleased fair sized audiences nightly, and a return engagement of this capable company will insure crowded houses. The King's Court, local talent, for 11 and 15.

A. J. EDDY.

MARYSVILLE, May 9.—May 6, Joseph De Grasse and company appeared in Romeo and Juliet. May 8, The Burgomaster, headed by Harry Hermesen, furnished fun for the evening to a splendid audience. May 14, Otis Skinner in The Honor of the Family, will appear at the Marysville Theatre. N. M. MARCUSE.

OAKLAND, May 13.—Theatricals in general have shown a decided improvement this week. At the Macdonough, Nazimova is playing to capacity houses. Monday night she opened in Ibsen's A Doll House, and scores of people were turned away from the box-office. Nazimova's acting was a revelation, and she can easily take her place as one of the great stars of the present stage. Her support is excellent. Hedda Gabler and Comtesse Coquette will complete her repertoire. Future Macdonough bookings are, Nat Goodwin, 24-29; The Burgomaster, 30-June 1; John Drew, June 15-16; Ethel Barrymore, 21-23. The Prisoner of Zenda is receiving an elaborate production at Ye Liberty, as a result of which business is more than good. Milton Stallard, the director, Chas. Blair, the property man, and Grace Wishaar, the Liberty's clever scenic artist, all show up to great advantage in this production. Of the players, Landers Stevens receives the most plaudits. His work as The King is fine. Helen Holmes is back again with the company, and celebrated her return by giving a clear and intelligent conception of the leading female role, Princess Flavia. Her charming personality takes well with the audience. Tennessee's Pardner will follow. A Hidden Crime is the current attraction at the Broadway, and is drawing fair audiences. Frank Fogarty is still the top-notch at the Orpheum. Grigolates' Aerial Ballet, Lillian Mortimer & Co., Four Amates Sisters, Paul Landor's 'Cirque, Knight Brothers and Sawtelle, fill out the balance of the week's program.

This Frank L. Perley Is Not Married

Editor The San Francisco DRAMATIC REVIEW,

Dear Sir: In your issue under date of May 1, a paragraph appears, referring to the marriage of Frank L. Perley. I understand the gentleman in question is in the employ of Mr. Henry Harris, but who he is, or whether or not this is his right name, I have no knowledge. You may be sure, however, that he is not Frank L. Perley, the theatrical manager, and knowing that you desire to always print the facts, I write to request its correction, as a great many people have spoken or written me about the matter. On the other hand, too, it is not fair for me to be the recipient of congratulations intended for another. Thanking you for your courtesy in the matter, I remain,
Very cordially yours,
FRANK L. PERLEY.

Cort Gets Colonial Theatre

John Cort and the Northwestern Theatrical Association have acquired a 15 years' lease of the Colonial Theatre in this city. The work of remodeling and refurbishing the house, involving an expenditure of about $25,000, will soon be started. It is the intention to add a balcony and fix up the playhouse generally. It will then seat about 1,200 people. Several weeks ago THE DRAMATIC REVIEW announced that Cort had an agent here looking after a theatre to take the bookings formerly played at the American, which has gone over to the Shuberts.

Grand Opera for Princess

San Francisco is to have a grand opera season of six or eight weeks, opening at the Princess on May 31st. Morris Meyerfeld, Jr., president of the Orpheum Circuit Company and a big stockholder in the Princess, is now in New York, en route to Europe. On Tuesday he engaged a company of thirty-eight grand opera singers, some of whose names stand high. They are now waiting for Sam Loverich, general manager of the Princess, to advise them when to come. Until everything is settled, Loverich will not announce the names of his song birds. Meanwhile, Henry Campbell, business manager of the house, is in Los Angeles arranging time for the light opera company in that city and for a week on the way south. As soon as the grand opera season is over, the company now playing the house will return to continue its season indefinitely. "The Princess will keep open all summer," said Mr. Loverich to the editor of THE REVIEW. "The rumor going around that I have given the orchestra and the company their two weeks' notice is absolutely untrue. The company has been eminently satisfactory and will be retained indefinitely. Anybody who thinks differently—and apparently some busy fellow has been circulating the report that we are going to close—can win a large bet from me. I'll just bet him $1,000 to a $5 hat that I have not given the company or the orchestra their notices and that the Princess Theatre will keep open all summer. Let the gentleman who started this rumor come forward."

Personals

LOUIS BENNISON will join the Alcazar to succeed Will R. Walling. He plays his last night in Oakland at Ye Liberty Playhouse tomorrow.

WILL R. WALLING and wife (Effie Bond) promise to retire from the stage next month and go onto their Napa ranch forever more—maybe six months.

WALTER TURNER, who is well known all over the country as one of the best showmen in the business, from the time of the first Hoyt comedies to the present season, as manager of Nat Goodwin's tour, is in town.

PRISCILLA KNOWLES, leading woman of the Broadway stock in Oakland, has captured that city. Her beauty, her personal charm, and her style, have started the Oakland women talking and admiring. Already the milliners, the dressmakers and the tailors are besieging Miss Knowles to exploit their creations. Splendid! for Miss Knowles is charming and a fine actress.

THE dispute between Manager Ernest Howell of the Central Theatre and the Stage Employees Union was called up before the Labor Council Friday night of last week, and as a result the stage hands returned to work on Monday. The dispute will probably be dropped, as Mr. Howell was asked to add two men to his stage crew, for which he had no use whatever.

POLICE JUDGE WELLER last Tuesday dismissed the charge of felony embezzlement against Ira Puerl Wilkerson, impressario of the About Town company at the American Theatre, preferred by Ella Smyth, the prima donna. Attorney Fritz for the prosecution admitted that the complaint did not show facts sufficient to constitute an offense. In fact, the arrest was a great injustice to Mr. Wilkerson and should never have been made. His backers, Ottinger, et al, should be the responsible parties and be made to come through.

which played Jané in Redlands last week, fainted in the lobby of the Casa Loma hotel upon her arrival in that city with the other members of the company. She sat down in one of the chairs near the clerk's desk, while the other members of the company were registering, when she suddenly became hysterical and commenced crying. She suddenly fell backward and lost consciousness, arousing great concern for her health among the members of the company. Attendants at the hotel rushed forward to give her aid and her friends gathered around. She was revived by a dash of cold water thrown on her face and shortly afterward was taken to her room, where she quickly recovered. It was claimed that the warmth of the day, combined with a nervous attack, caused her to faint. She was able to resume her part in the show and there was no evidence that she was ill.

HENRIETTA CROSMAN believes in going after woman's suffrage with a gun. She told a meeting of the suffragettes that she had been working since she was 14 and supporting men most of that time; and it made her blood boil to think that the law regarded man as her superior. Through the combined efforts of the Kentucky Society of New York and Miss Crosmán a fitting memorial to the genius of the late Stephen Foster, author of Way Down upon the Suwanee River and other famous Southern songs, is to be erected in Louisville in the near future. It will take the shape of a white marble shaft topped by a sculptured bust of Foster. It will be stood in one of the public parks. The unveiling ceremonies will be impressive. While Foster was a native of Florida, he traveled much and spent a great deal of his life in Louisville and the people of that city regard him as one of their own. Miss Crosmán was a grand niece of Foster. She was recently a guest of honor at the meeting of the Kentucky Society and recited stanzas from his best known poems.

Van Ness Theatre

Nat Goodwin, who for years has occupied a peculiar distinction on the American stage—that of being one of our finest, if not the finest comedian—is back in San Francisco exploiting a new play by George Broadhurst, and the talents and graces of Edna Goodrich, a young actress of beauty and earnest endeavor. When Mr. Broadhurst wrote The Easterner, he started out to write a melodrama, but, after two acts, finished it as a comedy. The play is interesting and not bad at all, but it is not worthy of Mr. Goodwin's talents, positively not. A very good supporting company gets all possible out of the play. Neil O'Brien is a strong, convincing figure as the Sheriff; Lowell P. Sherman plays young Bruce Morton, and we do not think it is saying too much in characterizing him as the best juvenile man that has played in this city for a long, long time. He is unequivocally of superior artistic make up. Another clever actor is Edw. W. Morrison, who plays the Mexican. His make up and dialect were absolutely the real thing and he carried the finest semblance of reality all through his portrayal. Alice Butler was a thoroughly capable Minerva Ringler—a conventional old woman character part—and Pauline Lord, who played the emotional Dora, is going to come in for special notice in these columns for a very, very fine characterization of the part. We know a certain stock manager who has been looking many, many months with a most tempting offer for a little woman of looks, temperament and ability to lead his company. He should interview Miss Ford. She is a golden haired beauty, possessed of certain ability and tremendous magnetism. Effie Tillybury, an excellent actress, was cast out of her line and Bud Woodthorpe, too, had the misfortune to be seen in a poor part—that of a Chinaman. Mr. Woodthorpe was far from the character. As to the stars, Mr. Goodwin was his easy, appealing, pleasing self and got many a laugh and gave much enjoyment to his audience throughout the play. Miss Goodrich was beautifully gowned and played her part with quiet, dignified naturalness that was in keeping with the idea of the young girl she was called upon to impersonate. Next week, The Genius.

Valencia Theatre

The possibilities of pictorial stage presentation are exhibited this week at this theatre by the production of Sporting Life. As a scenic show nothing more appealing to the eye or senses has been given in this city and these accessories are all needed, for the play itself is one that does not find much favor with American audiences. Sporting Life is familiar to every follower of the drama, and if there are any ideas or incidents usual to the stage that has been forgotten by the playwrights who builded this play, we do not recall them. The exceptionally well balanced company gives a strong presentation and Paul McAllister, who is an actor of parts and positive distinction, gets the most glory possible each evening, not from playing a poor part well, but from delivering a solar plexus blow to our distinguished citizen, Mr. Oscar (Battling) Nelson, who, since he has become an actor, is now known as shown in the printed line above. George Osbourne, Robert Homans, Gerald Harcourt, Chas. W. Clarke, Wm. Wolbert, Florence Oakley, Edith Lyle, Grace Travers and Peggy Monroe take active parts in the dramatic pageant and demonstrate their abilities. A host of minor parts are also ably handled. Next week, York State Folks.

Princess Theatre

Piff-Paff-Pouff is a musical non-sensibility whose chief claim to distinction must be its melodious music, by Julius Schwartz, and some cleverish and appealing lyrics, together with an altogether adequate presentation by Fred Mace and the Princess Company. Mace is a mighty funny chap, whether he's funny in his own individual style, or whether he's funny after the fashion of other comedians. In the current offering, he out-Foys Eddie himself, with the additional merit of being able to sing a bit when he likes, which Foy in his palmist days never was able to do. I had started up above to tell the story of the play, but I'm more or less stumped. It has to do with the efforts of a widower and his lady love to marry off the four daughters of the gentleman, that he and the lady who is "very gratifying" may themselves wed without his forfeiture of his two million dollar share in his wife's estate, conditioned upon his remaining single or finding a husband for each of his daughters before re-marriage. May Boley is the fascinating widow, and she's just the usual fascinating, breezy personage with just enough of seductiveness to make her a winner. Edwin Stevens makes much of his one song, really a tuneful affair, The Sunbeam and the Rose, while Zoe Barnette "goo-gooes" delightedly in her Under the Goo-Goo Tree. Helen Darling, as the elder of the unmarried daughters, has vocal opportunities of which she is not slow to avail herself. Budd Ross, as the inventive artist, Macaroni, helps with the fun making, while Edwin T. Emery is an unctuous millionaire, not really a Lothario, but just "a devil with the women." The chorus is picturesque and well drilled, as usual, and the offering is a pleasing one, although really there isn't a distinctive thing about the show, nor a melody that will be remembered ten days after the run closes, unless possibly it be Stevens' Sunbeam and the Rose.

Alcazar Theatre

The Boys of Company B is just exactly what a theatrical presentation should be—an entertainment. In nothing that the Alcazar company has appeared in for many moons have they appeared to better advantage—that is, the men—from the standpoint of the audience's enjoyment. The Boys of Company B is nothing more than a frolic, cleverly presented, and with a good little love story interwoven. Bertram Lytell, who gave no inkling in the early period of his Alcazar days that he was a comedian, demonstrates conclusively in this piece that he is above the average of leading men in comedy work. His assumption of the character of Tony Allen was an audaciously enjoyable one. Walter Whipple, he of the big booming voice, is gradually toning down, and his Major MacLane was admirably given, being full of dignity and well balanced. Burt Wesner as the bachelor uncle of the scamp Tony, was seen in an extremely clever portrayal. Ernest Glendinning, John Maher and Walter Belasco added considerable to the good performance. Herbert Farjeon, in a startling makeup that was E. H. Harri-man to the life, was clever as Henry Stable, and Howard Hickman was breezily effective as the rich man's caddish son. Evelyn Vaughan was daintily charming as the heroine, and Adele Belgarde, handsome and effective as her scheming mother. Bessie Barriscale was one of the hits of the performance. Her Madge Blake was a bewitching portrayal. The scenery was splendid, and Edward Lada's orchestra was in happy mood.

Personals

J. ANTHONY SMITH is the leading man for the Poli stock company of Waterbury, Conn. He is a live young actor.

FRANCIS REID, ahead of John Drew, got in from the East yesterday.

FRED BELASCO is due from New York tomorrow.

SYDNEY DIAMOND's players, featuring Carmen, with special paper and scenery, is playing a short season on the Coast.

W. T. WYATT, the circuit agent of Los Angeles, is in town at the St. James, looking up a deal with Nat Goodwin.

HOWARD NUGENT will leave next week for Vancouver, B. C., to join the Walter Sanford Company at the Empress Theatre of that city. Mr. Nugent will be a splendid addition to the company.

Frank Cooley closed his company in Lincoln last week, after a very poor season. Mr. Cooley is now on his ranch at Gridley and will raise chickens and wheat until the fall, when he will probably take out a one nighter.

The Hazlett Stock Company, which opened in Auburn in an air dome, proved a complete financial failure. About two thousand dollars was dropped by the angel who now thinks he has enough of the show business.

FRED COOPER, the veteran mummer, who has of late been in poor health and has had to undergo several operations, will be tendered a benefit at the Macdonough Theatre in Oakland on May 27. Well, here's wishing it may be a bumper one.

Constable Parker of Woodland the other day levied an attachment on C. W. Faits' automobile to satisfy a claim of $22.45 made by Ted Ross, singer in a picture house there. Professor Faits is the proprietor of a traveling hypnotic show. Ross is the Professor's son-in-law and the difficulty is evidently a family affair.

ALLEN CURTIS WRITES: Tonopah, May 7.—I am glad to say that I have been doing very nicely in the last few weeks. I will take my company to Long Beach, California, this summer, opening at the Hyde-a-Wyle Theatre, May 30th, for the entire summer. I have got three more weeks in Goldfield, Nev., before going to Long Beach. Our engagement in the Goldfield territory has been a great success.

Edna Goodrich with Nat C. Goodwin, next week at the Van Ness Theatre in The Genius

The Orpheum

Francini-Olloms offers a novelty act that claims unusual attention. The Frenchman, for I should say his appearance suggests the nationality, is not only a clever concertina and xylophone player, but a juggler and comedy acrobat of no mean order. Everything he does is executed with a dash and precision that can be keenly enjoyed. He is assisted by a youngster, who is a marvelous athlete. The tumbling and head spinning of this boy is superb. Angela Dolores and her company, Harry English and Edw. Moran capture the house by their cleverness in a fine little comedy, Cupid at Home. Miss Dolores is a beautiful woman and an actor of ability. The men are both good. John and James Russell have an old, old act that they have been presenting with variations for years, and while it is not original nor great, still, at the risk of differing from the brilliant critics of the daily press, I will say the Orpheum has seen worse acts, and the audience found the comedy of the two Irishmen to be worth laughing at, and they were not stingy in their laughter, either. Flora Bonfanti Russell filled in a few minutes with some toe dancing. Hawthorne & Burt presented some enjoyable conversational oddities and Frederick Allen, a good character man, presents a touching and enjoyable little play which he calls His Phantom Sweetheart. Mr. Allen is an actor of fine method and his assistant, Bertha Van Norman, is pretty and attractive. The Juggling Normans presented the presented a touching and enjoyable little play which he calls His Phantom jugglers been seen here before. La Valera Phipps, who graduated from the Alcazar extra rank to the stage, via matrimony, is becoming more used to professional dancing each week and she is naturally acquiring more ease. She has ability and is a handsome young woman. She will be a great attraction some day. Now, she is decidedly pleasing. The Melnotte Twins and H. Clay Smith, the latter a very clever light comedian, are in their last week. Two different moving picture subjects were part of an entertaining bill, which has been enjoyed by very large audiences.

Pantages-Empire

To name any one act as the headliner at the Empire this week would be (magnanimously speaking) Crux criticism, as there are several worthy of the distinction. Dawson & Whitfield prove good laugh producers with their nonsense. Mrs. Maud Evans, fulfilling a return engagement, is proving a good drawing card. Ethel Alton and Mazie Oliver present their sketch, The Sacrifice, which differs considerably from the general run of vaudeville sketches. Mrs. Winthrop is convinced there is no true affection in the world. Mrs. Gray, whose husband and child are both ill and in need of medical attention, comes to her home to rob it to enable her to secure the necessary relief for them. She is caught in the act, and Mrs. Winthrop, to test her theory, agrees to give her the sum of $500 to take to them if she, in return, will give her life by drinking poison, which she does, but as the poison is only water, there is no harm done, except to destroy Mrs. Winthrop's theory. Miss Oliver as the skeptic, and Miss Alton as the thief both portray difficult roles in a commendable manner. The act is a little different and therefore interesting. Joseph Le Claire, harp soloist, contributes one of the most delightful musical offerings in a long time. Contrary to the usual custom, his selections are all new and up-to-date, and rendered with a swing and dash which keeps the audience continually calling for more. Caesar Rivoli, in his Protean act, is a big feature of the bill, while Rivoli is not much of an actor, the rapidity with which he changes into the numerous characters he portrays is decidedly clever. His impersonations of famous composers is deserving of especial mention. The Four Dordens, in the casting act, present some thrilling mid-air somersaults and acrobatic work. Moving pictures and Pantages popular orchestra complete an exceptionally good show.

The National

They keep it up. Another big show this week. Each act in a class by itself. Fantan, ring trapeze artist, comes in for a good share of applause for the neatness of his work. Nita Allen & Company present a clever little act entitled Car 2, Stateroom 1. Miss Allen is most evidently a clever little actress, but, she crabs (with apologies to Daniel Webster) the act by her slangy attempts at comedy. The act is novel and composed of plenty of good comedy, but the allusion is spoiled, and also several delicate situations in the act, by slang expressions interpolated. The scenic equipment, portraying the exterior and interior of a Pullman sleeper, is realistic in the extreme, and the best piece of acting is contributed by the conductor. Lewis & Young as fun makers fulfill the contract to the letter. Matt Keefe is yodeling his way into greater popularity at each performance. If he keeps up giving a different song for each encore, I am afraid Matt will have to get busy and send for some professional copy. Bonnie Gaylord, The Girl from Posy Co., in her Sis Hopkins get-up is a clever little entertainer who is well received. The Quaker City Four wouldn't be much without the black face member of the trick, he is a scream all by himself. Last, but not least, is Frank Bush with a new line of stories which keeps the audience in a continual state of laughter. Frank's there. With several reels of new motion pictures the above constitutes an excellent program.

The Wigwam

No fault to find at this popular house this week. Mr. and Mrs. Robbys in the beautiful little playlet, The Counsel for the Defense, present a delightful picture of heart interest. A rich strain of good, wholesome comedy intermingled with pathos runs through the act, which is artistically and cleverly brought out in the capable hands of both Mr. and Mrs. Robbys. Madame Doherty's Poodles, eighteen in number, are a bunch of clever little canines, and perfect little dears to look upon. Manning & Dixon are a couple of dopy screams in their farce, The Dopy Cabman and His Passenger, and their song, The Lobster is the Wise Guy, is one big hit. Quigg & Nicker-

Interesting and entertaining moving pictures complete a highly satisfactory program.

Fischer's

Impressario Fischer has followed his brilliant first week's showing by a rural comedy, called The Advance Agent, that is effective and funny, and produced on the same lavish scale and with attention to details that characterized its predecessor. Ben T. Dillon disguises himself in a long nose and plays a real rube. Ben gets a continuous lot of fun from his lines and situations. Tracy McDermott, a very useful man and a fine performer, doubles as Fleecum and Kid Thomas. His handsome and talented wife, Dorothy Raymond, is cast as the heiress, and she portrays the part with skill. Nellie Montgomery has a good comedy streak in her makeup and was immense as Samantha Jones. Will King, a useful man, was there with a good performance of the son. The chorus was beautifully costumed, and Musical Director Alphin had quite a number of song hits to his credit. Next week, Mr. Alphin will produce another of his song hits—The Pagoda.

The Thalia

The Thalia has another good card this week. Wentworth, Vesta and their acrobatic dog, Teddy, are a big feature of the bill with their numerous acrobatic stunts. Seymour and Dupree, in their clever offering, The Jumping Chinaman and the Soubrette, introduce some clever jumping and dancing and are well received. Rose Stevens, vocalist, on account of illness, was unable to appear this week. Georgie White continues her successful line of coon shouts. Marguerite Ruse, operatic soprano, is heard to advantage in a number of selections. Eva Roland continues to be a big favorite, and Lucilee, in her posing act, is a continued attraction. Moving pictures complete an enjoyable entertainment.

Vaudeville Notes

Al Hessie, comedy juggler, has received contracts for twenty weeks on the Western Vaudeville Association Circuit, opening May 9th, Star Theatre, San Antonio, Texas (Jack Dickey, agent); Dallas, Texas, indefinitely.

Isabel D'Armond, who plays the part of Pomare in The Beauty Spot, the new summer show at the Herald Square Theatre, New York, is the author of a one-act sketch, The Guarantee, which has been bought by Tucker and Williams for use over the Keith circuit.

Large attendance still continues in evidence at the Star Theatre. Manager Sid Grauman inaugurated a change last week, requiring all per-twe a week.

Joe Watson, the monologist, gave in his notice at the Los Angeles Theatre last week. Watson had a disagreement with a fellow performer and decided to close rather than remain on the same bill with him. Mr. Watson is held to be in the right, but as he has only one more week to complete his contract, he did not consider it worth while having the matter arbitrated.

BROCKTON, Mass., May 4.—Bert S. Frank writes: "Anne Jordan, Scott Robertson and Bert S. Frank opened with their Western playlet, Ranchville, by Lester Lonergan, on the Sheedy Circuit, Brockton, Mass., Monday, May 3d, after having played in and around New York City and Brooklyn six weeks. Scott Robertson is playing the heavy. We are doing nicely and will have our own special Adobe set ready soon. With best regards and good wishes from the Western Trio."

Libby & Trayers are playing Stockton this week. Next week they will be seen at the Queen Theatre, San Diego.

Louis S. Pincus, the Eastern representative for the Western States Vaudeville Circuit, is now in Seattle and is expected in town within the next ten days. First John, then Louie. Something doing.

Mr. and Mrs. Robbyns, playing at the Wigwam this week, will take a side trip to the Grand Canyon on their way to Denver. Fine. Here's to a good time.

Will Oakland, the popular contratenor, will begin an engagement at the National, opening Sunday matinee.

Mazie Oliver, well known in this city as a member of Walter Sanford's Company, is at present touring the Coast on Pantage's time in her new sketch, The Sacrifice. Miss Oliver is both a handsome woman and a fine actress.

Manager Sid Grauman has evidently made a hit with the Missionites judging from the amount of callers he has at every performance at his new house in the Mission. Chas. Oro & Company, in their third week, continue in favor with their slap-stick ad lib acts. Zamlock, magician, gives an entertaining number with his mystifying stunts. Amy Brown is a dainty little song and dance soubrette. The Neilsen Family have a good offering of acrobatic tumbling and pyramid building introduced. Allert Moswen contributes her share of a good show with song and dance specialties. Motion pictures complete a big show for little money.

Mrs. Horton F. Phipps, danseuse at the Orpheum and society woman had her salary attached last week for $20.50, the claim being an old one. The attachment was made at the instigation of Alexandra, the jeweler, the bill harking back to October of 1907. According to the jeweler's claims, the bill represented the purchase of two loving cups and the engraving of several others. Repeated efforts to obtain the money having failed, they placed the account in the hands of a collection agency, with the result that Mrs. Phipps, on proceeding to the box office was shocked to discover that $20.50 of her salary was in the hands of the legal authorities, awaiting the conclusion of a suit for that amount.

In full view of more than five thousand horror-stricken spectators, May Scott, a trapeze performer, slipped and suddenly plunged from the trapeze bar to the ground, a distance of sixty feet, at the Sells-Floto Circus last Saturday afternoon. She was dangerously injured and in now in a local hospital.

Jimmy Rego and Miss De Cohet are playing the Star, Chico, this week.

Libbey and Mr. Theatre-goer rendered better grand opera than you have paid $2.50 to hear more than once. They are extremely clever in other than voice, too. If you can't spare the time to see the entire show, don't fail to see these people in The Debutante.—Stockton Mail.

Hart's Theatre, San Mateo, offers this week: Kawana, juggler; Mayo and Rave, comedy sketch, and Marion Marr, coon shouter.

Bert Levey, the independent booking agent, added the Farragut Theatre at Vallejo to his increasing list of houses this week.

Doutrick's Chicago Success

The numerous friends of Charles H. Doutrick in San Francisco and on the Pacific Coast will read with mingled feelings of pleasure and good will that he has succeeded in building up a vaudeville booking business in Chicago that has become a factor in vaudeville business. Charley had the strongest following on the Coast both among managers and artists in the later 80's and the early 90's, when he was a resident of this city, and his services for the old Wigwam contributed largely to its prolonged existence in its losing fight against the Orpheum, then managed by Gustav Walter. When the Cort chain of vaudeville houses in the Northwest was broken and the field became unprofitable because of its contracted limits, Charley went East. For over ten years he has been in Chicago, holding partnerships with other booking managers and gradually forcing his way to the front. A little over a year ago he launched out for himself, opening the Doutrick Booking Agency in Suite 29, at 92 La Salle street. The Doutrick agency has the exclusive booking for the three best middle class family vaudeville houses in Chicago—Schindler's, North Avenue, and Thalia; also for the Grand at Joliet, the Castle, Bloomington; the Elite, Moline; the Bijou, Freeport; the Lyric, Mattoon; the Elite, Davenport, Ia.; the Victoria, La Fayette, Ind.; and the opera houses at Ottawa, La Salle and Hoopston, Ills., etc. A continuous route of over twenty weeks can be booked by the Doutrick agency and many rattling good acts avail themselves of the opportunity. During the summer and early autumn season an extensive business is done with managers of parks, fairs, airdomes, summer resorts, etc., and Fourth of July celebrations are also provided with talent and other appropriate features. Notwithstanding the success that has followed his efforts in the Windy City, Charley frequently casts a longing mental gaze on the old associations of his Frisco days, and when the stress of business will permit, he promises himself a trip—not to the old haunts, but to the magnificent new city by the Golden Gate. Mr. Doutrick was the publisher of the old Cricket in San Francisco, called in those days the Clipper of the West, from '86 to '92, when it expired. It was a daily publication at first and then became a weekly.

WILTON DALE has retired from the acting business and is now in Portland, Ore., with the Oliver Typewriter Company.

Eva Westcott

En tour in vaudeville, appearing in her own act—A Butterfly Wife. Booked solid since September 15th until July 1st. What the press says: "The little play is well acted by its author. It grips, it holds you until the startling finish, and it is a success from any and every artistic point of view."—Ashton Stevens.

"In this little play, Eva Westcott runs the entire gamut of emotions, from the lightest comedy to the deepest tragedy, and is equally strong in both."—N. Y. Telegraph.

Correspondence

SAN DIEGO, May 12.—Garrick (J. M. Dodge, mgr.): The James Post Musical Comedy Company, in May the Best Man Win. This piece is a scream from the rise to the fall of the last curtain, and Mr. Post as Sullivan, the piano mover, has ample opportunity to exhibit most effectively his comedy talent. Nothing funnier has ever been seen here than his boxing match in the second act with Guy Usher as Bulldog Regan. Guy Merkel, as Spider Kelly, and Guy Usher, as Bulldog Regan, are also responsible for a large share of the fun-making. Joe Hayden, as Google-Eyed Hogan, in the first act, and Bill Delaney in the second enacts both roles effectively. Millar Bacon makes a good trainer. Miss Lotus Moore scored a big hit with her song, Glow Worm. Myrtle Al-zora also made a hit with Whistle and I'll Wait for You. Juliet Mahr scored with A Little Lovin' Now and Then. This company has already established themselves as favorites here, and good houses greet the mat every performance. Pickwick (Scott A. Palmer, mgr.): The Armstrong Musical Comedy Company have a winner in Little Robinson Crusoe, which is holding the boards this week at the Pickwick. Barney Williams in the title part and George Rhen as Blue Beard are responsible for the fun-making. Edw. Armstrong as Simple Simon does full justice to his part. Ethel Davis played Mary Mary in her usual faultless manner. Rosa Rhen does exceedingly well as Mother Hubbard. Elma Elwood, the new soubrette, as Jack Horner, does good work. Roscoe Karns as Saturday, and Walter Spencer as Sinbad, Jr., give a good rendition of their respective parts. Several catchy songs are interpolated. Queen (Swarts & Urban, mgrs.): The Atlantic City Four are the headliners this week. They have a good act and please. The balance of the bill is composed of the following excellent acts: Elsworth and Lindon, in comedy sketch, A Day Off; Joe Watson, Jew comedian; Errac, street musician; Ouda, trapeze artist; moving pictures conclude. Grand (Walter Fulkerson, mgr.): Manager Fulkerson has a good bill this week, which is as follows: The Johnsons, colored song and dance artists; Armente Brothers, Italian whirlwind tumblers; Gorman Kiltie Duo, musical act; Maude DeAlma, in illustrated songs, and moving pictures conclude. Empire (W. W. Bosley, mgr.): Emerson and Summer, in comedy sketch, Almost; Musical Sambo; the Lydick Sisters, and moving pictures. Gaiety (R. O. Gordon, mgr.): Lew Fields, Aubrey Carr, Libbey Blondelle and Genevieve DeLacour, in a farce-comedy. Union and Bijou offer moving pictures and illustrated songs to good business. CARL E. LUNDQUIST.

Archie Levy, Independent

Archie Levy will today, after an eighteen years' business connection with John Considine, leave the S. & C. interests and once more establish himself as an independent agent. He will be succeeded by Mr. Reese, who has been in the office with him the past year, and who has been the direct S. & C. representative for a long time. Archie is one of the clever agents of the country, and is not only the oldest booking vaudeville agent in the West, but in the world in point of service, having been at the game for over twenty-four years. He carries with him good wishes from a host of friends. Already he has lined up some eighteen acts and can give eight weeks' work, and promises twelve in the near future. His successor, Mr. Reese is a fine fellow and an exceedingly popular agent, with many friends here. Fred Lincoln, the S. & C. general manager, will be here next week to start the new order of things.

dows. Their efforts were clumsy, and the sound of broken glass awakened many of the guests. A telephone call for the house detective aroused the office force of the hotel. Before the officers had reached the scene, however, the thieves had slid down the plank and escaped.

Lee Riley Writes to Correct Statement

New York City, May 7, 1909.

I was very much surprised to see a paragraph in the REVIEW stating that The Land of Nod was closed in Pittsburg by the sheriff. The Land of Nod was not closed in Pittsburg by the sheriff, nor by anyone else, nor in any other city in the world while it has been under the present management. It has never owed an actor one dollar, and, on the contrary, has been one of the biggest winners of the past two seasons. Last season it cleared exactly $22,475.25. The season closed April 24th in St. Thomas, Ontario, making thirty-five weeks. The railroad fares of each member of the company were paid to their respective homes. Every member was happy and wanted to re-sign for next season. As for the sheriff in Pittsburg: True, the show was "attached" there, but not closed. It was attached by two members of Coming Thro' the Rye Company, who had a week and a half salary coming. The Land of Nod being under the same management, these people secured foreign attachments against the "Nod." Please correct your statement in the next issue of the REVIEW. [Glad to do so, Lee! you bet.—Ed.] The Land of Nod will be seen in all of the principal cities of the Pacific Coast again next season, with practically the same cast which has distinguished it among the successes which visit the West each year. Many new musical features and scenic effects will be added, and The Land of Nod of 1909-10 will eclipse any former presentation. The date in San Francisco will be Thanksgiving week. THE REVIEW reaches us promptly each week, and it is not "agent's hot air" when I say that no theatrical publication which comes to our offices is more thoroughly read and enjoyed than it is.

John Cort Engages Jane Corcoran

Among the important engagements recently consummated was that of Jane Corcoran, who was secured by John Cort to play the leading female role in Commencement Days, which will open early in September and start immediately for the western country. Miss Corcoran, who has starred for four seasons, is very well known in that section of the country. The deal was arranged through Arthur C. Aison. The season after next Miss Corcoran will again be seen at the head of her own company.

The Orpheum

A program of exceptional merit and extraordinary originality will be given next week. The Lulu Beeson Trio, consisting of Lulu Beeson, Ward and Weber, will present a picturesque singing and dancing act called A Night in El Paso, in which the two young men, attired in Mexican costume, make their appearance in a dance and serenade in front of an adobe hut, and are answered by Miss Beeson from the window. Agile dancing succeeds, and for a finale the trio engage in a particularly animated hard shoe dance. The Countess Rossi and M. Paulo will present a fascinating singing act entitled, During the Performance. Flo Adler, whose catchy and popular songs have made her an immense favorite in the vaudeville theatres of this country, will be included in the attractions of the coming bill. Quite a while has elapsed since Miss Adler last appeared in this city, but she is pleasantly remembered and is sure of a most cordial reception. Knight Brothers and Marion Sawtelle, whose clever character impersonations and eccentric dancing recently scored such a great hit, will return for next week only, which will be the last of the Five Juggling Normans, Frederick Allen and Co., Francini-Oloms and the inimitable Russell Brothers, assisted by Flora Bonfanti Russell in their laughable farce, Our Servant Girls. New Orpheum Motion Pictures will conclude one of the best entertainments in the history of vaudeville.

Fischer's Theatre

A feast of laughter, plentifully interspersed with no less than eight up-to-date musical numbers, is what they promise at Fischer's next week. The coming production is on the same lines that have won favor through the medium of brisk, snappy, yet brief, musical comedy. The new number is called Othello for a Day, and the theme, while sufficiently consistent, has been woven specially for laughing purposes. Its participants are those of every day life, comprising the Irish specialist; the Hebrew attendant, the tough Concert Hall singer, the supposedly insane Stage Director, together with various other types of demented humanity who assist in making matters decidedly ludicrous at the private asylum maintained by the Celtic doctor. The principals will have particularly happy allotments, Ben Dillon being cast for the Irish physician; Will King should be in his element as the Hebrew attendant; Nellie Montgomery will find the tough Concert Hall singer entirely to her liking, and Frank Vack's best efforts are with Italian roles. In the future there will be added a Monday matinee, making four matinees a week: on Wednesday, Saturday and Sunday.

Valencia Theatre

The last performances of the exciting English melodrama in fifteen scenes, Sporting Life, in which the redoubtable Battling Nelson is knocked out by Paul McAllister, will take place this Sunday afternoon and evening, and on Monday night a decided change will be made when York State Folks, a pastoral comedy drama in four acts, will be seen for the first time in this city. There is humor galore in York State Folks. Written by Arthur Sidman, that splendid character comedian, for his own use, it abounds in quaint studies of a group of simple minded country people. Chief among them is Myron Cooper, the village organist, who is tax collector as well. For the principal role of Myron Cooper, Chas. Dow Clark has been chosen and as he is one of the best exponents of rural types on the American stage he will undoubtedly give a characterization long to be remembered. George Osbourne will be the Simon Peter Martin and Paul McAllister will play the unfortunate son. Florence Oakley will have a pretty part as Jennie, Myron's niece, and Edith Lyle, Grace Travers, Peggy Munro, Lillian Andrews and Antoinette Crawford will be various types of rural femininity. The Man from Mexico, one of the most screamingly funny farces extant, is underlined.

Alcazar Theatre

Stirring action, historic interest and a pretty love story are the magnetic elements of Dorothy Vernon of Haddon Hall, which is to be given a sumptuous production during the coming week. The play is a dramatization of the widely read novel of the same title, and follows the story as closely as the dramatic requirements permit. Its scenes are laid in England during the reign of Good Queen Bess, who is one of the prominent characters, and each of the four acts demands most elaborate staging, a demand which the Alcazar is sure to comply with. Queen Elizabeth is not the only royal personage in the dramatic personae, however, for Mary of Scots is also conspicuously in evidence. These famous folk will be impersonated by Adele Belgarde and Louise Brownell, respectively, while others in the cast are Evelyn Vaughan as Dorothy, Bertram Lytell as Sir John Manners, Will R. Walling as Sir Malcolm Vernon, A. Burt Wesner as Sir George Vernon, Howard Hickman as the Earl of Rutland, John B. Maher as a dwarf jester, Ernest Glendinning as Sir William St. Loe, Christie MacLean as Lady Vernon, Bessie Barriscale as Jennie Faxon, Effie Bond as Bess, the cook, and other Alcazar favorites in minor roles.

Comedy Theatre for New York

Due ceremony attached week before last to the laying of the corner-stone of the new Comedy Theatre in West Forty-first street. The stone was laid by Lee Shubert, assisted by Lew Fields. A third principal figure on the platform was that of Charles E. Force, the head of the company which is erecting the playhouse. In the chiseled hole of one stone, covered later with a second great block of marble, were placed several objects of particular interest, notably a $20 gold piece from Lee Shubert, a $20 gold piece from Mr. Fields, and a letter which had been placed in the corner-stone of the building in 1860, when the structure was first erected as St. Luke's Methodist Church. Certainly no one dreamed forty-nine years ago that the building would finally serve as the skeleton for an ultra-modern playhouse. This letter was re-deposited not only as a matter of record, but as signifying the union of church and stage. Other articles placed in the stone included a copy of each of the leading daily newspapers of New York City, a letter from the layer of the corner-stone and a letter from Mr. Force in the name of the builders of the theatre. The officiating party had already ascended to the platform when the big block of granite was slowly being lifted into place by the derrick. Mr. Shubert placed the metal box in the nether stone and then guided the corner-stone to its final position. He was then congratulated by the friends who had gathered for the occasion, but made no speech other than to call attention to the energy displayed by Mr. Force in pushing the theatre to rapid completion for the opening of the autumn season. Mrs. Charles E. Force and Mr. Force's mother were also present. The new Comedy Theatre, under the management of the Messrs. Shubert, will open in the early autumn. It is intended to make it one of the most complete small playhouses in the world, and, as its seating capacity will be a trifle less than 700, will be reserved for comedy and small dramatic presentations. Walter N. Lawrence will act as business manager of the theatre.

GEORGE A. WRIGHT has retired from the Kolb and Dill company in Los Angeles, and left Sunday for New York City, en route to London, where he goes to stage the Third Degree for Henry B. Harris.

Personals

HELEN BRANDON is heading a repertoire show in Wyoming.

CHARLES SWICKARD has resigned from the Kolb & Dill company in Los Angeles and will be in this city this week.

DAVID PHILLIPS has been signed by Fred Belasco for the Alcazar stock of this city, to succeed Bertram Lytell as leading man.

DE WOLF HOPPER quits the Shuberts after the present Chicago engagement and goes with Dan Arthur in a new piece—The Pied Piper.

SCOTT SEATON, the ex-actor and manager, who is now a real estate capitalist, has lately moved into a dandy new home at 3130 College avenue, Berkeley.

ZEFFIE TILBURY, Neil O'Brien and Bud Woodthrope, who have been with Nat C. Goodwin for a number of seasons, are all in the production of The Easterner.

LOUIS THOMPSON, the juvenile man, will hereafter be professionally known as Corbett Morris. He opened Monday with the Charles King company in Long Beach.

MANAGER ED. HOEN of Fresno spent last week in San Francisco, as did Manager Shaw of the Margarita Theatre in Eureka. Mr. Shaw has taken over Perry Gorton's interest in that playhouse.

INEZ RAGAN, who has been playing ingenues with Joseph De Grasse, will, at the close of the present season, go to New York to accept an engagement with one of Wm. P. Cullen's musical comedy companies.

BRENDA FOWLER has been playing this last winter in vaudeville in and around New York. She was with Minnie Palmer in Sweethearts. Miss Fowler is now playing with the Mildred Holland Stock at the Colonial Theatre, Cleveland, O.

ADELAIDE PRINCE, once prominent in the Augustine Daly Company, is now appearing in support of John Drew in the production of Jack Straw. Another clever woman with the organization is Mary Boland, who will be remembered as Robert Edeson's leading woman.

COL. BILLY THOMPSON is back from Los Angeles and the South. While in the Angel city, where the Burns-Johnson fight pictures went big, the police stopped selling standing room six times. The Colonel while in Los Angeles put over an unique stunt. He gave a midnight performance of the pictures, which was extremely well attended.

A representative of Charles Frohman has announced that William Gillette, owing to poor health, would not be able to play next season and that when he appeared again it would be for a brief farewell to the stage. This farewell tour will be followed by Mr. Gillette's permanent retirement as an actor. His future, it is said, will be occupied in the direction of a theatre in New York in association with Mr. Frohman. After the close of his present tour, Mr. Gillette will go to Tyron, N. C., to recuperate. He will stay there for a short time, and on May 8 will sail for Europe. Among the plays in which Mr. Gillette will be seen on his farewell tour will be Secret Service, Sherlock Holmes, Too Much Johnson, Held by the Enemy, and The Private Secretary.

ARTHUR CUNNINGHAM has been secured by Manager Walter Hoff Seely for the Valencia Theatre forces and will open an extended engagement in a favorite Irish play Monday evening, May 31. W. T. Sheehan, Joseph Murphy's former stage manager, and who will be pleasantly remembered for his clever work in Kerry Gow and Shaun Rhue, will return with Mr. Cunningham, who will doubtless receive a welcome that will raise the roof.

A CHARACTERISTIC Myles McCarthy note on our desk the other day is interesting. It says: Just dropped in to say "Howdy." First time in Frisco since 1903, when I played the old Orpheum, headlining the bill. Running around now shaking hands with old friends and incidentally trying to make new ones. Been living on a ranch near Sacramento for the past fortnight trying to accustom myself to ranch life, but the old footlight thing is tugging hardest. Can qualify as—"Still Hankering."

At the end of her tour in The Morals of Marcus to the Pacific Coast, Marie Doro will take advantage of her presence in the extreme west to visit Honolulu. Miss Doro's real wish is that her company shall go with her that she may act in Honolulu, but this is improbable. When Miss Doro makes her bow before a San Francisco audience in The Morals of Marcus it will be her first appearance here as a star. About five years ago she was a member of the Daly Musical Comedy Company at the California Theatre.

FRANCIS BOGGS was in town from Los Angeles last week, where he is conducting a studio for the Selig Polyscope Co. of Chicago. Mr. Boggs has been with these moving picture people for the past two years and says it beats the acting game all to pieces. It will be remembered that Mr. Boggs was for eight years a most popular stock leading man for Chicago. While here Mr. Boggs signed for moving pictures Frank Montgomery, Henry Auerbach, Helena Griffin and Neva West for a season of special work in Los Angeles, San Francisco and the Pacific Coast.

Spotlights

Lincoln J. Carter has sold his Criterion theatre property on Sedgwick street, near Division, Chicago, to Earl H. Macoy, president of the National Printing and Engraving Company, for $76,500. The property is one of the best known on the north side and has been owned by Mr. Carter for a number of years. Mr. Macoy is said to have made the purchase as an investment.

Little Zena Kiefe and Jesse Mendelson, two of the talented children who made such hits in Peter Pan, have been especially engaged for the orphans in York State Folks at the Valencia Theatre.

Arthur Sidman, author of York State Folks, which will be produced next week at the Valencia, was the originator of the immortal conundrum, "Why is a mouse that spins?" to which the answer is, "Because the higher the fewer."

A large building, possibly a new theatre, will soon be put up on the site of the Star Theatre, Tacoma, says John C. Donnelly, the owner, who has returned from an extensive trip to

When asked if he would build the Shubert theatre building, provided John S. Baker does not do so, Mr. Donnelly said he had not yet given the matter consideration.

Assistant Secretary of War Oliver has decided that Sergeant George A. Reed and Private George J. Ackerman of the Third Infantry band at Fort Lawton may accept employment in an orchestra playing at a Seattle dancing academy. Oliver sets forth in his decision that army musicians are prohibited from taking engagements outside the reservation only when to do so throws them into competition with civilians. He holds that the regulation has not been violated in this case because the services of the two men were solicited, the proprietor asserting that he cannot employ union men and needed the soldiers.

In order to reach this city in due time for his date at the Van Ness Theatre, John Drew will have to make a long jump from the middle west, where he is now appearing. San Francisco will be one of the first cities in the country, outside of New York, to see Drew in his newest success, Jack Straw.

Ethel Barrymore has just closed her engagement at Powers' Theatre, Chicago, and has started west for this city. She will appear in her latest triumph, Lady Frederick, at the Van Ness Theatre early next month.

The Liars, as presented by Mary Hall and associate players at the Colonial this week ranks with the best offerings by the capable stock organization, if it is not the best. Miss Hall is admirably adapted to the part of Lady Jessica, and Mr. Baldwin and Mr. Heffron, as Sir Deering and Edward Falkner, share honors in splendidly handled parts. Miss Hall was charming through the entire four acts and her costumes were entrancing to the feminine portion of her audience. Mr. Baldwin was the altogether delightful bachelor that was demanded of him. He was exceptionally well cast as Sir Christopher. Of Mr. Heffron's work rather lavish terms are necessary.

He shared to the fullest extent the honors of the leading role. Of the support it is difficult to choose, all doing acceptable work throughout the progress of the story. Mr. Alcind, Anna Cleveland, Bessie Hunter, Callie Gates and Mr. Millar are all strong in their support while the others of the players are lacking in no particular. The opportunities center about Miss Hall, Mr. Baldwin and Mr. Heffron and leave only little for the others of the cast.—Deseret News, Salt Lake, April 20.

Joseph De Grasse presented Romeo and Juliet at Grass Valley, May 3, to fair business.

The Menzel stock, headed by Kernan Cripps, now playing Swain's theatre, Santa Cruz, will open on May 24 at the Empire theatre, Fresno. The Redmond company on that date will open at the Victory theatre in San Jose for the summer. The Place-Bell company will take the place of the Menzel company in Santa Cruz.

LONDON, May 1.—Three new theatrical productions were seen in London during the week just closed. The best received was The Arcadians, a musical comedy of high order and original lines, which Charles Frohman will take to America soon. Another musical comedy, A Parisian Princess, is of a more conventional type, its chief novelty being an appearance of a camel on the stage. A. Seymour Hicks revived the military drama, One of the Best, with Henry Airley taking the leading part. H. Beerbohm Tree revived Henrik Ibsen's An Enemy of the People, Tree appearing as Dr. Stockman, an impersonation well known in America.

JOHN B. MAHER, who for five years has been the comedian of the Alcazar company, will leave within a few weeks and will start for the East. He will visit his two sisters, who live in New York, and will go East by way of the Isthmus. John Maher has been one of the most popular actors ever associated with San Francisco theatricals.

WARREN ELLSWORTH LEVEY, a Los Angeles actor, and Miss Helen Wilkie, for the past year telephone operator at the Westminster Hotel, slipped away on Wednesday of last week to San Bernardino, and were married at the rectory of St. Paul's M. E. Church by Rev. A. G. Clark. Mrs. Levey met Mr. Levey four years ago at the home of a friend. "We did not intend to be married for a year or so, but it all came on the impulse of the moment."

EMMA EAMES, the grand opera singer, was served with papers in Philadelphia last week in an alienation suit, and because of the secrecy maintained it did not become known until this week. The suit is instituted by Madame Elsa De Gogorza, wife of the grand opera tenor, Emilio De Gogorza. This is an entirely new move in the now historical complications which have arisen between Emma Eames, Madame De Gogorza and the tenor.

If one who knew him were obliged or put to the test to name John Drew's stage ambition, the wish nearest his heart—it would be a revival of Much Ado About Nothing, with himself as Benedict and Maude Adams as Beatrice. This fascinating idea is said to be something more promising than a remote possibility. Charles Frohman, who manages both Miss Adams and Mr. Drew, like Barkis, is "willin'." The actual performance only awaits on the least show of interest in Shakespeare on the part of the public.

NEW YORK has had a Lillian Russell sale, an Edwin Booth sale, a Leslie Carter sale, and now it is having an auction of the effects of Henrietta Crosman, made by order of her receiver in bankruptcy. Bric-a-brac, rare furniture, swords, picture books, theatrical costumes, kimono and even the Nell Gwynne trousers belonging to the actress are shown in the Darling auction rooms in Broadway, in the midst of the theatrical district, where they are being sold this week. The collection is valued at from $50,000 to $75,000.

FRIENDS of Miss Reina Belasco in California will be surprised to learn that the youngest daughter of David Belasco is engaged to be married to Morris Gest of New York. The ceremony will take place at Sherry's on June 1st. Miss Belasco has had many ardent suitors, and with her sister Gussie has been an attractive figure at parties and social functions with many of her admirers. Few of her intimate friends ever dreamed that an engagement existed between the playwright's daughter and young Gest. In fact, it is said that a secret engagement has existed for some time owing to strenuous objections of Mr. Belasco to have his daughters marry. Mr. Belasco has always provided lavishly for them both, and has been very reluctant to have them leave his home. Soon after Mr. Belasco's return from his recent San Francisco visit Miss Belasco and Mr. Gest held several conferences with the playwright. At first Mr. Belasco was inclined to lend a deaf ear to their pleadings, but with the support of Mrs. Belasco and the persistency of young Gest Mr. Belasco finally gave his consent, and preparations were immediately made for the wedding. Mr. Gest was for several years representative of Oscar Hammerstein, and is now a member of the theatrical firm of Comstock & Gest.

Valencia Theatre

The last performances of York State Folks will take place this Sunday afternoon and evening and on Monday night the ever popular farce that has made millions laugh, The Man from Mexico, by H. B. Du Souchet, author of My Friend from India, and first made famous by Willie Collier, will be staged in Capital style. In New York recently the so-called co-author of a play in which Willie Collier has been starring, remarked to the comedian: "Say, Willie, I'll give you a hundred dollars if you'll find one of my lines in our play." "Nothing doing," said Collier, "but I'll give you a hundred if you'll find one that either of us wrote in the play at the beginning." The anecdote tells with a fair amount of accuracy what happens when Collier puts a play into rehearsal. His only idea is to get laughs, and while there is no doubt of his great success in his ambition, it is also true that he never fails to preserve a real story to carry his humor. The Man from Mexico is one of his greatest successes and no doubt much of its merit is attributable to the author, but there is no question but that the majority of the laughs owe their origin to Collier's nimble wit. Paul McAllister is practicing the lock-step for the part of the imprisoned Fitzhew, and George Osbourne will have full swing for his splendid comedy ability in the part of Majors. Always reliable, Robert Homans will be Loveall, the amusing warden, Chas. Dow Clark will play Schmidt, and Gerald Harcourt, Robert McKim, William Wolbert, Edmund W. Bracht and Gilmore Walker will furnish the remainder of the male comedy support. Florence Oakley will be Mrs. Fitzhew and the Misses Travers, Lyle and Andrews will have the capital parts of Nettie, Sallie and Miranda.

Alcazar Theatre

Bertram Lytell's final week as leading man of the Alcazar players, commencing next Monday evening, will introduce him as John Storm in The Christian. It is needless to say that the closing performances of this clever and popular actor will be witnessed by capacity-taxing audiences, for during his two years in San Francisco he has made a host of friends. Evelyn Vaughan will play Glory Quayle. The action commences at Peel Castle, Isle of Man, and in the succeeding act all the parties chiefly concerned are in London, where stage pictures are shown of the salon of the Coliseum Music Hall, the club room of the Church of St. Mary Magdalene, and Glory's apartments in Clement Inn. The "big scene" of the drama is by many considered that in which Storm visits Glory and tells her he must kill her to save her soul, but the mob scene in the final act, where the people whom Storm has succored both spiritually and materially turn upon him and threaten to have his life.

The Orpheum

The Orpheum announces a novel and captivating program for next week. The Sunny South, an ensemble of plantation melodies with ten colored comedians and most picturesque and appropriate stage settings, is sure of popular approval. Peter Donald and Meta Carson will present a short comedy sketch. It is called Alex McLean's Dream, and abounds in Scotch songs, dances and wit. Lew Sully, one of the best minstrel comedians in this country will indulge in what he calls Words and Music, which introduces many of his latest song hits, including Adam was a Lucky Man, The Merry Widow Craze, Wise Old Robinson Crusoe, Back to Italy. The Baader-La Velle Trio will give a daring and original bicycle performance and Myles McCarthy, the popular comedian, will, with the assistance of his company, introduce a ludicrous skit named Imagination. Next week will conclude the engagement of the Countess Rossi and Monsieur Paulo, Flo Adler and the Lulu Beeson Trio. A new series of motion pictures specially imported will be a fitting finale.

American Theatre

With arrangements entered into to present their attractions at the American Theatre, pending the construction of two new playhouses in this city, the Shuberts will invade San Francisco June 13 with The Blue Mouse, to be followed at appropriate intervals by the very best of their attractions. The independents are now in a position to book offerings for forty weeks or more, throughout the country from New York to San Francisco. The Blue Mouse is styled an improper farce, that is to say, the German version of it was until Clyde Fitch took hold of it and in its present disinfected state has been brought down to the American standards of impropriety. New York damned, condemned, suppressed and praised the Blue Mouse and has kept it going almost a year, receiving it unblushingly and uproariously. It is said to be imperatively ridiculously laughable and built on lines to keep you in expectation with rollicking delight. James T. Powers in the season's musical hit, Havana, is among the Shubert's attractions that will be seen at the American this summer. Through an arrangement with Liebler & Company the Shuberts have arranged to play twenty-six of their attractions here, which will more than offset any possible loss by opposition.

Fischer's Theatre

Assisted by an elaborate scenic investiture, handsome wardrobe and an augmented cast, Fischer's will next week turn their attention to opera in a condensed form. It is the first presentation in this city of a successful production reduced to the requirements of two performances nightly. The Pagoda is a Japanese operetta (in this form) from the facile pen of Chas. Alphonso, who contributes books, lyrics and music. The story revolves around a stern and superstitious Japanese pater, the possessor of a Buddha whom he believes is all powerful. He has been made to believe that his Buddha will lose all power should his daughter marry. From a Sorceress he learns that the daughter will surely be married before her eighteenth birthday and he plots to keep the young lover away from the Pagoda. The young Japanese is an ardent wooer who will not be denied. He employs an American detective to assist him, and the latter after a number of humorous complications that are unsuccessful, finally hits upon the idea of disguising as a Buddha, which he does and secures the consent of the obdurate parent. There is a highly humorous counterplot involving Baron Von Coinshort, who is seeking the hand of an heiress and Miss Gold, whose money adds materially to her attractiveness. During the action a number of Mr. Alphonso's most successful musical numbers will be rendered, including The Dance of Sing Ling Foo, My Tokio Queen, In My Own Pagoda, Tamamura and Pretty Little Japanese Lady. All the principals, headed by Ben T. Dillon, will have congenial roles. The new bills are inaugurated at the matinee on Monday.

Warwick Is Figure In Domestic Row

Chicago, May 13.—Chicago friends of the beautiful Mrs. Arline Peck Bien are discussing with lively interest and some difference of opinion the mention of the name of her husband, Robert Bien, in the domestic difficulties of George Whittell, Jr., the San Francisco millionaire, and his former wife, and James K. Hackett and his wife, Mary Manning. Bien is with Grace George's theatrical company, his stage name being Robert Warwick. Whittell, it is said, has sought to remarry his divorced wife. A divorce suit is pending between the Hacketts and Hackett has subpoenaed Warwick as a witness in his behalf. Mrs. Bien and members of the Peck family have always denied emphatically that their domestic relations are anything but the pleasantest. Warwick has been in Chicago since Wednesday noon, yet so far has failed to pay a visit to his wife and six-year-old daughter at the Peck Mansion in Michigan avenue. Mrs. Bien said today that she did not know he was in the city. Ferdinand W. Peck, Jr., brother of Mrs. Bien, was shown a dispatch yesterday in which Warwick's name was linked with that of Mrs. Whittell. "Who is Mrs. Whittell?" he asked. "I never heard of the woman before in my life." When told that she was an actress and the former wife of a San Francisco millionaire, Peck said: "I do not know anything about Warwick's connection with the case, for the name of Whittell has never been discussed in the family. I do not believe my sister knows any more about the woman than I do." "Warwick is now in Chicago; is he visiting with Mrs. Bien?" he was asked. "Mr. Warwick has not been here for years, that is, he has not been in Chicago, except for a few hours when passing through the city. No, he never comes out to the house." Mrs. Whittell, formerly Josephine Cunningham, chorus girl, is the divorced wife of George Whittell, Jr., a son of millionaire George Whittell, owner of the Whittell Building and an immense amount of other San Francisco real property. The Whittells were married five years ago. After two stormy years they were divorced. Recently they met again and there was talk of a remarriage, but Mrs. Whittell has ended the prospect of a second honeymoon with the young San Franciscan by returning to the stage.

Conreid Has Odd Funeral--Impresario Buried from Metropolitan Opera House

New York, May 13.—Elaborate services were arranged for the funeral of Henry Conreid in the Metropolitan Opera House today. Of the 10,000 persons who have received tickets of admission, only a third were able to gain admission, and the police reserves were necessary to prevent confusion. The funeral was one of the most noteworthy held in New York in many years. The Metropolitan Opera orchestra, numbering 130 pieces, played Beethoven's Funeral March, after which there was a scriptural reading by Rabbi Stephan S. Wise. The boy choir from Parsifal sang two selections, and Mmes. Rappold and Homer and Messrs. Martin and Blass and the Metropolitan Orchestra gave Handel's Largo. The orchestra concluded with Chopin's Funeral March. Many prominent men were among the pallbearers. Mrs. Conreid, who was with the former Metropolitan Opera Company director when he died recently in Austria, with other relatives occupied boxes in the opera house.

Spotlights

Jack Gleason, prizefight promoter, baseball magnate and playwright, Frank McGlynn, actor, and William A. Hogan and J. T. Clark, angels, are co-defendants in a lawsuit. The complaint is the result of the recent production of Right's Might, written by Gleason and McGlynn. The plaintiff is the Western States Amusement Co., of which Abe Cohn is manager. The play is indirectly charged with failure to provide. The story goes that it did not pay its rent. Cohn is looking for $317.35, which he claims is due the theatre anent the production of Right's Might. During the week the play gathered between $1,200 and $1,500. The theatre management claims to have received $1,432.65 on the $1,750 contract. Gleason, it is said by one of the bondsmen, claims certain offsets as running against the theatre management's statement of indebtedness.

"At the Netherlands Monday night," says a dispatch from New York, "Geraldine Farrar, the American diva, her father, Sidney D. Farrar, Antonio Scotti and other friends were at dinner. Miss Farrar was looking intently at Mr. Scotti as she hummed the opening bars of La Traviata. A friend who observed the smiling glances exchanged by the two singers asked if it was true that there would be a June wedding in Paris. Miss Farrar told her questioner that she would answer the query from the Kronprinz Wilhelm Tuesday night. The reply was received by this friend today. It was that Miss Farrar will be married in June to Mr. Scotti."

Bruce McRae is again Ethel Barrymore's leading man in W. Somerset Naughan's three-act comedy, Lady Frederick, in which Charles Frohman will present Miss Barrymore at the Van Ness Theatre a few weeks hence. He is seen as a middle-aged Englishman of an excellent country family, who has lead rather a gay life and now seeks the hand of Lady Frederick.

Vera Michelena's marriage to Pat Shindler, musical director of the company in which she has been playing this season, has become known.

Henry W. Savage intends to send a special orchestra of twenty men to this city with the production of The Merry Widow. These instrumentalists in conjunction with the regular

Russo Fights in New York

NEW YORK, May 19. William Le Grand Howland, composer and impresario, told Signora Russo, wife of the forthcoming Manhattan Opera House tenor, that she had a voice that ought to be making her fortune in grand opera. Signor Dominico Russo heard about it and challenged Howland to step into the back yard, and now Thomas J. Wilhelm, secretary to Howland, threatens to sue Russo for half biting off his hand. The mixup came about promptly after Signor Russo had got back to New York from a western concert tour last Sunday and found a letter his wife had addressed to her mother in California, telling what a wonderful voice Howland had said she had. Russo, jealous, challenged Howland to physical combat in the back yard of their boarding house. The battle was progressing evenly and with enthusiasm, when Thomas Wilhelm, Howland's secretary, came upon the scene. He caught hold of Russo as the tenor was lunging at Howland's chin, and the interruption of the well timed thrust so infuriated the signor that he turned aside from his first adversary and buried a whole and perfect set of teeth in the writing hand of the impresario's secretary. Russo is a great little scrapper. Some years ago he and Col-lamarino, the mezzo, played a domestic engagement out here, and the little singer used to vary the monotony of living by using the buxom Col-lamarino as a punching bag.

Diamond Causes Trouble In the Chorus

CHICAGO, May 26.—There is a fine mixup at the Great Northern Theatre over a footlight flirtation and the ownership of a diamond ring. Marie Vernon has the ring and Naomi Dale wants it. The manager of The Alaskan Company, W. P. Cullen, is the court of appeals, but he has not handed down a decision. The Alaskan has one specialty called 'Snowballing,' in which snowballs made of yarn are hurled back and forth from stage to audience. The volleying is kept up for several minutes amid general hilarity. A man, whose identity is yet to be known, has been a constant visitor and has regularly occupied a seat in the front row directly within range of Miss Dale's eyes. He has taken the keenest delight in the snowball number and has been tossing snowballs back to her with regularity. Friday night he attached the ring in question to one of the missiles. Miss Dale failed to realize what had been passed to her and threw the snowball in another direction. It came back presently and landed squarely in the hands of Miss Vernon, who had watched its flight with interest from the outset. Miss Vernon was not slow to see the prize and appropriate it. And then, of course, she bragged. Yesterday Miss Dale received a letter advising her to see if some girl in the company wasn't wearing a new ring. A look of scorn was the best Miss Dale got from Miss Vernon and both prepared for a determined struggle for the ring. And now Miss Dale says if Mr. Cullen's decision doesn't go her way she will ask some justice for a writ of replevin, while Miss

Vernon is equally vehement in declaring that she would like to see anybody get that ring. "If you were boys," said Mr. Cullen to the girls, "I would suggest that you go out in the alley and settle it. But as you are not, and as I don't want to see you lose any hair, I'm going to put you under bonds to keep away from each other."

Spotlights

The former Hazlett Stock Company of Auburn has been reorganized under the title of the Eddie Hall Stock Company and will play the northern mountain towns.

Next season Henry E. Dixey in Mary Jane's Pa, will be sent by Henry W. Savage on a complete tour of the country. Dixey's Chicago engagement is proving so prosperous that it may continue until July.

"The day we celebrate" will be doubly eventful this year, for it is then that The Merry Widow will make her first appearance in our midst. Henry W. Savage is to send the enormous production direct across the continent and the musical furor of the century will be seen here to every possible advantage.

Nat C. Goodwin and Edna Goodrich will give their final performance of The Genius on Sunday night at the Van Ness Theatre. The play is crowded with laughs and suits the Goodwin comedy line to perfection.

The Willard Mack Stock Company of Salt Lake City is at present composed of: Ralph Stuart (stock star), T. N. Heffron, Geo. B. Baldwin, William Marion, Howard Foster, Arling Alcine, John C. Davis, Joe Kennedy, Lee Millar, James Logan, Mary Hall, Anna Cleveland and Callie Gates.

Klaw & Erlanger will put out McIntyre and Heath next season in The Steeplechasers, by H. A. DuSouchet. The tour will open in New York.

Maclyn Arbuckle, whose tour in The Round Up, Klaw & Erlanger and Joseph Brooks' big play of the Arizona desert, ends shortly, is delighted with his new play, The Circus Man, by Eugene Presbrey. The playwright read the play to him in Cleveland. He feels that Mr. Presbrey, in dramatizing Holman Day's book, Squire Phin, has given him the best opportunity of his life for the creation of a stage character of importance.

Klaw & Erlanger and Joseph Brooks have accepted Eugene W. Presbrey's dramatization of Rex Beach's latest novel, The Barrier. The play will be produced next season with Guy Standing in the role of Lieut. Meade Burrell, and Theodore Roberts as John Gale, a character which will give Mr. Roberts the opportunity to create another role of the distinct American type. The scenes of Mr. Beach's novel are laid in Alaska. Its love story is his best. The environment of his characters and the action of the plot demand big scenic effects, which the firm will provide.

Klaw & Erlanger have closed a contract with Henry Beach Needham for his play on American political life entitled Senator West. This is the play with which President Roosevelt's name was identified last winter, so much so that some of his more ardent admirers were circulating the report that he was writing a play. The play deals with political complications in Washington and the Middle West, but has a real love story running through it. The announcement is of unusual interest, as it has been read and approved by some of the most prominent of our national figures, including ex-President Roosevelt, Postmaster-General Frank H. Hitchcock, Senators La Follette and Beveridge and Congressman Victor Murdock. Mr. William Loeb, Jr., Collector of the Port of New York and formerly Secretary of President Roosevelt, says, "I am delighted to hear that Mr. Needham has placed his play so auspiciously, and I know that President Roosevelt will be glad to hear it, as he was intensely interested in the theme and the sincere message which Mr. Needham is sending to the country in this drama. We have had a great many Washington plays, but I know that Mr. Roosevelt believed this one to be real politics."

Little Nemo has closed its tour in Chicago. This big cartoon musical comedy, the biggest ever staged, will make a tour of the South, beginning early in the fall.

Oliver Morosco's Company Is Scoring Heavily In The Circus Girl In Los Angeles

LOS ANGELES, May 20.—The Belasco Theatre and the first appearance of the new leading woman has been the general topic of conversation. Three of the local houses are offering musical comedy this week and each one drawing crowds. The people like it so the managements should be satisfied. Richard Bennett will head the Belasco company this summer. Lewis S. Stone is to take a vacation but will return in the early fall and makes his first appearance in the anniversary bill. After Miss Hobbs, the Belasco Theatre company is to play Beau Brummel and Howard Scott should have one of the chief artistic opportunities of his career in the Mansfield role. Mercedes Temple, who left the Morosco musical comedy forces to join Kolb and Dill, has resigned from that company. When A Milk White Flag is staged at the Burbank in three or four weeks Miss Temple will again be seen on the Main street stage. Vilma Stech, a sister of Olga Stech, the new Kolb and Dill soubrette, has gone into the chorus at the Majestic. According to an official announcement, a deal has been entered into whereby the Shuberts will take possession of the Auditorium about September 1st. They are said to have contracted the big theatre for a term of years, and will play a variety of attractions. While here Mr. Shubert stated that he proposed making Western productions simultaneous with the productions in the East.

BELASCO.—Sunday night marked the close of The Dollar Mark. This week the Belasco Theatre company are presenting Jerome K. Jerome's comedy Miss Hobbs. Florence Reed has made her bow to the patrons of the house. Miss Reed is a very attractive young woman, and while this particular play does not give her an opportunity to show her capabilities, still we believe that she will not be a disappointment. Miss Reed makes an ideal man-hater and she also wears some beautiful gowns. Lewis S. Stone as Wolf Kingsearl shows wonderful comprehension of the requirements of the role. Charles Ruggles makes an admirable Kingsearl Minor. Richard Vivian is cast as George Jessop. Ida Lewis is most satisfactory as the lovable match-making aunt, Susan Abby. Adele Farrington as Mrs. Percival Kingsearl and Beatrice Noyes as Millicent are very good in their respective roles.

BURBANK.—Again we have musical comedy at the Burbank Theatre, and this time the company is doing better than at any time previous. The piece itself is one of the best, the jokes are really funny, and the music is tuneful. The chorus is well costumed and the dances show hard work and good training. All of the Burbank favorites are happily cast and each one comes in for his share of the applause. Miss Agnes Cain-Brown is playing with the company for the week and her songs are among the best numbers on the program. She possesses a beautiful soprano voice and her songs, The Circus Girl and If You Only Will, fit her admirably. Mr. Beasley as Drivelli, the proprietor of the circus, sings in a very pleasing manner. The Uses of Advertisement and The Master of the Ring. Blanche Hall makes a decided hit in her song My Honey-moon Balloon, and she also has a number with Mr. Desmond, In the Ring. Henry Stockbridge and the show girls have a delightful rainy day song and Messrs. Desmond, Stockbridge and Mestayer sing I Love Her. There are other numbers that are equally good and each one in the cast appears at his best.

MAJESTIC.—Kolb and Dill are still pleasing patrons of the Majestic with their genuinely clever humor. Playing the Ponies is the piece they are using for the current week. There really is a plot to the piece and the musical hits are numerous. Easy Money by Mr. Chase is particularly good, and Telephone Me, Dearie, sung by Mabel Baker, Gertrude Alzora and Kolb and Dill, is one of the brightest of the recent crop of telephone songs. Sidney Grey is a likable plotter and Adele Rafter is a very fascinating accomplice. Olga Stech is a recent addition to the company. Miss Stech sings well and she is a clever little dancer. Her interpolated song, Beautiful Eyes, wins repeated encores. Mr. Duncan and Mr. Bronson are cast as jockey and trainer, respectively. The staging is faultless and the chorus pleasing.

GRAND.—The offering of Murray and Mack and their company is Shooting the Chutes. It is a rollicking musical comedy with new songs and a well gowned chorus that can sing also. The plot makes Mr. Murray the manager of an opera company, with several side issues occupying his attention, and Mr. Mack is a New York milk dealer who naturally visits the watering place, at which the play is laid. Max Bloom, Bob Harrington, Jack Curtis and Fred Huntley have ample opportunity for their best efforts. Lillie Sutherland does a pretty piece of dancing in Miss Hortense, in this number she is ably assisted by the chorus. Bessie Tannehill wins applause in a bit of genuine pathos depicting the seven ages of romance, from babyhood to the aged couple nearing the end of life's pathway hand in hand. Murray and Mack's burlesques on a ball game, a poker game and a boxing match are very amusing. The rest of the company are well cast and Shooting the Chutes pleases the patrons of the house.

ORPHEUM.—The bill for the week at the Orpheum is clever and well balanced. The headliner is Frank Fogerty, termed the Dublin Minstrel. He has been called a circus in himself and the term is well chosen as that is about what he is. Hawthorne and Burt have been seen here before and they produce as much fun as is at all necessary. Fred Ray and company present that laughable burlesque on the manners of ancient Rome, Noblest Roman of Them All. Arcadia sings and plays the violin and does both well. Margaret Moffat and her company continue to please in the playlet Awake at the Switch. Gordon and Marx hold over from last week as do Messrs. Step, Mehliner and King. There are the usual motion pictures.

LOS ANGELES.—Little Hip, the tiniest and most intelligent performing baby elephant, is at the Los Angeles this week. Other acts include the Atlantic City Quartette; Eva Westcott and company, in a playlet, The Butterfly Wife; Iva Donnetti, in a novelty monologue sketch; Tom J. Dugan, monologist and singer; and Manning and Dixon, the dope fiend cab driver and his Jew passenger. Motion pictures complete the bill.

EMPIRE.—Christine Hill and company in a playlet entitled Fate, form one of several strong attractions at the Empire this week. Christopher, a deft magician, entertains very cleverly with his black art, being assisted by Mlle. Verona. Very seldom is such clever contortion work seen in vaudeville as that of Genora and Theol. The Lucier Trio, harmony singers, are among the best seen at the Empire for some time. Al Franks, with illustrated songs, and the latest motion pictures complete a good bill.

FISCHER'S.—A clever bit of hot weather foolery is The E. Z. Mark, the Fischer offering of the week. The comedy company has been augmented and in this vehicle unlimited opportunities are offered for the display of their talents. Flo Morrison is bewitching as Mlle. Rena, a Parisian danseuse and sensational actress of San Francisco, while Hugh Metcalfe does a neat bit of character work as a foxy old youth of 60. Billy Onslow is clever in the role of Owen Riley, while the rest of the all-star cast are placed to advantage. Laura Banks makes a decided hit as an Irish boarding house keeper. The musical numbers and the dancing by the Roly Poly girls are attractive. A pleasing specialty is the Biddy dance in which the Roly Poly girls are featured with Billy Onslow.

UNIQUE.—A once-act musical comedy, The Mischief Maker, is the offering for the week at the Unique Theatre. The plot has to do with an Irishman, Jerry Maloney and a pious deacon who get into a tangle over their love affairs. Will Armstrong plays Jerry and sings Honeymoon Hall. Miss Bauman is cast as the girl who causes the trouble. Jack Martin as the deacon pleases with his song Mornin' Cy. Arthur Vane has a solo number, What the Milkman Knows, and a duet with Miss Parker. Miss Parker as a demure little country maiden sings Whistle and I'll Wait for You. Stella Adams has returned to the company and her song hit is Under the Tropical Moon. Irene Earle furnishes the illustrated songs and motion pictures complete the bill.

WALKER.—Manager Harry Pieper of the Walker Theatre has a variety of good acts to offer this week. Trixeda and Robinson head the list.

Robinson is a comedian who scores successfully with his audience. Miss Trixeda is a clever and attractive foil for him and makes her own especial appeal to the women because of the gowns she wears. Jessie Lee, possessor of a phenomenal baritone voice, sings Gee, I Wish That I Had a Girl, and other songs. Emerson and Sumner draw the laughs with their sketch, Almost. Marjorie Dalton is a character comedienne with a good voice. Marco, the Mysterious, is a clever conjurer. T. Theodore Thomas keeps the audience almost screaming with laughter while he tells his jokes. Joseph Manley sings Blue Feather, a late New York success.

REGAL.—The Main street Regal Theatre program for this week includes Cornell and Fisher in a comely sketch, The Stockbroker; E. F. Allison in a musical act; Miss Swan Wood, solo dancer; James Hetherington in illustrated songs; Ransom's orchestra, and new motion pictures.

On account of a lack of security for the rent of the Temple Auditorium Theatre the performance of Patience, a comic opera scheduled to take place Saturday evening, was not presented. Owing to the small number of people in attendance the management of the company would have been unable to pay expenses, and when the request was made for security no one was willing to take the responsibility. The opera was called off and the audience was informed that their money would be refunded on Monday.

Personals

RUTH WHITE, who was forced by illness to retire to her home in New York early in the present season, is to be starred all alone late next season in a new musical pantomime.

ARTHUR R. WILBER, formerly manager of Hoyt's A. Texas Steer, Hoyt's A. Midnight Bell and other attractions, has filed a petition in bankruptcy in New York, with liabilities amounting to $42,445.18, with no assets.

GEORGE FOSTER PLATT, whose direction of the stage at the Valencia Theatre is the talk of people interested in theatrical productions, has just been engaged by Lee Shubert to assume the direction of the famous New Theatre, New York City, which will be opened August 1st. This position is, without exception, the finest of the kind in America and since accepting the offer Mr. Platt has been in receipt of a score of congratulatory telegrams from prominent theatrical and newspaper folk all over the country. It is no small honor for a local playhouse to be able to furnish the director for America's representative theatre.

NEW YORK, May 16.—The Man from Mexico, H. A. Du Suchet's rollicking farce, which William Collier made famous a decade ago in New York, was welcomed back to the stage at the Garrick last week. From the beginning of the first act to the end of the last Mr. Collier kept the large audience in outbursts of laughter. The farce fits Mr. Collier's personality completely. No matter how absurd the situations are, he easily manages to twist them into occasions of merriment. The play has been reburnished somewhat since it was presented here last, but has not suffered any in the making over. Its main features are all preserved, and the play might have been written around events of the present year, so true to life are they. The prison scene on Blackwell's Island, where Benjamin Fitzhugh sojourns for thirty days, for instance, might easily have been intended to satirize a recent event. The performance of J. G. Saville as Colonel Roderick Majors, who tries to help his friends in trouble, stood out well in a good cast. Helena Collier Garrick as Clementina Fitzhugh got liberal applause. * * * Robert Edeson, who began the season at the Hudson Theatre last fall in The Call of the North, George Broadhurst's dramatization of Stewart Edward White's story, Conjuror's House, came back last week to act the role of Ned Trent for a week at the Grand Opera House. His company remains unchanged, and the strong melodramatic flavor of the play is the same as before. The audience liked it, and the west side's reception to the actor was increased by the presence of a theatre party composed of 250 members of the Knights of Columbus. * * * With Mr. Guy Bates Post as the star, The Bridge, a new play by Rupert Hughes, was produced in the Opera House, Providence, R. I., last Monday, by Mr. Harrison Grey Fiske. It was very well received by the first night audience. Mr. Post receiving general curtain calls. The big scene shows a vast cantilever bridge with a small army of men at work upon it. * * * The Game of Love, a new play by Federico Mariani, an Italian author, was brought out last week at Albaugh's Theatre, Baltimore, under favorable circumstances, demonstrating the author's capabilities at playwriting in English, this being his first drama on the English speaking stage. He has written several plays for the leading actors of his own country. The Game of Love was well received. The leading players in the company are: E. J. Ratcliffe, Josephine Lovett, Fred Strong, Florence Lester, Gertrude Berkley, Sheldon Lewis and William Norton. The play is soon to open here. * * * In the Fair Co-ed, a new three-act college comedy, with music, in which Elsie Janis is starring, George Ade proves that he has not yet "written out." Ade has furnished so many comedies that friends of the author of Fables in Slang have been afraid that he would write himself out. But thus far the Indiana Hoosier story teller seems to be keeping up a Shakespearian pace as to the number of plays turned out, but George doesn't try to emulate the Bard of Avon in the quality of his poetry. The music of The Fair Co-ed was supplied by Gustave Luders, although by far the most entertaining songs were the college choruses skillfully introduced in each act by the students of the typical western college—a kind of cross between a university and a private military academy. The production was so successful at the Knickerbocker where it first went when it struck town from its try-out on the road, that when its allotted time was out at the Knickerbocker, Manager Charles B. Dillingham made arrangements to continue its run at the Criterion where it now is. Elsie Janis as Cynthia Bright, the only co-ed in the college, was as usual fair to view, and easily carried out the illusion that all of the boys and some of the professors had gone distracted over her. Throughout the play she gave samples of her ability as an imitator, leaving her main impersonations until the last, the best imitations being those of Anna Held, Eddie Foy and Ethel Barrymore. * * * Miss Henrietta Crosman, who made us all sit up and listen a few seasons ago in her Mistress Nell, in which she made such a charming boy, is scoring another success this season at Wallack's Theatre in Sham, a comedy by Geraldine Bonner and Elmer Harris, under the personal direction of Maurice Campbell. The story is that of a young girl whose father had moved in the best circles and had left her an income of only about $200 a month upon which to live. That sum proved wholly inadequate to keep up the style to which she had been accustomed. Her rich aunts were trying to marry her off to a genuinely wealthy mine owner from the West, with whom there was a young man of the heroine's choice. She decides to accept the poor young man and to quit shamming. She has run into debt with the butcher, the grocer, and the dress-makers, and she decides to part with some of the heirlooms in the form of the family jewels. She sends for the family jeweler with a view of having him sell a supposedly valuable pearl necklace, only to learn from him that several years ago her father had had him remove all the real pearls for the purpose of settling bills against the household at that time, and that the pearls now in the necklace are shams. She finds that she came by her sham habits honestly, as her father had been shamming more or less all of his life. Then and there she decides to give up shamming, saying that she would rather dwell in Harlem and live on canned goods for the rest of her natural life than to keep up shamming any more. The play is full of bright lines and comical situations, and ought to make its way triumphantly from coast to coast. * * * One of the most pronounced successes of the season is that of Thompson Buchanan's comedy of modern life called A Woman's Way, at the Hackett Theatre, in which William A. Brady is starring Grace George, who is assisted by a capable company with Frank Worthing as leading man. The play tells of the novel manner in which a young wife wins back the waning love of her husband who has become somewhat infatuated with a young widow who is something of an adventuress. An accident to an automobile in which the husband and the wife's rival were riding was the means of bringing about some amusing incidents. The play is full of interest to every man of prominence who has ever been under the temporary searchlight of publicity and no one but a real newspaperman like Mr. Buchanan could ever have depicted such truthful scenes in which the reporters and photographers of big metropolitan dailies try to ascertain the truth and how they are frequently baffled. Miss George herself as the wife who won back her husband before it was too late, was all that could have been desired in the part, both in personal appearance and in the tact displayed in the portrayal of the role. The cast included Henry Miller, Jr., whose name is a valuable asset to the cast, although admirers of his father would not yet like to accept him as a substitute for the actor who has made that name famous in the dramatic world. Of the remainder of the excellent company, Robert Warwick, Edward Lynch and Dorothy Tennant (who will be remembered as the College Widow) are all deserving of especial mention. Mr. Brady is one of the very few managers who would have seen enough of merit in A Woman's Way to present it in New York, for the simple reason that it was written by a New York newspaperman, the rule here, as elsewhere, being to see little merit in material close at hand as long as it is possible to get foreign plays. There are several New York managers who are now evidently regretting that they don't always read plays before sending them back to the struggling authors. * * * Miner & Gerard broke into Broadway at Blaney's Lincoln Square Theatre last night with a burlesque entitled The Follies of the Day, which is a conglomeration of vaudeville acts, specialties and girls. The program described it as "a series of incidents strung together for laughing purposes. There is no plot; it is too warm to bother with that, but if you insist, furnish your own." Nobody tried, but nearly every one—and the house was packed—laughed more than once. The humor was strongly of the good old horse-play variety, and there was much acting in the audience, a man and a girl singing from the boxes and a young woman walking down the center aisle and up on the stage, all in one number. The audience demanded so many repetitions that the curtain did not go down until 11:30 o'clock, and at that two scenes were omitted. One scene showed Governor's Island and a good military drill and mock battle by seventeen 'soldiers.' Another specialty was furnished by Miss Hayes and four dancing girls, who really danced, and Sandy McGregor imitated Harry Lauder. * * * Another large and appreciative audience greeted Mr. Mantell at the Academy last Monday in his forceful presentation of Shakespeare's Richard III. This role, as portrayed by this popular Shakesperian player, is graphically delineated. Marie Booth Russell came in for a large share of the honors. * * * New York's mania for music, which even two grand opera houses are unable to satisfy, will have the effect of turning the Academy of Music back to its original uses at the beginning of the next theatrical season. If an elaborate program, which has been laid out for the old landmark in Fourteenth street succeeds, it may even crowd melodrama and musical comedy out of the house through the entire year. G. Pinsuti, a nephew of Pinsuti, composer, who was identified with grand opera at the Metropolitan in the regime of Maurice Grau, has made an arrangement with the Academy management by which he will open a grand opera season of indefinite length and at reasonable box office prices in that house, beginning on September 4th. While the enterprise will be experimental, it has the sound financial backing of rich Italian residents of New York, which has justified the Academy's management in arranging for no further attractions, at least in the early months of next season. This departure from the Academy's more recent policy was arranged fully before the death of E. G. Gilmore, upon representations to him that the plan carried every prospect of financial success. The plan is to present Italian and German grand operas, the list embracing almost eighty standard works. Performances will be given nightly and it is promised that there will be four or five changes in the bill every week. The company is being recruited by Mr. Pinsuti. In principals, ballet, chorus and musicians it will comprise more than 175 people. Efforts are under way to obtain prominent singers for all the leading roles. ROB ROY.

CARSON CITY, Nevada, May 22.—Edgar Ryder, well known in vaudeville, has opened the Lake Amusement Place and is receiving extensive patronage. Master Charlie Steed, the little boy with the big voice, sings the illustrated songs and he has captured the town. At the Park Theatre, Manager Brulin continues to display a fine line of films and his house is crowded nightly. M. E. S.

PORTERVILLE, May 22.—Of all the musical shows that have been here this season, The Burgomaster, which held the boards Saturday night, was the largest, if not the best. It was somewhat of a society event as Porterville's 'higher-ups' were nearly all in attendance. The show was a clever mixture of mirth, music and pretty girls from start to finish. Harry Hermen appears in the title role of the Burgomaster and his makeup and acting were above the average. A feature connected with the show Saturday night and worthy of special mention was the shower of flowers given the actor folks by the people of Porterville. After the curtain went down on the first act, a huge basket, filled to overflowing with over fifty exquisite bouquets of sweet peas and roses, and special bouquets for those in the leading roles, was carried to the front of the stage. The curtain was again raised, the members of the company came forward and while the audience burst forth in a storm of applause, took the flowers from the basket and distributed them. The final chorus was again repeated and the festive scene closed. The company's appreciation was expressed during a scene in the second act which is a society garden scene. The members of the company were seated about the little tables all of which were bedecked with flowers and every member wore a cluster of roses or sweet peas as a sign of individual appreciation. All together it was one of the most pleasing things that has happened at the local theatre in some time.

LONG BEACH, May 15.—An important change will be made in Byde-a-Wyle beginning Sunday. On that day a new bill will be put on at the matinee, when Maud Beatty will make her premiere appearance. Miss Beatty is a beautiful woman, a delightful actress with a well cultivated soprano voice and will add great strength to Mr. Clark's aggregation. Hereafter the initial performance will be given

Sunday afternoons at Byde-a-Wyle.

RENO, Nev., May 17.—Virginia Harned Sothorn, wife of E. H. Sothorn, has taken up her residence in this city for the purpose of gaining the coveted divorce decree refused her three weeks ago by Judge Pike. According to the report, Mrs. Sothorn has rented a house in this city, and after living here for three days again resumed her theatrical obligations. It is given as her intention that she will return here a few days before the expiration of the six months' required residence period, and in her suit for divorce filed at the end of that time declare herself to have been a bona fide resident of the state for the prescribed period. Attorneys for Mrs. Sothorn in her recent divorce action refuse to either affirm or deny the report and will not make public anything regarding the plan of action by their client.

MARYSVILLE, Cal., May 19.—At the Marysville Theatre, May 14, Otis Skinner in The Honor of the Family, was greeted by an immense audience. Miss Haswell also made a hit and the character acting of the two old men was great, and the snow scene in the last act was fine. We consider Mr. Atkins the 'head-liner' in securing excellent productions for his Marysville patrons. MARCUSE.

VICTORIA, B. C., May 22.—The Gardiner Stock Company 'made good' on the occasion of their first appearance at the Victoria Theatre last Monday night. The house was packed and enjoyed The Case of Rebellious Susan. The boxes were occupied by leaders of society, and officers of the Navy and Militia. As to the personnel of the company, Darrell Standing is the star member. In stage presence, style, finish, elocution and temperament he is every inch an actor, and an actor of the old school who speaks, not rants. Every syllable was distinctly heard throughout the house, and his lines were delivered with a beautiful modulation of tone which is seldom heard in the West. It is probable that the next best work was done by Katherine Brooke, the 'Advanced Woman,' whose makeup and style were perfect, and whose acting was exactly adapted to the part. Mabel Van Buren, as Lady Susan Harribin, pleased the audience. She has a nice manner and speaks naturally, but not very distinctly. Hilda Gilbert was vivacious as Mrs. Quesnell, dressed nicely and carried herself through the part acceptably. Orrin Knox was amusing in the eccentric part of Ferguson Fybus. This is the 'soulful' poet who wished to make his mark on the age.

SEATTLE, Wash., May 17.—Moore Theatre—The Ben Greet players closed a very successful engagement. Otis Skinner opens tonight for a week's run with The Honor of the Family. Percy Haswell is his leading woman, and from advance sales the engagement will undoubtedly be satisfactory. Seattle Theatre—Selma Herman and her supporting stock company presents Human Hearts this week. Lois Theatre—The Pantages Stock Company will run the week of May 16 with The Man on the Box. Norris & Rowe's Circus is billed for 20, 21, and 22. The Orpheum, Pantages and Star vaudeville houses are playing to capacity. At the Orpheum are: A Night at the Circus; Cheridah Simpson; A Spotless Reputation;

Manager John Cort has reached home from New York. In speaking of the attractions that he will present over the Northwestern Theatrical Association circuit during the coming year, he gave this information: "The principal stars which I will have to offer at the Moore next season are Maude Adams in What Every Woman Knows; William H. Crane in Father and the Boys; Blanche Bates in The Fighting Hope; Max Figman, Frances Starr in The Easiest Way; Billie Burke in Love Watches; Charles B. Hanford in Shakespearean repertoire; David Warfield in both The Auctioneer in which he scored a great success at the Moore several years ago, and The Music Master; Marie Cahill in The Boys and Betty; Victor Moore in The Talk of New York. Dustin Farnum in Cameo Kirby, a Liebler attraction, disposing of the statement that the Lieblers intended to withdraw their bookings from syndicate houses. We will also have The Traveling Salesman, The Third Degree, King Dodo, Commencement Days, in which Frederick V. Bowers will be featured, and The Round Up. At the Grand will be seen The Time, the Place and the Girl; The Girl Question; The Top of the World; A Parisian Model; The Lion and the Mouse; The man of the Hour; The Land of Nod, and Just Out of College. My three road productions will open in the East about the same time. Commencement Days will open in Milwaukee on September 5, King Dodo with Eleanor Kent featured, in Montreal on September 2, and Max Figman at Savannah, Georgia, on September 2, going into the Tulane Theatre in New Orleans the following week."

Harry Hermesen

The Burgomaster, which is playing the longest season of any musical comedy on the road, having played the Coast twice this season, has retained most of its success and popularity through the efforts of its chief comedian, Harry Hermesen, who is this year playing the title part. Mr. Hermesen is a comedian of talent and is very happy in his portrayal of Old New York.

John Drew in Jack Straw at the Van Ness

John Drew comes to the Van Ness Theatre next Monday night. Mr. Drew's play this season is Jack Straw, a comedy by W. Somerset Maugham, a British dramatist, whose work is said by discriminating British critics to be well worth watching. From all accounts Mr. Drew hasn't had a more entertaining play for a long time, and the character he himself assumes, that of an eccentric Pomeranian prince, is said to be as well suited to him as if it had been written expressly for him. The critics tell us that the dialogue is witty and clever without ever getting tiresomely brilliant, that the character drawing is masterly, and that there is a vein of gentle satire in the play that is reminiscent of Goldsmith. Mr. Drew is well supported this season. Miss Rose Coghlan, who was a star herself in the long ago when stars were not made in a night, is with the company. She has the role of a vulgar parvenue of extreme snobbish tendencies. Helen Freeman plays the part of the pretty girl who captures the prince, and there are excellent parts, too, for Adelaide Prince, Grace Henderson, Edgar L. Davenport, Frank Goldsmith, Lario Majeroni, E. Soldene Powell and Edwin Nicander. The costumes of the ladies, all from the latest Parisian models, are of special interest to feminine theatre-goers. During Mr. Drew's engagement, which is for two weeks, matinee will be given Wednesdays and Saturdays.

Frohman's Repertoire Theatre

Concerning the Repertoire Theatre that Charles Frohman proposes to establish in London and later if it succeeds there, to duplicate in America, The London Telegraph says editorially: "It may not be uninteresting to point out in this connection that although Mr. Frohman's control is in some way associated with other West End theatres, The Duke of York's is to be regarded as his headquarters in London. Few London playhouses can, within recent years, at any rate, boast of having enjoyed such consistent success. In choosing it for his new venture, Mr. Frohman consequently parts with a very substantial aspect in exchange for what must, for the moment, be considered a problematic victory. 'The Repertoire Theatre,' he remarked, 'will be the direct outcome of the labor—fairly successful, I am happy to say—of the authors, actors and managers whose names are, or have been, bracketed with The Duke of York's. It does not come to us as a bequest from a millionaire patron, or as a custody from the State. It is to be devoted to the exploitation of the new drama. This, nevertheless, will not altogether prevent us from presenting occasionally, at a matinee, one of the old classics of the stage. And if the project succeeds, I shall go a step further, and turn the Empire Theatre in New York to like account.'

Personals

EDWIN ARDEN and MARIE WAINWRIGHT are in the company appearing in support of Marie Doro.

ARTHUR MACKLEY, the new stage director of the stock at the Grand Theatre, Sacramento, is showing people of that city some new wrinkles in production.

Manager WALTER HOFF SEELY is back after a week's vacation spent in the southern part of the state. He is brown as a berry and greatly refreshed in mind and body.

J. W. MCBRIDE, who has been connected with the Shubert management at the New York Hippodrome, was in San Francisco this week, en route to Australia for the Shuberts.

MR. AND MRS. FRANK BLAIR, daughter and grandchildren, passed through here Thursday on their way to Seattle, where Mr. Blair will direct the productions at the New American Music Hall.

ISABELLE FLETCHER, formerly leading woman of Ye Liberty Theatre stock company in Oakland, was recently married in Portland, Ore., to Louis Boardman, a San Francisco attorney. Mrs. Boardman has retired from the stage and intends to devote her future to her home life. The news of her wedding came as a surprise to her friends in this city.

THE public has seen the last of Ada Rehan, the once famous leading woman of Augustin Daly's great stock company. Miss Rehan has gone to Europe to spend the summer at her home in England. She was gray-haired and feeble as she went aboard the ship in New York. Since the death of Augustin Daly, Miss Rehan has been practically in retirement. Once, several years after his death, she organized a company, but she did not have strength for the work, and she retired after a short season.

The Eckhardt company is playing a three weeks' engagement in Boise.

In her new play of Lady Frederick, Ethel Barrymore is seen as an Irish widow with a scarcity of funds but plenty of suitors. The scenes of the three acts of the comedy are laid in Monte Carlo. Lady Frederick is from the pen of W. Somerset Maugham, who wrote John Drew's success, Jack Straw.

Correspondence

SACRAMENTO, May 20.—The Clunie is dark this week. The Grand Theatre Co. is playing The Lost Trail. Next week, Richard Carvel. At Pantage's, week May 16th: Caesar Rivoli, character impersonations; Four Derdeens, casting novelty; Dawson and Whitfield, talk-about comedians; Quigg and Nickerson, musical celebrities; Signor St. Clair, harp soloist; Alton and Oliver, dramatic playlet.

MINNEAPOLIS, May 7.—As a San Franciscan, passing through Milwaukee during the production of Peter Pan at the Davidson Theatre, of which I was a witness the other night, I think a few lines will be interesting to your readers, especially concerning the brilliant performance of Beatrice Nichols, who was such a favorite in San Francisco. The piece is packing the theatre and is scheduled for two weeks. Miss Nichols' Peter Pan is a thing of joy, the personification of youth, of brightness. Her feet twinkle, her laugh ripples (you know her laugh), and when she appeals for Tinker Bell's life there is real applause and real waving of handkerchiefs. I didn't see Miss Adams in the part, but if she made it please audiences more than Miss Nichols succeeds in doing, it must have been something of an ovation.

Van Ness Theatre

Nat Goodwin offered The Genius for his second and last week and the pretty little play has been received with much evidence of satisfaction, for it brings the comedian back to that style of comedy which allows him a little touch of burlesque, of which he has no equal on our stage. As nearly every theatregoer knows, The Genius, one Jack Spencer, who is impersonated by Mr. Goodwin, determines to become noted for his abilities in three arts—painting, music and modeling, of which he has no knowledge whatever. To reach this end he engages a painter, a musician and a sculptor and makes a compact to put them on Easy street and make them famous, while he poses as a genius—a master of three arts. Size up the possibilities of all this and see where Goodwin can use his little burlesque shots. In this character the comedian is back in his own province and is most amusing and entertaining. He endeavors to win the love of an art dilettante who will have none of him because of his lack of artistic temperament. While cultivating this temperament he falls in love with the studio model, who is played by Edna Goodrich. This is one of Miss Goodrich's pet parts and she plays the young girl with pretty and simple effect. The three real fellows of the studio are impersonated by Neil O'Brien, who is a mighty good actor but a bad German dialectician; Arthur Behrens, who is not certainly an Irish comedian, and Edw. W. Morrison, who is all to the good with a fine French dialect and a real French artistic manner and accompanying characteristics. Zeffie Tilbury is good as the young woman who imagined she is gifted with the artistic temperament. The girl who does the animated laughing scene is a clever young woman. Carl Anthony, who plays the art critic and great authority is extremely good in his assumption of the part and Lovell J. Sherman, as the bashful aspirant for art honors does the small part well.

Valencia Theatre

George Osbourne and Charles Dow Clarke are the twin stars of York State Folks, and each contributes an individual character well worthy of stardom, yet each so diametrically opposed to each other that the gentleness, submissiveness and loveliness of one is but enhanced by the cranky, crabbed, stubbornness of the other. For the nonce, Paul McAllister and Florence Oakley are relegated to comparatively small parts, which, although they are of vital importance to the development of the play's plot, are yet small in that they afford those talented players but minor opportunities for acting—none in fact. But Clarke and Osbourne or Osbourne and Clarke, whichever way suits you best, for there is no difference in the merit of their acting—these two make a play all themselves. One is the inventive musician, who has puttered away all his life on an organ which shall be a wonderful affair, the other his life-long friend, a practical and well-to-do country wagon-maker, autocrat of his community and a man unwilling to ever admit himself in the wrong. When the wayward son of the autocrat loses his father's money gambling, it is to the old musician he goes for help, because he knows and loves the old man, and is engaged to marry the oldster's niece. Genius seldom breeds affluence, hence it is from a trust fund that the old man lends him the money. A delayed remittance to the wayward boy from which he intends repaying his benefactor, is the cause of an opportunity for the stern father, already incensed because his old friend didn't oppose the encroachments of the new railroad, to make things unpleasant and accuse his boy's savior of theft. Of course, the check arrives in time to prevent complications; the boy marries his sweetheart despite the old father's opposition, and at the last the two old friends are re-united—one affluent through the purchase of a right of way over his property by the railroad and the other through the sale of his wonderful organ. Simple and almost obvious from the rise of the first curtain is the plot of this play, yet it affords the Valencia players rare character parts, most of which are excellently done. Robert Homans as an uncouth horse-trader, the ardent suitor of a young woman, (played by Edith Lyle) does himself proud. Gerald Harcourt as a young music teacher, Lillian Andrews as the old-maidish widow with a termagant tongue, and Zena Kiefe and Jesse Mendelson as the two children, all help to fill the picture, acting well the bits allotted them. The production is quite worth while.

Alcazar Theatre

Dorothy Vernon of Haddon Hall is one of those romantic costume plays that has secured a firm hold on theatregoers all over the country, and San Francisco is no exception to the rule. The Alcazarans give the play a very beautiful production and an entertaining performance, although Monday night's show was not up to the high Alcazar standard, as quite a number of the company seemed to falter in their lines. Evelyn Vaughan was the madcap Dorothy, and a bewitching maiden she looked. Bertram Lytell, as the intrepid and valiant Sir John Manners, was extremely likeable. Will R. Walling seemed to lack fire and authority in the character of Sir Malcolm Vernon. It might have been a happy thought to have given this part to Howard Hickman and to have cast Walling for the Earl of Rutland. John Maher played Perkins, the man of motley, with a fine disregard of melodramatic temptations, and Walter Whipple was surprisingly good as Lord Burleigh. Burt Wesner was Sir George Vernon, and most effective and decidedly satisfying in both his comedy and brusque, excitable moments. Adele Belgarde achieved one of the big hits, if not the biggest, by her magnificent performance of Elizabeth. It was a fine conception and splendidly acted. Her makeup, too, was an achievement. Bessie Barriscale was most attractive as Jennie Faxton, and Effie Bond a vigorous and effective little cook.

Princess Theatre

This is the last week of Piff Paff Pouff, that conglomeration of funny and entertaining nonsense. Fred Mace in the Eddy Foy part of Peter Pouffle has made a big, distinct hit and has further added to his laurels. James F. Stevens does the singing of the production and gets plenty of applause. Budd Ross presents a fine bit of artistic worth as Macaroni Piffle, and Edwin Emery shows up surprisingly well in musical comedy as the multi-millionaire. May Boley, Zoe Barnett, Helen Darling, and the beautiful and energetic chorus show to sparkling advantage. Next week Peggy From Paris.

Correspondence

OAKLAND, May 20.—The Orpheum with De Lussan and Mrs. Horton Forrest Phipps as the strong features, is easily our best attraction this week. These two ladies are artists in their respective lines. The balance of the bill, while not quite up to their standard, was entertaining. Four Sisters Amatis, Lillian Mortimer and company, Elise Schuyler; Angela Dolores; The Melnotte Twins and Grigolati's Famous Aerial Ballet, fill out the balance of the bill. The Macdonough has been dark this week, but will reopen Monday with Nat Goodwin and Edna Goodrich. Tennessee's Pardner is again with us at the Liberty, and although it has been played here several times, it seems to retain most of its drawing power. The play marks the final appearance of E. L. Bennison, one of Bishop's most popular as well as most capable actors, who leaves for the Alcazar after an engagement with Bishop's players covering a period of over two years. A Texas Sheriff, looking suspiciously like A Texas Ranger, with its surfeit of cowboys, Indians and soldiers, is the medium of packed houses at the Broadway and those who find enjoyment in the wild and woolly melodrama are certainly getting their fill. Next Monday Manager Smith will show a complete picture of the Burns-Johnson fight, in connection with a farce comedy. The Road to Yesterday will be the next attraction at the Liberty. Manager Bishop has concluded arrangements to have Mrs. Fiske appear at the Liberty in June. She will present her latest success, Salvation Nell. LOUIS SCHEELINE.

SPOKANE, WASH., May 16.—Lillian Russell, in Wildfire, 9-10, at the Spokane, with an excellent supporting company, to good houses. Mischa Elman canceled, 12. The Gingerbread Man, 13-15, good chorus, nice costumes, excellent electrical effects, fair houses. Black Patti Troubadours, 16-17, opened to fair house. The Jessie Shirley Stock Company ended a continuous engagement in the Auditorium Theatre of over four years. A Fly in the Honey, a curtain-raiser, by George D. MacQuarrie and Jessie Shirley, and The Baby Chase, with a cast of fourteen, eight of whom, including the principals, played in the opening performance, April 2, 1905. Their farewell week was packed nightly, and many wept at the closing performance. Following is a list of the cast which closed in The Baby Chase: George D. MacQuarrie, J. R. Amory, C. F. Ralston, Less C. Greer, Frank MacQuarrie, Byron Loucks, Laura Adams, Hazel Hamilton, Anna Quinn, Mabel Daulton and Jessie Shirley. The company has disbanded. Miss Shirley will take a long-needed rest and has made no plans for the future. Mr. Amory left, 16, for St. Paul, where he will open with the James Neill Co. 16-22, the Orpheum bill is exceptionally good. Camille D'Arville offers several operatic vocal selections, and there are numerous others as thoroughly enjoyable. Adelaide and Elizabeth M. Murray, The Sisters Gasch, Warren-Lyon-Meyers, Mazuz-Mazette, Ernest Yexas, moving pictures—big houses. The Washington has a strong bill: The Makereiko-Sanders Troupe, Leo Cooper Co., Billy Windom, Kelley-Reno, Virginia Grant and motion pictures—good houses. At Pantage's: The Four Bards, Prof. Roberts' trained rats, The Terry Twins, Marie Hendlicka, Ella Garrison Company, Adams-Mack. At the Auditorium Theatre (Harry C. Hayward, mgr.): Friday, May 28, afternoon and evening: Ben Greet Players, personal direction of Ben Greet, 100 in company, presenting a musical dramatic performance of Shakespeare's A Midsummer Night's Dream, Russian Symphony Orchestra. SMYTH.

SAN JOSE, May 16.—The chief event of the week is the benefit for Clyde Granger, which will come off Thursday night at the Victory. Harry Bercovich, who has charge of the program, has arranged an immense performance, including all the best talent obtainable. Among the leading features of the show will be seen three of San Jose's favorites, Mae Keene, Hope Mosher and Charles Yule, in an original sketch written especially for the occasion by Ray W. Harden, entitled Herbert's Affinity. At the Jose the bill offered is Mrs. Maud Evans, original songs and dances; Lafayette's dogs, acrobatic canines; Chartris Sisters, singers and whistlers; Pete Gerald, the man in Cork; and Scott and Wilson, Different Acrobats. Raymond Teall, who tried to find out just how bad a show town San Jose is at present, gave up at the Empire Thursday night after three weeks of poor business. He is now playing about Santa Cruz, Salinas, etc., on his way south to San Diego, where he succeeds Jim Post at the Garrick.

FRESNO, May 18.—People who are crying hard times should have been at the Empire last night and seen the illusion dispelling crowd. Capital and Labor, last week's bill, has been one of the hits of the Redmond company engagement. Charles Gunn and Alta Phipps, who have the leading roles, have added to their long list of friends by their clever work, while Ed Redmond has kept the spectators laughing with his effervescent comedy. Beginning Monday night A Banker's Holiday is the week's offering and one week of laughter is in store for the patrons of the cozy Empire. This will also be the last of the Redmond plays in Fresno for a time because the company will leave for San Jose on the 24th to open a summer engagement at the Victory. The Menzel stock company opened Monday night at the Empire, with Kerman Cripps in the lead. At the Novelty, The Players, under the management of Terry McKean, opened Monday in The American. Walter Newman and Bertha Foltz in the leads scored heavily. Dick Jose comes to the Barton Wednesday, May 19. He will have a great big audience.

Fred Giese, who has the Stockton and San Jose theatres, has just secured the Lodi Opera House.

Vaudeville

The Orpheum

This week's bill opens auspiciously with a magnificent dancing turn, executed by the Knight Brothers and Marion Sawtelle. They are exceedingly clever eccentric dancers and they do just enough singing to call attention to the superior quality of their foot work. Flo Adler, who is heard in popular ballads, is a buxom lassie, resplendently gowned, who gains the applause through the singing of a boy she places in one of the boxes. Really the boy, who is the feature, should be given a name on the program. Countess Rossi and Mons. Paulo have a very diverting singing turn. While the attractive countess is trying to reach high notes on the stage, Mons. Paulo is in a stage box doing some of the best pantomime seen locally for many moons. So wrapped up is he in the fair singer's efforts that he finally leaps up and clambers on to the stage, reaching the climax of audacity and humor by calling the Countess "You Shicken." The act winds up by the two singing a couple of solos. The Lulu Beeson Trio have a headliner act with their gorgeous setting depicting a scene on the Rio Grande, and with their dainty and graceful soft shoe dancing. The act is a hit of large proportions. The hold overs consist of The Frederick Allen Company in His Phantom Sweetheart; The Russell Brothers in Our Servant Girls; The Five Juggling Mortons; and the usual and entertaining moving pictures. Large audiences have prevailed all week.

Pantages-Empire

A decided novelty is to be found in the head-line act at the Empire this week, namely, the Gainsboro Girl. Special mention should be made of the electrical and scenic effects, which are worth a visit alone, aside from the vocal selections, which are admirably rendered. It is an artistic creation and well worthy as a feature act in any house. I should dread seeing the world's worst gymnasts if the Bruno, Kramer Trio are the greatest, as they style themselves. Their work is quite ordinary and contains nothing new. A slight departure from the usual vaudeville sketch is presented by Buchanan and Russell. A display of a pair of hand-cuffs and masculine underpinning, together with a couple of revolver shots make the act a trifle startling. The singing is good. The Boldens, a colored team, indulge in some clever acrobatic dancing. Hoyt and Marion contribute a farce that is ridiculous enough to be amusing. Fred Rivenhall, an Australian singing comedian, has a line of comedy selections that bring forth some laughs. Pantage's tuneful orchestra, together with unusually good motion pictures, complete the bill.

The Wigwam

As a rule Manager Harris has a strong card to offer his patrons, but this week's program commemorating the seventh anniversary of the popular Mission house, is easily the best offered within my recollection. It is customary to mention the head-line act, but there are several that come under that category in their own particular line. V. L. Granville in his Protean act, Twixt Daylight and Dawn, proves himself to be an actor of exceptional cleverness and versatility. Mr. Granville portrays no less than six different and distinct characters during the rendition of his act. The rapidity with which the changes of costume are effected is remarkable. Silver Threads Among the Gold, as rendered by Mons. J. Lavigne, holds the audience spellbound. Mr. Lavigne has a baritone voice of exceptional power and feeling, which just touches the right spot. The Meeh International Trio make you sit up and take notice with their weight-lifting and acrobatic Roman ring offering. Morton and Russell contribute some exceptionally clever and versatile lightning change character work. If you don't want to go into convulsions from laughter, don't stay to see West and Mack. But if you want to drive away the blues and dull care, stay by all means. May Ward's Dresden Dolls contribute some most ordinary singing and dancing, the latter a trifle better than the average. Abbreviated skirts don't make the hit they formerly did. The scenic equipment of the act is good, and a display of the Stars and Stripes brings forth the desired applause. Moving pictures complete the most versatile and all-around good card that shouldn't be missed.

The Thalia

Continues to present the usual good program. La Nole Bros. have a novel and clever act on a revolving ladder, which wins well-merited applause. Some neat and clever aerial gymnastics are contributed by Walton Bros. Rose Stevens comes in for a warm welcome with her popular vocal selections. Cricket Thorne, Margaret Ruse, Eva Rowland, Mlle. Lucille and other favorites are all accorded their goodly share of the applause. Moving pictures complete the bill.

The National

Manager Sid Grauman has a vocal feast offering for this week. As a rule, too, much of any one class of talent becomes monotonous in a vaudeville program, but when it is of the right sort it is decidedly the opposite, which it is in this case. Matt Keefe, the holdover, is repeating his popular success of last week and can't seem to give enough of his yodeling. Will Oakland's high tenor is a feature of the program which calls for repeated encores. The Monetta Five in their dainty musical turn have a number of well-chosen vocal selections, which are splendidly rendered. Some clever banjo playing is a feature of the act. King and Bailey, assisted by the Four Williams and Walker's Chocolate Drops, are a decided hit with their conglomeration of singing and dancing. The act is decidedly the liveliest of its kind presented in some time. El Barto proves a most clever and entertaining magician, and John King, the old-time minstrel, comes in for a good share of laughs. Cowboy Williams contributes some clever and difficult juggling. Some novel acro-

Fischer's

A highly amusing comedy is on tap this week, and more pleased audiences have seldom left a theatre. The big hit of the piece is secured by Will King, in one of his brilliant Hebrew characterizations. King is certainly a comer, and is going to be every bit as good as Barney Bernard. Ben Dillon, Tracy McDermott, Frank Vack, Dorothy Raymond and Nellie Montgomery are all exceptionally good, and the clever chorus is still a joy. The title of the play, Othello for a Day, is but an incident—it really hasn't anything to do with it, except to be attached to a mighty good and very funny vehicle. Next week, The Pagoda.

Vaudeville Notes

The Star Theatre has an exceptional strong card on tap this week. Kelly and Violette, the well-known favorites are repeating their former successes to popular approval at every performance. The Stadium Trio are worthy of higher-priced houses in their clever offering. Clever character dancing is indulged by Howard, with a number of costume changes. A clever and dainty little piece of femininity is to be found in Little Zena Keith, who contributes some exceptionally clever singing and dancing. Chas. Oro & Co. present a conglomeration, which nevertheless calls for a good share of laughs. Moving pictures complete a big show for the money. Next week a strong card is promised. Ollie Reid has been specially engaged to sing the illustrated songs.

John King, the well-known minstrel, will join Cohan and Harris' big production, which opens in Atlantic City the latter part of July. There will be eighty-five in the cast. Among the members will be such well-known names as Geo. Evans, Will Oakland, Julian Elting and the Exposition Comedy Four. James Gorman, of international repute, will have personal charge of the staging of the production, which will be the largest of its kind ever produced.

From the looks of things the main reason that prompted the erstwhile society favorite, Mrs. Horton Forest Phipps to take up professional dancing, was a lack of coin. Another attachment was filed against her salary at the Orpheum in Oakland this week for $85.50. The newest claim against Mrs. Phipps is made by the Cosgrave cloak and suit company and is for a suit and fur coat purchased two years ago. The articles cost $102.50 and plaintiffs assert that but $17 has been paid. Suit for the balance was begun in the justice court Friday of last week. Saturday afternoon, after the matinee, a deputy sheriff served a garnishment on the treasurer of the Orpheum Theatre requiring him to retain $85.50 of the money coming to Mrs. Phipps until further order of the court or until the debt shall have been paid. Mr. Phipps, the husband, it is stated by a representative of Rauer's collection agency, by whom the suit was commenced, promised Saturday that he would pay the bill, bringing the money to the office of the collection agency, but he failed to do so. To add to the dancer's troubles Nat Goodwin has sued them for $45 back rent as landlord of the house at 424 B street, Richmond.

Emile Subers, the minstrel man, married Miss Margaret Young, a Berkeley society belle Monday afternoon.

Louis B. Jacobs, traveling representative for Bert Levey, the independent agent, has just returned from a most gratifying trip through the Southwest, and Levey is now able to book for forty-five consecutive weeks, Western time, probably the longest circuit of houses west of Chicago. Mr. Jacobs reports that the Roosevelt dam through Arizona has opened up a lot of new territory and that conditions in all the territory visited looks prosperous and promising for the coming season. While on the trip Mr. Jacobs closed negotiations whereby all acts playing Levey's time after closing in Albuquerque will be booked out of Chicago on the Mozart Circuit, which secures time from coast to coast, around one hundred and fifty weeks. On account of the long jumps and the time lost, numerous houses were passed up. The following are some of the new time secured in which Levey will book in the future: California—Fresno, Los Angeles, San Diego. Arizona—Phoenix, Tucson, Douglas, Bisbee, Globe. Texas—El Paso, Albuquerque, Santa Fe, Las Vegas. Colorado—Trinidad, Colorado Springs, Pueblo, Leadville, Grand Junction. Utah—Provo, Brigham, Logan, Salt Lake City, Ogden. Nevada—Reno.

material substance through the excutories of the polucid cuticle with a sensible condensation of moisture upon the superficial exterior.

Elsie Schuyler is playing some time over the S. & C. circuit. She is at the Bell in Oakland this week.

Al Luttringer and Lillian Lucas will play Pantages Theatre this city May 23. They have one of the big successes of the circuit.

Mona E. Anson is singing illustrated songs at the Lyric Theatre, Salt Lake City.

The Three Biehls are playing this week at the Opera House, Watsonville. Leona Clifford is singing the illustrated songs.

Jacques, the Man of Mystery, Fred Lancaster, singer, and Pearl Mather, in illustrated songs, are playing La Petite Theatre, Watsonville, this week.

Hart's Theatre, San Mateo, week May 17.—Vera Burgess, singing and dancing soubrette; Miss C. E. Hart, illustrated song singer; Royal and Elliott, comedy act; and Asro L. Goodhue, banjo and singing act.

May 16 and week finds J. Bernard Dyllyn in Stockton at the Forest Theatre.

Archie Levy has contracted to book all attractions for the New Chutes when they open, and has also secured new time in Los Angeles, San Diego and Stockton. He has refused numerous offers from both Eastern and Western managers to accept a managerial position, and also proffers of generous assistance. He is going to remain a free lance from now on. He will affiliate with no circuit. Mr. Levy has new and commodious quarters at 1645 Fillmore Street. He will spring a big proposition in Oakland, which will materialize within the next eight or ten days.

An attempt was made to seize the premises of the National Theatre last Friday evening. The Graumans, who have a sub-lease on the property, including Dreamland Rink, were informed that the party from whom they were leasing would take possession upon the expiration of their lease midnight, Friday. D. J. Grauman and Manager Sid Grauman made preparations for his reception and mounted guard with Winchester and put in a strenuous night. The Graumans have since secured a permanent injunction to prevent any interference with the business of the house and have also secured a lease from the owner of the property, Emma Gates Butler, and will continue to do business at the old stand and stack away the pay dirt from their gold mine.

Stanley Edmonston, who has been conducting the Gem Theatre in Chico, has sold the place to V. R. Wilson.

THE announcement that Arthur Cunningham, the favorite barytone and Irish actor, is to appear again at the Valencia Theatre in a series of Celtic plays, has been greeted with great enthusiasm by his thousands of admirers in this city. He will begin a limited engagement Monday evening, May 31st, in Dion Boucicault's famous play, The Colleen Bawn, in which he will introduce a number of songs, including The Cruiskeen Lawn, The West's Awake, and The Old Plaid Shawl. Mr. Cunningham will be supported by all the members of the Valencia Stock Company and it is safe to say that The Colleen Bawn will receive the best production ever accorded in San Francisco.

Correspondence

TACOMA, May 15.—An absorbing topic among the theatrical profession here this week was the burning of the Star Theatre last Sunday morning, in which the McRae Players lost all their belongings, and which was followed by an early morning fire in the new Hotel Stothart, which drove many of the players appearing at the Grand and Pantages theatres from their beds in scant attire. A big benefit was given the McRae Players at the Tacoma Theatre. 13—The company appeared in The Bishop's Carriage, which they successfully produced some months ago. Thos. Sullivan appeared as Tom Dorgan, and Margaret Oswald as Nance Olden. The ladies of the company, Miss Oswald, Miss Van Tassell, Miss Robeson and Miss Cordray, were literally deluged with flowers. In a speech during the evening, Mr. McRae announced that his company would remain in Tacoma, and that for the present they would fill in open time at the Tacoma Theatre, opening on Sunday, May 23, in either The Charity Ball or Why Smith Left Home. A stock company has been formed to build a new theatre for the company, many shares of which have been already subscribed, and it is probable the site chosen will be that of the old Star. It is hoped to have the building ready for occupancy some time in September. Mr. McRae has engaged Philip Sheffield to take the place made vacant by Denton Vane and has engaged Bernice Parker to play heavies. Miss Van Tassell having accepted an engagement at the Lois, Seattle. Miss Van Tassell is a young woman of exceptional charm and ability and her departure from Tacoma is deeply regretted. Another player who will be sadly missed is Allen J. Holluber who also goes to the Lois Theatre. He opens in The Man on the Box, one of his best roles. Manager Herald of the Tacoma Theatre has partially completed his bookings for next season. The season opens September 6th with Mabel Taliaferro in Polly of the Circus, followed in quick succession by The Gentleman from Mississippi, Queen of the Moulin Rouge, The Third Degree, The Traveling Salesman, Billie Burke, William H. Crane, David Warfield, The Roundup, Joseph Weber, Maude Adams. Sandwiched in between these are other well known stars and productions, with a judicious sprinkling of attractions that have visited us already. The present season will close in July, and among others yet to be seen are Otis Skinner, May 16; Nazimova, May 21-22; Ben Greet Company, 24-25; followed by John Drew, Ethel Barrymore, Marie Doro, The Merry Widow, The Servant in the House, and Mrs. Fiske in Salvation Nell. Black Patti came back May 9th and charmed us again with her singing. She carried a capable company. Mischa Elman appeared in concert May 11th, and no violinist appearing here has been more enthusiastically received or appreciated. At the Pantages Theatre the Apache dance had little to recommend it aside from its boldness. Anita Primrose, a character change artist, was much appreciated. Paganini's Ghost proved to be a fairly capable violin player. Duryea & Company caused amusement with a comical sketch, and the Marvelous Franz was clever in trick bicycle acts. Next week: La Loie, dancer; Peterson Bros., acrobats; Five Musical Lovelands; The Two Dandies, dancers; Walter Montague & Company in a sketch. At the Grand, Harry Le Claire in his travesties of famous actresses was an immense hit. The elite Musical Four had an entertaining musical act; Sidney Grant in his monologues was a successful laugh getter; Siebert and Lindley had a ludicrous sketch, Her Own Mother, and Zay Holland in violin selections made a hit. Next week: Al. Cameron & Company in The Last of The Regiment; Ernest Anderson and Madge Burt in a farce; Soana, impersonator; Don and Thompson, song and dance; Harry Burgoyne in character songs.

SALT LAKE CITY, May 9.—Salt Lake Theatre: John Drew is the attraction at the Salt Lake Theatre. The play, Jack Straw, is a very good vehicle for Mr. Drew's genius, and the plot, although light, is of great interest. Jack Straw plays Thursday, Friday and Saturday. Colonial Theatre: The Mill of the Gods will be presented at the Colonial Theatre the present week. The play is doing good business. Monroe Salisbury, who plays the leading role, is a Salt Lake boy, better known to his friends here as Orr Salisbury Cash. Mr. Cash is welcomed by a host of old friends. Bungalow Theatre: Ralph Stuart, who supplanted Willard Mack after the latter's severe illness, will present The Transgressors for the current week. Mr. Stuart is a very worthy substitute to Mr. Mack and has won a host of friends here. Mr. Mack, after lingering at the point of death for a number of weeks, is now on the road to recovery. The Orpheum presents a good bill headed by Tom Nawn & Co. Mr. Nawn presents a very good act. The Hearts of the Blue Ridge is the drama presented at the Grand. It is rendered by a good company and is drawing well.

GLEN SMYTH.

SAN DIEGO, CAL., May 19.—Garrick (J. M. Dodge, mgr.): Week May 17th: James Post and Buty Korus are putting on a rural comedy this week with several catchy songs interpolated that is providing plenty of fun to the large crowds that greet them nightly. Post dons his Irish makeup in this piece and appears as a mischievous schoolboy. He has little trouble in keeping the house in a continual roar of laughter at his funny pranks. Millar Bacon as Pete Dempsey, a dunce, gets all there is out of his part. Joe Hayden as the farmer also does good work. Myrtle Alzora and Guy Usher were both satisfactory in their respective parts. The chorus as usual worked hard. A pretty feature of the performance was the Witch Dance led by Lotus Moore. Other features were Jack and Jill, by Myrtle Alzora and chorus, Mary Brown by Juliet Mahr. What the Milkman Sees by Lotus Moore. Pickwick (Scott A. Palmer, mgr.): The Armstrong Musical Comedy are putting on a comic opera this week entitled Paquita, and every member of the company is handling his or her part in a very commendable manner. The comedy is handled by Barney Williams, as a Dutch innkeeper, and George Rhen, as O'Gorman. Their New Turkey in the Straw was one of the screaming hits of the piece. Ethel Davis as Paquita enacts her part in a clever manner. She sings several songs in such a way as to bring down the house. Elma Elwood, the new sourette, also scored with her singing. Rosa Rhen as Fuey, the village coquette, and Walter Spencer as Pables, lover of Paquita, both do good work. The scenery, costumes, etc., are the most elaborate seen at the Pickwick this season. Good business. Queen (Swarts & Urban, mgrs.): Carlisle's pantomime show, including Tom, the talking pony, is the top-notch at the Queen this week. This is an exceptionally good act of its kind. Dividing honors with the above is the act of J. Aldrich, Libbey and Katherine Thayer. These two artists have a singing act entitled The Debutante, which is distinctly above the average and would be a feature on any bill. Delmore and Oeida have an artistic posing act which pleases. Joe Flynn has a very funny monologue act that kept the audience in good humor. Moving pictures of Wright's aeroplane conclude an exceptionally good show. Gaiety (Aubrey Carr, mgr.): Gaiety Stock Company in Where's Brown. This piece abounds with farcical situations, and the company is doing good work. This company is composed of the following people: Aubrey Carr, Lew Fields, Libbey Blondell, Miss Delacour and Art Whiting. They are doing fair business. Grand offers Pantage's vaudeville to good business. Empire, Bijou and Union offer moving pictures and illustrated songs to good business.

Princess Theatre

The Princess management announces that next Monday night will be produced that famous musical comedy hit, Peggy from Paris, which will be sumptuously staged. Fred Mace and May Boley will be provided with congenial roles and Marie Nelson, an Eastern prima donna of whom report speaks highly, will make her first appearance. Zoe Barnett, James Stevens, Budd Ross, Reginald Travers, Bert Phoenix and the remainder of the Princess company, including the Beauty Chorus, will be afforded full opportunity to distinguish themselves. Piff Paff Pouf will be given for the last times this Sunday afternoon and night.

Izetta Jewell Is a Charming Lady Babbie in Portland

PORTLAND, May 17.—HEILIG THEATRE (Cal Heilig, mgr.; Wm. Pangle, res. mgr.)—The local lodge of the T. P. A.'s took a benefit at this theatre last Friday and Saturday nights when they presented to large houses the musical comedy, Toodles in Holland. The piece was produced under the direction of Thomas Getz, and was a success in every manner. The proceeds are to be used by the local lodge for the purpose of securing for this city the next annual convention of drummers. Commencing this evening, Nazimova opens her engagement. The sale is big. Following comes Been Greet's players. Otis Skinner is also an early booking.

BUNGALOW THEATRE (Geo. L. Baker, mgr.; Milton Seaman, bus. mgr.)—It can aptly be said "that all roads lead to the Bungalow." The attendance at this theatre the past weeks has been capacity, and yesterday when the company offered The Little Minister, the same state of affairs was again in evidence. The play was very carefully staged, and all of the company had the Scotch dialect well in hand. Lady Babbie was essayed by Miss Jewell, and it was another success for this young lady. Week before last she did wonders with the role of Mary Tudor, last week she was more than satisfactory as Mary Ann, and yesterday she again displayed her versatility in the role of Lady Babbie. Sydney Ayers was cast in the name part, and gave a high class presentation of the part. The role of Rob Dow was assigned to Earl Dwire. As the drunken religious fanatic, Mr. Dwire is entitled to words of praise. Next week—The Education of Mr. Pipp.

BAKER THEATRE (George L. Baker, mgr.; Milton Seaman, bus. mgr.)—After three weeks of darkness this theatre reopened yesterday, with Ferris Hartman and his musical comedy company, in It Happened In Nordland. At the matinee the house was almost sold out, and last night they stood 'em up. Hartman is a great favorite in this city, and upon his entrance he was given a cordial welcome. No comedian coming this way is better known, and one is always sure that when he goes to see him he will get his money's worth. Of course, every one expected him to sing topical songs dealing with localisms, and we were not disappointed. Two of them were offered in yesterday's bill, and the only reason the audience quit encoring Hartman was that he was tired out. His company is good, and in yesterday's bill they gave universal satisfaction. Not one kick was heard on the play and players. Oscar Walch is the best of the singers, and his warbling went big with the audiences. Walter De Leon and Muggins Davies are the juvenile and soubrette, and both are very competent people. The company remains for three weeks. Next week they offer the Sultan of Zulu.

ORPHEUM THEATRE (James H. Errickson, mgr.)—Last week's bill was supposed to offer Thomas Ince as the feature act, but it must be admitted that Casselli's Chihuahua dogs stole the honors from the headline act. This is without doubt the finest act of its kind that has ever been presented in vaudeville to Portland theatregoers.

Frank Coombs and Muriel Stone offer a bright sketch entitled The Last of the Troupe, and it was a very cheery little comedy. Commencing tonight the bill is as follows: Mabel Hite and Mike Donlin in the playlet Stealing Home; Claude Gillingwater and company; Billy Van; The Three Misses Weston; The Piano Trinity; The Hamlins; and Rockaway and Conway.

LYRIC THEATRE (Keating & Flood, mgrs.)—Yesterday's bill was Thelma. The stock company was well cast and gave a good presentation of Marie Correlli's story. The leading role was played by Virginia Duncan, and her emotional work is worthy of commendation. Ralph Belmont did well as Sir Philip, and Rupert Drum was also well cast. The management are giving the play adequate stage settings.

GRAND THEATRE (James H. Errickson, mgr.)—The Elite Four are the headliners, and the balance of the bill includes Harry LeClaire; Sydney Grant; Zay Holland; DeButz and Toselli; and Fred Bauer.

PANTAGES has for their feature act this week a company of seventeen people billed as Les Apaches de Paris. Sells-Floto circus is here next week. A. W. W.

Lee Shubert Gives Interview in New York

NEW YORK, May 14.—An important announcement was made today by J. J. Shubert. The news is that as a result of the trip from the Atlantic to the Pacific, the Shuberts have made independent bookings for forty weeks and have taken sixty distinct attractions. This means that the "open door" policy of the Shuberts has been established, that independent managers may have their offerings presented from ocean to ocean. Furthermore, Mr. Shubert declared Harrison Grey Fiske, despite rumors, has not abandoned his allegiance to the independent interest. A report was current today that owing to the attacks made by Mr. Erlanger on the new theatre here and its wealthy backers, among whom are the names of Vanderbilt, Morgan, Mackay, Kahn, Gould and Astor, an intimation has been conveyed to the Shuberts that they could go ahead with their program, whatever it might be and they would not lack financial backing. "The day of liberty is here, and any man who wants to make a production is in a position to get what time he desires," said Mr. Shubert. "This means a benefit to the author, actor and manager, as it creates a market for more plays and means more employment for actors. I have made arrangements in the larger cities throughout the country to control and operate new theatres on the same policy as we operate our theatres in the East. Where I have not obtained any theatres under our personal management I have made booking arrangements. Our association with Liebler & Company, already announced, and by the terms of which we get twenty-six attractions for our theatres, more than offsets any possible loss. This is the first time that George Tyler, executive head of Liebler & Company, has had a free hand. He has the courage of his convictions. Harrison Grey Fiske has been popularly misunderstood. He will always play the independent theatres. We have arranged with the Association of Western Theatre Managers, which controls two hundred theatres, to establish the 'open door.' This is important, as the influence of the association extends from Denver and the Southwest to the Pacific Coast. (Right here there seems to be some obscurity. The DRAMATIC REVIEW does not know of any Western Association that controls 200 theatres or any that controls half that number.) "We also have seven new theatres—houses now being built or to be built immediately. We will have new playhouses in Portland and Los Angeles. I arranged for two new theatres in San Francisco, but pending construction our attractions will be at the American Theatre. Attractions booked through us can also play at the Star Theatre in Tacoma and the New Alhambra in Seattle. East from Seattle all attractions booked by us will be offered at the Grand Opera House in Salt Lake City and at the Auditorium in Denver. This brings us back to our old Western base, Kansas City. From Denver we go to Omaha, where a new theatre is to be built at once. Then we go to St. Paul and Minneapolis where new theatres will be erected."

T. M. A. Benefit

The Theatrical Mechanical Association, San Francisco Lodge No. 21, will give a benefit performance next Wednesday afternoon at the Princess Theatre for the benefit of its sick and charity fund. The Association comprises as members all branches of the theatrical profession. Any one whose livelihood is derived from the theatre is eligible for membership.

The forthcoming benefit will be the sixteenth annual affair of its kind, and from indications the program which is to be supplied will excel any heretofore given. Members of the profes-

Terry McKean Denies Playing Paid in Full

FRESNO, Cal., May 17.—Friend Farrell: On my arrival here this morning my attention was called to a note that appeared in the last issue of THE DRAMATIC REVIEW to the effect that my company—Terry McKean's Players—had presented Paid in Full at Turlock recently. I cannot imagine how any one could make such a mistake. I am not presenting it—it is not in my repertoire—in fact, I have never even seen the play. I would consider it a favor if you would make this correction. I open a limited stock season here at the Novelty tonight and we all look forward to an enjoyable and profitable engagement.

Best wishes,
TERRY MCKEAN.

Edward Cort Will Manage Colonial Theatre

The Colonial Theatre, now being enlarged and remodeled, opens September 5th, with Tom Ryley's Queen of the Moulin Rouge. Edward Cort will manage the house for his father.

SINCE Ralph Stuart joined the Willard Mack Stock Company in Salt Lake City, as a stock star, the business has increased to capacity houses, and his By Right of Sword proved so popular last week that it will be repeated. Mr. Stuart has won the press and public completely, and he is easily one of the best and most popular stock stars that has ever been seen in Salt Lake. So many automobiles have lined up in front of the Bungalow last week that passage in the street has been obstructed.

Personals

ERNEST WILKES was last week the recipient of sad news while on the road. His father died in Los Angeles last Monday night.

MARGARETA SYLVA will be a member of the Manhattan Grand Opera House in New York this season. Her husband, W. D. Mann, a well known New York manager, was at one time the telegraph operator at Auburn in this State.

Mrs. David Belasco has admitted her daughter's engagement. "Yes, it is true that my daughter is engaged to Mr. Gest," said Mrs. Belasco. "He and my daughter have been friends for some time and are very fond of each other, and I believe they will be very happy."

JESSIE MILLWARD, the English actress, who has been one of Charles Frohman's most prominent actresses for the past several seasons, will come to this city for the first time as a member of the company appearing in support of Ethel Barrymore in the production of Lady Frederick.

THE case of Baron Currier and his wife, charged by the proprietor of the Hotel Brule, 670 Eddy street, with defrauding him out of $282.65, was dismissed last Monday on the ground that action should be taken in the civil courts. Four trunks of the actor and his wife are being held at the hotel as security.

Correspondence

NEW YORK, May 23.—Another legitimate star took what is termed the "plunge" into vaudeville last week, when James K. Hackett appeared at the Plaza Music Hall in a playlet called The Bishop's Candlesticks. This tabloid drama, by Norman McKennell, is founded on the convict and bishop episode in Victor Hugo's Les Miserables, and it gave Mr. Hackett fine opportunities for the display of his abilities as an actor. He played the part of the convict and impressed upon the audience the rugged side of the character in the beginning, while at the close the conversion scene was convincingly acted. Associated with him was E. M. Holland, as the Bishop, and this well-known actor brought into play his fine schooling and polished stage manner. Jane Burby was the Bishop's sister and was very acceptable, and the few minor roles were well taken. At the end of the little play Mr. Hackett and Mr. Holland were both called before the curtain several times and heartily applauded. * * * Robert Mantell and his company gave a revival of Charles Selby's old-fashioned romantic drama, The Marble Heart, or, the Sculptor's Dream, last Monday at the Academy of Music. It was the first time during his present engagement that Mr. Mantell has appeared in other than classical roles. The play, set in the mid-Victorian era, calls for costumes of fashionable Paris about 1850. It presents little scope for dramatic action, although Booth and other actors used it in their repertoire, as did Mr. Mantell about ten years ago. Mr. Mantell's performance was fine. Fritz Leiber as Diogenes in the first act and Ferdinand Volage, the editor, in the other four, shared honors with Mr. Mantell. Marie Booth Russell as Marco was coquettish and captivating. Lorraine Frost won applause by her delineation of Marie, the poor orphan. * * * An Italian grand opera season under the direction of Gustav Hindrichs had a most auspicious opening at the Metropolitan Theatre last week, the offering being Il Trovatore. Many of the singers in the cast have been identified in the regular season with the ensembles of the Manhattan and Metropolitan grand opera. * * * Blanche Ring has been added to the cast of Lew Fields' production of The Midnight Sons, which comes to the Broadway Theatre this week. This will not interfere with her starring tour under Mr. Fields' management in The Yankee Girls in September. Melville Ellis in a pianologue scene is another to be added to the company. * * * Klaw & Erlanger entered into a contract yesterday to book attractions for the Grand Opera House, New Haven, next season. All the plays controlled by the syndicate will be presented hereafter in that house. The theatre will be thoroughly renovated, the auditorium lowered to the ground floor and the house brought up to date in every way. * * * Leo Slezak, the noted tenor of the Vienna Opera, has signed a contract for his appearance at the Metropolitan Opera House, New York, next season. G. Gatti-Casazza, general manager of the Metropolitan Opera House, and Director Andreas Dippel are very enthusiastic over the acquisition of the great tenor. They call him a second Tamagno and say that he has acquired a very high reputation at Vienna and Budapest, where he has been singing for the last nine years. Slezak will make his first appearance in Western Europe at Covent Garden, London, next month, singing in the role of Otello. It is expected that the Metropolitan officials will arrange a number of other contracts, but these are all subordinate to the singing of Slezak. Slezak has been the pride of the Vienna Opera for several years, and has sung all the leading Wagnerian roles there. During the past winter he has been in Paris, studying the Italian repertoire with Jean de Reszke, and it is in one of the parts which he has studied, Verdi's Otello, that he will make his London debut. It is expected that he will only sing the German tenor parts in New York.

ROB ROY.

Frohman Explains Repertory Plans

LONDON, May 17.—Charles Frohman appeared recently in the character of a letter writer to The London Times. This letter was called forth by the one from George Bernard Shaw, who said of Mr. Frohman that he was "the most wildly romantic and adventurous person of my acquaintance. As Charles XII became a famous soldier through his passion for putting himself in the way of being killed, so Mr. Frohman has become a famous manager through his passion for putting himself in the way of being ruined." Mr. Frohman replies by labeling Mr. Shaw: "Though you might not think it, really the most amusing person of my acquaintance." The topic of discussion in both letters is Mr. Frohman's repertory theatre and its probable bearing upon the projected National Shakespeare Theatre. Mr. Shaw considers that Mr. Frohman's enterprise will fill the gap before the National Theatre can be ready, and begs the public not to omit to subscribe to the latter on the ground that Mr. Frohman's Repertory Theatre will render it unnecessary. Mr. Frohman's letter is designed to remove from the minds of the supporters of the National Theatre scheme any uneasy feeling that his plan anticipates or may damage theirs. He adds: "I believe the theatregoer is at present in the condition of a child at school who, having mastered the first reader, becomes bored if he is not now introduced to the second reader. He is weary, so to speak, of plays in one syllable, and I hope to give him plays in two syllables, which lead toward the advanced reader that is to be known as the National Theatre."

PAUL HARVEY has succeeded Robert Lawlor as comedian with the Richard Jose company.

The Orpheum

The mere mention of the names of the attractions for next week will readily convince that a vaudeville entertainment of such extraordinary excellence as only to be possible at rare intervals is assured. First and foremost there will be the dashing comedienne, Mabel Hite, and her husband, Mike Donlin, whose achievements on the diamond have contributed so greatly to the success of the New York "Giants." The two will appear in a sketch entitled Stealing Home. A special feature of the coming program will be Claude Gillingwater, whom it will be remembered recently shared the honors with Fritz Scheff in Mlle. Modiste. Mr. Gillingwater will present a sketch of his own composition called A Strenuous Rehearsal, in which he impersonates an actor-manager. The other new acts will be the splendid Avedano Italian Grand Opera Quartet; Billy Van, the minstrel comedian, and the European vaudeville musical novelties, The Vindobonas, whose fine music and ludicrous and fantastic humor have earned for them abroad the title of "The Mad Musicians." Next week will be the last of Peter Donald and Meta Carson; the Baader-La Velle Trio, and the production, Sunny South, with Johnson and Wells and ten colored players. A series of recently imported Orpheum motion pictures will complete the program.

Valencia Theatre

The last performances of that hilariously funny farce, The Man from Mexico, will take place at the Valencia Theatre this Sunday afternoon and evening, and at the special matinee Monday that sterling young Irish actor and splendid baritone, Arthur Cunningham, whose engagement here last November was such an unequivocal success, and who has just completed a highly successful starring tour, will inaugurate a two weeks' engagement, his first play being The Donagh, or The Rose of Killarney, made famous by Joseph Murphy, and with a plot clear, interesting and ingenious from beginning to end. The scenic effects of The Donagh will be particularly fine, a panoramic view, two hundred and fifty feet long, showing the lakes of Killarney, being described as realistically beautiful. All of the favorites of the Valencia stock company, including Paul McAllister, George Osbourne, Robert Homans, Charles Dow Clark, William Wolbert, Florence Oakley, Edith Lyle, Grace Travers and Peggy Monroe, will be in the cast and the costumes will be correct to the place and period. The Colleen Bawn, with Mr. Cunningham as Myles na Coppalleen, will follow after which Mrs. Fiske and her New York company in Salvation Nell will begin a two weeks' engagement.

Alcazar Theatre

Arizona will be given a presentation next Monday evening at the Alcazar. It will be the medium of Stage Director Fred J. Butler's first appearance as an actor this season, and will also serve to introduce to the Alcazar's patrons Louis Bennison, who is a clever player with extensive experience. Augustus Thomas wrote Arizona and placed its action in the Territory of that name. Its plot centers in the groundless jealousy of age Colonel Bonham, commanding the Eleventh United States Cavalry, of his young wife, whom he suspects of being infatuated with Lieutenant Denton, who really is in love with her unmarried sister. The soldiers are ordered to march and stop at the ranch of Henry Canby, father of the two ladies, where Captain Hodgman, an unscrupulous libertine, who has ruined Lena, the daughter of Sergeant Keller, induces the colonel's wife to elope with him. The elopement, however, is frustrated by Denton, who is caught alone with the woman by her husband and resigns from the army rather than disclose the truth to the stern old soldier. Denton turns cowboy and is elected captain of a troop of volunteer cavalry that is organized to serve in the Spanish war. One of Canby's vaqueros, a Spaniard named Tony Mostano, has fallen in love with Lena, and when he discovers that the girl was betrayed by Hodgman he shoots him, and Denton is arrested for the crime. At a military court martial it is ascertained that the bullet found in Hodgman's body was fired by Tony, who then confesses and rides away. Explanations follow and Denton comes to his own. Will R. Walling will be seen as Denton, Louis Bennison as Colonel Bonham, Fred J. Butler as Canby, Howard Hickman as Hodgman, Ernest Glendinning as Tony Evelyn Vaughan as the colonel's wife and Bessie Barriscale as Lena.

The Real Charles Froh-

Since Charles Frohman announced recently his scheme for the founding of a repertory theatre in London, and invited young authors to submit their plays to him for consideration, he has received one hundred and ninety-eight plays, of which one hundred and sixty-one are one-act pieces. "I notice," said Mr. Frohman, "that whenever I am referred to I am always spoken of as an exemplary business man. Now I think that is about the last thing in the world that I really am. If I were a good business man I should be a rich man by now; but I am not rich, and the last place I want to visit is the office where the business side of my affairs is transacted. I do not like figures, and when I see a column of them I only look at the bottom line. I like plays, players, theatres and stages. I enjoy reading plays and trying plays, and I enjoy producing them, but I have bought more plays than I can ever produce, and so proved myself more of a sentimentalist than a business man."

Rail and Stage Line to Eureka Cuts Time

The running time between this city and Eureka, via the Northwestern Pacific and an automobile line, has been shortened from sixty to thirty-three hours. This is made possible by resumption of the automobile service which was discontinued last October. Through train will leave this city at 7:45 a. m. and arrive at Sherwood at 3:25 p. m. A horse stage line will connect with the train, leaving Sherwood at 4 o'clock and arriving at Cummings at 10 o'clock at night. Automobiles will leave Cummings at 4:30 the next morning, arriving at Eureka at 4 o'clock in the afternoon. By special arrangement the through trip from Sherwood to Eureka can be made by automobile. Heretofore the time required to make the journey, including a twelve-hour stopover, was seventy-two hours. Under the new arrangement the trip can be made in thirty-nine and a half hours, including a six-and-a-half-hour stopover.

Favorite San Francisco Actress to Head As the Sun Went Down

Estha Williams, who has been taking life easy for the past three years, will return next season to the stage, playing the leading role in Arthur C. Aiston's new production, As the Sun Went Down. In addition to playing the chief role, Miss Williams will stage the play, the rehearsals starting August 1st, and the season opening August 24th. When Miss Williams gave up the part of Parepa in At the Old Cross Roads, three years ago, after playing it for five consecutive seasons, she intended to remain off the stage for good, but Manager Aiston, realizing that her acting in, and stage management of, At the Old Cross Roads had much to do in making that play an eight years' winner, has induced her to do the same for the new play. The company will be a first-class one in every detail and the play will be mounted appropriately. The tour will be a long one, opening in the east and including a far western trip which will take in twelve weeks on John Cort's Circuit.

Nordica Wants Women to Vote

PARIS, May 11.—Mme. Nordica has joined the suffragettes. It has been many a day since woman's cause has gained so important a recruit, and the news will spread rejoicing among the battling suffragettes the world over. The credit of her conversion to the woman's suffrage cause is due to Mrs. Clarence Mackay. They were fellow passengers aboard the Kaiser Wilhelm II, which arrived at Cherbourg yesterday. Gatti-Casazza, Dippel and many members of the Metropolitan Opera Company were aboard the Kaiser and Mme. Nordica's one companion on shipboard was Mrs. Mackay, with whom she spent hours walking the deck, deep in conversation or pouring over suffragist literature in the saloon. The day before landing Mme. Nordica told a few members of the company that she had been wholly convinced of the justice of the cause.

tion of their rights and property. Many, many of the numerous repertoire and so-called stock companies are openly pirating and even going so far as to announce the pieces by the names by which they were identified with upon their first presentation, and week after week these people get by unmolested—not even being questioned as to the rights of production by the local manager. Recently in Utah an organization styling themselves the Scott stock company boldly announced "a scenic production of the New York success, The Man of the Hour." Henry Savage's The College Widow was recently presented in Grand Junction, Colo., by a local organization. The writer doubts if any arrangements were made with the rightful owner. Up in Canada at Vancouver, week after week, a stock organization presents the latest New York successes at 10-20-30. The Wolf, Paid in Full and The Thief have been recently put on by these people.

David Belasco Tells Of Souvenir Hunter Who Changed Her Mind

"David Belasco, the playwright, was being congratulated on the success of his latest play," said Simon B. Bernheimer of New York the other night. "Writing plays is perilous business," said Mr. Belasco, thoughtfully. "With every fresh play an author risks his all. Past triumphs don't count. He who has written twenty superb pieces is just as likely to be damned on his twenty-first as any tyro. The public is critical and just before it is kind. I remember once—" Mr. Belasco laughed. "There was once," he remarked, "a playwright who sat in the front row of stalls at the first night of a new play of his. The piece failed. It failed dreadfully. In fact, in the middle of the third act the entire company was hissed off the stage. As the playwright sat, pale and sad, amid the uproar, a lady behind him leaned over and said: 'Excuse me, sir; but knowing you to be the author of this play, I took the liberty at the beginning of the performance of snipping off a lock of your hair. Allow me now to return it to you.'"

Philosophic Reflections of The Traveling Sales- man

Actors wear out more shoe leather looking for engagements than they do in keeping them.

Every one who goes to the theatre is more or less of a playwright. Those who think they cannot write a play are quite sure they have an idea for a great play.

Personals

LANDERS STEVENS and Georgie Cooper will join the Broadway stock of Oakland in two weeks, opening in Raffles. Mr. Stevens will have a percentage interest in the company.

LARRY UNDERWOOD, who has been character man and director of the Elleford company the past season, will retire from the stage and turn farmer when the company gets back from Honolulu next week.

WILLIAM STOERMER has organized a company to play Zora Bates in Ghosts. Her support consists of Frank Opperman, Bessie Fisher, Charles Franklin and Henry Auerbach. The company opens at Oxnard tonight.

MANY inquiries have been received as to the whereabouts of Nera Rosa. Miss Rosa, thanks to the generosity of the Alcazar players and the initiative of Adele Belgarde, is at home with kind friends in Memphis, where the future is one of rest and no worry.

MARGUERITA SYLVA and W. D. Mann have "agreed to disagree," and a divorce was granted to them last week. Miss Sylva will continue in her operatic career, which has become phenomenal, and Mr. Mann will devote his time and attention to automobiles.

THE body of Mme. Helena Modjeska was started on the long journey to Poland from Los Angeles for final interment at Cracow last Monday morning. The body will be taken first to Chicago, where it probably will remain two or three weeks, until Ralph Modjeska, son of the great tragedienne, and his wife, can arrange their affairs so that they can accompany it to Cracow.

FLORENCE OAKLEY closes with the Valencia stock a week from tomorrow. We will be sorry to see her leave, for she has been a most attractive and valuable member of the company. Miss Oakley has two fine offers to accept. One is from Al Woods to play the lead in The Test, a part she created in Los Angeles last winter, and one from Henry B. Harris to play the lead in The Third Degree.

CHAUNCEY SOUTHERN retired from the Ed Redmond company to join the Walter Sanford company in Vancouver. But two days before he was to leave San Francisco for the north, he was notified that Mr. Sanford would close in two weeks, giving away his stock to the San Francisco Opera Company. As luck would have it, Mr. Southern signed the next day for the juvenile part in When Love Was Young.

MRS. KATE GINN will leave Los Angeles in a day or two for New York. Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Ginn recently bought a summer place on Staten Island. The Ginns will have as their guests Mr. and Mrs. Robert Morris, the latter known as Elsie Esmond. Mrs. Morris is convalescing from a serious illness, but she expects to be sufficiently recovered by fall to again take up her stage work. Mr. Ginn and his wife will rejoin William Gillette next fall.

FLORENCE ROBERTS arrived in the city last Monday afternoon, and will put in the time intervening between her arrival and her opening at the Alcazar on June 14th in rest and recreation. She will produce Du Barry for her opening play and after that will play The Struggle Everlasting, the premier of which, in its revised form, the author, Milton Royle, will come to this city to witness.

ALLEGING malicious arrest and false prosecution, Walter Barron Currier and his wife, Pauline A. Currier, filed separate suits Monday against James A. Nelson, John A. Anderson and Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Brule, proprietors of the Hotel Brule in Eddy Street, for $10,000 damages in each case. The Curriers were arrested April 10th last on a charge of defrauding an inn-keeper. Mrs. Currier was kept in confinement two days, while her husband was not liberated until April 18th, on which date Judge Conlan dismissed the charge against them. The defendants claim that their good name and reputation has been damaged in the sum of $10,000. Apparently the arrest was a most unjust one.

JAMES K. HACKETT, who filed a petition in bankruptcy on May 8th, has obtained an order from Judge Hand of the United States District Court restraining Sheriff Foley from levying on his property or taking proceedings to sell the same or for the collection of judgments by executions issued by the New York City and municipal courts. Judgment creditors, including the New York Bill Posting Company, are stayed from further prosecuting their actions for twelve months. The Postal Telegraph Cable Company, a creditor for $210; Wetzel & Hogan, tailors, creditors for $610, and Mary Mannering Hackett, who has a claim in the Supreme Court for $60,000 money loaned, are also restrained from further proceeding with their actions.

WALTER HOFF SEELEY, manager of the Valencia Theatre, is on his way East to get new plays for the theatre next season, and incidentally to act as a member of the committee recently appointed from New York to secure funds in this city to place a bust of Richard Mansfield in the New Theatre, New York. A hall of fame is to be established in the playhouse erected for the advancement of American dramatics and in this hall are to be placed memorials of the great actors and playwrights of this country. A bust of Mansfield is to occupy a place in the hall, and the sculptor, MacMonnies, is commissioned to make the likeness. San Francisco is expected to raise $1,000 towards the fund, and Seeley, Dr. J. Wilson Shiels, Richard M. Tobin and Benjamin Ide Wheeler constitute the committee to plan ways and means of securing the needed sum.

Los Angeles Has Musical Comedy at Every Theatre But One, and More Coming

LOS ANGELES, May 27.—Oliver Morosco's exceedingly versatile players are in their second week of The Circus Girl. This is a mighty fine all-around performance. Agnes Cain Brown played under difficulties last Sunday night, fainting during the performance.

At the other Morosco theatre, the MAJESTIC, Kolb & Dill are playing to capacity business, and Manager Joseph Montrose holds nightly telephone receptions explaining to anxious ones just when seats will be obtainable in the future.

At the BELASCO THEATRE, where John Blackwood, Captain Jones, Ben Johnson and Phil Wilson lend ability and dignity, there is much rejoicing over the success of Florence Reed, who is considered a "find." Her work this week in Beau Brummel bears out the good opinion gained last week in Miss Hobbs. Howard Scott is having his chance in the Mansfield great part and is acquitting himself handsomely. Louis Morrison, a new member of the company, who is thoroughly well grounded, is going to be a strong addition to this fine company.

At the GRAND OPERA HOUSE Murray and Mack are reviving Finnigan's Ball. The same old M. & M. business is in evidence. The hit of the performance is achieved by George Field in a "Dago" characterization.

At the ORPHEUM, the bill consists of first the regular sold-out sign, and then the Grigolati Flying Ballet; Po' White-Trash Jinny, from the pen of Lillian Mortimer; a musical offering is by the Four Sisters Amatis. Knight Brothers and Marion Sawtelle sing and dance and put various sorts of fun into their turn. The holdovers are Paul Sandor's Cirque, Fred Ray's Players in Roman burlesque, Hawthorne and Burt, and Arcadia.

The new director at the UNIQUE THEATRE is Charles Justi, and he presents his first production, The Man from the Moon. Annie Bauman plays Clytie, the subject whom the king willed to be queen; Stella Adams is Malindra, usurper to the throne; John Martin is a prophet and soothsayer; May Parker is Inkie, Melindra's Greek slave, while Will Armstrong is seen as Pat Hanigan, a gay Irish lad. Much new popular music is introduced, and Irene Earle opens the show with illustrated songs.

An entirely new bill is presented upon the EMPIRE stage this week. The program includes the Orpheus Four, a black-face quartette; the Bernsteins, man and woman, in a specialty act; West and Mack, of black-face fame, and Al Franks, who sings to the illustrated curtain.

The WALKER THEATRE entertainment this week is headed by Elmer Ballard and Mabel Albert, who have a skit called Dick's Return. The Grace Sisters have a real song and dance turn. Otto C. Rabe, musical Sambo, has a novelty act full of originality and musical specialty. Virginia Reeves, operatic mezzo-soprano, has a choice group of selections. Dick Parks, minstrel man, has a variety of new stuff. The two Heymans present songs and dances, and Joseph Manley has a new illustrated song.

The program for the LOS ANGELES THEATRE is one of the best given there in many months. May Ward's Dresden Dolls head the bill. George Wilson, the minstrel king, is also on the bill, and revives memories of his illustrious days in real minstrelsy. V. L. Granville, London character actor, has a sketch, Twixt Dawn and Daylight. Mr. and Mrs. William Robyns have the one-act emotional drama, Counsel for the Defense, while Duff and Walsh offer A Dancing Muscicle. Mme. Doherty's eighteen white poodles will continue, and Geo. Bowyer's face has still an appearance of "glad I'm here."

Frank Perley is being Sued by Tom Williams

Recalling the days of the splendid Alice Nielsen Opera Company, the suit now being heard before United States Commissioner Heacock, on behalf of Tom Williams, the racing man, and at one time the king-pin of "Angeles," is extremely interesting, opening up as it does much of the inside history of that once-famous light opera organization. Williams sues for $10,000 and an accounting.

Perley's defense, presented in the defendant's absence by his attorney, is that Williams was the "angel," promoter and supreme head of the concern and that Perley acted under him on a salary and percentage. Two contracts were admitted in evidence to support Perley's contention, and then came the letters and telegrams which passed between Williams and Perley. It was in the Williams' communications that all the cruel, cruel words were spoken about Alice Nielsen, the girl with the "beauty spot."

In addition to the Williams letters and telegrams, there was a letter from Mose Gunst admitted as evidence, in which he spoke of Alice's success as having, evidently, "completely turned her head." Gunst regretted that. So did Al Hayman, to whom Gunst had written.

Williams appeared in court and nonchalantly identified the various communications as they were offered up by Attorney Lee. Henry Ach represented Williams and offered no objections to the evidence as it was offered.

Other evidence has been presented and will be offered by Perley to show that in Williams' munificent days he offered Perley valuable stock, including 100 shares of the stock of the New California Jockey Club, $5,000 worth of stock in the La Puerta Mining Company of Mexico, and $10,000 worth of stock in an abattoir concession of Mexico on certain conditions. Perley will seek during the pending action to recover that reputed gift, which Williams is now said to hold.

The correspondence produced dated from December 31, 1900, when the Alice Nielsen Company, which was then producing The Singing Girl and The Fortune Teller, was in Los Angeles, having just completed an engagement in San Francisco. The manager, Perley, had already negotiated with the Shaftesbury Theatre in London and George Musgrove, the London manager, to have Miss Nielsen appear there. But something had happened that made Williams crusty toward his prima donna.

On December 31, 1900, he sent the first telegram offered as evidence. It was addressed to Perley at Los Angeles and referring to the London managers, said:

"Would write them both at once, saying star (Miss Nielsen) positively refuses and is unmanageable. And besides is in such a state that you feel she will not make good. * * * Say almost anything else that occurs to you."

Two weeks later Williams' wrath was still torrid. On January 12, 1901, he telegraphed to Perley:

"We surely want to prevent Jones having any chance to produce the operas in any country."

"Who is Jones?" asked Lee of Williams when the dispatch was read yesterday.

"That referred to Miss Nielsen," explained the ex-angel with a smile.

The next one was almost climactic. Perley was then in New York and on January 29th Williams sizzled the Western Union trunk line with this:

"Think you will find you can not manage star. The sooner you discharge her the better. Furthermore, I wish you would discharge him at earliest possible moment. Please keep me posted."

That is where Steindorff first appeared as about to disappear. Something had happened—it did not come out exactly what it was—but something had happened that made Williams glower at Steindorff over 3,000 miles of telegraph wires. There was more to come. The next letter presented by Perley's counsel, Lee, dated February 2, read, in part, as follows:

"My Dear Frank:
"There is one thing, however, I am firm upon, and that is this, that neither Musgrove (Victor) Herbert" (composer of Miss Nielsen's operas) "nor any one else has the slightest right to say to us who shall be our musical director. I would never consent to any such dictation, and I furthermore wish you would discharge Steindorff just as soon as you can. I do not want him to finish the present season with us. And I do not care even if we have to take a second rate director and even if the performances go badly. * * *

"Conditions have greatly changed, so I do not wish you to spend one dollar of our money in any way or to strengthen the cast at all. In fact, under the existing circumstances I only wish that the London engagement proves a failure.

"I want all the profits sent to me. I do not intend to put up another cent for the ultimate benefit of the star."

On the day that was written, February 2, 1901, Williams was so wrath that he sent this stern dispatch:

"Discharge star if necessary."
Things were happening those days. On February 3d this was the Williams output:

"Just received the letter in which you say you wired Hale to refuse to make any advances to her. (Miss Nielsen.) Awfully glad you did—just to keep up that policy."

Then Steindorff's head fell into the basket, with this shout of glee from Williams:

"February 7, 1901. Mighty glad you discharged director Saturday. Do same with Jones if he does not comply with your rules."

Poor Jones! that is, Miss Nielsen.

But here is the unkindest cut on "Jones."

On March 1st Williams sent a telegram in which he spoke of a reorganization of the Alice Nielsen Opera Company. He said, in part:

"Better call it the Williams and Perley Opera Company. I like the idea of (Helen) Bertram for the star for next season. It will make Jones jump stiff-legged."

On May 1st Williams telegraphed Perley:

"Good scheme to engage Bertram. Jones certainly will have a dozen fits and that is the place we want to put him in now."

But there were financial difficulties as well as incompatibilities between Williams and his star. This came out in a letter produced, written on May 2, 1901. Miss Nielsen had imagined herself to have a vested right of some sort in the company, and Williams could not see it. Williams did not think Miss Nielsen was in any position to claim an interest in the company, "in view of the fact," as he writes, "that we are from $30,000 to $40,000 losers on this production, when I told her our relationship ceased, and since she wrote a letter on leaving San Francisco, in which she acknowledged that I was sole proprietor. * * * We can easily establish our position."

"Be very firm, Frank, in this matter of our business and render no statement to her. She is certainly showing a very mean and ungrateful spirit in taking such a course when she knows perfectly well she has no more interest in these productions than the man in the moon."

Mose Gunst's letter to Al Hayman, the theatrical manager, read, in part, as follows: "I regret very much that the sudden success of Alice Nielsen has evidently turned her head and she has become unmanageable so that that Perley and Tom (Williams) have great trouble in holding the organization together."

In Hayman's reply, he, too, regretted "very much that Miss Nielsen's head had been completely turned."

In Perley's behalf, Lee offered as evidence two contracts. One was dated February, 1898, had a one-year tenure and provided that Perley should manage the Alice Nielsen Opera Company at a salary of $100 a week, all allowances for expenses and 25 per cent of the profits. Perley's orders were subject to the right of Williams to overrule by letter or telegram. The second contract was dated May 24, 1899, and held for five years. This contract provided that Williams was to supply all money and make good all losses from week to week. In general its terms were those of the first contract. It contained as a sort of afterthought a provision that in the event of Williams' death during the tenure of the contract Miss Nielsen was to secure his interest in the company unless he had otherwise ordained in his will. Perley's attorney contends that the letters and contracts prove Perley was simply Williams' agent.

Perley and Williams were also associated in the management of other companies. The case is still being heard.

JOHN BLACKWOOD, of Main Street, Los Angeles, favored us with his presence last Saturday.

Correspondence

PHILADELPHIA, May 23.—There is enjoyment to be found in Beverly of Graustark, a dramatization by Robert M. Baker of George Barr McCutcheon's sequel to the novel Graustark, but one must not take the romantic or sentimental incidents seriously or the enjoyment will be spoiled. At the Adelphia, Monday evening, Baker's play had its first local presentation and the naivete of the situations and of the dialogue brought many a smile to the auditors. The opening performance of the English Opera Company in a thoroughly artistic and finished presentation of Madame Butterfly at the Lyric Theatre, attracted an audience large in numbers and most enthusiastic in appreciation. The musical show, The Boy and the Girl, has scored heavily at the Garrick and Marie Dressler, the star, won great applause because of her songs and of her ability as an entertainer. Glorious Betsy, a charming four-act drama by Rida Johnson Young, was presented by the Orpheum Players at the Chestnut Street Theatre. Keith's furnish a good bill to their patrons this week. The Dixie Quartette are back in Philadelphia for an indefinite period. They will start a summer tour through the Quaker City beginning Thursday night. They have an excellent score of choice songs for the summer and are sure to make good. The Quartette is greatly improved since last year it was heard here, having added Mr. Castor, who does the baritone end of it. Messrs. Zisgen, first tenor, Bristow, second tenor, and Franklin, who does the heavy work, are the old favorites. Good luck, boys.

Calvin M. Franklin.

CARSON CITY, May 26.—Edgar Ryder, manager of the Lake moving picture house, was married in Reno last week to Miss Edna Wyatt. The popular show house is crowded nightly. This week Miss Ina Sawyer of Reno is assisting in the songs and has won great praise. Master Steed also contributes to the enjoyment by his singing. A. H. M.

SACRAMENTO, May 26.—Grand Theatre (C. W. Godard, mgr.)—A Contented Woman is the bill played by the stock company this week. Next week—The Great Divide. The season of the D. S. Lawrence stock company at the Grand Theatre is rapidly drawing to a close. Arrangements have been completed whereby the company will go to Vancouver for a summer season in about three weeks. The company's next local season will probably begin at the Grand Theatre in September. During its absence Manager Godard will keep his playhouse open, presenting either musical comedy or vaudeville. At Pantages, week starting Sunday matinee, May 23—Gainsboro Girl, the Duchess of Devonshire, Marie Lecea Brackman; Mr. and Mrs. Lucas, Scenes from Dickens; International Comiques, Fumbling and Tumbling; Fred Rivenhall, Australian singing comedian; The Beldens, acrobatic dancers.

LONG BEACH, May 24.—The comedy bill for this week at the Byde-a-Wyle Theatre is Chums, with Morey Long, Louis Lytton, Maude Beatty and Lillian Gardner in the chief parts.

In the offering by the Folly Musical Comedy Company, headed by James T. Kelly, which is called A Pair of Jacks, Mr. Kelly, Lillian M. Massey, Maude Beatty, Lillian Gardner, Morey Long and Louis Lytton, aided by a fine chorus, give a clever performance. Commencing Sunday, May 30th, the Folly Musical Comedy Company opens for a season at the Auditorium in San Pedro, Cal., and Manager Clarke will install vaudeville here. At the Grand, the stock company is playing Mrs. Temple's Telegram. Chas. King, Marjorie Rambau and Chet Stevens do exceedingly good work.

SEATTLE, May 24.—Moore Theatre.—Otis Skinner closed a very satisfactory week's business with The Honor of the Family. The production was finished in every detail and was commented upon as being one of the best ever presented here. Beginning tonight and running the entire week Madame Nazimova will represent repertoire, consisting of A Dolls House, Hedda Gabler and Comtesse Coquette. May 30, for two weeks, The Merry Widow. Grand Opera House—26, 27 and 28, amateur boxing and wrestling championship contests, auspices of the Seattle Athletic Club. Seattle Theatre—Selma Herman and company started on the 23d for a week's run of It Is Never Too Late to Mend. The play abounds in startling situations and climaxes, all of which pleased the crowded house which greeted them very much. Lois Theatre—The Pantages stock company in The Sign of the Cross will run this entire week. They had a packed house at the opening last night. At the Orpheum this week are Camille D'Arville, prima donna; Adelaide, dancer; and Elizabeth Murray. Adelaide, popularly known as Le Petite Adelaide, is one of the most accomplished toe dancers in this country. Elizabeth M. Murray, the singer, has an inimitable collection of Irish and negro character songs. Besides these artists are four other great acts. The Sisters Gasch, world's premiere lady gymnasts, Warren Lyon and Meyers in a musical skit, When Dreams Come True, Mazuz and Mazette, comedy gymnasts, and Ernest Yerxas, a phenomenal posturist. Pantages Theatre—The Four Bards, America's greatest gymnasts; Prof. Roberts' trained rats, cats and dogs, and six other acts. At the Star—Ten Great Russian Dancers; Leo Cooper, and five other specialties.

E. Morgenstern.

PORTLAND, May 24.—HEILIG THEATRE (Cal Heilig, mgr.; Wm. Pangle, res. mgr.)—The past week has been a very interesting one at this theatre. With Nazimova the fore part of the week and Ben Greet's players the latter part, it truly has been a busy week. Nazimova opened her first engagement in this city Monday night to a packed house, and the same state of affairs existed all through her engagement. This talented actress more than lived up to the high reputation that preceded her, and every one had words of praise for her admirable acting. It was almost possible for one to gather her intentions from her intonations and gestures, and her failure of true English made no difference to those witnessing her performances. Ben Greet and his company offered A Midsummer Night's Dream and The Tempest for their plays. Assisting the latter attraction was the Russian Symphony Orchestra. Otis Skinner opens this evening, and Goodwin and Goodrich follow.

BUNGALOW THEATRE (Geo. L. Baker, mgr.; Milton Seaman, bus. mgr.)—The season is drawing to a close at this theatre, three weeks remaining. This week the attraction is The Education of Mr. Pipp. Next week Manager Baker announces a revival of The Girl of the Golden West, in which Izetta Jewel made one of her biggest hits this season, and the final week the bill will be Under Two Flags. In this weeks bill William Gleason is playing the rôle made famous by Digby Bell. Mr. Gleason gave a good presentation of the lead, and Mrs. Mina Gleason, as Mrs. Pipp, was a good foil to him. The two daughters were portrayed by Izetta Jewel and Maribel Seymour. Sydney Ayers and Donald Bowles were cast as the ardent suitors for the hands of the two daughters, and nothing could be asked of them in the interpretation of the rôles.

BAKER THEATRE (Geo. L. Baker, mgr.; Milton Seaman, bus. mgr.)—Ferris Hartman and his company are producing The Mayor of Tokio for their second week at this house. It opened yesterday to good houses. Hartman was cast as the manager of the busted opera company and he gave a high class performance of the part. Joseph Fogarty played the name part, and the leading rôle for the feminine contingent was played by Anna Little, who seems a trifle amateurish. Oscar Walsh's rich tenor voice was well in evidence. Next week—The Toy-maker.

ORPHEUM THEATRE (James H. Erickson, mgr.)—The past week at this house was a good one. Mabel Hite and Mike Donlin were the headliners. Miss Hite is just as clever a soubrette as one can find anywhere, but it must be admitted that Mike is a better ball player than an actor. Billy Van was another star act on the bill. Claude Gillingwater and company in the playlet A Strenuous Rehearsal, was another act on the bill that was entertaining. Commencing today the bill is as follows: Ellis-Nowlan company are headliners. Others are Cheridah Simpson; Pellaton and Foran; Rossiters Dancing Four; Frank Whitman; DeHollis and Valora; and Mlle. Latina.

LYRIC THEATRE (Keating & Flood, mgrs.)—The Heart of the Blue Ridge is being produced at this theatre for the week's entertainment. At the first performance yesterday it was well received and well acted. Herbert Ashton and Virginia Duncan did well in the leading rôles, and Ralph Belmont was very satisfactory in the juvenile part. The comedy was assigned to Lillian Griffiths and Charles Griffiths and both kept the audience well keyed up along those lines.

GRAND THEATRE (James H. Erickson, mgr.)—This week's bill is as follows: Bert Sheppard; six people in the playlet The Last of the Regiment; Leibert Lindley and company; Herr Saona; Harry Bergoyne; and Fred Bauer.

PANTAGES has La Loie, a French dramatic dancer, for their feature act this week.

Sells-Floto circus is here today and tomorrow. A. W. W.

OAKLAND, May 28.—The Macdonough broke the gloom of the week by giving a benefit Thursday afternoon to Fred Cooper. At Ye Liberty, a very pretty and good performance is being given of The Road to Yesterday. Next week, The Great Divide. At the Orpheum, Manager Geo. Ebey offers a fine bill, in which the usual Orpheum standard is maintained. At the Broadway, Guy Smith is presenting Confusion in conjunction with the Burns-Johnson fight pictures. Business is great. Priscilla Knowles, Al Hallett, Georgie Woodthorpe, Fred Munier, Jack Bannett and Roy Clement make a fine show out of this boiled-down, hour version. Next week, East Lynne.

The Selma Herman company, playing at the Seattle Theatre, in Seattle, will give way next week to Emma Bunting and company in the hope of business picking up.

Nick Cogley has joined the Seilig motion picture company at Los Angeles and will appear in rolling barrel and dish-breaking stunts for the edification of generations yet unborn. He is a clever comedian and character actor.

Correspondence

SAN DIEGO, May 26.—Garrick (J. M. Dodge, mgr.): Week May 24th: Two Old Cronies, a rollicking farce-comedy, with several catchy songs interpolated, is the bill presented by the James Post Musical Comedy Company this week. A feature of the performance being a good old-fashioned cake-walk, in which the members of the Buty Korus compete. To the couple receiving the most applause goes the cake. The audience fairly went wild over this feature. Mr. Post as Dennis McManus, a hen-pecked husband, continues to keep his auditors laughing. Joe Hayden also is responsible for a share of the fun-making. Miller Bacon, as George Marshall, makes the most of his part, his song, Adios, being one of the distinct hits of the piece. Guy Usher as Jim Bell, May Ashley as Mrs. Grimes, and Mrs. Cummings as Mrs. McManus, all do good work and are responsible in no little way for the success of the piece. The chorus is well dressed and show the effect of good stage management. Very good business. Next week will be Post's last week here, and he will put on The Motorman. Raymond Teal and Company will follow him. Pickwick (Scott A. Palmer, mgr.): The Merry Liars as presented by the Armstrong Musical Comedy Company this week is providing plenty of fun. The play is of the wild and woolly West type and is different from anything yet produced by this company. Ethel Davis and George Rhen scored a big hit with their song, Bye and Bye. The audience couldn't seem to get enough of it. Barney Williams also scores with his rendition of Chief Battleaxe. The chorus as usual sing and dance well. Manager Armstrong has gone to Los Angeles to try and get a lease on some theatre in that city for the summer. He contemplates organizing another comedy company similar to the one now playing at the Pickwick, in order that the two may appear in this city and Los Angeles alternately, making a two-week stand in each place, then switching. QUEEN (Swarts & Urban, mgrs.): Little Hip, the baby elephant, heads the bill at the Queen this week, and is providing fun for both young and old. The balance of the bill is composed of the following good acts: Iva Donette and her pickaninny log. This is a very good act of its kind. Tom Dugan, the eccentric messenger, pleases. Eva Westcott, in playlet, A Butterfly Wife. Miss Westcott is a dainty little woman, and she puts the sketch on in a clever manner. Grand (Walter Fulkerson, mgr.): The Grand has a good bill this week, and is composed of the following: Genaro and Theol open the show and some of the stunts they do are little less than wonderful. The Southern Quartette please with several late songs. Christine Hill and company put on an act entitled Fate that is somewhat different and was very acceptable. Moving pictures conclude. gaiety (R. O. Gordon, mgr.): The Typewriter Girl is the offering this week by the stock company. Lew Fields, Aubrey Carr, Genevieve DeLaour and Libbey Blondell all do first-class work. Fair business. Empire, Union and Bijou offer moving pictures and illustrated songs to good business. CARL E. LUNDQUIST.

Benefit Performance for Fred Cooper

The many friends of Fred A. Cooper, the veteran theatrical man, gave him a benefit at the Macdonough Theatre, Oakland, last Thursday afternoon, May 27th. The program consisted of acts from all the leading theatres of San Francisco and Oakland, besides local talent. The arrangements were in charge of Oscar C. Gehring, George Webster, George Friend and Louis Bennisson.

It's To Be Opera Lyrique

The lyric performances at New York's New Theatre are to begin next year with a revival of Massenet's Werther, which has not been heard here in fifteen years. Jean de Reszke and Emma Eames sang the work at the Metropolitan Opera House in the supplementary season of 1895. Now the leading roles are to fall to Edmond Clement, the new French tenor, and to Geraldine Farrar. The term "opera comique" was not found suited to all the musical productions to be given next season at the New Theatre. The old distinction between grand opera and opera comique used to lie in the fact that opera comique has spoken dialogue while the essential feature of grand opera was recitative. That distinction has ceased to be observed and it was decided that something different was necessary for the New Theatre. "The matter was left to Mr. Gatti-Casazza," one of the directors told The Sun reporter, "and after consideration he decided that the best term was opera lyrique. So that will be used in describing the operatic performances at the New Theatre." Mme. Alda is one of the most recently engaged artists who will again be heard at the Metropolitan. Mme. Homer's contract is to be renewed, although there are some details to settle before it is signed finally. The same is true of the contract of Signor Amato. Adamo Didur has been re-engaged, while Albert Reiss, who made such a success in The Bartered Bride, has been put under five years contract at materially increased pay, with the understanding that he is also to sing many new roles in French at the New Theatre. One of the principal dramatic productions of the season at the New Theatre will also be musical in character. This is the play Beethoven, by Rene Fauchois, which was one of the most successful efforts of the last season at the Odeon at Paris. The nomenclature of the new barytone first announced as "Dink" Gilly has been explained by the return of Gino Centanini, private secretary of Mr. Gatti-Casazza, who went to Paris to get options on the services of French artists for the opera lyrique at the New Theatre. "The name of the new barytone is not Dink," Mr. Centanini said, "but Dinh. He is a native of Tunis and that is a common name there. He is moreover a very good barytone who had no opportunity at the Opera in Paris and recently at Monte Carlo made a triumph in Tosca. He is a wonderful Scarpia and was also very much liked in Boheme."

Spotlights

The Elleford company have concluded their annual Honolulu engagement and will return next Tuesday.

Frank Bonner, says a Long Beach paper, is entitled to mention. His work with the Bentley Grand stock shows a finish that savors neither of the dramatic correspondence school or the barn.

The spirit in which Mrs. Fiske chose for production Salvation Nell, which will be seen at the Valencia Theatre for the two weeks beginning June 14th, was strongly brought out in a letter written by her to a friend. "I am told," Mrs. Fiske said, "that the truth in Salvation Nell is disturbing to some persons. Perhaps some of those persons would digest, without difficulty, the suave vulgarity of the sexual social play. My heart has always been in the slums and with dumb animals. The poor and the dumb know the truth about life. The others barely skirt it. In the luxurious quarters of the cities there are tragedies enough, but for the most part they are of our own making. They are born of the demons within—of our vanities and passions. There is in them more phantasy than truth, but down there in the underworld, they know. Down there we find the "bitterness and cruelty" of life, but we find there other things besides—cheerfulness and happiness and many beautiful things, among them generosity—almost an unknown quantity save among the very poor."

There is much in The Mills of the Gods that will find favor with the public, and with Monroe Salisbury in the leading role it is as catchy and strong a piece as has been put on at the Colonial in many a day. Mr. Salisbury has chosen a fitting vehicle with which to show his talent, for it is talent and no mistake. Mr. Salisbury has surrounded himself with as good a company as has been seen at the Colonial in some time.—Salt Lake News.

At the preliminary meeting of the Actors' Society of America, held Tuesday, May 18th, in the rooms of the Society, the following members were nominated for election to the Board of Directors: Ralph Delmore, Sam Colt, Fanny Cannon, John D. O'Hara, W. D. Stone, Fred R. Seaton, Edwards Davis, Lionel Adams, Oscar Eagle, George Meech, Wm. Courtleigh, Geo. Seybolt, Geo. Christie, Henry Pemberton, John R. Grismer, Mrs. Felix Morris, Mrs. H. C. DeMille, Lillian Kingsbury, Edwin Brandt, Richard Carroll, Nellie Callahan, Edward Locke. The following members were appointed by Pres. Thos. A. Wise to serve on the Election Committee: Fred Hardy, Miss Maggie Breyer, Mark Harrison, Jas. J. Ryan, Harold Woolf, Mrs. Ralph Delmore, Mrs. Geo. Seybolt, Henry Botter.

Budd Ross

Mr. Ross, who is a valued member of the Princess Theatre Stock, is the whole show this week. In every opportunity that has come to him to "make good," he has done so, with an intelligence and an ability that is far ahead of those qualities possessed by the average comedian. Mr. Ross is an earnest, hard-working and versatile actor, at home in many styles of stage work.

Actor Is "Rogue and Vagabond"

An actor who was summoned last week to serve on a jury in London made the successful plea that under the law he was a "rogue and a vagabond," and therefore ineligible. In support of his contention, he produced an old act of Parliament which never has been repealed. The surprised judge hastily perused this act and had to admit that the actor was not qualified to sit on a jury. The law referred to provides that "all common players of interludes and all persons who shall for Hire, Gain or Reward, act, represent or perform any interlude, Tragedy, Comedy, Opera Play, Farce or other Entertainment of the Stage, not being authorized by law, shall be deemed Rogues and Vagabonds within the true meaning of the act." The punishment was to be publicly whipped or to be sent to the House of Correction. A curious note to the law sets forth that after which whipping "the same person shall have a testimonial testifying that he has been punished according to the law." Here, it would seem, was the first "Testimonial" granted an actor. This old and long-forgotten law is especially absurd when we consider the fine social position accorded the best English actors today. Several of them are esteemed members of the nobility and their worth and talents abundantly recognized.

Comparison of the Capacity of London, Paris and Berlin Play Houses with that of New York's Leading Theatres

The theatre with the largest capacity in London is the Lyceum, which seats 2,800, while Drury Lane, the famous melodrama playhouse, seats 2,516. The Vaudeville Theatre, where Rose Stahl is playing in Jas. Forbes' comedy, The Chorus Lady, seats 702. Lena Ashwell's Theatre, the Kingsway, seats 584. The Criterion Theatre seats 575; the Royalty Theatre, 657. The average seating capacity of the London theatres is about 1,000. In New York the theatre having the largest seating capacity that plays regular attractions is the New York Theatre, which holds 3,815. The Academy of Music seats 2,700; the Hippodrome 4,768; the Grand Opera House, 2,910; the Metropolitan Opera House holds 4,000; the Manhattan Opera House, 3,100. Weber's Theatre has the smallest capacity, 786. The Hackett Theatre, seats 1,200. The Hudson Theatre seats 1,077. The entire seating capacity of all of London's theatres is 125,309. The seating capacity of New York theatres is 129,402. In Paris the Comedie Francaise, which is the endowed theatre of the Government, seats 1,400; the Odeon (Theatre National) seats 1,460; and the Opera, which corresponds to the Metropolitan Opera House of New York, seats only 2,200. The Sarah Bernhardt, which is owned and managed by this famous actress, seats 1,699. The Theatre Rejane, which Madame Rejane manages, seats 806. In Berlin the Royal Opera House seats 1,716. The smallest house in Berlin is the Kleines, which seats 420. The Lessing Theatre, which is the most famous of Berlin's playhouses, seats 1,146.

Forbids Shaw's Play

LONDON, May 22.—The censor has prohibited the production of George Bernard Shaw's new play, The Showing Up of Blanco Posnol. The play, which was on a theological subject, was in advanced rehearsal for an early production. Mr. Shaw in a characteristic interview in the Daily Chronicle, says: "The censor objects to the play not because it is irreligious, but because it suggests belief in God by picturing a set of ungodly people who wake up to the perception that God is a real, vital and active existence. The remarkable thing is that while it is permissible to represent God as a quaint costumed figure as in Everyman, any verbal allusion to Him is immediately tabooed." Mr. Shaw concluded by saying he was willing to cut out or reasonably change any offending passage, "but the censor demands practically that I should cut out the whole play; therefore, there was no alternative but to abandon the whole production."

Biography of William Somerset Maugham

William Somerest Maugham, M. R. C. S., L. R. C. P., author dramatist, was born in 1874, in London, Eng. He was educated at King's School, Canterbury, Heidelberg University, and studied surgery at St. Thomas' Hospital. His first play was Schiffbruchig, which was produced at Berlin in Germany in 1901. He is the author also of the following plays: A Man of Honour, produced at the Avenue, 1904; Mlle. Zampa, Avenue, 1904; Lady Frederick, Court, 1907; Jack Straw, Vaudeville, March, 1908; Mrs. Dot, Comedy, 1908; created a theatrical "record" by having four original plays performed in London concurrently. His published works include Liza of Lambeth, 1897; The Making of a Saint, 1898; Orientations, 1899; The Hero, 1901; Mrs. Craddock, 1902; The Merry Go Round, 1904; The Land of the Blessed Virgin, 1905; The Explorer, and The Noble Spaniard which has been running all year in London with Charles Hawtrey, and is one of the notable successes of the English season. Henry B. Harris while abroad procured the American rights for this latest play and Robert Edeson will use it as his stellar vehicle for the coming season, opening early in September.

Grand Opera Season at the Princess

The W. A. Edwards International Grand Opera Company, with headquarters in Montreal, will open at the Princess on June 14, for a limited season, at prices ranging from 50 cents to $2.00. Frank M. Norcross will be the manager in charge. The company will consist of Mlle. Bertozzi, Almen, sopranos; Mlle. Due-Merola, Novetli, Zerod, Strauss, Bossi, Manzorle, Williams, contraltos; Mons. Torre, Russo, Bari, Oddo, Guillianio, Columbini, tenors; Mons. Zara, Trosiona, Secci, baritones; Mons. Gravini, Otero, bassos. Peluso will be the technical director and Meroli will be the orchestra leader. The opening bill will be Aida.

Van Ness Theatre

John Drew formally opened the big summer season at the Syndicate house on Monday last, and gave us our first view of the Maugham style of polite comedy that seems at present to reign with much splendor in both London and New York. Jack Straw, who, while masquerading as a foreign prince, to vent a grudge on a vulgar newly rich family, and is in reality the self-same person, affords Mr. Drew many opportunities for his comedy ability. It has been years since John Drew has had a part that has given him so many comedy opportunities. The play itself is a highly seasoned product of our times. It is frothy and fantastic and is not designed for the development of the brain cells, yet the touch of its author is so sure and the presentation by the actors so skillful, that a thoroughly enjoyable evening results. Quite sharing the plaudits of the audience with the star, Rose Coghlan shows herself once more to be a fine artist by the way she presents the aspiring parvenue, Mrs. Parker Jennings. Her portrayal was a magnificent achievement. In the support were such clever people as Edgar L. Davenport, Frank Goldsmith, Mario Majeroni, E. Soldene Powell, Edwin Nicander, Adelaide Prince, Carlotta Doty, Grace Henderson, and Helen Freeman, who is playing the part taken originally by Mary Boland. She plays it with girlish grace and without any frills or affectations that might mar the character of the girl the author has drawn. Miss Boland was taken with appendicitis in Omaha on the way to the coast and at the present writing is making rapid progress toward recovery. Next week will see the final appearances of Mr. Drew and company.

Valencia Theatre

The Man from Mexico is always a favorite bill for a stock company frolic and, incidentally it is usually most successful as a means for amusing the jaded theatrical goer. The performance this week is in nearly every way a most entertaining one. Hall McAllister, he of the serious mien and leading man standing, who would rather play comedies than make love, has a splendid chance in the character of Benjamin Fitzhugh. He gets a great deal of fun out of the part and his steadily serious and utterly absorbed appearance renders the part most atrociously amusing. Charles Dow Clarke is immensely funny, too, as the German. William Wolbert is to be credited with one of his best assumptions in this city in the role of Cook, the deputy sheriff. Robert Homans, as the warden, Gerald Harcourt as Danton, Robert McKim as Farrar, and George Osbourne as Majors, played well up to the requirements of their parts. Florence Oakley was the decidedly pretty wife of Fitzhugh and executed her Spanish dance in the last act with grace and abandon. Edith Lyle and Grace Travers completed the trio of young and charmingly gowned females.

Alcazar Theatre

The management have very gracefully selected the best possible bill for Bertram Lytell to say farewell to San Francisco. The Christian has always been a very absorbing play to our theatregoers and the character of John Storm, played here by a number of the best actors we have, has always appealed to our people because of its wonderful repressed dramatic possibilities. Bert Lytell is fitted by nature to play John Storm with much impressiveness and he does. Nothing more convincing in his numerous efforts here is to be recalled. The Glory of Evelyn Vaughan, too, is a distinctly powerful and gripping effort, and the wonderful personality of this young actress endows the part with exceptional interest. Will Walling was Lord Robert, and Ernest Glendinning Horatio Drake. James Corrigan played Archdeacon Wealthy, and Bert Wesner Father Lamplugh. John Maher was cast as the theatre manager, and Howard Hickman as Brother Paul. Bessie Barriscale was Polly Love, and Louise Brownell, Effie Bond and Dorothy Merritt the three maids. These minor parts, serving only to bring out into vivid relief the two central figures, were carefully and satisfactorily played. Adele Belgarde contributed a charming bit as Mrs. Callender. Edward Lada's orchestra, as usual, was most effective and the scenery was a feature.

Princess Theatre

Peggy from Paris has for a considerable time held a record as being a musical comedy way above the average, and it must be said that the present performance by the Princess company does not do anything to injure or diminish this reputation. In fact, the efforts of the players are distinctly creditable and certainly vastly entertaining. The best thing of all was to see Budd Ross in a part with something to it, and he certainly handled it better than any he has had. As the village joker in the prologue and as the boy joker in the two acts that followed he gave us a first-class presentation of the boy wag at his best. He sustained the part throughout easily and was in evidence at the right time, always with the same insipid smile, under which one could easily recognize the intelligent and ready wit of the 20th century American youth. Character comedians are interesting in so far as they portray beyond doubt a well known type usual to the public, and Budd Ross has done this successfully in the case in question. There was no hesitation in the mind of the audience—they all recognized the humor of his appropriate exaggerations—true to life, to the life of the baseball "fan," let us say; and if at the close of the show Ross had signified his intention of attending the coming Nelson-Hyland bout we should say it would have been perfectly in keeping and we should not have been at all surprised. Good support was rendered by Oliver Le Noir, Walter Catlett, Marie Nelson, Fred Mace, Edwin T. Emery, James Stevens, Zoe Barnett, May Boley, Merle Stanton and Jennie Metzler.

SARAH EDWARDS, Davis Morris, Blossom Seeley and Frances Tait will be new members of the Murray & Mack company in Los Angeles next week.

Ethel Barrymore in a New Pinero Play

The most interesting announcement that Charles Frohman has thus far cabled his New York office is the fact that he has completed an arrangement whereby, at the end of her present tour in Lady Frederick, Ethel Barrymore will be seen in a new play by Arthur Wing Pinero. This will be the first drama that has come from Mr. Pinero's pen since His House in Order, which he wrote two years ago and which was acted in this country by John Drew and in England by Arthur Bourchier. The new play is, as yet, unnamed, but it is known that the drift of the plot reveals a complete return to Pinero's earlier, less bitter, less cynical style of dramatic thought and writing. The chief part, that of a woman, will be played in London by Irene Vanbrugh and in America by Ethel Barrymore. The possession of such a vehicle should mark an important turning-point in Ethel Barrymore's career as an actress. For years she has struggled successfully with plays that, with few exceptions, have almost always proved to be beneath her calibre as an actress. Any body who has seen Miss Barrymore, even in one of her more recent plays, must have recognized the skill and the depth of feeling that have enabled her to fire with life and reality stage parts that, in other hands, would have seemed only mildly entertaining or even futile. It is a sterling proof of Miss Barrymore's power as an actress that she has thus obtained substantial conviction for so many stage characters that, in manuscript, must have seemed anything but convincing. The step from light, if genteel, comedy to the sound dramatic vehicle, Mr. Pinero's play is said to be, will, therefore, not call upon Miss Barrymore for any particular extra effort. Her part in the new Pinero play should bring her the greater scope she has always wished for—rather than put her to any new test. Miss Barrymore's first appearance in the Pinero play will be at the Empire Theatre, New York, next season.

1,000 Mile Ride Taxicab Record

A taxicab ride of more than one thousand miles, the longest one on record, has been made by Charles Klein, author of The Third Degree and The Lion and the Mouse. Calling a taxicab off the cab stand in the Strand, London, Mr. Klein ordered the much astonished chauffeur to head for Edinburgh. At first the driver took the instructions as a joke but soon realizing that Mr. Klein was serious, he protested that he could not undertake so long a journey at such a short notice, as he had a wife and family at home. However, the driver's scruples were overcome, and Mr. Klein set off for Scotland. From Edinburgh he proceeded to Glasgow, from which port a steamer was taken for Londonderry. After an extensive tour through Ireland, Mr. Klein dismissed the taxicab man at the Queen's Hotel, Queenstown. The trip took five days. Mr. Klein is now on the way to New York on the Cedric, while the taxicab driver is hurrying back to London with the biggest fare ever taken.

MME. MARCELLA SEMBRICH, the prima donna, has been forced by ill health to cancel all engagements. She was to have sung in Berlin in opera in the second week in June.

The Orpheum

Of the new arrivals in the Orpheum this week, Peter Donald and Meta Carson in their very funny skit, Alex MacLean's dream, are easily the top-liners. Mr. Donald gets the house going on his entrance accompanied by a lamp-post as a companion. He is on his way home from the Scotch ball a little the worse for wear, and attributes the cause of his condition to the fact that he has had "about a tea-spoonful too much." He is ably assisted by Meta Carson, the two finishing their act with a clever Highland fling. The ten colored singers and dancers, headed by Johnson and Wells, created a sensation with the best ensemble dancing ever seen here. Lou Sully was there with a budget of new songs and sayings, and was greeted as an old favorite. A sketch, Imagination, by Myles McCarthy and Pauline A. Palmer, required a stretch of the imagination to class it on a par with the McCarthy standard. Myles is a clever actor and will have to change his sketch considerably. The holdovers are Flo Adler, assisted by the nameless young man in the box; the Lulu Beeson Trio; Countess Rossi and Paulo, and the Baader-La Velle Trio, the program closing with the usual Orpheum motion picture.

Fischer's

The extremely versatile playwright, composer and producer, Charles Alphin, who is responsible for Herr Fischer's very musical and extremely enjoyable comedy offerings, has this week advanced far into ambitious fields, and in The Pagoda is offering a pretty little opera of positive merit. The company is exceptionally happy in presenting the good points of the piece and an excellent entertainment results. Ben Dillon is quite in his element as a detective and his comedy sallies are greatly enjoyed. His dancing and singing are additional features. Tracy McDermott, a Japanese lover; Frank Vack, as a Chinese of property and position; Will King, as a German; Dorothy Raymond, as Miss Gold, the heiress, and Nellie Montgomery, as a Chinese maiden, are each and all well cast. The ensemble music and dancing are features of the performance. The scenery is unusually ambitious and the costuming something elegant.

The National

A program of unusual excellence is holding forth at this popular house. Carroll Johnson, known from one end of the country to the other as the Beau Brummel of black-face artists, comes in for his usual hearty welcome. Carroll presents his usual tasty and immaculate appearance and sings as sweetly, dances as gracefully as of yore. He is a minstrel show all by himself and his pounding on the tambourine takes you back to the days when the minstrel man held first place in the ranks of popular entertainments. A Wild Rose, an act well worth a visit alone, is in the capable hands of Mr. and Mrs. Forbes, assisted by George Alexander. This clever little comedy is from the pen of Mrs. Forbes and is brimful of good clean wholesome humor, telling the story of a well-deserved lesson taught a dissatisfied hubby. The stage setting of the act is worthy of special mention. The acting of the respective characters is finished and cleverly done. Some clever dancing is contributed by Martin Howard, his sailors' hornpipe and Irish breakdown being exceptionally clever and win well-merited applause. The Stadium Trio, in their Roman ring act, have the usual offering of that nature with a few clever stunts of their own. Fox and Crystal, a couple of Hebrew comedians, have nothing new to offer in their crude act. Dick Richards and Mildred Glover are well received in their singing and piano-playing turn. Miller and Tempest, in their singing and acrobatic act, contribute some exceptionally clever tumbling on the part of Miller. Cal Stewart, as a rube monologist, has a fund of humorous stories to tell, which keep the audience continually laughing. Will Oakland, as the holdover from last week, is reaping fresh laurels with his sweet singing. The moving pictures are exceptionally entertaining and complete one of the best bills of the season.

The Wigwam

The programme this week has class written all over it. Chiquita, whose name is a household word, is the banner attraction for the week. The little lady is proving a great drawing card, and although so diminutive (being only 28 inches tall and weighing 30 pounds), is very much in evidence with her singing and dancing. Frank Bush is a big hit with his numerous stories. Frank is a great dialectician and has a new one to spring every time you see him. Roland Bros. do some very clever work in their comedy revolving ladder act. Bonnie Gaylord as a female monologist keeps the audience in a continual titter. Some tuneful harmony is contributed by the Quaker City Four. The comedy is supplied by a black-face artiste that is the largest portion of the act. Lewis and Young are a couple of comedians that keep the audience convulsed, and moreover they can sing. Nita Allen & Co., in the comedy sketch, Car No. 2, Stateroom 1, supply an entertaining portion of the bill. The scenery is very realistic, but a little too much and unnecessary slang is interpolated. The moving pictures this week are exceptionally good. One reel, depicting Roosevelt in the jungles, is exceptionally so. The character in the picture looks a great deal like him, too. The pictures complete a big program.

Pantages-Empire

Wallace, a beautiful specimen of the lion family, with three killings to his credit, is the feature attraction for the week. Frank Hall does not put Wallace through any stunts, his performance consisting simply of entering the cage and getting out again as quickly as possible. The Al Luttringer and Lillian Lucas Co. present A Girl of the West, from the pen of H. D. Cottrell, which comes to us fresh from Eastern successes. The act contains the true Western atmosphere, plenty of good comedy, and a startling climax to satisfy the most exacting. Miss Lucas, as the girl, has a congenial role, which she handles in a most capable and natural manner. Al Luttringer, as the reticent young miner, gives a pleasing and convincing performance, his dialect being especially good. Incidentally Al is a handsome chap with a most pleasing personality. Paul Atherton as the bad man gives good support. The stage setting of the act is especially commendable, in fact so natural that Wallace the lion is evidently affected by the atmosphere and gives a touch of real nature by his roars off the stage. The Del Costa Duo contribute some pleasing operatic and up-to-date vocal selections. La Salle and Lind as club manipulators are given hearty applause for the neatness and cleverness of their work. The Bowen Bros. have a great time laughing at their own antics; no one else does. Quigg and Nickerson, in their comedy musical act come in for a good share of approval. The moving pictures are exceptionally good and complete the program.

in his houses. The action was suggested by Herbert D. Ward, a Boston author, who, with his wife, Elizabeth Stuart Phelps, has written much for the dignity of the family. Commenting on his order, Mr. Keith said: "In these days, when so much objection is raised against caricaturing persons of different nationalities, such as the Irishman and the Jew, and even politicians object to what they consider unfair reference on the stage, simple justice alone demands that the artist should observe the golden rule when referring to one's dearest friend, the mother."

Vaudeville Notes

Through an error last week, Elsie Schuyler was credited with playing at the Oakland Bell instead of The Orpheum. Miss Schuyler is a comparatively recent addition to vaudeville ranks. She has been here before, however, notably with James T. Powers, when she took the part of Poppy, the English girl, in San Toy. Miss Schuyler's speaking tones denote two things—training and good breeding—qualities which are evident throughout her act, characterized by an ability to know where to draw the line.

Frank Bacon and his daughter and wife are playing dates on their way to their home at Mountain View, below this city.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Bernard are enjoying a three weeks' vacation in Sonoma County.

Following the engagement of Conway and his band and soloists, which will terminate Wednesday night, June 9th, at Idora Park, in Oakland, the Navassar band, composed of 55 female musicians will be brought out from the East for a limited engagement. They will be the feature attraction at Idora up to and including June 29th, when they will be succeeded by Erlinger and his band, which will be brought direct from St. Louis. As an added attraction to Erlinger's band, Bert Morphy, "the man who sings to beat the band," will be introduced to the West for the first time. Morphy has been described as "the human caliope." The Kennedy X. I. T. Ranch Wild West Show and Congress of Nations will also begin a limited engagement on June 27th. At the close of Erlanger's engagement, July 16th, Innes and his famous orchestral band will be the leading attraction at Idora for one month, and then Liberati will be heard in concerts.

Harts, San Mateo, week May 23d: Mildren Fitzgerald, singing and dancing soubrette; illustrated song, Miss C. E. Hart; Joe Goodman, comedian; Melbourne Bros., musical act; Stanley and Uline, comedians and singers.

Ernest Hogan, one of the best-known negro comedians and song writers, is dead at his home, of tuberculosis. He wrote the book and music of Rufus Rastus, in which he starred for two seasons; then of the Oyster

Man, which he was producing at the time of his illness. Hogan wrote several hundred songs, of which All Coons Look Alike to Me was the most successful. It is said he cleared $40,000 from this song alone. He was one of the originators of the "rag time" popular songs.

At the Star this week: Kelly and Violette are the holdover attraction for this week and continue to sing their way into popular approval. Mr. and Mrs. Ellis present an amusing little playlet dealing with domestic disagreements, which brings a smile of recognition to many faces. John Welch is well received and ends his turn with some neat and clever dancing. Comar introduces his clever and novel wire act, which comes in for a good share of the applause. The Buford Sisters, in a good song and dance turn, and Olive Reed and the illustrated songs and three sets of entertaining moving pictures, complete a most gratifying program.

A feature attraction at the Empire next week will be supplied by Mr. and Mrs. Edward Lucas in scenes from Dickens' works. Special scenery is carried for the production, and the act comes highly recommended.

De Mon, the spectacular bicycle rider, whose act consists of riding down an incline with his clothing afire and plunging into a tank of water, is being booked by Benny Michaels through the Northwest territory.

Carroll Johnson is making the big hit at the National this week and will be retained for another week. Carroll will have a bunch of new stuff for next week and by popular request will give his great prize fight specialty.

At the Main Street Regal Theatre, Los Angeles, this week, Black and Grant, in a singing, talking and knock-about act, are heading the bill. Others on the bill are Eddie Zaro, contortionist, said to be out of the ordinary; Dorothy Walker, in whistling and illustrated songs; Ransom's orchestra, in popular music, and new "first-run" motion pictures.

NEW YORK, May 21.—The ukase of Mayor McClellan, which prohibits any kind of amusement on Sunday, will be defied by the principal owners of amusement places at Coney Island, according to statements issued by them. It is understood that the courts will be asked for injunctions restraining the Mayor and the police from interfering with the Sunday shows at Coney Island.

Trousers

I have always been more or less curious to know the opinion of an actress required to don trousers and play a man's part. My opportunity came when Ann Crewe recently presented her dramatic comedy, My Lady Raffles, in this city. Knowing Miss Crewe to be an actress with a wide range of experience under such well-known producers as Charles Frohman, William Brady and the Shuberts and also experience in Shakespeare with such stars as E. H. Sothern and Julia Marlowe, besides having been her own stage director, manager and author of her latest vehicle, I decided it was a golden opportunity to gratify my curiosity. "Miss Crewe, will you tell me why, in writing an act, you created a masculine role for yourself?" Shoving her hands deep into her pockets and balancing herself on her heels and toes and favoring me with a gracious smile, she said: "Well, I'm afraid I shall have to go back to when I was a very little girl. I wanted to be a boy, oh, so badly. I used to dress up in the neighbor boy's trousers and parade around to the great horror of my more modest playmates. I am quite sure the desire to be a boy made me doubt the efficacy of prayers. Mother told me that if I prayed for anything I wanted, God would answer my prayers. Well, I prayed morning, noon and night, but I failed to be a boy. One night I astounded the family prayer circle by going on a strike and declaring that God didn't listen and there was no use praying. I was rushed to bed in disgrace. After a time my old negro mammy (I am sure all Southern children have known the love of a negro mammy) came to me. I made a full confession of the cause of my strike. She told me the only sure way for me to become a boy was for me to kiss my right elbow, and the miracle would come to pass. I have often wondered why I did not grow up like a spiral staircase, for I spent most of my time when no one was looking twisting myself into the most extraordinary positions trying to make my lips and elbow meet. It is needless to say I failed. But I always felt vindictive, so when it came to writing my present act I said, 'Here's where I play even with the Fates and wear the long-desired pants.' But, this is the funny part of it all. Now that I can, I don't want to. I like skirts best and am more satisfied every day that I am a woman. And I'll venture to say right here that if the fair sex were granted the liberty of wearing trousers, they would resign in favor of 'Hubby.'"

The Western Play Pirate is just now entering upon a season of great prosperity. The above cut shows a scene in The Wolf which, owing to its small cast, is a favorite play with these theatrical socialists of the tall timber. What has become of the Theatrical Producing Managers' Association?

Fischer's Theatre

"One laugh doth tread upon another's heels, so fast they follow" is the Bard's revised quotation as used by Director Alphin in describing next week's bill, which bears the title of King of Patagonia. It is a musical comedy, with scenes laid in California, and the theme is founded solely on mistaken identity. A noted King of the Patagonias is touring the world accompanied by a Hebrew valet. On reaching California, the latter is mistaken for the monarch and made the subject for great social favor. Simultaneous with this there is a party of plotters who are intent on doing away with the dusky King, and the Hebrew finds himself in a particularly uncomfortable position. There is a counter plot of intrigue that tends to heighten the humor of extremely ludicrous situations. Several of Mr. Alphin's most successful compositions will be introduced, including I Was Only Walking in My Sleep, My Filippino Maid, What Are the Simple Charms of Married Life, and a finale that has received special encomiums from music critics. All the principals will be pleasantly in the cast, and a number of specially attractive novelties are promised in the concerted offerings. The new bill starts with the matinee on Monday.

Personals

Charles Frohman has cabled his New York office that he has decided that The Bachelor's Baby shall be Francis Wilson's play for next season. Mr. Wilson is himself the author, as well as the stage manager of The Bachelor's Baby.

NORVAL MACGREGOR will be in the Alcazar company during the special Florence Roberts season there.

OLIVER MOROSCO has got it again. He is writing a musical comedy in collaboration with Harry Girard, who wrote the music for the Alaskan.

Henry Cahen has sold his stock in the Valencia Theatre to D. J. Lisberger, who has succeeded to the position of secretary of the corporation.

BESSIE TANNEHILL, Sutherland and Curtis and Bobby Harrington close with the Murray & Mack company in Los Angeles next week.

SELBY OPPENHEIMER will do the advance work for The Princess Theatre Company on its way to and from Los Angeles. Manager Sam Loverich will go along with the show.

The Novelty Theatre in Stockton in the future will book all attractions through Bert Levey.

WM. DESMOND, the Beau Brummel of leading men, and the five-years' favorite of Los Angeles, will play next season in Portland at the Bungalow, instead of at the Valencia. He opens August 15th or thereabouts.

SAN FRANCISCO theatregoers apparently have not discovered that both Lillian Andrews and Rose Coghlan, who are now playing there, were in the same company in 1879. They were members of the Baldwin Stock Company, James O'Neill and Lewis Morrison being the leading male characters in the plays presented. It was rumored at the time that much jealousy existed between the two actresses, but doubtless that was merely rumor. Both were singularly alike in looks and speech, Miss Coghlan being an Englishwoman and Miss Andrews an Australian.

The Valencia stock received its notice last Sunday night, and after the Arthur Cunningham engagement, in all probability, a new company will be seen there. However, this is mere guess work, for Manager Walter Hoff Seeley is now speeding eastward and

T. M. A. Benefit Performance

Performers from the theatres in the city gave an entertainment Wednesday afternoon at the Princess Theatre in aid of San Francisco Lodge, No. 21, Theatrical Mechanical Association. It was a show of merit and from 1:30 o'clock until 5 there was a continuous performance. From the Alcazar came Howard Hickman, Bessie Barriscale and Ernest Glendinning to present a clever little sketch, Disqualified, written by Mr. Hickman himself. It was a story of a young husband who neglected his business and his charming little wife and son to play the races but, through the loss of his money and the intervention of a friend, was made to realize his mistake. After announcing that in future he would play the horses only for his baby's edification, Hickman rushed off and returned bearing on his back his own little yellow-haired son, who kissed his hand to the house. Two small people who were hailed with delight were little Alma Tuchler of the Princess company and Baby Mildred Koenig, who did songs and dances. May Boley gave a musical monologue in which she used with great and diverting freedom the names of some of the smart set of the city and wore a hat which she said came from the California market. Zoe Barnett sang a little song with her usual fascination. Arthur Cunningham gave some Irish ballads; Fred Mace of the Princess did a musical monologue explaining his domestic difficulties; Carroll Johnson from the National did a bit of minstrel singing, dancing and story telling; Ben T. Dillon from Fischer's gave a Chinese song, and Frank Bush from the Wigwam told some stories. Thelma de Verne and company did some clever xylophone playing, the "Co." consisting of Story and Van. Thelma sang in a baritone voice. Fay Carranza from the Washington Square Theatre sang delightfully and Flo Adler and her small boy from the Orpheum were also heard. Kelly and Violette, billed as the "fashion plate duo," sang some amusing songs. Some excellent moving pictures completed the program. It is thought that nearly $800 will be turned over to the Theatrical Mechanics' Lodge.

Goodwin Plans Early Retirement

Nat Goodwin is going to retire from the stage, and Edna Goodrich Goodwin is, too. Mr. Goodwin said so Wednesday night in Oakland in his dressing-room. "We haven't decided upon the date yet," he remarked, "but it will be in a year or so. We want rest and privacy, and in order to get them we will have to give all these imaginative press agents a rest. It is abominable, unbearable, this everlasting publicity, and in order to escape it we are going to retire. When we do, we shall tell no one about it. We will quietly slide out of the public view, and there will be no fuss and turmoil about it." The beautiful Mrs. Goodwin, arrayed for the stage, stood at her husband's dressing-room door and nodded her indorsement of his words. "And when we do retire," added Nat, "you may be sure that we will make our home in California. I said not long ago at a dinner in Los Angeles that any one who lived outside of California voluntarily was an imbecile and I am always ready to reiterate that statement. There is only one place to live, and that is in this State. Much of my property is here, and I am going to make my home here. Mrs. Goodwin and I are both glad that we are nearing the end of our public careers."

The Goodwins will wind up their season at Delmar Garden, St. Louis, where the comedian will appear for three weeks in a revival of his best plays, receiving a guarantee of his personal share of at least $14,000.

Mrs. Felix Isman Says No Divorce

When informed that a New York dispatch attributed her presence in Los Angeles to a well-laid plan to seek legal separation from her husband, Felix Isman, a well-known theatrical manager and real estate operator of New York and Philadelphia, Mrs. Isman fainted in her luxurious apartment at the Alexandria, one evening last week. When she revived, Mrs. Isman dramatically exclaimed: "This is the work of my mysterious enemy who has been pursuing me for years. Once before the same rumor was circulated in theatrical circles and several New York papers got hold of the story. It was emphatically denied then, and both my husband and myself have been trying to find the source of the cruel attack upon me—I am sure that it is some woman who cherishes a secret grudge against me." Mrs. Isman, before her marriage, was Irene Frizelle. "Don't imagine that I am trying to make you think I am overcome with grief," she sobbed, "for anger is uppermost in my heart. I would have seen you sooner, but when you telephoned the terrible news to me, I just got limp, and everything became black around me. I was advised to refuse any information, but I believe in frankness to newspaper men. You will please remember that I was a professional woman before my marriage," she added with the ghost of a smile. "I came out her for my health, upon my doctor's advice. Though I would dearly love to live in Los Angeles, my plans do not permit a prolonged stay. Miss Josephine Drake and I leave here in a few days for the North. We expect to tour the Yellowstone and may visit other points of interest en route to Chicago, my former home. There I expect to meet my dear husband. I can tell you positively that nothing would induce me to leave him for even a day, if it were not for my health. You can easily imagine that I am not strong, when a telephone message made me faint. We will get to the bottom of this some day," she said thoughtfully, "for this ridiculous rumor is identical with the one given out a year ago."

Beatrice Nichols Has Happy Introduction to Milwaukee

Last night's performance made good every promise which has been made for the opening of the stock season at the Davidson and proved an auspicious event in every way. A telegram from Maude Adams to Beatrice Nichols, the ingenue of the stock company, who won her way straight into Milwaukee hearts in the role of Peter Pan, was one of the inspiring incidents of which the capacity audience knew nothing. Miss Nichols plays Peter with an overflow of youthful exuberance, with a spirit of mischief, and with the note of sincerity and dramatic feeling which are so essential. She could scarcely have had a happier introduction to Milwaukee, although she is not slight enough to be the ideal Peter physically. Her appeal to the audience to save the life of Tinker Bell is one of the most effective moments of the play, but scarcely more so than the triumphant lines which fairly sing themselves into the climax, "I'm Joy, Joy, Joy." Thomas Maclarnie, a new member of the company, makes an excellent impression with limited opportunity as the bombastic Mr. Darling.—Milwaukee Sentinel.

Klamath Falls Line Completed

Theatrical people will be interested in the news of the completion of the branch railroad from Weed, Siskiyou County, to Klamath Falls, Ore., the first construction train running to Klamath Falls last Saturday. Southern Pacific officials announce that passenger trains are now running regularly between Weed and Klamath Falls. The stage company that for years has run coaches from Klamath Falls to the railroad has sold its stock and retired. The chamber of commerce of Klamath Falls announces that the advent of the railroad will be celebrated June 14th, which is to be called Railroad Day and the occasion for festivities and many visitors are expected. This country has been a fine field for small companies.

John Drew a Shakespearean Actor

American theatregoers have grown so accustomed to seeing John Drew in the light, up-to-date comedies he has been playing so long and in which he has had so much success, that when the announcement is made that he is contemplating a revival of Shakespeare's Much Ado About Nothing, the knowing ones smile wisely and remark that the press agent is at work again, and no one thinks that it will ever come true. As a matter of fact, though, Mr. Drew is an admirable Shakespearean actor and has a longer repertoire of Shakespearean roles than very many of the actors who devote themselves exclusively to that branch of the drama. He got his schooling, too, under the very best of masters, no other than Edwin Booth. Soon after Mr. Drew joined the Augustin Daly stock company, Booth came under Daly's management as a stock star, and Mr. Drew was called upon to support him in a great many plays, including Hamlet, Othello, Richard III, The Merchant of Venice, The Taming of the Shrew and King Lear. In his contribution to the discussion as to the manner in which Shakespeare intended Shylock to be played, published in the Variorum Edition of The Merchant of Venice, Booth refers to Mr. Drew in the most complimentary way. He says: "A clever actor once played the part of Tubal with me and wore red hair and a hook'd nose. He did not make the audience laugh, 'twas not his purpose, but he looked exactly the very creature that could sympathize with Shylock. His makeup was admirable. He's the son of the famous John Drew and is an excellent actor, now a leading member of Daly's company." Later on when Mr. Drew became a leading man at Daly's, he appeared as Francis Ford in The Merry Wives of Windsor; as Petruchio in The Taming of the Shrew (and there probably has never been a better performance of that role in America); as Demetrius in A Midsummer Night's Dream; as Orlando in As You Like It, and as the King of Navarre in Love's Labor Lost. Mr. Drew has been harboring the ambition to return to Shakespeare for some time, and he has practically persuaded Charles Frohman, his manager, to make a revival of Much Ado About Nothing for him next season. W. Somerset Maugham, author of Jack Straw, in which Mr. Drew is appearing at the Van Ness Theatre, is at work on another comedy for him, and it may be that next season he will alternate between Shakespeare and Maugham. It will be easy then to decide how well the Bard does actually stand the test when pitted against a master of the most modern type of comedy.

Opening of Shubert Shows Here

Abe S. Cohn, manager of the American Theatre, denies the statement that the Shubert interests are endeavoring to secure the Valencia Theatre for the production of their big musical attractions because the American Theatre stage is too small. "The American Theatre stage is 30 feet deep and not 20 feet 6 inches deep, as reported, insists Mr. Cohn. "We staged The Alaskan, probably the biggest production that ever was given in this city. I have a contract with the Shuberts for 35 weeks, and any Shubert production going to the Valencia during that time will have to be booked through me." The Blue Mouse, which will open at the American Sunday afternoon, June 13th, is the first Shubert attraction to be presented under the contract with Mr. Cohn. To confirm his statement as to the Shuberts booking their attractions exclusively in the American Theatre, Manager Cohn exhibited a telegram from J. H. Decker, Shubert's agent in New York, which said: "Am arranging to fill all your time following The Blue Mouse for at least four months. Will advise you fully by letter." "This telegram," said Mr. Cohn, "is sufficient evidence that the American Theatre will be the home of the Shubert attractions in this city until the 'trust breakers' complete their own playhouse." The telegram was dated May 25th.

Lambs' Public Gambol a Huge Success

NEW YORK, May 24.—In consideration of $40,000, tendered them in amounts varying from $1,100 for a parterre box and $55 for a single orchestra chair to $2 for a seat in the last row of the top balcony, the actors, managers and playwrights constituting the membership of the Lambs' Club admitted the public tonight to one of their "gambols," the scene of which was transferred for the occasion to the Metropolitan Opera House. With De Wolf Hopper as interlocutor and such favorites as Raymond Hitchcock, Eddie Foy, Nat M. Wills, Maclyn Arbuckle, Charles Evans, Ignacio Martinetti, Andrew Mack as end men, with Victor Herbert conducting and his orchestra of fifty accompanying the singing, an old-time minstrel show proved one of the best of the evening's many delightful features. The forum scene from Julius Caesar served to bring before the footlights James O'Neill as Brutus and De Wolf Hopper as Marc Antony. Supporting them were William Muldoon, William and Melville Stewart, George V. Hobart, Wilton Lackaye, Dustin Farnum and others. The mob in itself was a remarkable aggregation, among the supers being Digby Bell, David Belasco, George Broadhurst, Al Erlanger, Lew Fields, Clay M. Greene, Charles Klein, John Mason, Eugene W. Presbrey, Edwin M. Royle, A. Baldwin Sloane, Augustus Thomas and Joe Weber. Joe Weber and Lew Fields, assisted by a company of stars, gave their old specialty, entitled, A Game of Pool. In After the Matinee, a song and dance, nine well-known Lambs appeared as matinee girls.

Spotlights

Charles Frohman and James K. Hackett have concluded negotiations by cable whereby Mr. Hackett will be under Mr. Frohman's management, beginning next season. Mr. Hackett will make his first appearance under this arrangement in Samson, Henry Bernstein's drama, and after a tour of the principal cities in this play will go into New York for a season at his own theatre in a play which is at present a sensational success in Paris. The arrangement will in no way interfere with Mr. Hackett's present position as a manager and producer. He will still continue to operate the Hackett Theatre and make the special productions already announced by him.

A tale of infatuation for "the other man" and its consequent train of sorrows and heart-breakings, with the inevitable, yet heartrending, ending, is told in the drama, The Transgressors, being played at the Bungalow this week by Ralph Stuart, Mary Hall and associate players. Ralph Stuart as Byron Mordaunt, the wronged husband, presents a good character; he is ably seconded by Mary Hall. The real heavy work of the play fell on Anna Cleveland, the recalcitrant wife and mother, who detested her husband through the glamour surrounding another man, and she acquitted herself with credit. Charles Young, the receiver, was well portrayed by T. N. Heffron, and although his part at no time called for sympathy from the audience, he was frequently applauded for his excellent rendition of a difficult role.—Salt Lake News.

The Alaskan, which is now owned and managed by Wm. P. Cullen, is an enormous success in Chicago where in its revised and rewritten form it will remain at the Great Northern Theatre for the balance of the summer. Mr. Cullen also owns and manages The Burgomaster and The Tenderfoot.

When Francis Wilson Met Charles Frohman

It was in London some years ago that William H. Crane brought about the first meeting between Charles Frohman and Francis Wilson, the latter having, in his typically timid way, hinted to Mr. Crane that he would like so much "to be with Mr. Frohman." "Well, I have an appointment with him at 10 tomorrow," answered Mr. Crane, "and I shall bring it up with him." Mr. Frohman of course told Mr. Crane that he would like very much at least to meet Mr. Wilson, and that he would leave it to the comedian what might come of the meeting. An hour was set for a meeting between Mr. Frohman and Mr. Wilson the next day. He was to have presented himself at the Savoy Hotel at 1 o'clock; but Mr. Wilson was there at 12, turning over in his mind all that he wanted to say, rehearsing in pantomime the handshake, the salutation, the main speech, and the parting remarks that he would make to Mr. Frohman. But in the midst of Mr. Wilson's meditations Mr. Frohman himself suddenly entered the reception room of his apartments, recognized the comedian, and, as soon as he saw him, asked him to come into the room, overlooking the Thames, that he makes his office six months out of every year. It still lacked many minutes of being 1 o'clock; the comedian knew that; but the part he was to play was not supposed to begin before 1 o'clock; it seemed very embarrassing and nerve-tearing to be called on for a performance half an hour earlier than the expected hour; so that the result was that Mr. Wilson "went up in the air." He spoke a great deal, but he said nothing. He smiled, grimaced, balanced himself on one foot, then on the other, bowed and re-bowed, and still he said nothing. Then he heard in quiet and crisply uttered tones the words—"You would like to come under my management?" "Very much," he heard another voice say, something like his own. "I shall be delighted to have you. I shall tell you the name of your play tomorrow morning. Your season will open in New York next October. All right. All right." And in about two minutes after seeing Mr. Frohman for the first time, Francis Wilson found himself once more on the Strand, with an ambition that he had fostered for many years suddenly brought to pass, as in a dream.

She Wanted Her Money Back

George Cohan, the player, tells of a theatrical combination that encountered much bad business in its tour of one-night stands in Ohio and Kentucky. The "date" that proved fatal to the life of the organization took it to Marietta, in the Buckeye State. The first performance was a matinee, and the audience was in numbers not much larger than the proverbial "corporal's guard." The disconsolate business manager was hurrying out of the office on some errand to the "back" of the house, when he stumbled over a little girl dissolved into tears. "What's the matter, little one?" he asked, forgetting his own troubles at this sad sight. "I wants me money back!" yelled the youngster between wails. "Don't you like the play?" asked the manager. "Don't get discouraged. You've seen only the first act." "I don't care nuthin' 'bout the play," howled the little girl. "I'm afriad to set in that gallery all alone!"

Actors' Fund

Thomas McGrath reports that registrations for the month of May will equal, if not exceed, that of the previous months. Three hundred and ten new annual members and eight life members have been added to the roll, and the managers have just begun sending in their lists for next season. Over one hundred engagements were secured through the bureau during the past month and the outlook from now on is very promising; both actors and managers are coming forward in support of the new bureau. About 1,500 registrations have been made and all the first-class managers have placed themselves on record to assist in placing those members of the Fund who are registered. It should be the pride of everybody connected with the profession to have their name enrolled in the Actors' Fund—two dollars for membership in the Fund and one dollar extra for registration in the bureau. More than two hundred addresses were phoned for to the bureau during May alone. Is it possible there are any actors who cannot realize the great benefit the bureau is to the profession at large?

Edmund Breese to Star in The Earth

Notwithstanding several prominent American managers were endeavoring to acquire the American rights to James Bernard Fagan's London success, The Earth, now being presented at the Kingsway Theatre in that city, Henry B. Harris has consummated arrangements whereby he secured these rights. It is the intention of Mr. Harris to make use of this play as a vehicle with which to elevate Edmund Breese, now appearing in The Third Degree at the Hudson Theatre, to stardom. Mr. Breese, by reason of his signal success as John Burkett Ryder in the original production of The Lion and the Mouse, and lastly by his work as Richard Brewster in The Third Degree, earned for him a promise from Mr. Harris to star him as soon as a suitable play could be procured. The Earth will have its New York premier early in November.

The Orpheum

The circus is coming to town. It will pitch its tent on the stage at the Orpheum this Sunday afternoon. The Ellis-Nowlan Troupe, headed by Nat Ellis and Ella Nowlan, will provide this affair, which includes twenty acrobats and comedians of both sexes. A unique feature of this act is the introductory scene, which shows a real old-fashioned circus parade in which the various members of the company, "a cage of wild animals," a steam calico and a silver cornet band take part. There are ground and lofty tumblers, bareback riders, Fluffy Ruffle equestrians, funny and frolicsome clowns and the ever present, bland, affable, verbose and blatant ballyhoo, the gen-

Twenty per cent discount

It pays to advertise sensibly. In the face of quiet times generally, I increased my business considerably this May as against the same month last year; simply by maintaining the quality, but reducing the profit. The same discount, to-wit: twenty per cent runs for the month of June also, and it behooves you to see the high grade of merchandise I am offering at almost wholesale prices.

tlemanly barker, who stands outside the tented arena and announces in stentorian tones the myriad attractions of the "greatest show on earth." Cheridah Simpson is sure to be a popular and interesting feature of the program. In addition to her ability and charm as a singer, Miss Simpson is an accomplished pianist, and in several of her numbers she plays her own accompaniment. Rossiter's Novelty Dancing Four will contribute to the general enjoyment. A Spotless Reputation, a one-act dramatic episode, will be another new attraction. Albert L. Pellaton and William Foran, the former in the role of Governor and the latter in the part of The Smiling Kid, will give the play a forcible presentation. Next week will be the last of Claude Gillingwater, The Vindobonas, Billy Van, and Mabel Hite and Mike Donlin in their tremendous hit, Stealing Home. A new series of imported Orpheum motion pictures will conclude the performance.

American Theatre

It is with no little pride that the management of the American Theatre is enabled to announce that they have secured from the Messrs. Shubert beginning Sunday, June 13, The Blue Mouse. The Blue Mouse is a farce comedy pure and simple. It is an adaptation by Clyde Fitch from the German and has proven the cleverest comedy this popular playwright has ever turned out. The Blue Mouse has created no end of sensation on its tour of the East brought about by ministerial criticism condemning it as risqué and racy. That they had been misinformed and their condemnation without foundation is evidenced by the fact that every critic wherever The Blue Mouse has been presented, pronounce it clean and wholesome. In further evidence of the cleanliness of The Blue Mouse the following is from the St. Louis Times of April 12: "It is probably true that offense has been taken at some quarters of the country at The Blue Mouse, but unjustly so. The risqué is lacking to a marked degree; offense must not be taken where offense is not on the surface; we must not dig down into the unworthy depths to find something that is not apparent; there is so much real and genuine comedy in the play that it must be taken as a genuine effort to please and amuse, not railed against because of imaginary evils that exist as only the mind creates them."

Alcazar Theatre

With the second and final week of Arizona, commencing next Monday night, three popular members of the stock company will sever their connection with the theatre. Will R. Walling and his wife (Effie Bond) retire to their Napa County farm to engage in horticulture, and John B. Maher returns to his home in New York, where he will rest until the call of the stage becomes irresistible. All who have witnessed Arizona at the Alcazar and are qualified to compare it with the original production are eulogizing the former. This happy condition is owing largely to the fact that each of the Alcazar players in the cast has a role adapted to his or her best acting qualities and that the stage settings are both elaborate and new. No other drama of its kind is so thoroughly equipped with the intrinsic elements of a strong structure—plot, characterization, situations, atmosphere and dialogue—so that only competent interpretation is needed to make it a play of compelling interest. And that is what it receives from Belasco & Mayer's people. With the exception of Mr. and Mrs. Walling and Mr. Maher, all the present Alcazarians will be retained throughout the Florence Roberts season, which opens Monday evening after next, with a sumptuous production of Du Barry. Thurlow Bergen will be Miss Roberts' leading man.

How Actors Are Paid

Salaries of Some of the Leading Players in New York

The pay of leading actors outside of New York ranges from $50 to $150 a week, and those of minor actors from $15 to $50. In New York small "utility" people get from $15 to $40, the women having their dresses supplied by the manager. A good negro minstrel is usually paid from $20 to $40. A good Dutch comedian, like Williams or George Knight, average $100. Ballet girls are paid $1 to $2 a night, and, of course, have their dresses from their theatrical wardrobe. Scene painters are for a short time among the best paid theatrical people. Isherwood, at Wallack's, gets $75 a week, while Roberts and Witham, of the Fifth Avenue, get $100 a week. Matt Morgan, Voegtlin and Leary are paid by contract, so much a scene, averaging about $200 a complete set. Stage managers average from $40 to $75 a week, and business managers outside of New York, are paid a little better. Prompters are rated at $25. The business managers of New York theatres are well paid. Tooker, formerly of Booth's, got while there $100 a week and a percentage on the sale of tickets; Stephen Fiske, of the Fifth Avenue Theatre, has considerable more, it is said; Theodore Moss, of Wallack's, is said to be a partner of Mr. Wallack, and A. M. Palmer, of the Union Square, is a partner of Mr. Shook. The wealthiest theatre proprietors in New York are Lester Wallack and Sheridan Shook. Augustin Daly is said to have made a large sum by writing plays, but his recent failure shows how easily money can be lost. The salaries paid to New York actors and actresses are given below: Miss Clara Morris, while at the Union Square last season, had $600 a week, furnishing her own dresses; Fanny Davenport is said to have received $750 a week last year at the Fifth Avenue, and $1,000 a week when starring; Rose Eytinge got $350 a week at the Union Square; Ada Dyas had $250; Kate Claxton had $175, etc. These salaries seem large, but when one considers how many beginners are broken down to make one good performer, and how brief the range of popularity may be, and also the expense of such a life, it is not so large after all. When George Clarke was in New York he had $125 and $150 a week; John Gilbert got $150; William Davidge, $100; James Lewis, $150; Harry Beckett, $150; C. R. Thorne, $220; John Brougham, $200; H. J. Montague, $225; Charles Fisher, $150; C. A. Stevenson, $75; J. W. Carroll, $75. Salaries are paid for seasons of eight months. Leading men like Thorne, Brougham and Davidge have annual benefits in addition to their salaries. John Brougham netted $1,100 by one benefit at the Fifth Avenue; Thorne made $1,000 by a benefit at the Union Square. George Rignold, during his engagement here last season, was paid $250 in gold per week. Sothern plays on shares, one half the house after expenses, and Lawrence Barrett has the same terms. Edwin Booth was the only American tragedian who had a clear half of the house, but Fannie Davenport was to have had the same enormous fee. Booth, while playing under engagements to Mr. Ford last season in the South, got $600 a night. George P. Rowe has $200 a week. The late E. L. Davenport had from $500 to $1,000. Fletcher once was equally well paid, but could not now obtain such terms. Joe Jefferson has been paid as high as $3,500 a week, and his managers are said to have made money by his engagement. Charlotte Cushman was allowed half the whole house. Such is the power of the star performer to force both managers and performers to bow to their dictates. "Stars," however, are very rare, and even the so-called fortunate class is not to be envied. The glare and glitter of the performance is one thing, but the reality of stage life is very different. —The Footlight, October 15, 1877.

Bettie Hart Loses Her Diamonds

FRESNO, May 27.—Mrs. Lee B. Warren, nee Nell Summers of Fresno, was arrested in this city today by Chief of Police Williams of Long Beach, on a charge of grand larceny and was taken back to Long Beach tonight. According to Chief Williams, the arrest in this city on a warrant from Los Angeles is the result of a well-laid plan by Warren and his wife to rob Bettie Hart, a Los Angeles actress, who brings the charge, of her jewels. Warren, who is in jail in Los Angeles, has already confessed that the robbery was committed by himself and his wife, and stated that his reason for robbing the actress was because his wife was jealous of her and wanted to get even. The robbery is alleged to have occurred last Tuesday afternoon, while Warren, the actress and a sister of the latter were bathing at Long Beach.

LOS ANGELES, May 27.—The diamonds belonging to Bettie Hart of this city, which were taken from the safe of a bath house at Long Beach, have been recovered, a portion of them having been found in this city by Detective Phillips, who refuses to say where they were located, and the remainder being recovered by Chief of Police Williams of Long Beach, according to a statement made by the Long Beach officers tonight.

Chas. Frohman Gets the Adelphi Theatre in London

Word has been received that Mr. Frohman has concluded arrangements with George Edwardes by virtue of which Mr. Frohman assumes control of the Adelphi Theatre, beginning next September. This puts Charles Frohman in control, or as the chief factor interested in, seven London theatres, the others being The Duke of York's, The Aldwych, The Hicks, Haymarket, Comedy and St. James, in all of which are now being presented Frohman plays or Frohman players. Mr. Frohman's season at The Adelphi Theatre will commence the middle of next September with a production of

The Great Divide, with practically the same cast as seen in America. Stephen Ghent will be played by Henry Miller and Ruth Jordan by Edith Wynne Matthison. Although she is in London at the present time, there is no likelihood that Margaret Anglin will appear in the principal woman's part of The Great Divide that she was the first to act in America. Beyond the presentation of The Great Divide, Charles Frohman proposes to create a stock company at the Adelphi Theatre, consisting principally of English actors and actresses. In this organization American actors will appear from time to time in character-parts of which they have already made successes in America. The Great Divide will immediately be followed by performances of C. Rann Kennedy's The Servant in the House. In this play Miss Matthison will appear in her original part, the wife of the curate. The Great Divide and The Servant in the House will be followed by additional productions at The Adelphi Theatre, where Mr. Frohman's policy will largely be one of staging plays of proved popularity.

Seeks Rest and Finds None

When Mme. Jean Norelli, opera singer, said she wanted to get away from New York and have a rest a friend suggested Great Barrington as the very place. She was told she would have the town practically all to herself at this time of the year, and she came. Now she is sorry she did. She took rooms in a quiet street and was known as Mrs. Barton. She rehearsed occasionally and the natives were not slow to perceive that the notes were not just like those they heard at "shows" in the town hall. The word was passed around that an opera singer was there incognito, and the populace became greatly excited. Some said it was Mme. Patti, others were sure it was Mme. Nordica. Several were willing to wager it was none other than Mme. Melba. They camped on the lawn near by and sat on the fence across the street. When she took a walk, as she did daily, going eight or ten miles, she was not alone. Mme. Norelli was so annoyed she is leaving for San Francisco, where she is to sing soon.

Spotlights

Judge Adams in the United States District Court of New York last week signed an order discontinuing without costs to either party, the action brought by Receiver Charles E. Littlefield of the failed A. O. Brown & Co. brokerage firm against Edna Wallace Hopper to recover into the assets of the firm the $7,500 40-horsepower automobile which A. O. Brown presented to the actress a short time before the suspension. The action was set aside on the joint application of Hays, Hirshfield & Wolf, counsel for Receiver Littlefield, and Denis J. O'Brien, counsel for Miss Hopper and Mr. Brown. Ralph Wolf, of counsel for the receiver said that Miss Hopper had paid up $3,125 in consideration of the discontinuance of the suit. In the original complaint it was alleged that the automobile, as well as a $25,000 life insurance policy, had been transferred to Miss Hopper by Brown with the intent to defraud the creditors of a part of the assets. Miss Hopper was summoned as a witness in the bankruptcy to tell just how Brown came to give her the machine. It developed first that they were engaged to be married and later they were married quietly, but she was just plain Miss Hopper, actress, when the machine was given her. She was allowed the use of it pending the decision of the courts in the action. Since the settlement of the suit the sale of the car has been effected by Denis F. O'Brien, attorney for Miss Hopper, to the well-known comedian, Mr. William Collier.

The Margaret Iles company were in Yreka last week. The company is composed of Eddie Mitchell, Edson Elliott, R. J. Haley, Joe Thompson, Hubert Addison, Eldrid Edison, M. H. Edwards, E. H. Meade, Jas. Arrington, Margaret Iles, Helen Harvey, Ionella Robbins and Josephine Thorn. The company is featuring The Squaw Man and Forty Five Minutes from Broadway.

When Mrs. Fiske's agent learned that the labor unions would not allow his star to appear this Saturday at the Isis, the only independent theatre in San Diego, unless she employed union stage hands and musicians, he promptly gave orders to cancel the date.

Ralph Stuart produced his Kit Carson play, renamed At the Rainbow's End, at the Bungalow Theatre, Salt Lake City, last week, and the Lake people liked it immensely. Mr. Stuart made a hit in the part, and Mary Hall, Anna Cleveland and Thomas Heffron did muchly admired work.

Mrs. John Morrissey, wife of the manager of the local Orpheum, interested herself greatly in the benefit for Patsy, a little newsboy, which came off early in the week at the St. Francis. The program consisted of Harry Fields, Italian and Hebrew impersonations; little Mildred Koenig in character songs and dances; Miss Grace Carlisle and Miss Carroll England, sweet singers of sweet songs; remarks by Judge Frank J. Murasky; little Dorothy Mayer in imitations; H. D. Mustard, barytone solo; Robert Clear and Frank Vogt, in zither and harp guitar duets; little Alma Tuchler, in songs and dances; Miss Gertrude Tryon, soprano; Billy Hynes, stories and songs; Miss Bessie Anderson, violin solo; Arthur Cunningham, songs; Mrs. Alistair Shed Langstroth, in a recitation In the Quarters, by Irving Russell; Miss Elsie Schuyler, in character changes, accompanied by Robert Kirkpatrick; Tom Maguire, in Scotch songs.

The Narrow Path, the latest example of theatrical indecency, written by John Montague and produced by Al H. Woods at the Hackett Theatre Monday evening, in New York, proved to be short lived. On the order of William F. Munster, business manager for James K. Hackett, lessee of the theatre, prospective ticket purchasers were told that, in deference to the criticism of the press, the play had been abandoned. Henry B. Harris, owner of the theatre, said: "My wife sat in her box Monday night, and when I reached home she told me that she was compelled to hide her head from sheer shame. That settled it. I wrote to Mr. Munster, because I won't have indecent plays in any property of mine."

With the announcement of the production of a new dramatic play in Providence May 31, a new firm of theatrical producers makes its advent. The members of the new firm are J. M. Allison, who produced the musical success, The Top o' the World, at the Majestic Theatre last season, and Henry M. Ziegler, a large stockholder in the Shubert Theatrical Company and the Hippodrome, and also the owner of a number of important vaudeville theatres in the West. Eben Plympton and Kathleen Clifford are featured in the first offering of Messrs. Allison & Ziegler, which is a three-act comedy by Margaret Mayo entitled The Debtors. The play is based on Charles Dickens' story of Little Dorrit, and is from the German of Von Shonthau. Mr. Plympton is one of the well-known character actors of the American stage. Miss Clifford sprang into prominence through her impersonation of a child in The Top o' th' World. In The Debtors she makes her first appearance in a dramatic play.

PARIS, May 28.—A few nights ago Jimmy Britt, Floyd A. MacFarlane, the bicyclist, and Walter Kelly, originally of County Mayo, but of fame on the American vaudeville stage, were at the La Mort, a notorious all night restaurant in the Montmartre district, having a late supper. With them was an American actress playing here. Into the restaurant walked an African wearing evening clothes and jewels, everything correct but his complexion, in the opinion of the Americans at a table near by. As everybody knows, the French draw no color line. The black man's demeanor did not please MacFarlane, and still less when the African raised his glass to the American actress. "It don't go," cried MacFarlane, and smashed the African. Confusion followed, a dozen waiters rushed at the lanky MacFarlane, who helped to win the last six day bicycle race in New York. The waiters did not know Britt, who was at them in a second, smashing right and left. Kelly, who is husky, too, also took a hand and the three fought their way out, leaving the waiters and some of those at supper very much the worse for wear. The American actress rejoined her companions, remarking: "This sort of thing makes me feel homesick."

A close tab has been kept on the telephone and box office calls at the Van Ness Theatre concerning the sale of seats for The Merry Widow, and for the first four days of the week over three hundred people have made known their desire to know when they could reserve seats for the attraction which promises to make the greatest stir ever known to the theatrical history of this city. For the benefit of those who are eagerly awaiting the opening of the sale of seats it is announced that the event will occur on Thursday, July 1st. Franz Lohar's work will be heard for the first time here on the Fourth of July. Henry W. Savage will send his biggest and starriest cast here for the presentation of the musical hit.

There will be Saturday matinees only during the Ethel Barrymore engagement at the Van Ness Theatre. No Sunday performances.

The Real Actors' Ball Was a Brilliant Social Affair in Los Angeles Last Week

LOS ANGELES, June 3.—The Theatrical Treasurers' Association ball is a thing of the past, but it will not soon be forgotten by those who attended it. It was given at the Gold-berg Hall and was a very brilliant affair. In the waltzing competition for a prize two couples easily outshone all the others, but when it came to deciding between the two couples, the judges rang for the curtain and compromised by awarding each couple a silver cup. The couples were Cora Mersch of the Burbank Company and Harry Davis of Kolb and Dill, and Mabel Baker of Kolb and Dill and Fred Gilbert of the Burbank. Oliver Morosco and Harry Girard are writing a rural musical comedy. A. C. Harpham of New York has been engaged as director at the Unique. C. William Kolb is reading the scenario for a new musical comedy submitted for his decision by the author, Dr. C. William Bachman. Mrs. Fiske opens at the Auditorium next Monday in Salvation Nell. Fay Bainter, who has appeared often with the Burbank Company, is this week playing the part of Lady Gladys Foxwell, in the production of Merely Mary Ann, at the Belasco Theatre.

BELASCO—In her portrayal of the part of Mary Ann in Merely Mary Ann, Florence Reed is proving herself a real artist and an actress of rare ability. This is the play in which Eleanor Robson was starred. The work of Miss Reed suffers none by being compared to that of Miss Robson. Miss Reed wins the hearts of her audience at the very start, and we are at once assured that she has thoroughly mastered her part. Lewis S. Stone, in the exacting role of the young composer, gives us a very pleasing as well as a finished portrayal of the part of Lancelot. De Witt C. Jennings is happily cast as Peter, in business. Miss Noyes does good work in the small part of Rosie. Ida Lewis is well-suited to the part of the lodging-house keeper. The balance of the cast is well taken care of by the other members of the company. Merely Mary Ann is a clever play and it is well acted by the Belasco Company.

BURBANK—Blanch Hall is clever as Cigarette in Under Two Flags at the Burbank Theatre this week. This play, always popular with local theatregoers, is drawing crowds at every performance at Mr. Morosco's playhouse. Miss Hall is charming as the rivandiere and carries the part well from start to finish. William Desmond does good work as Bertie, as do Harry Mestayer and Henry Stockbridge in their respective parts. A. Byron Beasley is appealing as the villain. William Yerance, Charles Giblyn, Willis Marks and John Burton all have small parts. The rest of the feminine roles are well cared for by Louise Royce, Lovell Alice Taylor, Margo Duffet and Carroll Marshall. The sandstorm in the desert is a clever piece of scenic work. The staging throughout is elaborate and the play is pleasing.

MASON—The Mason is again open, and the fresh new appearance of the interior of the house is very delightful. The newly-decorated foyer is really very beautiful, and Manager

Wyatt should be very proud of his house. Ethel Barrymore and company in Lady Frederick furnish the opening bill. This piece is Maugham's best, but it does not test the ability of Miss Barrymore. She is capable of greater things and still is a most charming Lady Frederick. The cleverness and versatility of this pleasing actress are too well known to need further comment here. Suffice it to say that she is as popular as ever with local theatregoers. Miss Barrymore wears some beautiful gowns and we wish that other members of the company might be attractively dressed. Bruce McRae is convincing as the elderly lover. Jessie Milward is good in the part of the sister of the youthful admirer. Arthur Elliot is cast as the bluff old admiral. The piece is attractively staged, and the performance is satisfactory.

MAJESTIC—Weiner and Schnitzel is the offering of Kolb and Dill at the Majestic for the week. These two clever comedians are themselves always good, but their vehicle for the week is not, and they have to work hard to make the show go. There is little or no plot to the piece, and the humor is not clever. There are, however, some bright spots, and Olga Stech is one of these. Both her singing and dancing are clever, and she deserves real praise. There are a couple of song hits—The Feejee Man, by Miss Stech and a group of kimono-clad and candle-light schoolgirls, and I Only Thought I'd Ask You, by Miss Stech and Mr. Bronson. The chorus is well costumed and do good work all the way through the piece. Lonesome Town will be the bill for next week.

GRAND—In Harvard is the musical comedy offering of the Murray and Mack Company this week; and it is proving a great success. There are several new faces in the cast, among them Miss Tait and Miss Baldwin. The latter sings Beautiful (L) Eyes. Miss Tait has a full-toned voice, which she knows how to use. Fred Huntly and Robert Leonard are also valuable additions to the company. Little Old New York is rendered most charmingly by Bessie Tannehill. Murray and Mack have ample opportunity to display their eccentric abilities as singers and dancers. Miss Tait has a good song number in The Sort of Man That I Love. The chorus shows to better advantage than in any previous offering. Miss Sutherland is pleasing in her role. In Harvard is taxing the capacity of the house at every performance and is the best thing the company has put on.

ORPHEUM—The best of the new acts at the Orpheum is furnished by the Melnotte Twins and Clay Smith in a sketch. This trio of clever entertainers keep their audience constantly alert and interested. La Valera gives a pretty exhibition of Spanish dances, although she does not in the least resemble a senorita. Cupid at Home is a satire on the club-woman and is played by Angela Dolores, Harry English and Edward Moran. Frank Fогarty is with us again; he continues to smile and tell us funny stories. This clever Irishman is always popular with the patrons of the Orpheum, so of course he is making a hit. The acts holding over from last week include Marion Sawtelle and the Knight Brothers, the Four Amatis Sisters and the Aerial Grigolatis. Motion pictures complete a well-rounded-out bill.

LOS ANGELES—A good bill is offered at the Los Angeles Theatre this week. The program includes Frank Bush, the monologist; Nita Allen and company in a screaming farce, Car 2, Statroom 1; Norton and Russell, Ann Crewe and company in My Lady Raffles; the Meech International Trio, an acrobatic act; the Quaker City Four, singing blacksmiths, and the Bowyercope.

EMPIRE—The chief attraction at the Empire this week is Mrs. Maud Evans, former wife of Naval Constructor Evans. She sings two songs, I Want Someone to Call Me Dearie and Honeymooning, and supplements them with a skirt dance. The other acts are the Weyman Sisters, in song and dance; Dawson and Whitfield, singing and talking comedians, and a comedy musical act by Harland and Rollison. All are well received. Al Franks' illustrated songs, and motion pictures complete a good bill.

FISCHER'S—The Two Dads, Messrs. Smith & Warren's offering at Fischer's this week, abounds in realistic Parisian humor, toned down just a bit by Billy Onslow's Irish comedy. Harrigan, sung by Onslow, is the big musical hit of the piece, while Annie Montgomery's The Same Old Moon is a close second. Inez Allen and Eddie Murray sing an effective duet, Make a Noise Like a Hoop and Roll Away.

UNIQUE—The Unique Musical Company is presenting The Seminary Girls this week. The piece is a well-written farce-comedy in one act, from the pen of a local writer, J. T. Pendegast. The situations are laughable, and the parts of Dr. Jack and Judge as portrayed by Pete Gerald and Denton Vane are good. Jack Martin is the German professor. May Parker and Annie Baumann have the roles of Zetta and Gloriosa, the pride of the seminary. Miss Adams as an old maid is funny. Among the song numbers are You'll Be Sorry Just too Late, by Miss Parker; Would You Miss Me? by Miss Parker and Mr. Vane. Much credit is due Queenie Blake, who arranges the musical numbers. Miss Earl sings the illustrated songs.

WALKER—At the head of the bill at the Walker for the week is a Spanish playlet, La Paloma, by Vernon's Versatiles. The two Asprils are clever comedy acrobats. Terrill, a sensational dancer, has the audience guessing. Maxfield writes, sings and plays his own songs. His act is novel and makes a hit. Babbie Starr is a very lively soubrette, who sings and dances coquettishly. Illustrated songs and motion pictures complete the bill.

Manager Morosco's season of light opera and musical comedy at the Majestic will commence the latter part of June, under the direction of Harry Girard, and it is probable that the opening bill will be Sergeant Kitty. Messrs. Giblyn and Stockbridge will be seen frequently in the Majestic productions. FLORENCE EMERY.

L. A. Treasurers' Ball

The Treasurers' Ball given in Los Angeles, May 28th, by the Theatrical Treasurers' Association of that city, was a great social and financial success. The organization was effected April 7, 1909, and is a consummation that might be happily worked out in other cities. The officers and committees in charge of the ball were: Executive officers—Joseph Montrose, president; George M. Clayton, vice-president; Charles Clark, secretary; Ralph Lamme, treasurer; J. Darwin Barnes, recording secretary. Entertainment committee—Arthur Dentler, Clifford Bernard, Robert Grayson, Herman Babler, Dana Hays, Clayton Mynders, George Baudrand, William Ervast, Ira Joseph, J. D. Barnes, Charles Clark, Ralph Lamme, George M. Clayton, and Joseph Montrose. At midnight the grand march was begun, with Lewis S. Stone, of the Belasco Theatre, and Blanche Hall, of the Burbank, leading. Later followed the prize waltzing for which the treasurers had provided two handsome silver loving cups. The first prize was awarded to Harry Davis and Clare Mersch, and the second to Sidney De Gray and Maybelle Baker. Among many notable people present were: Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Morosco, Miss Claire Mersch, Mr. and Mrs. Lewis S. Stone, Mr. and Mrs. Byron Beasley, Mr. and Mrs. William Yerance, Miss Fay Bainter, Miss Katherine Fengerle, John H. Blackwood, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Murray, Mr. and Mrs. Ollie Mack, Mr. and Mrs. George M. Clayton, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Mestayer, Miss Blanche Hall, Percy Bronson, Sidney de Gray, Miss Maybelle Baker, Mr. and Mrs. Julian Johnson, Sam Behrendt, Leo Gibson, Mayor Hoover, Stanley Anderson of Hollywood, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Pike, Harry Gross, Miss Francis Tait, Arthur Dentier, Clayton Mynders, Ira Joseph, George Boyer, Miss Grace Gardner, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Vivian, George Webb, Gilbert Williams, Miss Jewell White, Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Barnes, Mr. and Mrs. Osborne, the Misses Joseph, Mr. and Mrs. Willis Marks, Mrs. Harry Glazier, Miss Beatrice Noyes, Charles Ruggles, Robert Yost, Mr. Parton and Mr. and Mrs. Stockbridge. The affair was altogether a charming social function that will long claim most pleasant memories.

OAKLAND, June 3.—There is to be a big shake up amongst the Liberty players. The magnificent stock company which has been gathered together under the supervision of Manager H. W. Bishop is to be disrupted and almost an entire new roster of players will be presented to the public. Of the old company the only ones to be retained will be George Friend, George Webster, Henry Shumer and Lillian Elliott. Amongst those who have severed their connection are some of the best known and most capable players on the Coast: Landers Stevens, E. L. Bennison, Elmer Booth, George Rand, Georgia Cooper, Helen Holmes, Katherine Mulkins and Helen Lackaye. Milton Stallard, whose personal direction was responsible for much of the success of the many elaborate productions, will also seek fields anew. Landers Stevens and Georgia Cooper have accepted an engagement to play leads at the Broadway Theatre under the management of Guy C. Smith, and E. L. Bennison is appearing at the Alcazar Theatre, San Francisco. Miss Lackaye has already departed for New York. Manager Bishop announces that his new company will be the peer of any that have ever appeared in this city. He cannot as yet state who will comprise the entire cast, but this far he has engaged Florence Oakley to be the leading woman. Miss Oakley has a reputation for being handsome and clever and ought to make good in any company. Sidney Ayres, who has just concluded a long engagement with the Baker stock company, Portland, will be the leading man, and of him Manager Bishop expects great things. Walter Whipple is coming over from the Central. The new company will open, 21st, in The Girl from the Golden West, which will be seen here for the first time. Our old friend, George Webster, will have full charge of all productions. This week's attraction at the Liberty, The Great Divide, is a great scenic production and all praise must be given to Grace Wishaar, the scenic artist, and Charles Blair, the property man, as the product of their work was of the very highest order. Landers Stevens and Helen Holmes had the leading roles and were satisfactory in every respect. The balance of the cast were up to all the requirements and the play was carried through with a remarkable degree of smoothness and tact. Next week for the final appearances of the old stock company, Heidelberg. At the Macdonough, the Princess Theatre company, headed by May Boley, will give one performance of Piff, Paff, Pouff, 14. John Drew, 15-16. Mabel Rieglam, an Oakland girl, who has achieved great success with the Stetten Opera Company, Berlin, will give a concert at the Macdonough, 8. East Lynne is with us again, this time at the Broadway, and that it has lost none of its former powers of attraction is attested by the large audiences that assemble at each performance. The play is well presented, the Lady Isabelle of Priscilla Knowles being especially good. In the leading male characters, Roy Clements showed to advantage. Al Hallett and Anita Allen were also good. When the Bell Tolls will be the next offering and then the commencement of the Landers Stevens-Georgia Cooper engagement. At the Orpheum business is showing a steady increase, and capacity houses are getting to be quite the proper thing. The following bill is fully up to the Orpheum standard and is affording good entertainment: Lulu Beeson Trio; Countess Rossi and M. Paulo; Lew Sully; Hawthorne and Burt; Five Juggling Normans; Frederick Allen and company; Francini Olloms and Page; and Russell Brothers. This is the last week of Pay Conway's band at Idora, they will give way to the Navassars, the well known female band. The Peerless Potters and the Bruno-Kramer Trio also give daily performances. Efforts made by the Shuberts to gain control of Ye Liberty Theatre in this city have proven fruitless, according to Louis Bishop, who is acting as manager of the theatre during the illness of Harry Bishop. "The Shuberts made us an offer for the house," said Mr. Bishop, "but I sent them a letter declining the offer. I told them that we intended to maintain Ye Liberty as a stock theatre." There is, however, to be a reorganization of the Bishop stock company. Florence Oakley and Sydney Ayres will play the leads; George Webster will be the stage director; George Friend, Henry Shumer and Lillian Elliott will remain.

SACRAMENTO, June 2.—The stock at the Grand is presenting The Great Divide this week. Next week, the company will be seen in its final week here. Manager Charles Goddard has purchased a half interest in the Del Lawrence Company, and will accompany the show, with his wife, to Vancouver. The company will return to the Grand in September, with the retirement of stock. Mr. Goddard will open the Grand to 5 and 10-cent vaudeville. At Pantages the bill is headed by The Apache Dance act, with five other acts on the bill.

SAN JOSE, June 2.—Ed Redmond and his stock presented Monday night the comedy, The Usurper, at the Victory Theatre, and pleased the good-sized audience present. Next week, The Fatal Card. At the Jose, the bill consists of Will Oakland, contractor; Quigg and Nickerson, musical entertainers; Buchanan and Russell, in sketch, Heart of Columbia; Lanole Brothers, novelty gymnasts; Berven Brothers, eccentric collegians.

WASHINGTON, May 29.—If a group of prominent actors who came to Washington to auction off seats last week for the Lambs' gambol, thought to prove their own popularity by reaping a small fortune for the popular club, they received an awful jolt before the afternoon was over. The auction was held in the National Theatre, where the performance by the Lambs was given last Thursday afternoon. Wilton Lackaye was auctioneer-in-chief, and he had a hard time from beginning to end. Even his customary wit, robbed of its customary sarcasm, failed to have its customary effect, and the highest price he could possibly get for the first choice of boxes was $225. Henry Norment, whose business as well as pleasure is investments, paid the price. Nat Wills sat in a box and cracked his knuckles for luck, but it didn't help Lackaye a little bit. Three of the other lower boxes went for $100 apiece. Representative Nicholas Longworth paid $8 each for four seats, and several other prominent citizens bid orchestra chairs up to the same figure, but the show moved slowly and many of the actor-auctioneers grew discouraged in short order. John Mason, who is here with The Witching Hour, gave it up after selling one box, and Edwin Milton Royle, the author, failed to get rid of anything. George Nash, who is also here with The Witching Hour, once played the part of auctioneer in Uncle Tom's Cabin, so he got along with the audience pretty well and disposed of quite a few seats. Nat Wills finally went on the stage to try his hand at it, and several people left the theatre. "Well, I've got 'em going, anyway," he said. The performance, while not attended with the big whoop that was noticeable in New York, was quite successful.

SAN DIEGO, June 2.—GAR-RICK (J. M. Dodge, mgr.)—For the closing week of his most successful engagement here, James Post and company are putting on The New Motorman, to big business. Post is cast in the role of the motorman, and Joe Hayden as the conductor, and they are both very funny in the extreme. Guy Usher is cast as the superintendent of the road, and he does full justice to the part. Miller Bacon and Billy Morris also do good work. May Ashley as the Bowery girl, gave a clever interpretation. Myrtle Alzora scored a big hit with her song, Mlle. New York, as did Juliet Mahr with, I'd Rather Two Step than Waltz, Bill. The chorus, as usual, is elaborately dressed and sing and dance well. Next week Raymond Teal and company open in Variety Isle. PICKWICK (Scott A. Palmer, mgr.)—The Armstrong Musical comedy Company in A Day at Tia Juana. There is considerable local spirit in this piece which creates a great deal of enthusiasm. The fun is handled in a first-class manner by Barney Williams and George Rhen. Mr. Armstrong's new song, I'm Glad I Live in San Diego, brought down the house. Other features were the singing of Casey Jones by Ethel Davis and chorus. In this piece the girls are all dressed in overalls and jumpers and carrying lanterns and lunch pails. Miss Davis also scored with Yip-I-Adi-A. Miss Ellwood's singing of When You First Kiss the Last Girl You Love, also went big. QUEEN (Sullivan & Considine, mgrs.)—Messrs. Swarts & Urban have disposed of their interests in the Queen to Sullivan & Considine. John Donelan of Seattle will be the new manager. No important changes will be made in the theatre until after September, when extensive alterations are contemplated. The bill as presented this week is composed of the following good acts: George Wilson is the headliner and has little trouble in getting the laughs. Mr. and Mrs. Robyns, in The Counsel for the Defense, have a clever little sketch that went big. Duff and Walsh do some exceptionally clever dancing. Mrs. Dougherty and her twenty white poodles has a good canine act. Moving pictures conclude. GRAND (Walter Fulkerson, mgr.)—The Grand has two feature acts this week, namely Seymour and Dupee, the jumping Chinaman and the Sou-brette, and West and Mack, black face artists. Both of these acts are distinctly above the average. Latest moving pictures conclude. The Empire, Bijou and Union offer moving pictures and illustrated songs.

Carl E. Lundquist.

SEATTLE, May 31.—Moore Theatre—Last night was a record-breaker at the Moore Theatre, when The Merry Widow had its initial performance in Seattle. The production is all that has been said of it, and some more. It is one of the daintiest and jolliest combinations of comedy and music that has ever been devised, and Seattle will be under its spell for the next two weeks. The roles are all handled excellently, while the chorus is a splendid organization. Rosemary Glaz is charming as Sonia. Grand Theatre—A Messenger from Mars is the bill at the Grand this week, and although this is the third time it has been seen in this city, it was awarded a warm welcome last night by the patrons of the Grand. Seattle Theatre—Lena Rivers, with Emma Bunting in the name part, opened at the Seattle Theatre yesterday. The popularity of Miss Bunting was shown in the fact that people were turned away from both performances. The play will run for the rest of the week. Lois Theatre—The Pantages players are seen in The County Chairman this week, and it is a very good performance. The play will no doubt pack the Lois all week. Vaudeville bills for the week are as follows: Orpheum—Futurity Winner; James Thornton; Sullivan-Pasquelena; Vera Berlinger; Clark and Bergman; Mack and Williams; Frank Le Dent; Orpheum motion pictures. Pantages Theatre—Wise and Milton, in The Land of the Bungaboo; The Wheelers, automobiling jugglers; Ying Lee, Athon and company, Chinese novelty; and five other big acts. Star—The big new vaudeville show. Luna Park—Balloon ascension and parachute leap; ostrich driving—a rare treat.

E. MORGENSTERN.

WILL F. MOLITOR, who was hick with The Alaskan, last season, has been appointed treasurer of The Arena, John Cort's amusement enterprise on the Pay Streak at the Seattle Fair.

Correspondence

BOISE, June 1.—The Eckhardt company opens in stock at the Piney Theatre on Monday in the fine play, Strongheart, which they will follow by The Bishop's Carriage. Joel Travers and Josephine Deffrey will be seen in the leading parts. Whit Brandon will also be a member of the company.

TACOMA, May 29.—Otis Skinner appeared at the Tacoma Theatre, 17th St., and delighted an enthusiastic audience with The Honor of the Family. Nothing more delightful in the way of comedy has been seen here. Percy Haswell was splendid in the character of Flora, and A. G. Andrews as the old uncle gave a finely acted character. Nazimova, 21-22, was greeted by large and fashionable audiences, playing A Doll's House and Countess Coquette, thus displaying her art and versatility. Her supporting company was a well-chosen one. The ten Greet players appeared, 24, in A Midsummer Night's Dream and The Tempest, 25th. The Russian Symphony Orchestra accompanying them adds to the excellence of the entertainment provided. Mrs. Grace Clark Kahler, a well-known Tacoma woman, with the company as soloist. The balance of the week was filled out by the McRae players, who successfully produced The Charity Ball. The new members of the company, Mr. Wilkin, Miss Gerschel and Miss Parker, acquitted themselves creditably, and all the old favorites in the company were enthusiastically received. Beginning tomorrow the company will explain What Happened to Jones. The presence of the U. S. warships and the Japanese naval cadets in Tacoma for the past ten days has been fine for all the playhouses, business being excellent. A new picture show house with prominent comedians and soloists on different nights has just opened on C street, across from the Tacoma Theatre. The name chosen is The Princess. German opera: The Lovely Calathea, by Franz Von Suppe, was successfully given by the Luderkrantz Germania Hall, 17th. The vocal and dramatic work was commendably one and a series of plays and operas in German will be undertaken next week with attention of musical and social society through many weeks of rehearsal, was given at the Armory, 27-29, inclusive. It was an artistic and financial success. Many of the acts, such as scenes from Carmen and other notable successes, being especially well done. A vocal quartet, the Four Lincolns, were a big hit at the Pantages. The Saytons, in a good acrobatic act, had an unusual introductory scene disguised as alligators. Murray presented three clever and intelligent dogs in dances. Abrams and Johns, big favorites here, pleased with a little play, and Young and Brooks made a hit with their dance music. Borden, Reno and Hayde Brothers and Bonner, the wonder horse, will be the chief attractions next week. At the Grand, Martynne, the skirt dancer, was enthusiastically received, as was Tomo Hanlon, the talented male impersonator. The two sketches on the bill were of real merit. Weston and Young, appearing in The New Reporter, and Brenon and Downing in The Intruders; Kessler and Dunn were satisfactory dancers. Mabel McKinley is the headliner next week. Cooke and Miss Rothert will be seen in the Apache Dance, and Francesca Redding and Company are returning. Nat Goodwin and Edna Goodrich will appear at the Tacoma, June 4-5, and are billed to play The Easterner and The Genius. A. H.

Now to Get the Canadian Pirates

The National Association of Theatrical Producing Managers takes great pleasure in announcing to its members that it has secured an amendment of the criminal laws in Canada by the enactment of the following statute: "Every person who, after the registration of any dramatic work, publicly performs, exhibits or represents or who in any manner causes or aids or abets the public performance, exhibition or representation, in whole or in part, of such dramatic work, without the consent of the proprietor (unless he proves he acted innocently) is guilty of an offense, and liable on summary conviction to a fine not less than one hundred dollars and not exceeding five hundred dollars or thirty days' imprisonment or both in the discretion of the court, and on second or subsequent conviction to imprisonment, with or without hard labor, for six months." Any play heretofore copyrighted in Great Britain may be registered and receive complete protection under this enactment. In addition to securing this criminal clause, the association is practically assured that at the next session of Parliament a copyright law for dramatic works equally as far-reaching as that obtained in the United States will be adopted in Canada.

Sale of the Grand Opera House in New York

The famous old Grand Opera House at Twenty-third Street and Eighth Avenue has been sold by the executors of the Jay Gould estate to a company specially formed to purchase it, for a stated value of $1,000,000. Many memories of Jay Gould and "Jim" Fiske are linked with the famous theatre. It was here that Jay Gould and Fisk took refuge from the mob on "Black Friday" in 1873.

Ellefords Back

The Elleford company arrived last Monday from Honolulu, under the chaperonage of Vice-Admiral Frank Wyman. At the dock the company transferred to the Eureka boat. In Eureka the company will play this week and all of next.

Florence Oakley Goes to Oakland

Florence Oakley has signed with Manager Harry Bishop of Oakland and will open either June 14 or 21, in The Girl of the Golden West. Miss Oakley has a splendid reputation in leads and we are greatly pleased that she is to stay hereabouts.

LEE WILLARD and his company are now in Idaho and will play toward Canada as the summer progresses, using Monte Cristo as a vehicle.

Correction From Turlock

Turlock, Cal., May 29, 1909.

EDITOR DRAMATIC REVIEW, San Francisco, Cal.,

Dear Sir: I note an article in last week's issue THE DRAMATIC REVIEW headed "S. Terry McKean Denies Playing Paid in Full" at Turlock. That was the first known that an error had been made in reporting the play. The Price of Freedom was the title of the play put on, and in justice to Mr. McKean, we wish to correct the mistake made in our former report.

Very truly yours,

WILLIAMS & EDDY, Managers.

CHARLIE NEWMAN, the assistant treasurer at the Moore, will on September 1st leave Seattle to take up the position of assistant treasurer at the Colonial Theatre in San Francisco.

MR. AND MRS. RICHARD BENNETT are expected in Los Angeles next week, where Mr. Bennett will play leads at the Belasco Theatre. Mrs. Bennett is Mabel Morrison, daughter of the later Lewis Morrison.

AL STRASSMAN, who is regarded in the Frohman offices as one of the finest agents on their staff, is expected here next week, ahead of Marie Doro, on his first trip to the Coast. Last season Mr. Strassman did brilliant work for Hattie Williams.

Donald Bowles

Mr. Bowles, who has for several years been regarded as the foremost juvenile man on the Pacific Coast, and the one drawing the largest salary, has just completed another year with the Baker Stock in Portland, and so great has been the public desire for his continued appearance there, Manager George Baker has signed Mr. Bowles for another season. Mr. Bowles, who has the intellectual, as well as the artistic, side of his character highly developed, will continue to direct the Baker Stock stage, for his past season has been the most successful in the history of the Baker Stock, and the productions and general excellence of the performances have been largely instrumental in this success.

Charles Swickard Makes Some Pertinent Re- marks

Is the long hoped for awakening really at hand? says Mr. Swickard. That question arose in my mind after glancing over an article in an evening paper and I think it almost speaks for itself.

The Decadence of the Stage

It begins to look as if some of the magnates who have acquired the control of most of our theatrical affairs during the last ten or twenty years, were becoming conscious of the weak points in their syndicate system and seeking to escape threatened disaster by a reversion, in part, at least, to older and sounder methods. Of two facts, patent to all observers, they, as shrewd business men of their kind, must be fully aware. They must know that all actors and actresses of the first rank in this country have practically disappeared without leaving any successors to take their places, and that there is no certain source to which they can look for capable recruits. Such recruits must be found, or nothing can stop that progressive degeneration of the theatre which has already reduced it almost to the level of the music hall.—New York Post.

Capable recruits indeed! Where to get them and not steal? And why is there such a dearth of good performers? Has talent and artistic temperament disappeared of late years? Is it not slightly possible that the saccharine musical comedy melanges and the dramatic piffle the public has "demanded," instead of awakening and developing the dramatic instincts, has practically destroyed it? But hold on a moment! Has the public really demanded it? Has not the shallowness and the absolutely spineless degeneracy of the contemporary drama driven the thinking people away from the theatre? For it is an admitted fact that in spite of the boasted prosperity of the theatre compared with former generations, a large percentage of the American people do not go to the theatre at all? Would not a more substantial fare be more to their liking? Has the modern manager of the theatre, who is essentially a business man, really advanced the stage from a business standpoint as much as he claims? Or has the material advancement of the theatre merely kept pace with the rest of our commercial interests only? Or has it even done as well? Here is a problem I don't think it is very difficult to answer. "Older and sounder methods," indeed yes! Let us have dramas that mean something to both actors as well as audiences, and above all CAPABLE stage directors, recruited from the front ranks of performers, and countless good actors and an occasional genius will be the natural result as was the case in and before the days of Edwin Booth.

Second Installment of Per- ley - Williams Contro- versy

In United States Commissioner Heacock's courtroom Tuesday morning, at the second day of the hearing of Thomas H. Williams' testimony in the suit brought by Williams against Frank L. Perley. Williams, according to his testimony, sunk between $80,000 and $100,000 on shows that did not draw. Williams' testimony covered the period of time from just previous to the disruption of the Alice Nielsen Opera Company to the final break-up with Perley. He told how he had at one time to tell the recalcitrant Alice that she had to obey the rules of the company just as if she were a chorus girl, or get fired. He also told of the generous Margaret Anglin, who, after her engagement under Williams and Perley had failed here at the California Theatre, offered to pay them $1,000 weekly out of a $1,500 salary in vaudeville as restitution for an unsuccessful season, for which she partly blamed herself. But Williams testified that he did not take the money. "I said there was no use crying over spilled milk. Perley's attitude, however, disgusted me," said Williams. Williams admitted at the start that he was the sole proprietor of the Alice Nielsen Opera Company. In reply to questions, Williams said that he first knew of friction in the company in December, 1900. "The principal trouble," said Williams ungallantly, "was that Miss Nielsen got the big head. She thought the comedians were interfering with her work. Perley told me of the differences between Miss Nielsen and three or four comedians, who, she said, were interfering with her work, taking her gags, while she was supposed to be in front. I said to her: 'You must remember you have to obey the rules of the company the same as a chorus girl, or you'll get discharged.' That night I told her that she'd have to make up her mind whether she would obey the rules of the company or not, and if she would not I'd tell Perley to put on her understudy." Williams said that later, at his home, where Miss Nielsen, Perley and he were dining, he informed her that he would withdraw his support from the company. Later in the examination, Attorney Lee put the direct question: "I take it that you are not now in the theatrical business?" "No," replied Williams, earnestly. "On the score that a burnt child dreads the fire," suggested Ach. "No, I have too many other things to attend to." Margaret Anglin was the star who followed Miss Nielsen under Williams' angelic wings. She played an engagement at the California Theatre here. One of the plays put on was The Eternal Feminine, which did not take. "It was too artistic," explained the experienced and singed "angel." "It didn't draw to the gallery." It was followed by Zira. After the failure of the first named piece, Miss Anglin said to Williams, he testified, "I think Zira will be a winner. If not, I have an offer for 40 weeks in vaudeville at $1,500 a week. If this doesn't win out I'll take it and give you $1,000 a week and I'll keep $500 for myself." Millionaire Williams did not accept Miss Anglin's bounty. The contention of Williams in the suit is that the $40,000 debt contracted by Perley was for money advanced by Williams subsequent to the disbanding of the Nielsen Company, and when Williams and Perley were in full partnership in presenting Margaret Anglin in The Billionaire, When Knighthood Was in Flower and other plays. Several letters and telegrams were offered in evidence. In one from Williams to Perley, the "angel" demanded that Perley send his note for half of the losses sustained by the productions. An answer was produced in which Perley answered, "My dear Tom," to say that he was not liable for losses. The hearing was then continued until a later date.

Van Ness Theatre

The second and concluding week of the John Drew engagement will end tonight, and many pleasant memories of the Jack Straw performances will linger with theatregoers. The Drew clean-cut, agreeable method is in great evidence in the present piece, and more laughter is associated with the engagement than has been the rule for years with the comedian. The excellent supporting company, including Rose Coghlan, Edgar Davenport, Grace Freeman, Frank Goldsmith, Mario Marjeroni, Soldene Powell, Adelaide Prince and Grace Henderson, constitute a group of artists who are seldom met with in one company.

Alcazar Theatre

An example of finished playwrighting is Arizona—one of the best of American plays. The story is so well drawn and the demands of a stage presentation so well realized by the dramatist that the play bids fair to live in popular interest for years. The superior quality of the Alcazar Stock allows a superior performance. The first honors go undoubtedly to Ernest Glendinning, who is seen in the part of Tony, "the finest vaquero in the world." In make-up, in certain physical characteristics, in a thorough understanding of the intellectual demands of the part, and in an ability to sing musically the songs of the love-sick Mexican, this young actor presents a picture of real achievement. Louis Bennison, who is the new member of the company, also claims attention by a fine, manly portrayal of the part of Col. Bonham. Burt Wesner was a real, human Sergeant Keller, not a heel-clicking, spectacular automaton, that has always characterized the part in road shows. Louise Brownell, in the very difficult part of Estrella, was surprisingly good. Adele Belgarde was splendid, too, as Mrs. Canby. Fred Butler, who played Canby, for some reason failed to inject into the character the intense and dominating personality that was conceived by the playwright. Bessie Barriscale was Lena; Will Walling, Denton; Walter Belasco, the Chinaman; Evelyn Vaughan, Bonita; Effie Bond, the schoolteacher, and John Maher, Doctor Fenlon. The attendance has been large all week, and the piece will be continued through next week.

Valencia Theatre

The Irish season is on at this theatre, and it looks very much as though the fickle people of the Emerald Isle, who worshiped at the shrine of their present-day patron saint—one Arthur Cunningham—not long ago, have forgotten him and the glory of the Irish drama, for on Tuesday night, which was specially dedicated to the true green Irish, there was less attendance than on any other night. And all the pigs had been taken out of the "script" and changed to goats. But it was no use, and it looks very much as though two weeks was about the limit of Irish drama in any one season. The Donagh is the conventional Irish drama that to modern and critical minds looks childish and utterly ridiculous. Throughout its presentation, Arthur Cunningham gives a fine, consistent brogue and sings delightfully a number of songs. Paul McAllister plays the young brother to the star and submits gracefully to the temporary eclipse. Robert Homans, George Osbourne and Charles Dow Clarke gave good support, as Dorsey McMurrugh, Dennis Mulvaney and Phil Slattery, respectively. Florence Oakley is a charming Colleen, quite the most bewitching bit of feminine blarney one could wish to see. Edith Lyle, who portrayed the heiress, was beautiful and read her lines with splendid effect. Peggy Monroe, Grace Travers and Lillian Andrews were seen to advantage in the rest of the female roles.

Princess Theatre

The musical comedy company now playing Peggy from Paris will close its present engagement at that theatre the end of next week and during the grand opera season there, will visit the principal cities in Southern California. It will say au revoir in three of its greatest triumphs. On Monday, Thursday and Saturday nights, The Umpire will be revived with Fred Mace and May Boley in the principal roles; Tuesday, Friday and Sunday nights and Sunday matinee, Piff, Paff, Pouff will be the program, and by special request Peggy from Paris will be given on Wednesday night and Saturday matinee.

MANAGER SAM LOVERICH, of the Princess Theatre, who has been the really practical Santa Claus to the orphans of Pacific Hebrew Orphan Asylum, was recently presented with a loving cup by the heads of the Asylum, in recognition of his kindness of heart and practical charity toward their charges. On the loving cup were engraved these words: "Presented to Samuel Loverich of the Princess Theatre of San Francisco, California, by the boys and girls of the Pacific Hebrew Orphan Asylum, as a token of love and esteem, May 22, 1909."

MAY BOLEY and Zoe Barnett, of the Princess Theatre, will be the guests of the local newspapermen at ladies' night, tonight at the Press Club. In the past it has only been on rare occasions that the Press Club threw Frank Clarke, who is making a go of theatricals in Long Beach. He has the Byde-a-Whyle Theatre.

As Artists See Miss Barrymore

Miss Ethel Barrymore, who will be seen at the Van Ness next week in Lady Frederick, the new three-act comedy by W. Somerset Maugham, has been a favorite subject for many American and foreign portrait painters. Scarcely a season goes by that there is not at least one portrait of Miss Barrymore on view in the galleries in New York or London. Her latest portrait, exhibited at the Knoedler Galleries in New York this year, is by the French painter, Andre Brouillet, and has attracted a great deal of attention. His representation of Miss Barrymore is an unusual one and shows the actress in an entirely new pose. Many of her pictures reveal her face in profile. The portrait is a record of how she looked the first day she appeared in the studio of the painter. "Please stop where you are," he said as she was entering the room; "I will sketch you so." From a rapid charcoal drawing the portrait was developed in later sittings. There is a buoyancy and grace in the figure, which, added to the convincing likeness, makes the portrait of exceptional interest. In the famous portrait of Miss Barrymore by Sigismund de Ivanowski, she is seen as Madame Trentoni in the play Captain Jinks, seated by a piano. She leans slightly forward, her face all aglow with a girl's animation and an artist's intelligence, her hands clasped eagerly before her, her figure ready to rise, as if in response to the tribute of applause for the song she has just sung. The portrait of the actress by John Singer Sargent is a profile study. Other portraits of Miss Barrymore which have attracted much attention are those of Mrs. Leslie Cotton, foremost among American women artists; the full length portrait by Von Glehn, the talented young English artist, and the dry point etching by Helleu, the celebrated French artist, a favorite in society and an artist who stands quite alone in the medium in which he has chosen to execute his portraits. To each artist, so great is Miss Barrymore's idealism and individuality, she appeals from a different standpoint. In a sense no two pictures of the popular young actress are alike. Certainly there is no young woman on the stage whose portrait has been painted so frequently or by such distinguished artists.

open its doors to the gentler sex, but now that the newspapermen have become settled in their beautiful new rooms in the Commercial Building in Market Street, the board of managers has decided to give the feminine friends of the club more frequent access to the holy of holies of newspaper leisure. One of the features of the entertainment will be the intoning of the new Press Club hymn, Ode to Tombstone III, by the Press Club quartette. Tombstone III, as all newspaperdom knows, is the club's mascot, third of a line of black cats. The words of the ode are by John P. Wilson, while the music is the work of Fletcher Tilton. Among the other entertainers will be Mr. and Mrs. Peter Donald of the Orpheum Circuit, John Carrington, a local barytone, Signor Joaquin Wanrell, a basso, Edgar Bayliss, a pianist, and Nat Landsberger, the club's favorite violinist.

Vaudeville

LOYD C. FOUNTAIN, Editor

The Orpheum

The clientele of the Orpheum was offered a very interesting program this week, one that represented the classic as well as the ridiculous. We all expected Mabel Hite and her company of one, Mike Donlin, to make a "home run," since the New York "Giant" is and has been so popular on this Coast, and our expectations were not disappointed for this clever duo received an ovation that would make most professionals envious. Miss Hite is, without a doubt a very clever eccentric comedienne, and her song hit, My Big Brother Sylvester, captured the audience, and it was only after many encores and with the able assistance of Mike—who by the way is one of the best feeders in "vaud-ville"—that she succeeded in making way for the rest of the bill. I have seen Miss Hite riding in a better vehicle, but this serves the purpose. The real classic feature on the program came when the annunciators indicated "D." Avedano Quartet. Their rendition of the sextet from Lucia was excellent. Their voices displayed volume, tone and much training. The Vindabonas are billed as musical grotesques. They have just a fair turn. It seems a pity that we are not able to have in our midst such a clever man as Billy Van at all times. Van's turn is the old reliable black face, though his wit is peculiar, often going over the heads of his auditors. Still he is immeasurably funny. The acting of the Gillingwater company, and especially the star, is both superb and artistic. Claude Gillingwater is one of the few playwrights who is successful with his own compositions. His theme is novel and his plot entertaining, breaking away from the usual run of vaudeville acts. As a dramatic feature The Strenuous Rehearsal eclipses anything else on the bill. The holdovers, The Sunny South, Baader-La Velle Trio, and new Orpheum motion pictures, received their share of applause.

Pantages-Empire

A decided improvement over the past two weeks' programs is evident in this week's offering. Mr. and Mrs. Edward Lucas should no doubt cause an interest to be taken in the works of Charles Dickens, judging from applause which greets their efforts. Special scenery is carried for the production, and the act consists of scenes from Martin Chuzzlewit, David Copperfield and Bleak House. A clever bit of acting of a pathetic nature is contributed by Mrs. Lucas in the latter, as Jo, a London crossing sweeper, who has never known a rest from the "move on," the habitual command of the London policeman to all of the lowly. Mr. Lucas' efforts combine to make the act a pleasing and novel one. As a dramatic baritone, Noe J. LaVigne is in a class by himself. His numerous vocal selections are admirably rendered and call for repeated encores. Cummings and Merley have a good comedy sketch, The Major's Wife. Clever, intricate and supple acrobatic stunts are indulged in by the International Comiques, a refreshing team. The feminine half of the team of Trexida and Robinson contributes the talent of the pair. A little more dancing on her part would improve the act. Steel and Masters, in a refined comedy turn and the usual classy motion pictures complete an enjoyable offering for the week.

The National

An exceptionally pleasing program is being offered the patrons of the popular Grauman house this week. Carroll Johnson is repeating his popular success of last week. His recitation, A Fight to a Finish, takes the house by storm. Sidney Grant has a brand new bunch of jokes and supplies one of the brightest acts on the program. He closes his act with an imitation of a Chinese play, in which he impersonates all the characters as well as the Oriental music. He is a classy chap. Harry LeClair looms up as a bright spot with his impersonations of famous actresses. His travesty on The Devil is also well received. Zay Holland is nothing to speak of as a violinist, but has a good voice and a vivacious air accomplishes the desired result. Count de Butz and Tossell supply a thrilling and clever bicycle turn with plenty of good comedy stunts thrown in. The Elite Four supply an appetizing feature. They are all musicians of talent. An unknown soprano singer wearing a mask invites the audience to guess who she is. Two seats is the reward for the correct answer. She may be beautiful, I can't tell. Operator Ford has several sets of motion pictures that hold interest and complete a classy show.

Fischer's

It's all for mirth and music at Fischer's house on Sutter street. This seems to be the style of enjoyment in vogue at this time. Patrons have little time and less inclination to consider plots and themes, but give a willing ear to laughter, that is interspersed with catchy music. This weeks bill, The King of Patagonia, is a musical comedy with scenes laid in California, and the theme is founded solely on mistaken identity. A noted King of the Patagonias is touring the world accompanied by a Hebrew valet. On reaching California, the latter is mistaken for the monarch and made the subject of great social favor. Simultaneous with this there is a party of plotters who are intent on doing away with the dusky King, and the Hebrew finds himself in a particularly uncomfortable position. Several songs, notably, I Was Only Walking in My Sleep, My Filippino Maid, What Are the Simple Charms of Married Life, are well received. Messrs. Dillon, King, McDermott, and Misses Montgomery and Raymond do most commendable work.

The Wigwam

Large and appreciative audiences are in evidence at every performance of the Wigwam Road Show this week. One of the liveliest and best acts of its kind seen in some time is to be found in King and Bailey, a couple of clever young juvenile comedians, assisted by Williams & Walker's Chocolate Drops. They are all clever young colored performers and well merit the generous applause they receive. The Monetta Five contribute some delightful vocal and instrumental selections. They are all artistes in their own particular line and are warmly received. Matt Keefe is yodeling his way into greater popularity at every appearance. Some sensational and clever juggling, including feathers to cannon balls and wagon wheels is offered by Cowboy Williams. Rivenhall, the Australian singer of old familiar English airs, is well received. Novel and sensational whirlwind dancing in the capable hands of Hasse and Marietta comes in for a goodly share of approval. Maud, the unridable mule, is proving herself a producer of convulsions this week. She is a strenuous performer, but still does an awful lot of kicking about her work. The moving pictures are, as usual, exceptionally good and complete a performance of complete satisfaction.

Albert E. Henderson, alias "Bud" Duncan, was married the morning of May 27 to Martha D. Marshall, Rev. E. J. Locke performing the ceremony in his study in Los Angeles. The Eternal Question in vaudeville is "Where do you go next week?"

The Star

The Star still continues to present its high class performances and this week's roster is exceptionally strong and entertaining. Kelley and Violette continue in favor with their classy vocal offerings. The Law of the Desert is a vehicle for good acting and is capably handled by the individual members. Evelyn Selbie, former leading lady with the Central Theatre stock company, is a member of the cast and gives her usual conscientious efforts. Miss Malley, song and dance soubrette, contributes some neat singing and dancing features of the bill. The La Vails have a good novelty ring act which is well received. Fern and Mack, as mirth producers, fulfill the contract in a hilarious manner. Some old time minstrel stunts and banjo playing is contributed by Charles Morrell. The illustrated songs are well taken care of by Olive Reed and three sets of high class motion pictures complete the long and varied program.

The Thalia

The usual entertaining and varied program is on tap this week, headed by the Brune Kramer Trio of acrobats and Roman ring gymnasts. La Salle and Lind contribute some clever and neat work with Indian clubs and come in for generous approval. The Chartres Sisters introduce some good singing and clever whistling. Murella and Camar in good singing and dancing are well received. The Boldens, a team of colored singers and dancers, have a lively act. Eva Rowland, in her successful dances, and Mlle. Lucille in poetic poses, are accorded their usual warm welcome. Motion pictures and other features complete a highly satisfying program.

Vaudeville Notes

Manager Frank Clark of the Byden-Wyle Theatre of Long Beach, is succeeding admirably with vaudeville. His offering for the current week consists of George Allen, head balancer; illustrated songs by Ada Rieves; Elizabeth Houston and company in the sketch, A Cousin of Mine; the Big Four quartette; Eva Martelle, dancer; Wilbur Westerman, blackface comedian; Tony Ryders monkeys; and Frank Clark and company in The Other Fellow.

On complaint of Louis Steffins, a vaudeville actor, Margie McGee, alias Wilson, 1366 Forty-eighth avenue, Sunset district, was arrested yesterday morning by Policeman Ogden and Clark on a charge of grand larceny. Herman Mitchell, a former messenger boy, who was with her in an automobile at the time, was also arrested, but later released. Steffins is a member of the vaudeville team of Steff, Mattinger and King, and recently returned from a tour in Australia. He and Miss McGee had previous to that time been doing a turn together on the vaudeville stage. He says he learned that she was sick at the Hotel Stratford, 242 Powell street, and called upon her. After he left he discovered that a purse containing $395 had been abstracted from his pocket. When the policemen found Miss McGee she endeavored to hide $340, which Steffins declared was part of the $395 taken from him. She pleaded with Steffins not to have her arrested, but he was obdurate.

Murray and Mack have received an Orpheum Circuit contract. They will open in a team act at Butte, August 14, and will reach California in October. According to present plans they will be in vaudeville a number of months.

At the Watsonville Opera House this week: Black's marionettes, and Leona Clifton in illustrated songs.

Olive E. Moser, a Los Angeles high school girl, has joined Lillian Mortimer's sketch, Po White Trash Jinny.

A "star" on a dressing room does not always mean there's a "star" inside.

There are a lot of persons trying to sing in vaudeville that could use their voices to better advantage working on a steamship as a fog horn.

It seems the easier an act is to do the more money it gets.

Why do some people think because they wear Scotch kilts they are Scotch comedians? Maybe they drink too much Scotch.

Loie Fuller upon her return from Europe next fall will dance her way with the girls she has taught what she calls "natural dancing" from Boston to the Pacific Coast. While in California the "natural dances" of the famous little American artiste will be seen in the Greek Amphitheatre at Berkeley.

Signor Dumond, formerly with the Dumond Trio which played a successful engagement at the Orpheum last season, is at present appearing at the Silver Palace Theatre on Market street.

Independents Booming

The Unique Theatre of Los Angeles and the Grand of Sacramento will in the future secure all bookings through Bert Levey, who has also secured bookings for the New Portola Theatre on Market street, and will place eight acts opening week, August 1st.

An Appeal to the Theatrical Profession

Harry E. Lloyd, author and actor, met with a serious accident last Tuesday. He and W. Carroll Moorman, the One-Man Orchestra, were in a buggy which was struck by a Post street car near Kearny street, and both were thrown out. Lloyd is confined to his bed, disabled. He is about to commence suit against the railroad company. But redress is slow, and as he has lost his engagements he asks aid from his professional friends. He is at 1710 Fell street, San Francisco, with W. Carroll Moorman.

Personals

THAT VERY popular and highly accomplished family of player folk—Mina, William, Jimmy and Lucille Gleason—will sever their long and successful engagement in Portland next week, when the Baker Stock Company closes. This is a very remarkable family, and their personal following is great wherever they play. There is one very depressing thing connected with their leaving Portland, and that is the elder Gleason's health. Billy will probably not be able to play for at least six months, and may have to undergo an operation. In the meantime, three other accomplished actors may be secured for next season. The season in Portland closes on June 12th, and the Gleasons will not leave for San Francisco until a couple of weeks later.

MISS JOHANNA TUCHOLSKY, the woman whose accomplishments and energy did most to place Madame Modjeska on the English-speaking stage, died at the Garden City Sanatorium in San Jose Friday morning of last week, and her remains were cremated Saturday at Cypress Lawn Cemetery near this city. She is survived by her sister, Miss Ida Tucholsky of 928 Ellis Street, this city.

When Mme. Modjeska, driven back into her profession by the failure of the colony at Anaheim, came to San Francisco, she had great difficulty in securing a teacher in English. Her lodgings were in O'Farrell Street, near where Miss Tucholsky lived, and the latter learned through mutual friends of the troubles of the foreign actress. Miss Tucholsky's sympathies were aroused by the plight of the beautiful stranger. So she volunteered to teach the English language to the actress. During the time of tutoring Mme. Modjeska was striving to secure an engagement at the old California Theatre under Barton Hill. She desired to appear with Charles Coghlan. One evening Miss Tucholsky had a dream in which she saw Modjeska and Coghlan on the stage together. The next day, with the prognostication strong in their minds, the two women made a more than usually strenuous effort to interest Hill and John McCullough in Mme. Modjeska's genius. Hill gave the foreigner the desired hearing. Immediately he saw her ability and engaged her to appear with Coghlan. That laid the foundation of Modjeska's American triumphs. During the early engagements Miss Tucholsky was friend, manager and prompter for the new star. Later she appeared in Modjeska's company in small parts and traveled extensively with her.

Izetta Jewel Scores Again With Portlanders in The Girl of the Golden West

PORTLAND, ORE., May 31.—Holly Theatre (Chas. Heilig, mgr.; William Pangle, resident mgr.): One of the most delightful productions ever witnessed by Portland theatre-goers was dished up to them the past week when Otis Skinner produced his latest success, The Honor of the Family. Not only was the star artistic from every standpoint, but his company was capable in every requisite. The play was produced in a manner that has seldom been equaled in this city. Business was not what the star, company and play deserved. This combination should have packed the theatre at every performance. Goodwin and Goodrich come to this house, 1st, 2d and 3d. The Burgomaster follows. The Merry Widow is announced for the week of June 20th. Bungalow Theatre (George L. Baker, mgr.; Milton Seaman, business mgr.): Owing to the great demand made upon them, Managers Baker and Seaman have bowed to the wishes of the public, and yesterday they again offered The Girl of the Golden West. This piece broke all previous records of stock productions in this city when it was first produced, and ran for a period of three weeks to enormous business. There can be no question that the same state of affairs is going to exist from the business standpoint for the present engagement. At yesterday's performances the house was packed, and the big advance sale points to the same condition for the entire week. Izetta Jewel scored her greatest success in this play, when it was offered previously. This talented young actress has made big-sized hits in numerous roles the present season, but the consensus of opinion is that her portrayal of The Girl was without doubt her very best. She did not fall short in any manner in yesterday's production, and again emphasized the pleasant remembrances of her first appearance in that role. Sydney Ayers as the outlaw Ramirez is right in his element. The role calls for romantic acting, and that is Ayer's strong forte. Donald Bowles is again cast as the gambling sheriff, Jack Rance, and the good impressions previously made in that character are again verified. William Gleason is again found in the role of Sonora, and gets many a good laugh. The entire company are all doing high-class work, and, of course, the management have spared no expense in the production. Next week will be the close of the present season, and Under Two Flags is announced. Quite a change will be made in the personnel of the company for the coming season. Up to date, Miss Jewel, Mr. Bowles and probably Earl Dwire are the only ones announced to remain of the old company. Baker Theatre (George L. Baker, mgr.; Milton Seaman, business mgr.): For the last week of their engagement at this house, the Ferris Hartman Company are offering Hartman's greatest success, The Toymaker. Yesterday's performances were well attended, and no doubt the play will do a good week's business. As Guggenheimer, the toymaker, Hartman is at home. His topical song went big, and the audience was loath to let him go. Muggins Davis is playing the role of the daughter of the toymaker, and gets through well with it, although hardly as good as previous ones we have seen in the part. The company seems to be perfectly at home in this play, in fact, more so than last week's, and gave a more pleasing performance of the play. Elsa Thornvald has joined this company as prima donna. This house closes for the season after this week's bill. Orpheum Theatre (James H. Erickson, mgr.): Virtually two headliners were offered to lovers of vaudeville at this house the past week—Cheridah Simpson and the act entitled A Night at the Circus, comprising twenty people. We all know and have heard of "Cherry" Simpson, and suffice it to say that she is just as good in vaudeville as she was in comic opera. A Night at the Circus was an act that introduced the regular circus acts upon the stage in one ring. It was very realistic and brought us all back to memories of the one-ringers, where one could see all that was going on all the time. The balance of the bill was good, particularly Frank Whitman, Mlle. Latina and DeHollis and Valors. This week's bill is as follows: Camille D'Arville, Adelaide, Elizabeth Murray, Gasch Sisters, Warren, Lyons and Myers, Mauza and Mazzette, and Ernest Yerxa. Lyric Theatre (Keating & Flood, mgrs.): A new play was produced at this theatre yesterday entitled Love Ranch. The play does not give to the stage anything new or startling, but possesses some originality. It seemed to please the theatre-goers of this house yesterday. It deals with a son of royalty who comes to this country and becomes a cowboy, and is accused of crime, and afterwards, of course, clears himself of the false charges, and subsequently learns of his right to the throne from whence he came. He renounces royalty and stays with the girl he has fallen in love with—and by the way remains a cowboy. The company got all out of the play that there was in it, particularly was this so with Ralph Belmont, Herbert Ashton, Charles Connors, Lily Branscombe, Virginia Duncan and Rupert Drum. This is the closing week of this house for the stock company for this season. The Imperial Musical Comedy Company opens next week. Grand Theatre James Erickson, mgr.): Nadje is the headliner; the balance of the bill is Lindley & Co., Martynne, Kessler and Dunne, Weston and Young, Loma Hanlon, and Fred Bauer. Pantages has the Saytons, novelty gymnasts, for their headline act for this week, and the Murrays and their dancing dogs for the added act. Sels-Floto Circus was here, 24 and 25, and did well. A. W. W.

Royal's New Book

Charles E. Royal, the prolific writer, has a "brand-new" book of monologues, stories and poems ready for the press, which will be issued in the immediate future. The book will contain 65 pages, printed on excellent paper and will sell for 50 cents per copy. Mr. Royal is the author of over one hundred successful songs, plays and vaudeville acts, which are being presented on both continents, and since the publication of his first monologue book, The Grief Exterminator, has received hundreds of requests for another one. While the book is brimful of "sure-fire" monologues, parodies and songs, and is designed for the use of performers, it is written in a manner which makes it extremely entertaining to the reading public. Copies may be purchased from all the leading stationers or by sending direct to the Royal Publishing Company, Van Ness Theatre Building, San Francisco, Cal.

MARIE HOWE opens with the Elich Garden Stock of Denver tomorrow.

Rob Roy's Interesting Letter Concerning Theatricals in New York

NEW YORK, May 30.—It had been pretty well understood before the curtain rose for the first act of The Game of Love in Wallack's Theatre last night that Federico Mariani had prepared something of a novelty for New York's theatregoers. They had learned as much from the Herald and from the accounts of the comedy drama's "trying out" in Baltimore. So there was, perhaps, a little disappointment felt by the large audience when the play started off with what sounded like a rather conventional story of a very smug artist whose success, both in art and semi-love affairs, had made him also very conceited, and who seemed plainly on the road to the usual fate of that sort of person as depicted on the stage. It was not long, however, before the audience began to realize that the game of love, as Mr. Mariani presented it, was indeed something decidedly unlike the familiar stage love story. It was an old, old theme, to be sure, but it was worked out in anything but the old, old way. As the plot developed one oddity after another in dialogue and situation appeared to surprise the audience and excite an interest that grew with each scene and was at its height when the curtain dropped on the last act. E. J. Ratcliffe had a by no means easy part as the artist, but in not the smallest detail did he fail to fill it just as it had to be filled to make the play successful. This was almost equally true of Josephine Lovett. Indeed, to these two must be given the lion's share of credit for the success of the play. Florence Lester, Sheldon Lewis and William Norton also aided much with their excellent work, while Fred W. Strong and Gertrude Berkeley supplied the lines which entitled the author to the prefix comedy when he described his play as a comedy drama. It may be rather late in the theatrical season to offer a real novelty, but that is what The Game of Love is, and it is, too, a novelty that is well worth going to see and hear. * * * In the Belasco Theatre, Washington, last week The Revellers, a four-act comedy was produced, under the management of the Messrs. Shubert, for the first time. When, after the third act, Charles Richman, a favorite in Washington, was called before the curtain to make a speech, everybody agreed that the new play had scored. Mr. Richman is the author as well as the leading man. The Revellers is Mr. Richman's first play. The plot, in brief, tells the story of a young man who is losing his prestige as a lawyer through associating with a more or less dissipated coterie of revellers and regains the position to which his real talents entitle him through the love of a good woman. It is the role of this young lawyer, Jack Randolph, which is played by Mr. Richman with skill and virility. The second act contains a novelty in the form of a beef-steak supper on the stage, with an entertainment provided by the real Al Johns, who is himself a member of the company. In this scene the various guests also contribute to the entertainment. Mr. Richman and Katherine Florence, leading woman, do a cake walk, and May MacKenzie, now making her debut in the legitimate, gives one of the dances that she used to do in musical comedy. * * * After a long road tour David Warfield and his company returned to New York last week and in the West End Theatre revived The Music Master. This was sufficient to attract a large audience. The play by Charles Klein, with Mr. Warfield in the role he has played for almost five years, was followed with all the old time interest. Mr. Warfield received a very warm welcome back to New York. * * * Faust ushered in the second week of the engagement of Mr. Gustav Hinrich's opera company in the Metropolitan Theatre last Monday night. There was an audience that comfortably filled the house, and it was generous with its applause. Helena Koelling was the Marguerita and Mr. Columbini sang the title role. Ludovico Viviana was the Mephistopheles; the role of Valentine was sung by Paola Galazzi, and Miss Brendella was the Siebel. * * * Der Opernball, an operetta in three acts, by Messrs. Victor Leon and Hugo von Waldberg, with music by Richard Heuberger, was produced in German at the Yorkville theatre last week for the first time in America, although it had a long run in Berlin, besides being produced in Vienna and other European cities. It is a sprightly comedy, with lively music and amusing scenes. The plot hinges on the adventures of some French provincial fathers of families, who determine to see the gayeties of Paris. Headed by an elderly rentier, Theofil Beauvuison, they go to the French capital. Meantime their wives have discovered their plans and determined to follow them. There are the inevitable complications, but in the end everybody is forgiven and all ends happily. Emil Burla, German comedian, and his opera company, presented the piece before a large audience. Mr. Berla as Beauvuison, kept the audience laughing, and at the end of the second act received a large floral horseshoe. He was well supported by Miss Anna Wilhelm as Mme. Beauvuison, Miss Mizi Raabe, Miss Wilhelm Nikow, Miss Cornelia Morena and Miss Louise Barthel as the housemaid. Among the minor roles Mr. Kurt Manthey as a head waiter received applause. * * * John Barrymore, who was last seen at the Broadway Theatre in A Stubborn Cinderella, appeared in The Candy Shop last night, replacing Leslie Gaze in the role of Jack Sweet. He received a hearty welcome and injected many drolleries into the scenes in which he appeared and made a very favorable impression. * * * The Ivan Abramson Opera Company so thoroughly established its reputation last year at the American Theatre that the crowded audience which greeted the opening of its new engagement in the Grand Opera House last week was confident of what was in store. The organization is the best of the popular price companies which sing the works of the famed Italian composers in New York. Aida, the opening opera, was well sung. The Radames was Mr. Bari, who looks not unlike Mr. Caruso, and he quickly established himself in the audience's favor, receiving much applause. Mme. Therry was the Aida, and she made an attractive slave girl and sang well. So did Mme. Strauss as Amneris. Mr. Secchi had the role of Amonasro. It was, altogether, a creditable production. * * * E. H. Sothorn and Julia Marlowe will appear in an elaborate revival of Shakespearean repertoire for an engagement of three weeks at the Academy of Music beginning next Monday evening. For the first week they will present Romeo and Juliet; for the week of Monday, June 7, Hamlet and The Merchant of Venice; and for the last week, beginning Monday, June 14, Twelfth Night and The Taming of the Shrew. The appearance of the two stars in the revival is for this engagement only. * * * The Narrow Path, a play of New York life, by John Montague, was produced at the Lyric Theatre, Philadelphia, last week. There are eight characters in the play, and four of them are manicure girls. The story deals with the temptations that beset the paths of women working for a living. Ida Conquest headed the cast, and in her support were Frederick Perry, Consuelo Bailey, Marion Ballou, Dorothy Rossmore, Georgia Lawrence, George Parsons and Joseph Dailey. * * * The Lambs gambled about $32,000 worth at the Metropolitan Opera House last week for one night and it was worth the money. From the grand minstrel first part, introducing all the good old songs of fifty years ago to the screaming finish, the show was what is termed in theatrical parlance, a knockout. The theatrical firmament, combed for stars and near stars, gave up to such good purpose that not less than eighty were presented in one glittering cluster, and a collection of their autographs sold for $600. This is an average of $7.50 per name, which is quite a nice price for autographs. But Augustus Thomas said the Lambs needed the money and he would have taken $1,600 for those autographs just as readily. Can you imagine a minstrel first part with De Wolf Hopper as interlocutor, Charles Evans, Ignacio Martinetti and Macklyn Arbuckle handling the bones, Andrew Mack, Edward Harrigan, Eddie Foy and Nat Wills as tambors, and a triple sextette, including such men as George Hamlin, George Leon Moore, George McCloskey, Eugene Cowles, Richie Ling and Melville Stewart? And Victor Herbert's own orchestra with Victor in the chair? That would have to be SOME minstrel show, wouldn't it? No answer is required. The opening chorus, arranged by Herbert, brought out all the old songs, Nelly Was a Lady, Old Black Joe, Maryland, My Maryland, and of course the inevitable

To Stage Inner Shrine

Klaw & Erlanger and Joseph Brooks have arranged with the Harper Brothers for the dramatic rights of The Inner Shrine. The Story first appeared in Harper's Magazine, and the name of the author has not yet been disclosed. The anonymity of the writer, it is announced, will be preserved by the producers of the play, the secrecy being made a part of the agreement. Klaw & Erlanger and Mr. Brooks have also engaged Lillian Albertson of San Francisco for the leading woman's role in a new play called Through a Window, by Gertrude Nelson Andrews, wife of Fred Andrews, for years Dick Ferris' business manager. The action of the drama takes place in San Francisco on the evening before and the morning of the earthquake. The story deals with municipal graft and its exposure. Both plays will be produced early in the fall.

New Theatre for San Bernardino

M. B. Curtis, the actor-manager, who is behind the proposed E Street theatre building of San Bernardino, while not willing to give out any details, declared last Monday that the first of next week would see the enterprise reduced to a certainty, and that the transfer of the land and the contracting of the building will quickly follow.

Dixie, whereupon there was wild, wild applause from the Southerners from the southern part of Michigan, terminating with The Star Spangled Banner and a flag finish by permission of George M. Then the jokes began to fly back and forth across the stage. Ignacio Martinetti, being questioned as to the exact state of his feelings, remarked that he felt like and then again unlike Salome. Begged by Mr. Hopper to elucidate, he explained that he was appearing before a royal house without a single deadhead in it, which sally provoked howls from the diamond horseshoe. And of course one of the end men had been seen on the street with a lady and Hopper wished to know all about it.

"Is that your fiance?" asked Mr. Hopper, with a delicate French accent.

"Mah whut?" demanded the outraged end man.

"Your fiance?" explained the interlocutor.

"No suh! NO suh!" remarked the end man with deep conviction. "I should say NOT! Why, Ah'm gwinter MARRY 'at gal!"

Eddie Foy, with songs, had the nerve to pull all that old boarding house stuff and for an encore lugged in the wedding of the girl named Oates to the man named Wheat—and got away with it.

Maclyn Arbuckle told a long rambling story to explain why he was late, including a thrilling experience with a lady who had fainted on the street.

"Have you seen how the ladies are buttoning their dresses lately?" he asked Mr. Hopper.

"No," said the interlocutor, and then, as an afterthought, "Not lately. Not lately."

Mr. Arbuckle was also worrying because his wife was going to charge him with alimony.

"Why, Mr. Arbuckle," said the interlocutor, patiently, "alimony is not a charge. It is a penalty."

"Are you sure of that?" demanded the fat man on the end.

Chorus of some seventeen Lambs, picked for an intimate knowledge of the subject:

"You bet we are!"

Andrew Mack told a good Irish story, illustrating the love of the Irishman for the Italian.

"Why, where I work," said Andrew, "there's six thousand Eyetalians an' I wish they had six thousand more."

"Ah," said Mr. Hopper, politely, "and where do you work?"

He had dined particularly well; the ballads were well received.

There was a short stage wait while the performing Lambs hustled out of the black paint and into togas and "I'm a grave digger in the cimitery," said Andrew.

Of course there was a great deal of singing and dancing and from Sweet Genevieve down to Annie Laurie, rendered by Eugene Cowles in a manner to bring tears to the eyes of those who then came the forum scene from Julius Caesar, introducing not less than eighty stars, probably the first time on any stage when a mob was composed entirely of star performers, playing to a comic opera comedian as Marc Antony. Hopper eclipsed himself in this scene, and on taking a curtain call naively remarked that he had been so busy writing the speech he had just delivered that he had nothing more to give. And, for the first time in his life, he got away without giving Casey at the Bat, which in a Roman toga should be funnier than ever.

Weber and Fields did their good old poolroom stunt, mellowed and refined by age, bringing the same old screams in the same old way, and Donald Brian and eight Lambs, dressed as matinee girls, did a neat singing and dancing specialty, and were recalled so many times that at the end there wasn't a whole breath left in the octet.

The sketch Tuesday closed the big show, the same representing the troubles of an author with a new piece and forty unruly actors and actorines. The star of the bit was surely Digby Bell, as the wardrobe mistress, who though a weak and nervous woman was always on the verge of climbing over the footlights and giving Joe Grismer a poke in the eye.

This act introduced several famous playwrights who desired to shoot their own climaxes into the new piece, and the whole affair was screamingly funny from beginning to end.

Is it a good show? Well, about a dozen Lambs who are not actors, and who will not appear, except in the mob scene, are paying $500 to be taken along with the bunch this week on the tour of the big towns. That's how good it is. ROB ROY.

Audiences At Home and Abroad

By CHARLES FROHMAN

It has been written of me that when I produce a play for the first time I sit in the last row of the gallery during the performance, out of a modest wish not to be seen.

I often do watch the first performances of my plays from the last row of the gallery, but not so much out of modesty as curiosity.

The best index to the probable career of any play is the back of the head of an auditor who does not know that he is being watched. Your playgoer in an orchestra stall is always half conscious that what he does or says may be observed. But your gallery gods and goddesses have never a thought for anything except what happens on the stage. They may yield the time before the rise of the curtain to watching the audience enter the theatre, but once the lights are up and the stage is revealed they have no eyes or thought for anything except the life unfolded by the actors. These people in the upper part of the theatre represent the masses. They are worth watching. Great stage successes are the plays that take hold of the masses—not the classes.

An American in the theatre feels first and thinks afterward. A European at a play thinks first and feels afterward. In conversation a German discusses sitting down. A Frenchman discusses standing up. But your American discusses walking about. Each must have his play built accordingly.

As I go back and forth, crossing and recrossing the Atlantic, the audiences on both sides seem more and more like one. Always, of course, each has its own particular point of view, according to the side of the Atlantic I happen to be upon. But often they think the same, each from its own angle. You bring your English play to America. Nobody is at all disturbed by the mention of Park Lane or Piccadilly Circus. If there is drama in the play, if in itself it interests and holds the audience, nobody pays any attention to its locality or localisms. But an English audience sitting before an American play hears mention of West Twenty-third street or Washington Square, and while it is wondering just where and what these streets may be an important incident in the dramatic action slips by unnoticed. Not that English audiences are at all prejudiced against American plays. They take them in the same general way Americans take English plays. Each public asks: "What have you got?" As soon as it hears that the play is good it is interested. English audiences, for example, were quick to discover the fun in The Dictator when Mr. Collier acted it in London, though it was full of the local color of New York in the central character and in the thought. Somehow the type and the speeches seemed to have a sort of universal humor. I tried it first before J. M. Barrie. He marked in the manuscript the place from which he could understand. The piece never went better in America. On the other hand, one reason Brewster's Millions did not go well in London was because the severely logical British mind took it all as a business proposition; the problem was figured out with the discovery that the young man did not spend his millions.

If the locality of an American play happens to be a mining village it is better to change its scenes to a similar village in Australia when you take the play to London. Then the audience is sure to understand. The public of London gave The Lion and the Mouse an enthusiastic first night, but it turned out that they had not understood the play. It was unthinkable to them that a judge should be disgraced and disbarred by a political ring.

The point about enthusiastic first nights in London as well as in New York is to wait for the box-office statement of the second night. In America the question with a failure is: "How soon can we get it off the stage?" In London they say: "How long will the play run, even though it is a failure?"

No actor or manager should feel grateful to any audience for the success of a play in which he has figured. A play succeeds because it is a living, vital thing—and that is why it has got upon the stage at all. There is life in it and it does not and will not die. It keeps itself alive until the opportunity comes along. Often a kind of instinct makes the opportunity.

It is instinct also that prompts an audience to applaud when it is pleased, laugh when it is amused, weep when it is moved, hiss when it is dissatisfied. No actor should feel indebted to an audience for the recognition of good work, because that same audience that appears to be so friendly, at another time, when one character or play does not please it, will resent both actor and play. This is as it should be. It is pretty, the loyalty of English audiences to their old favorites, but it is bad for the old favorites. It is stagnating.

The various expressions of approval and disapproval that come from spectators at a play are involuntary on the part of the spectators. They are hypnotized by the play and the acting. Whoever, on coming out of the theatre after seeing a play that has pleased him, felt a sense of happiness that his pleasure had also pleased the actor, or the author of the play, or the management of the production? Loyalty, generosity and encouragement, as applied to audiences, are so many empty words. Playgoers that apply them to themselves cheat themselves. Miss Maude Adams is the only stage personage within my experience who has a distinct public following, loyal and encouraging to her whatever she does.

The public is asked to attend a charitable performance to help a worthy cause. The people rush to buy up places at the theatre in which an afternoon's entertainment is to be given by the most expensive talent available. For two dollars an auditor in that theatre that afternoon obtains ten or twenty dollars' worth of service. Yet everybody sitting there is simple enough to believe that he or she has done something for charity, when in reality they have done nothing except provide themselves entertainment at a low price. The players who give their services for this charitable performance—they are different. They do not believe they have done anything for charity, because they believe it is a privilege to take part in this good work, and they themselves are repaid.

Twenty per cent discount

It pays to advertise sensibly. In the face of quiet times generally, I increased my business considerably this May as against the same month last year; simply by maintaining the quality, but reducing the profit. The same discount, to-wit: twenty per cent runs for the month of June also, and it behooves you to see the high grade of merchandise I am offering at almost wholesale prices. Yours very truly,

Tell me of an audience that has ever attended a single performance of an admitted failure, and I shall tell you of an audience to whom the thanks of the actor and the manager are due.

I have heard people of the stage complain that this or that night's audience was unintelligent or thoughtless—by which, I suppose, the speaker meant that the applause was misplaced. But I have always thought that the unintelligence of indiscriminate applause in the theatre lay not so much in the hour or moment it took place, but that it happened at all. Actors who give all that is in them to their performances should have for rest and recovery the time that is taken by the further nervous strain of bowing and rebowing in response to applause that has arisen not as a personal tribute to them as actors, but from instinct—from the same cause that induces a man to cry out when he is struck with pain, to laugh when his sense of humor is aroused, or to sleep when he is bored.

Skilled actors know well by experience the hollowness of an audience's applause. Once I stood upon a stage and watched a great foreign actress possessed of temperament, skill and feeling give a dinner order while bowing before a tumultuously-enthusiastic audience. That great actress had learned in a hard school the lesson of never having any real feeling of gratitude or misapprehension before public applause. One night I talked over with Sir Henry Irving while he was taking repeated curtain-calls the prospects of a change of bill for the balance of his engagement.

Every producer of plays lives to learn that a failure may meet with an enthusiastic reception on its first performance.

A producer of plays, assuming that he is a man of experience, never feels comfortable after a great reception has been given his play on a first night. He knows that the reception in the theatre does not always correspond to the feelings of future audiences. Every thinking manager knows that his play, in order to succeed, must send its audience away possessed of some distinct feeling. A successful play is a play that reflects, whatever the feeling it reflects.

The great successes of the stage are plays that are played outside of the theatre: over the breakfast table; in a man's office, to his business associates; in a club, as one member tells the thrilling story of the previous night's experience to another. Great successes upon the stage are plays of such a sort that one audience can play them over to another and so make an endless chain of attendance at the theatre.

I have never, in all my experience felt a success on the opening night. I have only felt my failures.

I once witnessed the performance of a farcical play with an English author in a theatre in London on the third night of its run. I don't remember ever having heard so much laughter in a theatre. I went with that author to another theatre where a play of his was in its first month and where the curtain fell on the big act without applause. The author told me the chief actors had been trying night by night to invent "business" for curtain-calls. The farce that we had seen fairly drowned in tremendous laughter died in two weeks. The other laughterless play ran over a year and has been revived twice. One audience greatly enjoyed itself in the theatre and promptly forgot what it had seen when it got home. The other audience was unaware of the fact that it was genuinely enjoying itself in the theatre, but remembered and told others what it had remembered when it got home.

I have left a theatre on the first night with the other mourners and returned to my office to cast a new play for the company—only to live to see the play run on successfully for months.

Nothing is more deluding to the player and even to the manager than enthusiastic applause. The inspired, fine work of a star actor often makes an audience enthusiastic to such a boisterous extent that one forgets it is the individual and not the play that has succeeded. They are countless—the accidents that may operate against everybody's wish or hard effort to make an audience like a play.

I was once an auditor at the opening night of an important production in London when the principal critic of the city arrived late during a very quiet and tense moment of the play. Being nearsighted, he struck a brass railing with his foot as he entered and made a great deal of noise. Immediately there arose cries of "Order!" from all parts of the house. Everybody turned around and looked at the noise-maker. Soon he fled from the theatre, striking another railing on the way, and, of course, unmercifully flayed the performance in his review of the play. It took that play weeks, not to overcome that particular criticism, but to live down the other criticisms spread broadcast by a large audience whose evening had been spoiled by a nearsighted noise-maker.

In England, the pit and the gallery of the audience come to the theatre and turn in their hard-earned shillings and demand much. Failing to get what they expect the theatre is filled with boos and cat-calls at the end of the play. This does not mean that the play has failed. It more nearly means that the less a man pays to get into a theatre the more he demands of the play.

An American audience is different, because it has a fine sense of humor. When an American pays his money through the box-office window he feels that it is gone forever. Anything he receives after that—the lights, the pictures on the walls, the music of the orchestra, the sight of a few or many smiling faces—is so much to the good. So keen is the American playgoer's sense of humor that often when a play is wretchedly bad the American sense of humor comes to the rescue and the applause is terrifically loud. This does not mean that the play has succeeded. It means rather that the play will die, the victim of the deadliest of all possible criticisms—ridicule.

A play-producer who overhears the comments of the audience on the first night after the performance of a failure never can feel any regret for the sufferings of his audience. The people's expressions of disappointment and disapproval preclude any feeling of guilt or sympathy that he may have. More than that, I can imagine nothing more terrible than for a play-producer to look at an audience that likes his play, because only then can he realize what the people would look like if they did not like the play. My greatest happiness is never to see an audience that attends my successful plays, and the real reason why I produce pieces outside of New York and London is to be able to see them played for suggested changes, before an audience that does not realize the importance of the first night. The greatest pleasure to a producing manager, I should think, is to see a play performed without an audience, and then to know that this same play, which he never wishes to see again, is being performed before large audiences.

So far as I am concerned, knowing the uncertainty of plays, the fickleness of audiences and the inevitableness of waiting patiently for days and, perhaps, for weeks for a final decision—an agony that can only be likened to that of the prisoner who waits for the return of a perplexed jury. I have trained myself, so far as I can, to be a good actor in apparently accepting on first nights in metropolitan cities, whether in New York or London, the messages or assurances of success that are crowded upon me by friends. And yet I invariably leave the theatre after a first-night performance knowing full well that neither my friends nor I know anything at all as to the ultimate fortune of the play we have seen.

Henry W. Savage Finds a Way to Protect Stage Children

One of the most encouraging bits of news that has reached the Producing Managers' Association in New York comes from Chicago where Henry W. Savage has won his case against the Factory Inspector who attempted to prevent little Gretchen Hartman from appearing in Mary Jane's Pa. A unique law point was sprung by Mr. Savage's attorney. Hereafter every manager sending to Chicago a show that requires a child actor will be able to protect himself by following Mr. Savage's lead and make the child a partner in the enterprise. Little Miss Hartman, a clever child actress, who divided attention with the star, Henry E. Dixey, plays Mary Jane in the big comedy success. None but a child could take this role, but Chicago bars from the stage any player under 14 years. This has prevented a number of great plays from being presented in Chicago. Mr. Savage's manager was arrested and in danger of a jail sentence as well as a fine of $100 for every time Miss Hartman appeared on the Chicago Opera House stage. At the trial this week it came out that the law was only against the employment of children, but did not hold against a person who took part in his or her own show. It appeared from the evidence that Miss Hartman had an interest in the company. She held a partnership agreement that entitled her to ten per cent of the profits or ten per cent of the losses. She was being paid $50 weekly as an advance on her contract. When Judge Fry heard this evidence he entertained the motion by Attorney Adolph Marks, to instruct the jury to return a verdict of acquittal. For years the child actor has dreaded Chicago on account of the certainty of arrest. Henceforth managers will take the youngster into partnership and avoid a silly law that was never intended to apply against the stage in the first place. Miss Hartman travels with her mother, has her lessons regularly each day and is as carefully looked after as if she were in her own home in Harlem. She is much better off than if she were selling newspapers on the street which, under the Illinois law, she would be permitted to do without being molested. The law against stage children has always been an imposition and all theatrical managers are congratulating Mr. Savage for having found a way to protect them.

Why Plays Succeed

Munsey's Magazine for June is rich in theatrical interest, especially a surprising discussion on "Why Plays Succeed," by Matthew White, Jr., dramatic editor of Munsey's. This feature is handsomely illustrated with numerous pictures in four colors, showing scenes from the season's successes. Mr. White also discusses the possibility of a war between the big theatrical combines. Another article of interest to the theatrical profession is "The Passing of the Great Figures of the Stage," by Walter Prichard Eaton. He declares that the great roles of the past will die with the mere handful of really great actors and actresses now on the boards. It is an article that is likely to arouse no end of controversy. Elizabeth Tyree Metcalfe, well known to playgoers as Elizabeth Tyree, contributes a short story to the number—"The Hypocrites."

Spotlights

Contracts have been signed between Henry B. Harris and Kellett Chambers for the early production, this coming season, of the latter's new three-act comedy, An American Widow. Mr. Chambers is a brother of Charles Haddon Chambers, the dramatist, whose plays, Captain Swift, The Idler, The Awakening, The Fatal Card and Sir Anthony, were well-known successes. Kellett Chambers has also achieved considerable prominence as a dramatist, having furnished Grace George with Abigail. He also made a dramatic version of David Copperfield, and lastly wrote The Butterfly for Lillian Russell.

Walter Sanford's company at the Empress this week present Carmen. Carmen without music may be rather like an egg without salt, but in some subtle way Miss Vane's interpretation of the name part makes the audience forget all about the salt. She manages to throw an extraordinary amount of excellent comedy into what is in reality a gloomy tragedy. She makes such lightning changes in her gestures and intonation that one moment she is in the depths of woe, in the next as merry as a lark. Miss Vane's Carmen is a very lovable creature, full of fierce moods and passions. She is more than half the time experimenting with Don Jose. Miss Vane very cleverly shows this, and must be congratulated on a most spirited performance.—Vancouver Exchange.

The Heilig Theatre of Portland has been condemned, and the combinations booked there will play The Bungalow Theatre for the rest of the season.

George Baldwin, Alfred Aldridge, Win. Garwood and Norval MacGregor will be seen at the Alcazar during the Roberts' engagement.

In The Merry Widow company, which will follow Marie Doro at the Van Ness, are Oscar Figman, Tommy Leary and William V. Strunz.

So Successful Is The Girl of the Golden West in Portland At the Bungalow That Another Week Follows

PORTLAND, Ore., June 7.—The Heilig Theatre is a thing of the past. Last Monday afternoon the building inspector of this city, acting under instructions of Mayor Harry Lane, closed that house on the ground that the place was unsafe, and the house has been dark ever since, and will not reopen again. Nat Goodwin was dated to appear for this week at the Heilig. There had been a great deal of talk to the effect that the theatre was unsafe, but there was no advance notice given that the same was to be closed. The building inspector simply went to the house and placed two policemen in charge, and posted notices to the effect that the theatre was closed on account of the fact that it was unsafe. So that was the final act in the life of this house. The theatre was originally built by J. E. Blazier for stock purposes, and after an unsuccessful attempt by the owner along those lines, in which change of managers occurred several times, Belasco & Mayer took control of the house and renamed it the Belasco, and installed another stock company in the place. They also lost money in their venture, but got even in the sale of the property. Then it was that Cal. Heilig leased the house for the K. & E. shows, and ever since it has been the home for those road shows. The closing of the house necessitated a theatre for Goodwin, and he was sent to the Baker for his date, and Ferris Hartman and his company closed their engagement and left for Seattle, where they enter into a thirteen weeks' engagement. Too much praise cannot be bestowed upon Hartman for the cancelling of his week to make room for the Goodwin engagement, and the newspapers of this city commended him highly for his kindness under the circumstances. The balance of the shows originally booked for the Heilig will be played at the Bungalow, the stock company closing their season next Saturday night, and The Merry Widow will be the first of the road shows to play at that house, opening next Sunday night. Owing to the closing of the Heilig the syndicate shows will be without a show shop, as the Bungalow stock company reopens on the 4th of September. Manager Heilig is now making efforts to interest local capital in the building of a new theatre, and everything points to success.

BAKER THEATRE (George L. Baker, mgr.; Milton Seaman, business mgr.)—Nat Goodwin opened his engagement at this house the fore part of last week and offered The Easterner and The Genius for his attractions.

Fair business was enjoyed by him. Goodwin gave a good performance of both leading parts, and Edna Goodrich looked better than she acted. The balance of his support was good, especially Neil O'Brien. Last night The Burgomaster returned to this house and remains during the present week. Harry Hermesen is still playing the name part, and is ably assisted by Leo Kendall, Fred W. Bailey, Euphémie Lockhart and Marie Grandpre. This house closed with the present engagement.

BUNGALOW THEATRE (Geo. L. Baker, mgr.; Milton Seaman, business mgr.)—Owing to the immense business done by the present bill at this theatre, Manager Baker decided to repeat The Girl of the Golden West again the coming week, which is the final one of the present season. It seems as if the patrons of this house cannot get enough of this play. Yesterday's production of the play was the commencement of the fifth week of the play. Pretty good for stock production for Portland or any city, eh? Izetta Jewel allows nothing to be wanted in her delineation of the Girl, and with each succeeding performance improves, if that is possible. Sydney Ayers, Donald Bowles, Mrs. Mina Gleason, in fact, each and every member of the company, are simply outdoing themselves in the play. Next week The Merry Widow is announced by the management of the Heilig, they making this theatre their home for at least the present.

ORPHEUM THEATRE (James H. Erickson, mgr.)—Although Camille D'Arville is announced as the headliner for this week at this theatre, Elizabeth Murray carried off the honors. The latter lady won the hearts of all who heard her. She is one of the most finished actresses we have had on the Orpheum boards. Other interesting acts were Mazua and Mazzette and Ernest Yerex. Commencing today, Joseph Hart's Futurity Winner is the feature act, and the balance of the bill includes James Thornton; Sullivan and Pasquelena; Mack and Williams; Vera Berlinger; Clark and Bergman, and Fran La Dent.

LYRIC THEATRE (Keating & Flood, mgrs.)—The stock season has closed at this house. Yesterday the Imperial Comedy Company opened and offered A Matrimonial Mix-Up. It is a good light musical offering and seemed to please the audiences. Ed Harrington is the leading comedian, and is ably supported by Maudie Melville and Mary Cardiff.

GRAND THEATRE (James H. Erickson, mgr.)—This week's bill is as follows: Mabel McKinley is the headliner, and the other acts are Frances Redding and company; Ward Brothers; Cooke and Rorhert; Brenon and Downing, and Fred Bauer. The feature act at Pantages this week is Bonner, the educated horse.

Louis Morrison Is Showing Los Angeles What a Good Actor He Is in a James Herne Role

LOS ANGELES, June 10.—Although this is the month of June and the time when things are rather dull in the theatrical world, such is not the case among the player folk here. On the contrary this is a very busy week. With Mrs. Fiske at the Auditorium, John Drew at the Mason, and new bills at the stock houses, every one should find something to his taste. Many of the local people have left town for vacations. Lewis S. Stone of the Belasco left Tuesday for Montana, where he will spend his three months' vacation. A. Byron Beasley and wife will leave for the East July 3. He plans to be away a month. George Baudrand, assistant treasurer of the Burbank Theatre, will leave in a day or two for Coronado Beach, where he will pass a week's vacation. There are two new stars appearing with Murray and Mack at the Grand this week. Blossom Seeley is the soubrette; she can both sing and dance, two very necessary accomplishments for a soubrette. Sara Edwards is the other addition to the company and her acting and singing are both acceptable. These two young women have proved valuable additions to the company. Charles Ruggles of the Belasco is to take his vacation soon and we are told that he contemplates spending it in the wilds of Montana. Going to hunt bigger game, Charlie? Miss Noyes of the Belasco is soon to play one of her favorite roles, that of Flora Wiggins in the Belasco production of The College Widow. Miss Noyes made her first appearance in Los Angeles in this role when the Lewis Stone company opened at the Auditorium. Billy Onslow has signed a contract with Ed Armstrong of the Pickwick Theatre at San Diego. The Murray and Mack season of musical comedy at the Grand will end Saturday night, and the Grand stage next Sunday afternoon will be turned over to a season of melodrama, a form of entertainment for which the patrons of this playhouse have always manifested a decided partiality. The first show will be Lillian Mortimer's successful romantic melodrama, No Mother to Guide Her. The players that will compose the Grand stock company include: George Webb, who has been seen many times at the Belasco in important roles; Harry Earl, a clever character actor who was formerly a member of the Belasco company; Chester Stevens, who has served an apprenticeship with some of the best players of the East; Robert Leonard, from the Valencia Theatre company of San Francisco; Richard Cox, Jack McDonald, George Field and Max Bloom, whose work with the Murray and Mack company during the past six weeks has made them great favorites with the Grand audiences. Grace Rauworth, formerly leading woman of the Tannhauser stock company of Milwaukee and Chicago, will play the seconds, while the feminine leads will be played by Marjorie Dalton, a handsome, clever young actress. Ana Claire and Mrs. Frank Payne will be assigned to the character roles, and Alice Lewis will portray the pert soubrettish maidens.

AUDITORIUM—Mrs. Fiske and her Manhattan company are playing Salvation Nell at the Auditorium for the week. This is Edward Sheldon's play of slum life and it crowded the Hackett Theatre in New York for more than half a season. Mrs. Fiske's part of a scrub girl in a saloon, whose nature becomes transformed through the influence of a great love, is one of the most appealing she has ever created. The theme of the piece is strong and absorbing and is one of the most tremendous successes of Mrs. Fiske's career. The triumph of Holbrook Blinn as Jim Platt, is second only to that of the star. He is truly great in the part. Other notable characterizations are Miss Latham's, as the woman who has bartered all for material security. Miss Madison as Maggie gives a restrained picture of the Army lass. W. T. Clarke is burly and convincing as the bartender. Some one has compared Mrs. Fiske's Salvation Nell, to a frail, slim lily growing from a heap of refuse, and the comparison seems to fit very well. There is some small amount of comedy, but even this is repressed by the tense action of the play. It is a large and well trained cast and the presentation is all that could be asked. It is hard to talk of Mrs. Fiske's "acting" in Salvation Nell. We forget that she acts at all. We cannot even talk naturally of the actress, but of the character. One is aware that the actress is inarticulate often, and that her choking enunciation, while admirably adapted to the role, carries realism to a dangerously obscure extreme. Yet despite all this, she—or rather Nell—holds us firm and fast until the refrain of those last drum beats, and we know that the struggle for two human souls has been won, and the sun shines even upon the pallid lily of the slums.

BELASCO—The Belasco Theatre company in Shore Acres is filling the house at every performance. This ever popular play of James A. Herne's is too well known to need comment. As produced by the present company it is excellent and every one in the long cast is well suited to his part. Louis F. Morrison, as Nathaniel Berry, has the first real part he has had since he joined the company. He shows that he is a most capable actor and we hope to see more of his work. DeWitt C. Jennings is good as Martin Berry. Howard Scott does a good bit of character work as Joel Gates. Florence Reed is cast as Helen Berry and Ida Lewis as Mrs. Berry, her mother. Dick Vivian is the young physician, Sam Warren. Master Peter Clancy, as young Nat Berry, does good work. The whole performance is most pleasing.

BURBANK—William Gillette's civil war play, Secret Service, is being presented by Mr. Morosco's company at the Burbank Theatre this week. The story of the play relates the exploits of Captain Thorne, a U. S. secret service agent who has secured a commission in the Confederate army. He meets and falls in love with Edith Varney, a loyal Southern girl. Thorne is suspected by his rival, Mr. Arlesford, and finally arrested, tried and condemned to death. Subsequently he is of course pardoned. A. Byron Beasley, as Arlesford, does the best work in the play. At best it is an ungracious role, but it hardly appears so in the hands of Mr. Beasley. William Desmond is seen in the Gillette part of Captain Thorne. It is rather strange to see Blanche Hall in an ingenue role, but she is very winning as Caroline Mitford. Miss Lovell Alice Taylor is cast as Edith Varney. Harry Mestayer plays the juvenile. Charles Giblyn is Lieutenant Maxwell, the part he created with Gillette. Others in the cast are William Yerance, John Burton, Louise Royce, Carol Marshall and Margo Duffet. The performance is all that can be desired.

MASON—John Drew in Jack Straw is the attraction at the Mason Opera House this week. Jack Straw is a light entertaining comedy by W. Somerset Maugham. Mr. Drew is all that we expect him to be in this little play; however, it is a little odd to see him in the role of a waiter. The story has to do with a Pomeranian grand duke en masque and in exile, and some newly rich people who are snobs. Mr. Drew is surrounded by a most able company which gives a most finished performance. The Mrs. Parker Jennings of Rose Cogilan is fine and Mary Boland is charming as Ethel Jennings. The rest of the cast is in good hands.

MAJESTIC—Lonesome Town, the best of the Kolb and Dill laugh producers, is filling the Majestic this week. The plot of the show has to do with the adventures of three tramps in the town of Watts, California. Sidney de Grey with Kolb and Dill are the tramps. Percy Bronson and Carlton Chase are promoters of the "dollar down, dollar a month lots." Ernest Van Pelt is the town constable; Adele Rafter is the dashing San Francisco widow and Marion Miller, the country girl. Among the musical numbers are Gee, but This Is a Lonesome Town, by the three tramps, The Yankee Soldier Boys by Carlton Chase, accompanied by a "stars and stripes" ballet, and two solos by Adele Rafter, Just Some One and When the Moon Plays Peek-a-boo. Lonesome town is a good show. The jokes are clever and clean, there is a plot and the chorus is much in evidence.

GRAND—Murray and Mack are putting on In Harvard for the second week. There are several new musical numbers introduced this week and there are also new members in the company. The whole piece has been improved and it goes more smoothly than the first week.

ORPHEUM—There are five new acts on the Orpheum bill for the week. At the head we have the Russel Bros. These two men, in Our Servant Girls, impersonate the familiar Irish type of household boss. The act is aided by Flora Russell, a toe dancer of ability and beauty. The Five Juggling Normans do marvelous things with ordinary Indian clubs. Frederick Allen, with Bertha Van Norman and a small company, present His Phantom Sweetheart, a dainty playlet with a large sympathetic interest. Francini-Oloms, with a page, does a musical stunt quite out of the ordinary. He is a concertinist and xylophonist, a juggler and an acrobat. The Avedano Quartet appear in high class musical selections, both classical and popular. The holdovers include Angela Dolores and her company in Cupid at Home; La Valera; the Melnotte Twins, and Clay Smith.

LOS ANGELES—We do not see the mysterious Apache dance at the Los Angeles this week, thanks to the discreet censorship of our police. However, we do see some kind of a dance by Hesse and Mariette, the only fault of which is its brevity. The Monetta Five have cultivated voices and sing and play attractively. El Barto (the Hermann of today) mystifies his audience with his tricks. Cowboy Williams juggles darts and cannon balls as if he enjoyed it. Carlisle and England appear in a singing number and Lewis and Young sing and dance. Moving pictures complete a very good bill.

EMPIRE—Colored performers, a full brass band, motion pictures and illustrated songs by Al Franks, make up a lively bill which Manager Fulkerson offers to Empire patrons this week. The colored actors present A Trip to Africa, a musical comedy full of fun and crisp songs. The Band Plays Dixie is stirringly sung by Lucindy and eight Dixie students, and the ragtime opera number, All Hail to the King, is pleasing. The brass band plays every evening in front of the theatre.

UNIQUE—Hentz and Zallee, managers of the Unique, have decided to add vaudeville to their bill, and this week there are three high class sets on the program. The comedy company has a one-act play entitled The Princess and the Rose. The scene is laid on the Island of Booley Poo. Those in the cast include Denton Vane, Jack Martin, Miss Baumann and Miss Parker. Miss Winnie Baldwin, the new member of the company, plays the part of Kibosh, the court jester. Miss Irene Earle sings an illustrated song, and motion pictures complete the bill. The orchestra is under the direction of L. Isaac DuMarr, who is well known in musical circles. There are several interpolated songs in the play for the week.

WALKER—The Walker bill this week is headed by Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Lissenden in an act replete with music and comedy. Elmer Lissenden, in immaculate evening dress, spins a few dialect yarns. Jennie Lissenden charms with vocal and instrumental numbers of her own composition. Kathrynne Wayne has a novelty offering, closing her act singing La Paloma in Spanish, with a Spanish dance, beautifully costumed. R. LeRoy Carroll wins much applause and laughter by his caricatures of prominent persons. He closes his performance by drawing with his feet. Madaline Rowe has a sweet voice and dances pleasingly. Dixie Christy is a diminutive miss with a pretty Southern dialect, who plays on a variety of instruments. Joseph Manley sings the late New York success, Let's Get the Umpire's Goat. Beatrice Whitney is a character comedienne who effectively talks her songs.

REGAL—The bill at the Regal for the week includes the Grace Sisters; C. Woodward and trick dog, Girlic; Dorothy Walker, who whistles and sings. Ransom's orchestra and motion pictures conclude a very good performance. FLORENCE BATTERY.

Herr Fischer has given his present company their notice and will after next week show San Francisco a brand new musical comedy company.

The Ed Redmond stock of San Jose is presenting The Fatal Card this week and giving a most pleasing performance. Charley Gunn, Griffith Wray, Ed Redmond and Alta Phipps have the principal characters.

Correspondence

PHILADELPHIA, May 30.—Lyric (Messrs. Shubert, mgrs.)—The sorrows and tribulations of a poor manicure girl, with the laudable determination to remain straight when her gay companions are wearing fine clothes, decking themselves in jewelry and riding in automobiles on a few dollars a week, furnish the motive of the plot set forth in The Narrow Path, a new play by John Montague, which came to light at the Lyric this week. The piece is down to the level of cheap melodrama and is plainly an effort to imitate such recent productions as The Fighting Hope and The Easiest Way, but has been too poorly done to have much weight or chance of success. Its author has followed the latest idea of small casts and a single stage setting, and has, in trying to be true to life, been merely outspoken and vulgar in a way that repulses rather than attracts. The acting of the members of the cast was of the kind that does much to make even a poor play enjoyable. Ida Conquest's personal charm and emotional ability enabled her almost to become convincing at times, while Frederick Perry and George Parsons did about all that was possible with the parts of the hero and the villain, respectively. The play is in three acts. Chestnut Street Theatre (Grant D. Lafferty, mgr.)—That very vigorous protest against the follies of the socially elect, The Walls of Jericho, by Alfred Sutro, which was made successful by J. K. Hackett a few seasons ago, was presented by the Orpheum players this week. The drama, which is in four acts with an English setting, is not easy to handle and requires feats of memory, the speaking lines being very numerous, but the Orpheum players moved smoothly and satisfactorily through its various complications, giving it with surprising forcefulness and effective snap and energy. William Engersoll makes Jack Frobisher a vibrant character who, when he returned to his manly role, carried everything before him by sheer strength of will power, shattering the superficialities which but hedged and tormented him. As Lady Alethea, Marion Barney is a typical society butterfly until awakened to better things by her husband. Miss Barney has had few roles in which she has appeared to better advantage. Leah Winslow, Kathleen McDonnell, Geo. D. Parker and Peter Lang have good roles. Garrick (Frank P. Howe, Jr., mgr.)—The Boy and the Girl at the Garrick Theatre is continuing to attract large audiences. Marie Dressler, the star, scores with her amusing songs, and she makes a great deal of fun by reason of her generous physical endowment. The show moves to New York next week. National (J. H. Kelly, mgr.)—S. H. Dudley in the musical show, The Hottest Coon in Dixie, is playing to good houses all week. This house will remain dark until August. Many good acts are to be found at Keith's this week, Annette Kellerman being the headliner. The Girl from Yama, which closes Saturday evening after a run of four weeks at the Walnut Street Theatre, adds another failure to Aaron's summer score. It really is too bad. Mary Boland, who has been playing with John Drew, was operated upon for appendicitis in Omaha. Happy

Jack Gardner will be one of Primrose's minstrels. There will be a season of French plays at the Adelphi, London, shortly. Eva Tanguay (Mrs. Edward Darling) will shortly appear in London. Tom Nawn acted Pat and the Genii in Salt Lake City last week. Advertisements have been banished from all Orpheum circuit curtains.

CALVIN M. FRANKLIN:

SALT LAKE CITY, June 1.—Salt Lake Theatre—After a successful week with John Drew and Ethel Barrymore, Montaville Flowers will present a series of plays, following which the Salt Lake Theatre will devote itself to local talent. Sybella White Clayton, a most talented young lady, lately returned from success abroad, will give a musical treat which is looked forward to by music-lovers. Colonial Theatre—Elinor Glynn's sensational play, Three Weeks, will be presented during the present week. It will undoubtedly draw large houses. The Orpheum closed for the season last week. The closing bill was a good finish to a most successful season. Grand Theatre—Mrs. Fiske in her success, Salvation Nell, is drawing well at the Grand. Salvation Nell is a most interesting play and is strictly American in its nature.

GLEN SMYTH:

MODESTO, June 8.—Terry McKean's players, who opened a stock engagement at the Glory Airdome last evening, more than made good with the large audience that was present, despite the chilliness of the evening. The company is one of the best popular-priced organizations that has ever appeared in this city. The play presented, The American, has no sensational incidents, but is full of delightful dialogue and interesting situations, which were made the most of by the company. Walter Newman, the leading man, is an actor of much class and appears to great advantage in this play. Bertha Foltz, although cast for a part that did not require much work, showed herself to be possessed of great ability, and her appearance in heavier roles will be looked forward to with pleasure. There was not a weak spot in the cast, Harry Belmour, Grace Johnson, Etta Delmas, Carrol Ashburn and the others all doing fine work. The stage settings were a revelation, the new scenery showing up well and every detail in regard to stage properties and fixtures showing careful attention. The Airdome would be a credit to a much larger town than Modesto, and gives us a summer amusement place enjoyed by few towns in the interior.

LONG BEACH, June 7.—Manager Frank Clarke of the Bye-a-Wyle Theatre opened a special season of musical farce last night with the Allen Curtis company in Jakey, Mikey and Ikey. The piece was one big, long, enthusiastic hit.

CHICO, June 3.—The end of the season here is in sight. The Burgomaster played here last night to small house. When Love Is Young comes 19, which will probably be the last attraction of the summer.

OAKLAND, June 8.—This is farewell week at Ye Liberty, as most of the regular members of the Bishop stock company will conclude their engagements with the final performance of Heidelberg, which is the attraction at this house. Never before has the old company appeared to such fine advantage, and the leave-taking will be accompanied with many a pang of sorrow on the part of the Liberty patrons. Landers Stevens in the role of Karl Heinrich was thoroughly at home. Henry Shumer was once more seen in the character of Dr. Jutner, and repeated his former successes. As the hilarious student, Von Asterberg, George Friend was very pleasing, while the comedy work of Elmer Booth as the innkeeper was the occasion of much laughter. Helen Holmes was seen here for the first time as Kathie and was the equal of any who previously essayed the part. The production taken as a whole was more than satisfactory and the attendance throughout the week was all that could be expected. Next week Fabio Romani will be presented by a special company headed by James Keane, and then the new Bishop company will make their appearance in The Girl from the Golden West. At the Broadway, When the Bell Tolls, a thrilling melodrama with an abundance of blood-stirring events and thrilling incidents, is creating much noise and is getting a fair share of patronage. Priscilla Knowles in the leading female role does by far the best work, while creditable performances are also given by Roy Clements, Al Hallett and Al Dickinson. Preparations are being made for the appearance next week of Landers Stevens and Georgie Cooper. Raffles has been selected for their initial production. Mabel Riegelman, an Oakland girl, who for the past three years has been a prominent member of the Stetten opera company in Germany, gave a concert at the Macdonough, 8th, to a large and exceedingly enthusiastic audience. That Miss Riegelman is a coming star in the operatic world is the opinion of all. Good business and a fine bill is Manager Ebey's report at the Orpheum. Lew Sully in his unique monologue is the big hit, and some clever specialties are presented by Hawthorne and Burt, Flo Adler, the Lulu Beeson Trio, Peter Donald and Meta Carson, Countess Rossi and M. Paulo, Baader-LaVelle Trio, Johnson and Wells. This is the final week of Pat Conway's band at Idora, and commencing the 10th the Navassars will give daily concerts. Piff Paff Pouf is booked at the Macdonough, 14, and John Drew, 15-17. The Bell is presenting a strong bill this week and is doing its customary fine business; the other 5 and 10 cent houses are doing fairly well. The Heart of Maryland will be the Fourth of July attraction at Ye Liberty and The Regeneration in the near future.

LOUIS SCHEELINE.

NEW YORK, June 6.—The Narrow Path, by John Montague, which made its bow on Monday night at the Hackett Theatre, also made its last appearance at the same time, although this was not known until Tuesday night. The play was condemned in all of the newspapers on Tuesday, and Ray Comstock and Al Woods, who also own The Girl from Rector's, decided at 3 o'clock in the afternoon to take the piece off. "We have paid off the company and that ends the matter," said Mr. Woods Tuesday night. "The newspapers all said that the play was immoral and of course we would not keep it on the stage." Henry B. Harris, who owns the Hackett Theatre, may have had something to do with ending The Narrow Path. He sent to James K. Hackett, lessee of the theatre a notice saying that "decency and the preservation of public morals" demanded the withdrawal of the play. * * * A large and appreciative audience last week at the old Academy of Music greeted the renewal of the Sothern-Marlowe partnership in its performance of Romeo and Juliet. There was plenty of applause, so that, though the two stars, although receiving the major portion, left some for other characters, and especially the Mercutio of Frederick Lewis, the Peter of Rowland Buckstone, and the Nurse of Ina Goldsmith came in for a generous portion. It was well on toward midnight that the play was brought to a close. * * * Marie Dressler blossomed forth at the Aerial Gardens on the roof of the New Amsterdam Theatre last Monday night as a harbinger of the silly season. Everybody laughed with Marie and hip-hipped for her many songs. The show is called The Boy and the Girl, and is by Richard Carle. Composer H. L. Hertz wrote the music. The additional lyrics are by M. E. Bourke. The additional music is by none other than Richard Carle. Gus Sohlke, the wizard from the West, who sent Bessie McCoy to fame in the yama-yama, staged the music numbers and ensembles. The play is produced by Charles Marks. And down in the orchestra pit Arthur Weld himself. In the cast are Barney Bernard, Bob Barberetto, whom the program now calls Burrell Barberette, Marie Dressler and Harriet Standon, who is the girl of the piece. Miss Standon, helped a bit by Bob Barberetto, had a song called Katie, Come and Kiss Me, that will bear out the program legend of Richard Carle's Whistling Show. A rollicking Spanish number called Y-la, sung by Miss Dressler, will also be played by the street pianos, without a doubt, under your windows during the coming summer months. * * * Hammerstein's farmyard and Victoria Roof Garden opened last week. It was a great night for animals. When you weren't looking at a prima donna scurrying through the clouds on horseback with the lightning playing about her voice, or a Cleopatra dancing around with a python-looking snake done up as a headdress on her hair, you could stroll out in the open part of the roof, under the starry heavens and in the moonlight and gaze on Nature as she really is. For out there amid castles and windmills and moats and bridges and farmhouses real ducks were swimming in the water and a real cow was being milked by a real milkmaid, and there was a sort of menagerie with one monkey in it and a possum. And then also you could see nature at her best—no, her worst—when Farmer Wilke of Red Oak, Iowa, exhibited a bunch of whiskers, real whiskers—he'd let you pull 'em—twelve feet long. It was an auspicious opening of the open-air season. A large audience enjoyed a good many of the regular vaudeville acts in the glass-enclosed garden proper. * * * Not content with its heralded slogan, "Everything new but the ocean," the Greater Dreamland management at Coney Island, is providing more novelties for the crowds. The ocean promenade has been entirely redecorated, while up the beach 3,000 new bath houses await those who will inaugurate the surf season. A new ride, called the Rigamarole, has been installed. To the already big free circus will be added the Five Piroscoffis, novelty jugglers, who have been imported from Paris for the park. Yesterday the eighth annual dog show of the Long Island Kennel Club opened in Greater Dreamland. There is always something new being added to the big show in Bostock's arena. Bonavita is making great progress with the lion Roosevelt, which was turned over to him green from the jungle at the opening of the park. The elephant Star and the talking ape and the clowns give the arena plenty of comedy. An advent in the animal world occurred last Monday, when three cubs were born to Jennie, who is the lioness mate of Wallace, who has been with Bostock's show for fourteen years. These cubs were christened yesterday. * * * Palisades Amusement Park, the summer resort opposite 130th Street (N. Y.) ferry, opened for the season on yesterday, with a full line of amusements with which to entertain its patrons. The park is one of the most picturesque spots on the Hudson River, overlooking New York city. Much money has been spent in new buildings since last year, and in size Palisades Park will compare favorably with any of the other outdoor amusement places. The attractions for the opening include daily flights of an airship, a musical comedy in an open-air theatre, called The Widow Winnie Wynne. There is a free menagerie, a free circus and a Wild West show. An enormous dancing pavilion is just nearing completion and is expected to be ready soon. * * * Fred-eric Thompson, Luna Park's proprietor, has delved into the carnival spirit. Many new features have just been added to the long list of attractions. For one thing the free circus over the lagoon in the centre of the park has been enlarged by several acts of international fame until it ranks as one of the best thirty-minute circuses in existence. The witching waves and the chutes are as popular as ever, and the new features are appreciated.

Ethel Barrymore's Leading Man

Bruce McRae is Ethel Barrymore's leading man this season in Lady Frederick, the three-act comedy by W. Somerset Maugham in which Charles Frohman presents Miss Barrymore at the Van Ness Theatre. Mr. McRae, who is conceded to be one of the best leading men of the present generation, was born in London. His father was a surgeon in the English army, and, as the name would imply, a Scotchman, while his mother was English. His uncle is Sir Charles Wyndham. After an early childhood passed in India, where his father was stationed, and later in England, he was sent, when a lad ten years old, to a military school at Boulogne-sur-Mer, France, where he remained until he was sixteen. He then went to New Zealand and engaged in cattle ranching, after which, having become a skilled surveyor, he spent five years in Australia, opening up government reservations for pioneer settlers. Mr. McRae came to this country in 1890, and for a year was in charge of a cattle ranch at Fort Laramie, Wyoming. He then came East and decided to follow an actor's career. He made his debut October 5, 1891, at Proctor's Twenty-third Street Theatre in New York in Sardou's Thermidor, in the support of Elsie De Wolf and Forbes Robertson. After appearing in the support of various stars and creating the role of Dr. Watson in Sherlock Holmes, Mr. McRae became Miss Barrymore's leading man. In her support he has played the following parts: 1902, Mr. Leipsic in Carrots and Archibald Vyse in A Country Mouse; 1903, Heath Desmond in Cousin Kate; 1904, Colonel Brinthorpe in Sunday and Torvald Helmer in A Doll's House; 1905, Colonel Grey in Alice Sit-by-the-Fire, and 1906, the title role in Captain Jinks of the Horse Marines, Jones in The Silver Box, and Sir Montague Martin in His Excellency the Governor. This season in Lady Frederick, Miss Barrymore's new play, Mr. McRae is appearing as Paradine Fouldes.

HOWARD FOSTER WRITES: Salt Lake City, June 2.—I have been with this company now for six weeks. It is the Willard Mack stock, but since Mr. Mack's illness Mr. Stuart has been playing leads and directing. The company is an exceptionally good one. Miss Mary Hall being leading woman and T. N. Heffron and Anna Cleveland are playing the leading heavies. Other members of the company are Arling Alcine, Lee Millar, Wm. Donovan, Joe Kennedy, Oscar Briggs, Wm. Harris, Jack Armstrong, Gattie Gates and Ruth Perry. At the Rainbow's End was the offering last week. The piece is a new western drama by Franklyn Fyles and Ralph Stuart. It was elaborately staged and proved to be one of the best liked of the many productions the Willard Mack company has put on in this city. Ralph Stuart in the principal role of Kit Carson added to his already widespread popularity. It would be hard to imagine two more popular leads than Mr. Stuart and Miss Hall. The Christian is the bill for this week, with A Courier to the King to follow. Mr. Stuart makes of John Storm a fine, manly fellow, while Miss Hall as Glory Quayle is immense. Miss Cleveland's Polly Love is one of the best things she has done since she opened with the company.

who have witnessed the change of bill weekly at the Garrick during the past five weeks will regret the departure of Jim Post and his Buty Korus. They have certainly endeared themselves to the theatre going people of San Diego. Their stay here has been of a most pleasant character. Jim (as we all call him) has given us more than he promised as he has caused us all to split our sides with laughter over his quaint, honest and inimitable portrayal of the Irish character. As for the girls they have by their most excellent work and splendid deportment both on and off the stage set an example that will be most difficult to follow. The Post company came and we were conquered and now that the farewell hour has arrived it finds us all full of regret at their departure. The only consolation that is afforded us is the promise from Mr. Post that he and his splendid company will come again. One word more and I am done. The engagement has been an exceedingly pleasant and profitable one and to my old friend Jim and to each member of his company I extend my warmest thanks for the many pleasant hours spent with them and my best wishes go with them wherever they are called. Come again, Jim, the Garrick is always open to you. Yours fraternally—J. M. Dodge, Manager Garrick Theatre, San Diego, California.

Florence Roberts

San Francisco has enthroned many theatrical favorites in its heart, but none has achieved quite the fervor of worship nor the pinnacle of importance as has Florence Roberts, who returns to old friends at the Alcazar next Monday in a superb production of Du Barry. Miss Roberts will be with us for twelve weeks and in that period she will be seen in a series of strong emotional dramas, and with an occasional comedy, by way of change. Acknowledged generally to be the greatest of our emotional actresses, Florence Roberts is also pre-eminent as a comedienne. In this city, as throughout the West, particularly, a Florence Roberts season means a series of artistic triumphs and tremendous business.

Personals

COL. BILL STORMER, who has been piloting Ghosts over the Coast, decided to call in the show last Sunday.

The Harry Hollingsworth company that closed in Eureka last Sunday, after only a fair engagement, opens at the Lyric in San Bernardino next Monday for an indefinite season.

GEORGE MCSWEGAN, the popular young assistant treasurer of the Van Ness Theatre, is back at his post, after a two weeks' seclusion brought about by the mumps.

SIR EDWARD and Lady Moss were among the passengers who arrived from the Orient last week. Sir Edward is one of the leading men in the theatrical business in England. He built and established the London Hippodrome before the New York amusement place of the same type and name was thought of. His houses are given over to vaudeville entirely, and have made a pronounced success.

The Eckhardt stock company opened at the Columbia Theatre in Boise, June 7, in Strongheart. For the week of June 14, in the Bishop's Carriage will be presented. Mr. Eckhardt is giving a lot of high-class plays and should reap a harvest. In the company are Noel Travers, Alfred Mathews, Ralph Russell, Rupert Drum, Oliver Eckhardt, Fred Allen, E. F. Hawkins, Morris Arthur, Whit Brandon, Jos. Sullivan, Henry Thompson, Harry Edwards, Robert White, William Bernard, Josephine Deffry, Blanche Bryant, Georgia A. Nichols and Lou Keller.

Correspondence

SACRAMENTO, June 10.—The Clunie will have the Princess Theatre Opera Company in Piff, Paff, Pouff, 15, and John Drew in Jack Straw, 19. The Del Lawrence Co. closes at the Grand, 12, for the summer, returning Sept. 1st. This week they are playing The Walls of Jericho. Del Lawrence and his leading woman, Jane Kelton, are to be married at the close of their season. The Grand Theatre opens, 13, as a five and ten-cent vaudeville house, with the following: Kelly and Violet, the Fashion Plates; Tannehill and Rodloff, The Tenderfoot on Trail; Maye and Rowe, comedy sketch artists; Frank Maloone, singer and dancer; the Stadium Trio, experts on Roman rings; the Grandoscope. The latest attraction here is the ostrich farm on Tenth and W. Pantages has for this week: La Loie Helene, pantomime dance, The Death of Cleopatra; Pedersen Bros., comedy link act; Walter Montague & Co., in The Under Dog; Dan J. Harrington, ventriloquist; Two Dandies, singers and dancers; Scott and Whaley, comedians, and Harry de Lain, singer.

SAN DIEGO, June 9.—Garrick (J. M. Dodge, mgr.): Raymond Teal and his company opened Monday night in Variety Isle, and if the large crowds that greet them nightly are any criterion, they have more than made good. At the company's head is Wm. B. Friedlander, who wrote the book, words and music of Variety Isle. Mr. Friedlander is a natural comedian, who has an original personality, and who will become a great favorite here. Cash Night, the second comedian, also is above the average in his line. Max Steinle, an old favorite, is with the company. The feminine contingent includes Rose Bunnin, who has a very good voice; Nan Halperin, one of the cutest and hardest working sou-brettes we have seen in many a day; Corinne Carkeek, Mattie Hyde, Grace Wolf, Nan Constance and Elsie Hunter. The chorus is well dressed and are capable as singers and dancers. Between the acts Evelyn Constance delighted with a couple of songs, and Raymond Teal entertained with his own inimitable monologue. Pickwick (Scott A. Palmer, mgr.): The Armstrong Musical Comedy Company in The Oolah is the offering at the Pickwick this week. This is an Oriental comedy, beautifully staged and costumed. Billy Onslow, the new comedian, has a good part in Hooligan, the Oolah, and he makes the most of it. He is ably assisted by Ethel Davis as Hippipoora, Barney Williams as the Kadi, Leonora Hollister as Jim Jeff, Walter Spencer as a Prince, and Elma Elwood as the Kadi's wife. There are a number of catchy songs interpolated, namely, Put Me Among the Girls, by Walter Spencer and chorus; Hooligan, by Billy Onslow and chorus, with a unique electrical effect; Raining, by Ethel Davis; Cuddle Up a Little Closer, by Elma Elwood. Good business continues to rule. Queen (John Donnellan, mgr.): The show as presented this week at the Queen, under the new management, is an exceptionally good one, and the little theatre is once more doing deservedly big business. Frank Bush, the King of Monologue, heads the bill, and keeps the audiences in ecstasy of delight. The Quaker City Four provide a unique number, and is, undoubtedly, the best quartet heard here in many a week. The negro parson stunt by one of the four was ludicrous in the extreme. Ann Crewe scored with her sketch. My Lady Raffles. Norton and Russell have a lightning change of costume act that is little short of marvellous. Very good moving pictures conclude. Grand (Fred Ballien, mgr.): Mrs. Maude Evans, former wife of Naval Constructor Evans, is the headliner at the Grand this week. She sings two songs, namely I Want Someone to Call Me Dearie and Honeymooning. The balance of the bill consists of the following: Dawson and Whitfield, singing and dancing comedians Harland and Rollinson, musical act Walter Wilson, the dancing kid. Moving pictures conclude a good show. Empire (W. W. Bosley, mgr.): The National Four have a fair act. The Hill Sisters, song and dance artists, please. Eugene Leslie scored with If I Had a Thousand Lives to Live. Moving pictures conclude. Union and Bijou offer moving pictures and illustrated songs to fair business.

Van Ness Theatre

The Ethel Barrymore personality is a valuable asset. It doesn't matter very much in what guise that personality appears, it is a drawing card. And there is no striving for effect—that result comes with either a great art or without effort. It doesn't matter from which source. In Lady Frederick, her present vehicle, Miss Barrymore is her usual delightful, frank and unruffled self. In other words, she plays quite as easily and without effort as does the author develop his play. In fact, facility seems to be characteristic of both the actress and the playwright. Our first glimpse of the Maugham style of comedy building was given in Jack Straw. It was a pleasing little bubble, but Lady Frederick is more than that; it has some strong dramatic touches and most of the characters are clothed with real flesh and blood characteristics. The story has been told in these columns already, so it is only necessary to refer to the acting. Bruce McRae, as a middle-aged bachelor, has but very little to do, but that is done in good style. Mr. McRae is distinctly an actor of style, and we believe in a play of sufficient worth he will give a good account of himself. Here's hoping his first starring venture will turn out all right. Jessie Millward, in the supporting company, looms up largely as an actress of fine manner and ability. Arthur Elliott, too, is a man who has learned his business and is good to see. Norman Tharp is a fine looking and pleasing juvenile and Orlando Daly, as the near villain, quite catches the author's intention. That splendid character woman, Anita Rothe, who has a sure grip on the finest comedy, is one of the big people in the play. She has only a bit, but develops that with unerring ability. Altogether, Lady Frederick is a most entertaining comedy and is attracting a most gratifying business.

Alcazar Theatre

Captioned as the great American play, Arizona continues to draw large houses at the Alcazar. The scenic investiture is all that one could desire in its depiction of Western environment, and from an atmospheric standpoint maintains the standard of Belasco productions. The writer was impressed with the realism of Glendinning's characterization, and if this clever youngster keeps his equilibrium he will be heard from. Louis Bennison, Bert Wesner, Fred Butler, Walter Belasco, Will Walling, John Maher, Evelyn Vaughan, Adele Belgarde, Louise Brownell and Effie Bond gave faithful depictions. Next week, Florence Roberts in Du Barry.

Valencia Theatre

Manager Walter Hoff Seeley has picked a big winner this week in The Colleen Bawn, the old Boucicault piece that has bobbed up regularly with Irish stars since the days of our fathers. The play is very much to the liking of the Valencia clientele and great outbursts of appreciation have met the efforts of the actors. Arthur Cunningham is seen to advantage as Myles the Coppaleen, and his singing especially is greatly appreciated. Paul McAllister shows himself to be a clever actor in the part of Hardress Cregan. George Osbourne, who created something of a sensation at the Wednesday matinee by slipping over to the Orpheum for a quiet and enjoyable afternoon, forgetting all about the mid-week matinee until he was routed out in double quick time, did the small part of Father Tom with good feeling. Robert Homans was a convincing Mr. Corrigan. Edmund Bracht, Edwin Clisbee, Gilmore Walker and Robert McKim handled the remaining male parts with sufficient ability. Edith Lyle played the part of Eily O'Connor with great charm and made a strong impression on her audience. Karra Kenwyn, who has recently returned to San Francisco after a long absence, played Mrs. Cregan, giving a spirited performance. Peggy Monroe was a most pleasing Kathleen Creagh and Grace Travers, as Ann Chute, and Anoinette Crawford as Ducie Blennerhasset, were capable.

Princess Theatre

The revival of The Umpire occupied the stage on Monday night, and was witnessed by a very good house, who showed their enthusiasm by hearty applause on every conceivable occasion. Fred Mace, who was "it," and who played Jimmie, the poor, unfortunate umpire, kept the audience in a continuous scream of laughter throughout the performance and certainly showed that he can more than vie with most of the comedians that visit the Coast. His old time song, Gee, Aint I Glad I'm Single, was received with just as much appreciation as on former occasions. The part of Ralph Carleton showed to great advantage under the capable handling of James F. Stevens, who won the favor of his audience in his songs, The Sun that Shines on Dixie Land and My Treasure, and he had to respond to repeated enthusiastic recalls. Budd Ross and Edwin T. Emery were well cast as the Hon. Shifty Goode and J. Stanley Lewton. May Boley plays the part of Maribel, the frivolous daughter of Lewton, which she handles most entertainingly. In her two songs and in the "scrimmage" scene, in which latter she and the chorus don football togs, she worked the audience up into almost riotously expressed appreciation. Zoe Barnett, as Edith Proby, the chic American divorcee, again proved herself a finished actress. Lady Fitzhugh and James, the bellboy, were in the capable hands of Helen Darling and Jennie Metzler, who made the most of their opportunity. One of the most notable features of the performance was the excellent work the chorus did, particularly worthy of mention being the male chorus in James Stevens' song, The Sun that Shines on Dixie Land. On account of this being their farewell week, previous to their engagement in Los Angeles, a repertoire has been arranged as follows: Piff, Paff, Pouff, Tuesday and Friday and Sunday matinee and night; The Umpire Thursday and Saturday nights, and Peggy from Paris, Wednesday night and Saturday matinee.

W. R. Dailey has secured the exclusive rights from the Sea Beach company of Santa Cruz for the installing of an immense Midway at the Casino. Mr. Dailey will also have personal charge of the amusements during the summer.

PHILADELPHIA, June 6.—The Rose of the Rancho had a sumptuous revival at the Chestnut by the Orpheum players, who, in its production added another success to their long list. The Rose of the Rancho was presented with the original scenery and costumes which made the earlier production of the romantic play a notable achievement of stage craft. The leading role fell to Marion Barney, who gave a charming portrayal of Juanita, and William Ingersoll, who, in the character of Kearney, gave a strikingly dramatic performance. Robert Cummings, who returned to the Orpheum players, was seen as the cunning Kincaid. Peter Lang was admirable as Padre Antonio, and gave a splendid piece of character work. Leah Winslow was the haughty Sonora Castro-Kenton, and George D. Parker was at his best as Don Luis. The whole performance was given under the direction of Percy Hunter, who assisted Mr. Belasco in making the original production a success. The Girl from Yama continues at the Walnut, where this merry musical comedy, with its many bright features, has made a hit. Trixie Friganza is a recent and noteworthy addition to the cast. At the Bijou, Billy Watson and his stock burlesque company give a lively show with In Arizona as the first part and The Original Girl in Red as a special feature. The Gaiety also has a permanent stock burlesque organization with two new travesties and a number of special attractions. Even a spirit jaded with entertainment could find little fault with the quality of the bill at Keiths this week. Annette Kellerman, styled the Diving Venus, whose sinuous grace, litheness and agility, revealed in marvelous aquatic feats, won the admiration of large crowds last week, is still the leading attraction. One of the best of the new acts is a rural skit by Mr. and Mrs. Jimmy Barry. An audience of fully 5,000 persons attended the opening of the Hippodrome Monday evening, a new amusement place on the old grounds of the Athletic Ball Club. Frank Dumont, who has recently stepped off the amusement stage of Philadelphia and turned over the old minstrel house, the Eleventh Street Opera House, to William J. Gane, will leave Monday morning to join Lew Dockstader's company in St. Louis. He will have entire charge of the stage for Mr. Dockstader and direct all the shows. When the show closes for the season he will leave for Europe on an extended tour. He has been connected with the old Opera House since 1882. Ezra Kendall has gone to his home in Cleveland to work upon a new version of The Vinegar Buyer. Maclyn Arbuckle has changed the title of his new play from Squire Phin to The Circus Man. Max Freeman will support Robert Edeson in The Noble Spaniard. Harry Lauder will make his American appearance under William Morris' management October 4. The Love Cure will be produced at the Apollo Theatre, Atlantic City, August 18. Maude Adams has within the week declined an offer of $50,000 to act Joan of Arc before a motion picture camera. Dainty Virginia Hennings, who is a great favorite throughout the East, and recently connected with ingenue roles for the Stanford and Western stock company at the Empire Theatre, will take a short vacation and possibly enter the vaudeville field for the summer months. Her absence will be greatly missed by the patrons of this house. Miss Hennings, who is Mrs. Walter D. Mahm in private life, is an actress whose talent is by no means narrow, being very original in all her work and possessing the adaptability of always pleasing her audience. Besides her talent of elocution, she possesses a fine singing voice. Should Miss Hennings enter the vaudeville field this summer there is no doubt but what she will please and when the fall comes around again she will find a grand welcome in store for her by the patrons of the Empire. The correspondent for the DRAMATIC REVIEW wishes her health, happiness and prosperity during her absence and hopes to enjoy her entertaining work this coming season.

CALVIN M. FRANKLIN.

SEATTLE, WASH., June 7.—Moore Theatre: The Merry Widow entered upon its second week, playing to a crowded house last night. Grand Theatre: The summer season has opened at the Grand, with Ferris Hartman and his company, who were seen yesterday in The Mayor of Tokio. The piece is bright and tuneful, and Mr. Hartman in the character of Kidder pleased a large audience. Seattle Theatre: Emma Bunting and her company are seen in Only a Shop Girl this week, a thrilling melodrama, which played to capacity houses yesterday. Lois Theatre: The Road to Yesterday was seen for the first time in Seattle yesterday and proved to be a very entertaining and novel play. As presented by the Pantages players, it is an extremely creditable production. Orpheum: The new bill, which begins today, is headed by Laddie Cliff, the young English singer, dancer and comedian. The three Leightons present A One-Night Stand in Minstrelsy, an act full of laughs. The Eight Original Madcaps are famous as one of the greatest dancing acts on the stage. Max Witt's Singing Coleens are a feminine quartet. Ollie Young and Brothers are hoop rollers, boomerang throwers and diablo players. Gartelle Brothers have an act called Skatorialism, and Evans and Lloyd present their sketch, Turning the Tables, in which they have made a big success. At Pantages Monday, the Pantages All-Star Road Show, organized under the personal direction of Manager Alex Pantages, is seen. It is composed of Glascock's three educated elephants, featuring the baby elephant, Little Mike; Buch Bros., comedy acrobatic bounding act; Roberts, Hayes and Roberts, singing, dancing and comedy act; Harry Van Fossem, late of the Al G. Field's Minstrels; the Princess Wladeneroff, Hungarian and Russian singing and dancing; Edward Barnes, rag-time pianist. At the Star: Onaip, magician and hypnotist, is the big act. Other new acts include Mabel Carew, character singer; Gillihan and Murphy, The Unexpected; Ramsey Sisters, and moving pictures.

Mrs. Florence Gillis, wife of A. W. Gillis, secretary of the Lois Theatre, died Monday from burns received Sunday through the overturning of an alcohol lamp.

The Orpheum

There is any quantity of comedy on the bill this week—and the show, all in all, is one that is decidedly pleasing. The star feature, from the laugh standpoint, is the Ellis-Nowlan burlesque circus. It is one long joyous gale of laughter, with the best worked-up burlesque features ever presented. Besides there is a troupe of genuine, fine acrobats, and Ella Nowlan, a plump, but unusually graceful and pleasing contortionist, to say nothing of the really funny antics of Nat Ellis. A close second is the familiar sketch by Claude Gillingwater—A Strenuous Rehearsal—which is played by the author and Teresa Dale in the leading parts. Mr. Gillingwater is a legitimate comedian of sane and pleasing methods, and Miss Dale is both a handsome woman and a clever performer. Billy Van, the one-time minstrel end man, has a new batch of stories that met with a pleasing reception. The Vindobonas with their comedy musical act were satisfying, and Pellaton and Foran in their sketch, A Spotless Reputation, were good, even though the sketch was a little too strong in its reiteration and a little too evident in its appeal to that badly over-worked description called heart interest. Cheridah Simpson appears in the more or less entertaining feature which is called just now a pianologue. Miss Simpson, who is noted for her hard work in comic opera, gets her money easily with this act. Mabel Hite and Mike Donlin repeat their last week's skit—Stealing Home, and the Novelty Dancing Four, Hughes and Mazie and Raymond and Hall, contribute a dancing number that is a joy to watch, so graceful and proficient are the participants. Very pleasing are the moving pictures, which show some unusual views of ice floes and sky color effects in the Land of the Midnight Sun.

The National

Manager Sid Grauman has a bunch of clever talent on tap this week, and first to be mentioned should be The Last of the Regiment, which is one of the prettiest acts of its kind seen on any local stage in some time. It is a story in song with a black-face funmaker and a cracker-jack Irish comedian to take care of the comedy. All have voices of decided merit, and the harmony is superb. The stage setting is extremely picturesque, and combines to make the act most pleasing. Bert Shepard, the Australian whip manipulator, displays marvelous accuracy in the handling of his whips. The act is an absolute novelty, and Sheppard's work is thrilling, surprising and most entertaining. Chiquita, the diminutive Cuban, is, as ever, an interesting little entertainer, with her songs and dances. Stepp, Mehlinger and King, billed as the College Trio, are three clever boys, who contribute some good singing and instrumental selections. Gaynell Everette spells class when it comes to clog dancing. Saona, as an impersonator of famous characters, past and present, proves most interesting. His impersonation of Robt. E. Lee, General Grant and the martyred McKinley being exceptionally good. Anderson and Bert have a laugh producer in the vehicle, Home, Sweet Home. The comedy situations are good and not overdrawn. Harry Burgoyne's—London's great Coster singer—efforts are clever and thoroughly enjoyable. A Swiss yodler and the usual classy motion pictures complete a program far above the average.

The Wigwam

This week's offering is, as usual, high class in every particular. The four Dordeens present their sensational and thrilling casting act. Their work is marvelously clever, and the apparent ease with which their work is accomplished compels admiration. Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Forbes, assisted by George Alexander, are an appetizing feature of the program in A Wild Rose, which contains plenty of good clean comedy. The act calls for clever acting of a finished nature, and is capably taken care of in the hands of these clever artists. Dick Richards and Mildred Glover, in some good comedy singing and piano playing, are well received. Cal Stewart, with a fund of laugh-provoking Rube yarns, keeps the audience in a continual titter. Will Oakland is another big hit on the bill, his superb contra-tenor voice is a delightful feature in the rendering of old-time songs. Some singing and clever tumbling is contributed by Miller and Tempest. Fox and Crystal, as Hebrew comedians, manage to get a few laughs. The motion pictures are, as usual, high class and interesting and complete a splendid program.

Pantages-Empire

The star attraction for this week is a pantomime act entitled Les Apaches de Paris, introducing the widely discussed Apache dance, which is interpreted by Minnie Amato and Mon Aurelio Coccio. The scene is laid in a tavern (saloon) in a low quarter of Paris, where the Apaches (young thugs) and women of the underworld, who generally support them. There is a slight plot running through the sketch, which is all acted out in pantomime, excepting a song by Mlle. Amato. The dance, which is the feature of the act, is merely a fac-simile (with several intricate and acrobatic steps interpolated) of what may be seen in the slums of our own city any evening, one of those creations which many will go to see the second time and others leave before it is over. Both principals contribute clever work, and as a novelty and much-discussed subject, the Apache dance is proving a great drawing-card. Anita Primrose, an English music-hall artiste, is well received in several character monologue and song changes. Otto Schoda contributes several delightful and artistic selections on the violin. May Dur-yea, assisted by William Wagner, offers a one-act farce entitled The Imposter, which contains several amusing situations which are well handled. Edith and Sig Franz appear in a laughable trick bicycle riding turn, which includes some clever trick riding. The motion pictures are exceptionally good and complete an extremely satisfying and entertaining program.

First-class comedy was shown yesterday at four performances at the New Grand Theatre by the big Sullivan & Considine comedy road show playing here all the present week. The Seibert Lindley Company is the star act and puts on a humorous and entertaining little act entitled Her Own Mother, written specially for his own acting by S. S. Seibert. The turn was a good draw and the three that share the cast in it made themselves favorites at once.

The plentifulness of Italian opera singers in vaudeville makes a person feel pretty certain that the extensive advertising the safety razor people are doing is having a bad effect on the barber shops.
Sometimes it's not the act, "it's" the agent.

Independent---"No"--- Maybe

Judging from the tone of numerous flattering offers Archie Levy has received from (no names mentioned, I promised) several of the "Big Noises" it is doubtful whether Archie will be able to withstand the pressure that is being brought to bear on him to take the worry off some of their shoulders. A "to let" sign will probably be in evidence at 1643 Fillmore Street before we again go to press.

Fischer's

The attraction at this playhouse this week is a farcical musical comedy entitled The Pawnbroker. Although it does not contain any very great symptoms of a plot, it has an abundance of hilarious situations and catchy songs, which make quite a decided hit with the audience. Will King, as Abe Cohn, the Pawnbroker, has practically everything his own way, and before he opens his mouth is greeted with an outburst of applause. Ben T. Dillon has taken to the "skirts," and plays McCarthy Cohn, Abe's "fair" and "fearless" wife, which he does to much merriment. Charley Spooner and Cockeyed Mulligan were well handled by Tracy McDermott and Frank Vack, the former singing with great effect, Just Because I Couldn't Dance the Merry Widow Waltz. Dorothy Raymond, as Lucy, did some very good work, and in her pleasing manner captivated the audience in her song, Sweetheart. Maggie, the tough girl, could not have been in more capable hands than Nellie Montgomery's. The musical hit of the piece was Mildred Manning's song, I Want to Go and See the Minstrel Show, in which she had to respond to many encores.

The chorus was nimble and pleased very much. Before the main performance a reel of moving pictures was shown, one picture, The Italian School of Cavalry, being alone well worth the price of admission.

The Thalia

A free show is most always classed as a cheap proposition, not only because it is free, but the talent is generally considered cheap. All that is necessary to dispel that belief is to pay a visit to the Thalia, where some of the best acts in vaudeville can be found contributing their sincere efforts to the entertainment for which they receive as fat an envelope as they can get anywhere. Contrary to the prevailing opinion (as the Thalia is in the heart of the Barbary Coast), the performances are clean and wholesome and thoroughly enjoyed and appreciated by the capacity attendance which is always in evidence. The program always contains a wide range of variety and conscientious efforts are demanded of the performers. This week's roster is headed by the Four International Comiques, a quartette of clever acrobats, who are as laugh-provoking as they are clever.

Some clever stunts are offered by De Shiels in his bicycle wire act. Willet Chartres has a good voice, which she handles well in rendering several popular selections. Rose Stevens still continues to sing her way into greater popularity. Miss Stevens has a splendid voice, although she hits a trifle too high at times. Eva Rowland, in her original dance offering; Mlle. Lucille, in poses plastique, and Margaret Ruse continue to be popular favorites. The motion pictures are, as usual, good, and complete a big program.

Vaudeville Notes

Pleased and highly satisfied audiences continue to fill the spacious Star, and this week's offering is exceptionally strong. An old Mission favorite, namely Mazie Oliver, is accorded warm welcome by her many admirers, who remember her from the days when drama held the boards in this house. Miss Oliver and Ethel Alton present a highly dramatic sketch, entitled The Sacrifice. It is intensely interesting, and Miss Oliver is seen at her best in the heavy character and is accorded excellent support by Miss Alton. Lucie Lowry is a winner with a number of popular songs. Genero and Theol, contortionists and equilibrists, twist themselves into the good graces of the audience. Grant and Pony are a clever singing and talking team. Gennie Reed and her pickaninnies are an enjoyable feature of the bill. The strenuous work of Joe Fanton on the Roman rings is a clever offering of its kind. Olive Reed has a sweet voice for the illustrated songs, which make them thoroughly enjoyable.

Matt Keefe, the popular yodeler, is taking the rest cure this week. Matt will probably fill another engagement before leaving this city for the East.

De Moine Seibert, Gavin Dorothy and Alice Lindley are playing the Sullivan-Considine Circuit, appearing with great success in a laugh-producing comedy entitled Her Own Mother, written expressly for the former by S. S. Seibert, copyrighted and fully protected. Last week the act met with big success at the Grand, Portland. Week of June 14th it will be seen at the National.

Bernard Wolf opened his Aerodome in San Anselmo last Sunday to big attendance. Plans are now being drawn for a permanent house to be devoted to moving pictures and vaudeville.

The Orpheum

It is difficult to conceive a better program than that announced at the Orpheum next week. Adelaide, the dainty American danseuse, popularly known as La Petite Adelaide, and one of the most accomplished toe dancers in this country, will present a terpsichorean act entitled The Bill Poster's Dream, in which she will have the assistance of four handsome and clever coryphees. Elizabeth M. Murray will reappear after too long an absence and delight with her Irish and coon ditties, which she renders in a manner that is simply inimitable and irresistible in its humor. Mildred Warren, Bert Lyon and Louise Meyers, a clever trio of musical comedy artists, will introduce a one-act comedy sketch with music entitled When Dreams Come True. The Sisters Gasch, wonderful female gymnasts, who created quite a furore in New York and who are renowned all over Europe, are reasonably expected to prove a great sensation, for no performers of their sex have ever equalled them in acrobatic skill and daring. Next week will be the last of Cheridah

Simpson, The Novelty Dancing Four, Albert L. Pellaton and William Foran in A Spotless Reputation, and the Ellis-Nowlan company in A Night at the Circus. A novel series of extraordinarily interesting motion pictures will conclude the performance.

American Theatre

Beginning tomorrow, Sunday, the Messrs. Shubert will present at the American Theatre Clyde Fitch's latest and reported best work, The Blue Mouse. This comedy has proven the most successful theatrical product of the season. It is now in its ninth month of phenomenally successful run at the Shubert's Lyric Theatre, New York—where it is likely to remain for a year or more—and that other large cities might join the "laugh-wave" the Messrs. Shubert have organized a duplicate company, equally as strong and as elaborate in production, and it is this company that will be the Messrs. Shubert's first offering at the American Theatre, where, for the present at least, all their attractions will appear. Mr. Fitch has given theatregoers many surprises, but The Blue Mouse is said to have capped the climax for genuine fun. It is a farce adapted from the German of Alexander Engle and Julius Horst, but in the process of adaptation Mr. Fitch has used rare judgment and eliminated the suggestiveness that is usually found in German and French plays.

Valencia Theatre

Arthur Cunningham and the members of the Valencia stock company will make their last appearances in The Colleen Bawn this Sunday afternoon and evening, and on Monday night Mrs. Fiske and her company, direct from New York, will begin an engagement limited to two weeks in Salvation Nell. For the first time here theatregoers will see the streets of New York not produced, but actually duplicated, on the stage. The wonderful tenement street scene, with its four-story houses on all sides, its fire escapes, hurdy gurdies, fruit stands, saloon, pawn shops and Salvation Army barracks, is the largest ever staged. Twenty-six men are required to set this scene alone, and immediately on the arrival of Mrs. Fiske's special train on Sunday, they will get to their task, for it takes an even twenty-four hours to stage this most elaborate setting. Often enough producers have pictured one side of a single street, usually by means of a back drop, but here we have the meeting of two streets, built after photographs of the actual locality in New York. The houses represented, too, are what are known as "Practicable"—that is, back of the visible fronts of the buildings, rooms are erected. The spectator is allowed to view the actual home life of dozens of tenement dwellers; lights come and go in the windows, people are seen busy at their household tasks, or else they come forth on to the fire escapes for a breath of evening air. Bedding is taken in from the steps and windows, some of the shops close for the night, the saloon door continually swings as its frequenters enter and exit, the fruit stand man ceases his day's work, children frolic in the streets, women gossip, babies cry. In fact, it is the actual life in the huddled centers of New York. Something of the vastness of Salvation Nell as a production may be gathered from the fact that four baggage cars are required to transport the scenery, while the members of the company occupy three Pullman cars and a day coach.

Fischer's Theatre

Are You a Tourist is the title which Director Alphin has given his next week's satire, founded on the action of the local stock market and the disposing of wild cat stock by an over zealous promoter. His base of action is laid in the lobby of a well known hotel where there is a motley assemblage of victims. There are numerous easy purchasers, including a country "Ruben," a voracious Hebrew, a mischievous bell-boy, a female detective and a miss badly smitten with love. Plots seem to count for little in the action of musical comedy so long as it is plethoric of mirth. In the present instance there is a surplus of material that will excite the risibles. There will be the usual quota of concerted musical numbers which will include several of the most recent Eastern successes. All the principals will be seen in congenial roles, particularly Messrs. Dillon and King, as the "Ruben" and Hebrew. The new bill commences at the matinee on Monday.

Alcazar Theatre

In the presentation of David Belasco's great historical drama, Du Barry, commencing next Monday evening, Florence Roberts will be supported by Thurlow Bergen and the Alcazar players. This is unquestionably the most pretentious venture yet undertaken by the Alcazar management. The cast embraces fifty-two speaking characters and double that number of supernumeraries, and the five acts introduce nine complete changes of scene, each stage picture being both elaborate and artistic. Du Barry was written to serve as a starring vehicle for Mrs. Leslie Carter, and for several years it was generally conceded to be the most stupendous production on the American stage. It tells the true story of a French country girl who was apprenticed to a Paris milliner, became the cat's paw of Count Du Barry, roue and gamester, and so captivated King Louis XV that he made her his favorite and marrying her to a brother of Du Barry qualified her to be presented at court as the Countess Du Barry. David Belasco took infinite pains and spent an enormous amount of money to make his play a replica of the most luxurious and profligate court in French history, and his stage directions have been rigidly adhered to in preparing the Alcazar production. Miss Roberts will be seen in the title part, Mr. Bergen as Cosse-Brissac of the King's guards, E. L. Bennison as Louis XV, Howard Hickman as Count Du Barry, Burt Wesner as Duc de Brissac, Norval McGregor as the Papal Nuncio, Ernest Glendinning as the porter at the millinery store, Walter Belasco as Du Barry's father, Adele Belgarde as the head milliner, Bessie Barriscale as one of her employes, Christie MacLean as the keeper of a gaming house, and Louise Brownell as an opera singer.

BLANCHE BATES is to play an engagement at the Van Ness Theatre late this summer.

The Colored Comedian Was the Best of It

A local manager the other day advertised for some amateurs. In the large batch of correspondence that came in, the following amusing letter was received:

San Francisco, from Alameda, Cal.
Dear Sir: Your add was in the Examiner that you wanted amatures. We have a co that is called "Dunne Bros." We act every where. We are not amatures but professionals. Every place we went we made a hit. Our Colored Comedian is the best part of it. We have good acts. These are them. "The Bold Robbery." "The Burglars Alarm." "The Villain." "Nick Carter." "The book agent and the Clamb seller." How much do you pay. If the people of you show don't throw stones, holler and don't let you go throw your act we don't want them kind. Answer this letter and If you only get care fare we dont wish to come. Ther are four of us and every-one of us are pleasing. We would show some of the S. F. People what the Dunn Bros. can do. We are under 15 years of age. The Bold Robbery act is pleasing. The boss comes out and says he put an add in the paper for a night watchman for his Bank. The Colored comedian comes in and applys for the job. It goes on so forth. This act was written by the Novelty theaters manager just for us. Answer and tell how much you get.

Sees Faults In Our Theatres

American theatres are not properly constructed, either for the safety or for the comfort of the audiences. This sums up the observations of Albert Heilmann of Munich, a member of the firm of Heilmann & Littmann, Ltd., architects. The firm has a contract from the German government to build a new royal theatre at Munich, and Mr. Heilmann is searching the world for suggestions in architecture. "I am familiar with the theatres in New York," said the German architect, "and on my way home from India I have been looking over the theatres on the Pacific Coast. The one thing that struck me everywhere was the lack of care for the safety of the audiences. One will see wood everywhere in the construction of American theatres. In Germany the law is much more rigid and complete. Wood is never used in the wall of a place of amusement, and the entire building is made fireproof in the full sense of the term. A disaster like that at the burning of the Iroquois Theatre, or like that other at Boyertown, N. Y., in which several hundred persons perished a few years ago, or, again, like the burning of the Herald Square Theatre in New York City, which cost the lives of eight firemen about eight weeks ago, or the fire at Coney Island—Ach! anything like that would be impossible in Germany. The government builds theatres—there are royal theatres at Berlin, Munich and other cities—the new theatre at Munich will cost more than 3,000,000 marks (about $750,000). But no place of amusement would be permitted to exist if it was not absolutely safe. Another thing I have noticed is that the floors are too flat—level, you know. If one is at any distance in the rear, it is impossible to see what is going on on the stage. A floor like that is very well for a concert hall, but in a theatre the spectators should have a good view of the stage. Have I found nothing good in America? Ach, yes! There are the hotels. They are even a little more comfortable than those of Germany. You have excellent hotels. And the hotels mean a great deal to a country. If India only had good hotels, it would be the most widely traveled country in the world. The railroads of India are good, very good, almost as good as those of America, and one day's journey takes one to a different country, no matter where one starts from. The next day one will find different people, different customs, everything different. But the hotels are bad, and that robs travel of its pleasure."

Wilkerson Company Sues for Salaries

John O. McElroy, to whom was assigned the claims for unpaid salaries from a number of actors recently at the American Theatre, brought suit Tuesday against A. Ottinger, Nate Franklin, M. E. Clute, John Doe Herman and Ira P. Wilkerson for $4,121, claimed to be due the actors. The un-

Italian Grand Opera At the Princess

The International Italian Grand Opera Company will begin their engagement at the Princess Theatre on Monday, June 14. The company is composed of 150 principals, chorus, ballet and orchestra, and will give complete scenic and costumed productions. The repertoire for the first week is: Monday, Aida; Tuesday, La Traviata; Wednesday matinee, to be announced; Wednesday night, Fedora; Thursday, Rusticana and I Pagliacci; Friday, La Traviata; Saturday matinee, Fedora; Saturday night, Aida; Sunday night, Rusticana and I Pagliacci. The principals are: Mlle Bertozzi, Duce-Merola, Strauss, Norelli, Novelli, Zarad, Bossi, Signor Bari, Colombini, Accangeli, Samueloff, Secci, Zara, Oteri, Frasca, Gravina, Amani, Giuliano and Bozzani. Prices will be 50c, $1.00, $1.50 and $2.00.

ESTHER RUJAUERO leaves today for Denver to play leads in stock with Theodore Larch.

THE purpose of Oliver Morosco's visit to San Francisco last week was to look over the possibilities of the new Colonial Theatre. The proposition of his being associated with John Cort in the management of the theatre has been broached.

Margaret Illington Living in Nevada

RENO, Nev., June 8.—After preserving absolute secrecy regarding her place of abode in this city for the last seven months, Margaret Illington-Frohman, wife of Manager Daniel Frohman of New York, was found to-day after a systematic search extending through several days, in a simple little frame cottage at 334 Moran Street, on the outskirts of this city. She was engaged in watering the small lawn, gowned in a plain home dress of white material, apron and large white sunbonnet over her head almost obscuring her face. Her mother, Mrs. Light of Bloomington, Ill., whose name here is supposed to be Baker, was with her. Her father and brother will arrive here in two weeks to remain until fall. As her mother stoutly denied at the gate that the actress lived there, the daughter quickly disappeared indoors and viewed the interviewer from a window. Elizabeth Ehling, a maid, completes the occupants of the mysterious home. Telegrams to the number of five and six daily are delivered under the names of Maud Light and Mrs.

Baker. Letters come to Miss Margaret Light, Julia Ehling and Louise Ehling. The laundryman says they refused to give any name, only the number of the house. The iceman and waterman know them as Taylor. The grocer at an obscure little store only knows the mother as a personal customer, she visiting the store for their daily needs. The telephone is under the name of Baker and the daily newspapers have the name of Haight for them as subscribers. When on the streets Margaret Illington intensifies her disguise by wearing a white sweater, stock and bell-shaped straw hat trimmed very modestly with white material. She carries home her own purchases. Accompanied by her mother, she frequently drives in a surrey, the livery horse being aged and unattractive in order to prevent any attention to her and to mislead residents who note the many arrivals of wealthy New York prospective divorcees. Never before in Reno's history has a woman so completely obscured herself and her presence as has Margaret Illington in Reno until today. Her $1,000 saddle horse arrived yesterday by express from New York with a special attendant at a cost of $455. Now that her identity is disclosed she may be seen riding her fine horse along country roads. Her only friends here are a former classmate and "chum" of her girlhood days in Bloomington, who appeared with her in amateur dramatic performances before Mrs. Frohman entered professional stage life. Margaret Illington as she appears in Reno would never be recognized by her photographs. The subterfuges to which she and her mother have resorted in their efforts to maintain absolute obscurity is an intensely interesting feature of their presence here. The mother appears in response to every call at the door, protecting her daughter from possible identification. A cool reception was the experience of the interviewer today when their identification was evident to them. If the divorce suit is filed soon, as is expected, the question of legal residence will likely be raised, as it is believed by many that Miss Illington has only been in Nevada since taking the house six weeks ago.

Develop One Thing Well

Develop concentration! The one indispensable requisite to ultimate success is concentration, or devotion to one subject; especially is this so with human talent. One, well cultivated, deepened and enlarged is worth a hundred shallow faculties. The first law of success at this day, when so many people and so many things are clamoring for attention, is concentration, to bend all the energies to one point and to go directly to that point, looking neither to the right nor to the left. Balzac said, "Life is short and Art is long"—I add, the range of human knowledge has increased so enormously that no human brain can grapple with it, and the woman who add know one thing well must have the courage to be ignorant of a thousand other things however attractive or inviting. As with knowledge, so with work. The woman or man who would get along must single out their specialty and into that pour the whole stream of their activity, all the energies of the hand, eye, tongue, heart and brain. Broad culture, many-sidedness, are beautiful things to contemplate—but it is the narrow-edged men and women—those of single and intense purpose, who steel their souls against all things else, that accomplish the hard work of the world and are everywhere in demand, when hard work is to be done. I ought to be rich with the knowledge of how things ought to be done, but that's another subject, maybe I'll tell you of it some day. A woman—or man—may have the most dazzling talents, but if they are scattered upon many objects they will accomplish nothing. Strength is like—well—is like gunpowder, to be effective it needs concentration and aim. If you aim at the whole target you will seldom hit the center. Even your old literary lights may revel among the sweetest and most beautiful flowers of thought, but unless they gather and condense the sweets in the honeycomb of some great thought or work, their finest conceptions will be lost or useless. They say a Yankee sailor can splice a rope in many different ways, but an English "jackie" knows but one mode, but that mode is the best. To do anything perfectly there should be an exclusiveness, a bigotry, a blindness of attachment to that one object which shall make all others for the time being seem worthless. Just as the general who scatters his soldiers all about the country incurs defeat, so do they whose attention is forever diffused through so innumerable channels that it can never gather in force on any one point. The human mind is exactly like a burning glass whose rays are intense only as they are concentrated. As the glass burns only when its light is conveyed to the focal point, so the former illumines the world of drama or literature or business only when it is directed to a solitary object. Do you know that many actors walk as much idly on Broadway as in a few years would carry them around the globe? Many a person misses being a great man or woman by splitting into two middling ones. The time spent in profitless, desultory reading if concentrated upon a single line of study, would make one master of an entire science or literature. The toil expended by the newspaper man in writing disconnected essays, dissertations and sketches to buy his daily bread would produce—if directed with energy for a year to one absorbing subject—a volume, instead of two or fifty or more crude and ephemeral articles which are once read and then forever forgotten. "Never say die!" That is a good expression. "Never say die" means live forever. That brings us to the greatest of all subjects, life. There is probably no more frequent cause of failure in life than that greediness which leads us to grasp at too many of its prizes. To strive for a high professional position and yet to expect to have all the delights of leisure—to lie in bed till noon instead of—well, of looking over the finale of the first act—to labor for vast riches and yet to ask for freedom from anxiety and care and all the happiness which flows from a contented mind; to indulge in sensual gratification and yet demand health, strength and vigor; to live for self and yet to look for the joys that spring from a virtuous and self-denying life, is to ask for impossibilities. In law, in medicine, in trade, in the theatrical profession, the most successful have been those who have stuck to one thing. Old what's-his-name—once imitated on the stage of the Drury Lane Theatre the bellowing of a cow so well that there was a general cry of "Encore the cow!" Then he attempted with inferior effect to vary the performance, threw in the bleat of a lamb and so on, when his friend old—I can't think of his name—whispered in his ear, "Stick to the cow, man; stick to the cow." There are few in life who would not do better to "stick to the cow" than attempt the part of Harlequin. There was also an actor once who undertook to do all the parts of a comedy, and he no doubt set himself down as an universal genius, not only did he attempt the lead, but he put in for the heavy, the high and low comedy and the tag, and had there been an orchestra in those days he unquestionably would have insisted on being first violin. There are thousands of good people who exhibit just so absurd and monopolizing an ambition. Ninety-nine cases out of a hundred the old adage proves true that "a Jack-of-all-trades" is good at none. A circus-rider may ride five or six horses at a time and not break his neck, but a man or woman who drives five or six trades or speculations abreast generally tumbles to the ground. I once had a knife that contained a half-dozen blades, two or three corkscrews, a file, a small saw, a tooth-pick, and a pair of tweezers. It was wretchedly adapted to any of these purposes and I soon got rid of it and bought an old ten cent knife with one good blade. This has been a long dissertation and only goes to show in a measure the truth of what I said earlier in the writing. I ought to be rich with the knowledge of how things ought to be done; ah well, it's not what I get that keeps me hustling, it's what I reach for, with a glorious melody in my mind of "Beautiful dream come true."—Esther Rujaero.

Is Beck Going Into Dramatics Again?

Several important conferences in the offices of the Western Vaudeville Theatres and Orpheum Circuit in the Long Acre Building, between C. E. Kohl, George Middleton, Frank R. Tate, J. J. Murdock and Martin Beck, who in turn have conferred with Klaw & Erlanger, have caused a rumor to circulate, says a letter from New York, which may affect the policy of various theatres in the West, and the general belief is that Martin Beck may invade the so-called legitimate branch of the theatre, both as a lessee of houses and a producer. Quite recently Mr. Beck acquired the leases of two Utah houses playing the K. & E. attractions—the Grand Opera House in Ogden, and the Thatcher Opera House in Logan. In addition to these Mr. Beck controls the old Orpheum Theatre in Frisco, now called The Garrick. A change of policy for the Olympic Music Hall in Chicago is under advisement, it appears, as the house may be turned into a musical production theatre. With the Chicago Opera House this would make two houses of the first-class in which Mr. Beck would be interested in the Windy City. As to the productions, it is said that plans have been made to increase the facilities of the producing department of the Orpheum Circuit, which heretofore has been confined to staging vaudeville acts. In this connection it has been known for some time that Mr. Beck intends retiring from executing the routine affairs of the big vaudeville headquarters which he governs. The arrangement of the new offices in the new Long Acre Building gave their first intimation of this new policy, as the heads of all departments were given absolute charge of their branch and instructions were issued to refer all matters pertaining to the various divisions to the respective executive head instead of to Mr. Beck direct, as heretofore. It is Mr. Beck's intention to advance his younger lieutenants into responsible executive positions, and to hold each responsible absolutely for his branch of this large enterprise, in order that he personally may retire from the active attention to the business details, and devote his efforts to more important matters, presumably in another direction.

CHARLEY THROPP WRITES: Philadelphia, June 3.—Well, I am now at the Park Theatre in this town as business manager for Mr. Dougherty, the general manager of the United States Amusement Company, who have the People's Theatre and Park Theatre in this city and the Academy of Music in Baltimore, Md., and other theatres in Norristown, Pa., West Chester, Pa., and several theatres in the other towns around here, running vaudeville and moving pictures, which is all the go around here now. Just to give you an idea of the way that they want this style of entertainment in this section, our People's Theatre in this town has turned in a profit since last May of over forty thousand dollars so far and no signs of a let up, and that's going some for 5 and 10 cent amusement. No act comes too big for us; we play all the big ones, and it is a life saver for the acts that want to keep going and fills in a lot of the time that they would have to lay off. I was sorry that I could not get out with my many friends this season with the Gingerbread Man, but the show got the money again and I guess the booming I gave the show last year made it easy for the man that followed me. I had looked forward to the trip out there with pleasure, as I still think that you are the people, and they all think I am from the West around here, as I can't say too much about the folks that made me feel so at home as the ones I met in good old Frisco. We are in the midst of a street car strike and they are having it hot and heavy. I walked about five miles to my home last night, and my sympathy was all with the strikers till I got to about the last mile of the journey, then it turned to the other side, as I was all in. But I awoke in the morning with the strikers again. Just by the way of amusement for this slow town (as they call it) we are having riots every now and again, so as to let everyone know that they are not as much asleep as the outside would think. Well, old chap, your paper comes regularly and it is devoured by yours truly.

MESSRS. McCoy and Field of this city are at work on a new opera to be called Cleopatra, which will be produced in New York next season. Mr. McCoy is writing the music and Mr. Field the book.

Relief from Garlic Fiends Who Go to Theatre

CHICAGO, June 3.—Eating garlic deprives one of his constitutional right of going to the nickel show, is the verdict of Judge Heap. James La Monta was excluded by the manager of a nickel theatre because of his garlic breath. He brought suit for damages. The manager showed that the audience appeared stricken when La Monta began exhaling his breath and yelled "Get the hook." La Monta was put out. Judge Heap said: "The odor of garlic is sufficient to exclude a person from a place of amusement. It annoys and irritates, and sometimes maddens an audience."

Spotlights

It is announced that Stair & Havlin have become allies of the Shuberts. Already arrangements have been made with E. D. Stair of the Western firm, under a ten-year contract, for the use by the Shuberts of the Whitney Opera House in Detroit. Hereafter none but Shubert attractions will be booked in that house, the name of which will be changed to the Garrick Theatre.

During the engagement of Mrs. Fiske in Salvation Nell, the hard-working members of the Valencia stock company will enjoy a well-earned vacation. Paul McAllister is going to take a flying trip to Seattle, Lillian Andrews and Charles Dow Clarke are going to Los Angeles and others of the organization are going to the mountains or the seashore. Sunday afternoon, June 27, after a good rest, they will reappear, in conjunction with Arthur Cunningham, in an elaborate revival of another old favorite, Arra-Na-Pogue, one of Boucicault's best. Mr. Cunningham has a lot of new and old Irish songs ready for production.

The English church pageant, which will consist of the rendering in outdoor setting of a series of spectacular representatives of episodes of church history, was opened on the grounds of Fulham palace, London, Thursday afternoon. The pageant, which is under the patronage of the Archbishop of Canterbury and the Archbishop of York, was organized with the idea of popularizing the history of the church affording instruction to the masses, and, incidentally, to bring financial assistance to various state charities. The presentations will be given twice a day, at 3 o'clock and 8 p. m. for six days. The history of the church from the earliest time to the present will be depicted by a body of about 4,000 amateur actors and actresses.

Smallpox is epidemic in Marysville, and the city authorities have closed the public schools and theatres, including two nickelodeons.

Personals

MANY FRIENDS of Ethel Tucker will be glad to know she has recovered and is able to walk now, though with a slight limp. Miss Tucker broke her leg while playing The Devil (not a joke) last season in the Northwest, and has been laid up ever since.

CHARLES A. MURRAY, of Murray and Mack, after the conclusion of the Murray and Mack season this week in Los Angeles, will be seen in two character parts at the Belasco. The first of these will be Bub Hicks, which he will play in that theatre's forthcoming revival of The College Widow.

W. T. CLARKE, who plays the part of Sid McGovern, the saloon keeper, in Salvation Nell, which Mrs. Fiske will present at the Valencia for the next two weeks, played a somewhat similar part several years ago in Chimnie Fadden. Last year he was ringmaster in Polly of the Circus.

MAUDE ADAMS' first public appearance mounted on a horse will be made when, as Joan of Arc in Schiller's tragedy, she will gallop across the stage in the stadium of Harvard University, June 22. The horse which the actress will ride is a beautiful white Arabian now quartered at the Central Park riding academy.

THERE was great excitement in the Apollo Theatre, Atlantic City, Thursday night, where Ziegfeld's Follies of 1909 is being given. Lee Shubert and Lew Fields and wife and the Shubert press agent, A. T. Worm, were in the house, when Ziegfeld saw them and requested Mr. Shubert to leave. "I was willing for Mr. Fields and wife to remain," said Ziegfeld, "but my trouble with Shubert dates back three years, when he sent his brother to Paris to offer Anna Held, my wife, $1,500 a week for an engagement in The Parisian Model. Since that time Shubert has refused to admit me to any of his theatres and has even refused to sell tickets to my friends. As recently as the opening of The Midnight Sons in New York I was barred from the house. He had a nerve to come down here and attempt to see The Follies of 1909 tonight. As soon as I learned he was in the house I sent word that Mr. and Mrs. Fields and Mr. Worm were welcome to remain but that Shubert must leave immediately."

It is beginning to look as though Eleanor Robson was to marry August Belmont, the New York financier, for a dispatch from Lexington, Ky., dated June 9, says: "August Belmont, the New York financier, left here this afternoon for New York after spending two days at his nursery farm in this county. He was accompanied by Miss Elinor Robson. Others in the party were Mrs. Vanderbrook, who chaperoned the party, and young Vanderbrook, her son. It was only recently that the name of Belmont and the actress were coupled in a matrimonial way, which was followed by a denial. Just before leaving for New York this afternoon Belmont said he was in the racing game to stay and that he saw no reason for quitting. He expresses satisfaction over the racing situation in the East."

THE rooms of the Press Club on Market Street were thronged Monday night by the newspapermen and newspaperwomen of the city, who were present to do honor to May Boley and Zoe Barnett of the Princess Theatre company. In addition to the newspaper writers there were present several hundred invited guests. The club's jinks room was converted into a ballroom for the occasion and a delightful program of music and with dancing. A supper was also a feature. The Press Club Quartet rendered the Ode to Tombstone III. The club's first grand opera, repeated encores being called for. James Stevens, the well-known baritone, Stephen Joseph Warrall, the basso, and Ray Youngman, a tenor from New York, sang some of their best songs. Nat Landsberger rendered several violin selections, and Fletcher Tilton presided at the piano. A special orchestra discoursed music for the dancers.

SYLVIA LYNDEN, who has just arrived from Buenos Aires, had the pleasure last Sunday of seeing her sister, Baroness von Heimbach of Hollister, for the first time in six years. Notified of the arrival of Miss Lynden, Baron and Baroness von Heimbach hastened to this city, and there was a glad reunion at the St. Francis Hotel. It has been six years since the two sisters have met. During those six eventful years Miss Lynden has risen in the theatrical profession. After starring in eastern productions she went to South America, and there achieved success in something no other English speaking actress had ever attempted—the playing in Spanish in the Latin American theatres below the Isthmus. Not only did Miss Lynden essay the leading roles in Spanish, but she scored a success. Most of her plays were translated by her from the English. "Our audiences in Buenos Aires are unusually brilliant," said Miss Lynden. "The women are handsomely garbed in the latest Parisian gowns and they exhibit their wealth in jewels. The Argentines are very rich and spend their money freely for amusements that appeal to them. The operatic companies, composed principally of Italians, are generally well received." Miss Lynden tells an interesting thing about her experiences as a manager. She has forced her Spanish actors to dispense with the services of a prompter. The custom before her advent had been for a prompter to sit in a pit in front of the stage and prompt everyone throughout a performance, but this annoyed the gifted Californian so much that she compelled her actors to learn their roles. Miss Lynden will remain in San Francisco about a week longer before continuing her tour of the world.

Moving Pictures Around the World

On a small island in the Pacific Ocean the exiled lepers of Molokai gather daily before the flickering wonders of a screen that shows them the world of life and freedom.

Seated in the luxurious saloon of an ocean liner a group of travelers study the lifelike pictures of the countries for which they are bound.

In Iceland, excited Eskimos applaud the heroism of a cowboy who rescues a captured maiden from the redskins.

Half way around the world in northern Russia tearful peasants sorrow over the pictured plight of a forlorn French lover.

The correspondents with the battleship fleet tell us that in every corner of the globe they found those dimly lighted rooms where living comedy and tragedy flash across the screen. Thus are moving pictures helping to make "the whole world kin."

It has been fifteen years since the old biograph with its flickering, eye-straining spectacles of express trains, ships and parades invaded church parlors and town halls for "one night stands." In those days the manufacturers neither produced specially posed pictures nor employed regular staffs of actors. Scenes containing plenty of lively movement were shown—street spectacles, cavalry drills, battleships and the like—but the expense of films and machines limited the growth of the business.

Trained stock companies of actors and actresses with salaries from twenty to seventy-five dollars a week are now kept on the staff of the film manufacturers. Acting before the camera is considered particularly good training, calling as it does for great facial expression; one New York studio has on its staff a young actress who has been playing a well-known part all winter within a stone's throw of Times Square. The cost of picture making ranges from a few hundred dollars for the simple scenes requiring little preparation, to thousands for the elaborately staged, beautifully tinted film d'art of one French company.

Patents galore have been made on cameras, projecting lenses and machines until the clear moving pictures of today portray life so closely that we can believe the newspaper story of the Montana cow puncher who fell asleep in one of Butte's Dreamlands and awoke to see a grizzly bear bounding towards him on the screen. The bear died, the newspaper said, and the show stopped temporarily while the smoke cleared away and a settlement for broken glassware was made with the saloon keeper next door.

Broadway audiences are no more loyal to their favorites than are the patrons of "canned drama" with its "first nighters" and its friendly and unfriendly critics. One little girl who plays a prominent part in the pictures of a certain New York manufacturer has been named Annette by her admirers of the East Side. Her appearance on the screen brings a round of applause that needs only the star's smiling nod of appreciation to complete the picture. In one of Fourteenth Street's big theatres a few weeks ago, the first show of the day had just started with not more than twenty-five persons scattered over the house.

Over in one dimly lighted corner was an interested spectator whose extreme dislike for the villain was expressed in loud and continuous hissing which continued as long as the heavily mustached "home wrecker" was in the picture. Visit a moving picture show on a Saturday night when the house is full, and you will soon be convinced of the real hold this new-found amusement has upon the audiences. Certain houses have become genuine social centers where neighborhood groups may be found any evening of the week; where the "regulars" stroll up and down the aisles between acts and visit friends, and where the far-sighted proprietor has learned the names of the children and remembers them with a friendly pat on the head.

In New York City alone there are some 350 motion picture theatres with daily audiences of a quarter of a million or more and a Sunday attendance of half a million. Chicago entertains daily some 200,000 people in its 345 picture shows, and Philadelphia's 158 nickelodeons claim audiences of 150,000 every day of the week.

Replies to letters sent by the writer to the principal cities of the country, combined with statistics compiled in Insurance Engineering for April, show that in 118 leading cities of the country there are 1,987 moving picture exhibitions. A statement of the number who attend all the exhibitions in the country would be a mere guess, but 4,000,000 a day is given as a conservative estimate.

Two-thirds of the entire theatre-going public entertained by this "infant industry" with its $50,000,000 of invested capital and its 190 miles of films daily thrown upon the screen of 7,000 nickelodeons—this in round, bare figures is the extent of the new amusement that has sprung up within a decade and become popular only within four or five years. Its interest to social workers is apparent; for the great majority of moving picture audiences are made up of those who have little opportunity for other wholesome recreation. What are the possibilities of an amusement popular enough to attract twice as many people a year as the ten million who see professional baseball? And what should be the attitude of the social worker toward this new-found recreation?

A writer in a large Western city says: "The beginnings of crime are developed here and the absence of parents at the show causes downfall and ruin." An investigator in a city of western New York writes that the shows stimulate thefts and become the lounging places for perverts, and still another asks: "What do you think is to be the effect on the future of all this craze to be amused and to find amusement in such vapid stuff as most of these pictures are?"

This report comes from a New Jersey mill town: "While there is nothing morally degrading about them there is nothing inspiring or elevating. The places are an education in mediocrity, and while not harmful for the grown person whose tastes are of the cheap order, it is too bad that school children should become delighted with the same cheap show."

Indictments are common enough. What are some of the possibilities of the business?

The educational and scientific value of moving pictures is just beginning to be realized. The People's Institute, New York, suggests their introduction into the public schools to give the children graphic presentations of historical events, the growth of plants, the habits of animals, methods of industry and means of transportation. Some interesting and instructive films recently produced by a New York company show a trip through the Bronx Zoo with stops before the cages of different animals. This branch of photography has made still greater advance in England where thousands of feet of film trace the steps in organic and animal life from micro-organisms, up through insects and reptiles to birds and mammals. Several New York exhibitors have offered to throw open their houses for a few hours on Saturday in order that certain classes from the schools may see the educational films.

Last July the Bijou Dream in Boston, one of the theatres in the Keith circuit, was turned over to a new management. It had been conducted as a moving picture house since February, 1908, but with the change of management came a change in program. Besides the film service

Ollie Morosco Achieves New Fame as Author and David in Hartford Gives Fine Characterization of Richest Man in World, in Los Angeles

LOS ANGELES, June 17.—The season of musical comedy at the Grand ended last Saturday night, and Manager John Blackwood is giving us a revival of melodrama. The people want it, therefore the people should be pleased. Harry Girard makes his first appearance this week in A Milk White Flag at the Burbank Theatre, singing My Prairie Land. The words of this song are by Oliver Morosco and the music by Mr. Girard. Mr. Girard has opened a studio in the Majestic Theatre Building, and in his leisure time is at work on a comic opera. He is the composer of The Alaskan and has a baritone voice of good range and fine quality. Charles Murray, of the Murray and Mack Company, has been engaged by Mr. Blackwood to play the part of Bub Hicks in the coming production of The College Widow at the Belasco. David M. Hartford is again back on the stage this week as John Burkett Ryder in the production of The Lion and the Mouse, at the Belasco Theatre. This is the first time we have seen Mr. Hartford on the stage since the final performance of The Dollar Mark. There have been rumors to the effect that Howard Scott would leave the Belasco and appear in New York in The Dollar Mark. Now there is another report to the effect that he has signed a contract to remain with the Belasco Stock Company through the coming summer and fall. We sincerely hope that the latter is the fact.

BELASCO—The production of The Lion and the Mouse by the Belasco Stock Company is one of the best things that this able company has done; and it is far ahead of the productions which we have had. Richard Bennett is introduced to local audiences in the small role of Jefferson Ryder. He is making a decided hit with the patrons of the house, and, although his is a minor part, he comes in for his share of the applause. The part is a juvenile, but Mr. Bennett does big things and handles big parts, and it will be a pleasure to see him in a big, real character. The central figure in the play is the girl. Florence Reed, in the part of Shirley Rossmore, shows that she possesses real dramatic power. She has a pleasing personality and gives a splendid portrayal of the part. David M. Hartford is fine as John Burkett Ryder. His tremendous personality enables him to make most virile the part of the great financier. Richard Vivian does excellent work as the Hon. Fitzroy Bagley, the English secretary to Ryder. The rest of the company are well cast, and it is impossible to imagine a finer production.

BURBANK—Hoyt's A Milk White Flag is being revived by the Burbank Company this week. This play was produced by the Burbank Company about a year ago, and the cast is practically the same as then. Blanche Hall is Pony Luce, the sixteen-year-old daughter of the regiment. William Desmond repeats his former success as Piggott Luce; A. Byron Beasley is Phill Graves, the undertaker; Willis Marks is the lone private of the Ransom guards; Harry Mestayer is the young attorney; John W. Burton is the colonel; Henry Stockbridge is Paul Baring, and Margo Duffet is the gossiping young woman. Among the newcomers in the cast are Lovell Alice Taylor as the almost, but not quite widow; Charles Giblyn, as the bandmaster, and Frederick Gilbert as Mark Tombs, the doctor. There are several new musical numbers, and the chorus is quite up to date. The whole show is most satisfactory, but the chief attraction is Harry Girard's song, My Prairie Land. The words of this song are by Oliver Morosco, and the music by Mr. Girard. Mr. Girard is accompanied by the Ellis Quartet. Miss Hall is the Indian maid who is being wooed by Mr. Girard in the song. The stage is set appropriately for the song. Mr. Girard has a very fine voice, and we earnestly hope that we may have a chance to hear it often.

MAJESTIC—Kolb and Dill are repeating their success of last week and are continuing to make everyone happy by their performances in Lonesome Town. This is their final week at the Majestic. Next Sunday night at their last performance they will produce The Politicians. Theirs has been a very successful season, and the final week will not be behind any of the previous ones.

MASON—Dainty little Marie Doro is appearing at the Mason for the week in The Morals of Marcus. Miss Doro is one of the most popular as well as the youngest of the English-speaking stars. The part of the fugitive from the harem demands both intelligence and thought. These Miss Doro gives us as well as a pleasing personality; she also gives us a hint of the wonderful reserve power at her command; this little woman has a great future ahead of her. The story of the play is entertaining, the action brisk and the staging very good. Mr. Arden as Sir Marcus Ordeyne does some very good work. He is at his best in the third act, where Sir Marcus calls Carlotta his wife to save her from the Turk, Hamid. Marion Abbott, as Antoinette, does the best work in the minor roles. Marie Wainwright gives a well-bred, aristocratic Mrs. Grundy. Fred L. Tiden is good in the role of Sebastian Pasquale. Fred Eric is cast as the Turk. Jane Grey, who was for a time with the Belasco Company here, has one of the minor parts. The performance is all that we could wish it to be.

GRAND—The Grand comes into its own this week with Lillian Mortimer's No Mother to Guide Her. This is a real melodrama, and the patrons of the house seem to be very well satisfied with the change. The cast is a strong one, and the summer season bids fair to be a very successful one. Miss Dalton and Mr. Webb have the leading parts, and they act well together. Miss Rauworth has the part of an old gypsy, which she handles well. Mr. Stevens, George Field, Harry Earl and several others complete the cast. Blossom Seeley does a specialty between two of the acts. The staging shows a careful attention to detail. The management promises clean, up-to-date attractions, barring the suggestive.

ORPHEUM—Several of the acts on the bill at the Orpheum are musical numbers, but each in its turn is so good that it can not be spared. Countess Rossi is a feature of the bill. M. Paulo helps the Countess out in her skit. During the Performance, Flo Adler sings popular songs with dash and spirit. The Lulu Beeson Trio, composed of Miss Beeson and Messrs. Ward and Weber, give A Night in El Paso, which is composed of music and moonlight and dancing. Holding over are Russell Brothers, in Our Servant Girls, Frederick Allen and Company, the Normans, Francini-Olloms and the Avedano Quartet. New motion pictures fill out a very pleasing bill.

LOS ANGELES—Williams and Walker's Chocolate Drops, with King and Bailey, head the new bill at the Los Angeles Theatre. The bill also includes Mr. and Mrs. Forbes in A Wild Rose, Cal Stewart with his Uncle Josh yarns, Grover and Richards in a skit, Merry Mirthful Moments, Fox and Crystal in The Sharper and His Mark, Miller and Tempest in Kix and Trix, and new motion pictures.

FISCHER'S—Musical melodrama is the term which best fits The Heroic Tramp, the Fischer offering for this week, and the final one of the stock company. Eddie Murray, in the title role, does some good character and eccentric work, while Hughie Metcalfe pleases the crowd. Fred Gamble assists Dolly Graham with her "heavy," and the two conspire to make way with the old soldier. The hobo hero saves the day. Miss Montgomery, who takes the part of a "sweet young thing," shows emotional abilities. Jennie Barnett makes an attractive ingenue street waif. Miss Montgomery's I Love My Wife, but O You Kid, pleases the audience. John Cook's The Candy Kid is another problem song of the street. Dolly Graham's effort, Redhead, which she sings with the aid of the Roly Polys, creates mirth. The real musical solo is The Garden of Dreams, sung with great expression by Miss Montgomery.

UNIQUE—The change in the program at the Unique has been a success so far. For the current week the headliners are the Bruno Kramer Trio of European gymnasts. Reisner and Gores present a character singing and dancing act that is very clever. Lew Virden and Gertie Dunlap have a sketch that is out of the ordinary and very pleasing. The Unique Company appears in a one-act comedy, by James T. Kelly, called The Masqueraders. This is one of the funniest things yet put on by the company. The leading comedy part is that of a wealthy Irishman and is well taken care of by Jack Martin. Winnie Baldwin is cast as maid; Stella Adams as the Irishman's wife; Mr. Vane has a good part, as have Mr. Gerald, Miss Parker and Miss Baumann. There are several catchy songs interpolated. An illustrated song and motion pictures complete an exceptionally good bill.

WALKER—There is real enjoyment in the show arranged by Manager Harry Pieper for this week at the Walker Theatre. Carter and Brunton present a Nell Brinkley sketch full of clever dancing, good singing and laughable comedy. The gowns worn by the female member of the team are from original drawings by Nell Brinkley. Warren Ellsworth, that tale-teller with a fund of new ones, keeps the audience convulsed. He is one of the few monologists that don't have to rely on a grotesque makeup. Lola Forrest, a newcomer, pleases by her winsome manner and lyric soprano voice. The Walkerscope shows two enjoyable comedy pictures. Joseph Manley pleases with a new pictorial ballad.

William Collier may play at Hamburger's Majestic Theatre during July, presenting some of his most recent successes, with a specially organized company. Manager Morosco's recent trip to San Francisco had more purpose than to make engagements for a musical comedy company, but just what significance the local theatrical fraternity did not know. Mr. Morosco stated last night that Collier negotiations were under way, and that he expected a definite answer today, but that as yet no deal had been concluded. Mr. Morosco has been in communication with several eminent actors for the three or four weeks of open time at his Broadway house, among them being an English actor of international reputation, and also Wilton Lackaye and Henry Miller. Collier's time, however, fitted the open date here, and none of the others could adjust themselves to these conditions. Two or three road plays, including Three Weeks, will follow Kolb and Dill at the Majestic, then will come Mr. Collier—if this matter goes through—and then a musical stock company under the direction of Harry Girard. It is more than probable that the Shuberts will have a theatre at the site of the old federal building at Main and Winston Streets. Dr. West Hughes, A. M. Chaffey and George Chaffey, the owners of the property, have gone to New York to meet J. J. Shubert at his solicitation to arrange the preliminary negotiations, with assurances from Mr. Shubert that he is ready to satisfy their demands as to security for the rent and the like. The plans for the new building, which called for an expenditure of $20,000, were submitted to Mr. Shubert some weeks past, and were given his acceptance in writing at the time. There then arose a difference regarding the surety to be given by the Shuberts for the fulfillment of their lease of the building, and the matter dropped for the time. When he was in San Francisco Mr. Shubert again communicated with Mr. Miller, and expressed his ability to meet the demands of the owners of the lot, and asked that they come to New York to confer with him. A conference between Dr. Hughes, the Chaffeyes and the Shuberts was held June 5th, at the Shubert offices in New York. FLORENCE LEMERY.

There is great happiness in the Belasco circle of San Francisco this week, for Walter, the actor member of the family, was presented with a bouncing boy by his charming little wife last Wednesday. Congratulations.

NEW YORK, June 13.—The Southern-Marlowe revival of Hamlet at the Academy of Music showed Mr. Sothorn in one of his greatest characters. The famous soliloquy was well given. Again, in the churchyard scene, Mr. Sothorn rose to the part in his lament to Horatio on the finding of Yorick's skull. This also brought in Rowland Buckstone as the First Grave Digger. Mr. Buckstone's work in this part is too well known to need comment. Enough to say that he played it with his usual skill. Of Miss Marlowe's work as Ophelia little but praise can be said. In the mad scene she showed all her old power of tragedy, and jointly shared with Mr. Southern the plaudits of the audience at the end of the act. She was recalled time and again to bow her acknowledgments. The Horatio of Frederick Lewis was a good performance. * * * Sir Charles Wyndham, Mary Moore and the two remaining members of the former's company, Sam Sothorn and Lillian Waldegrave, who were hurriedly called from London by Alf Hayman when it was arranged at the last moment that the veteran English actor should appear in a two weeks' revival of The Mollusc during his visit here, were enthusiastically received at the Empire Theatre last Monday night. The audience was as large as on the opening night at the same theatre when Maude Adams produced What Every Woman Knows, a performance which Sir Charles witnessed on Saturday night and praised highly. No better acting has been seen here in a long time than Sir Charles's last night in the part of Tom Kemp who, in Herbert Davies's comedy, undertakes to cure his valetudinarian sister of "molluscry." And Sir Charles's reason for demanding that his original company should be brought over for the production was plainly justified by the work of Miss Moore, Miss Waldegrave and Mr. Sothorn. Miss Moore's portrayal of the role of the easy-going Mrs. Baxter was flawless, and she received almost as flattering a reception as her husband. * * * The Follies of 1909 had its first production at the Apollo Theatre in Atlantic City last Monday night. It follows the lines of Mr. Ziegfeld's previous Revues, being divided into two acts and showing eighteen scenes, some of them very elaborate. The words and lyrics are by H. B. Smith and the music, which comprises thirty numbers, is by Maurice Levi. Everything important and every person in the public eye has been touched upon. Distinctive numbers were sung by Nora Bayes, Harry Kelly, Lillian Lorraine, Jack Norworth, Annabelle Whitford, Billie Reeves and Arthur Deagon. The production here is preliminary to what is expected to be an extended run in New York. * * * Preparations for the massive Joan of Arc performance to be given in the Stadium at Harvard, Cambridge, Mass., on the evening of June 22, in which Maude Adams is to play the title role, are fast nearing completion. All cues for the entrances of the actors at the proper moment will be given by a series of red and white electric bulbs strung at the different entrances to the stage. Large arc lights will be strung around the rim of the Stadium and entwined throughout the entire bowl of the amphitheatre. Tomorrow the entire production of Joan of Arc will be brought to Boston and will be temporarily housed in the Colonial Theatre. Rehearsals of the fifty principal persons in the cast will be conducted there, and at the same time the small army of 1,250 supernumeraries will rehearse in the Stadium. * * * Back Again, a musical comedy, the book by Owen Davis and the songs and music by the lyrical authors of The Three Twins, Karl Hochsna and A. C. Hauerbach, was produced for the first time by Milton and Spencer Aborn tonight at Olympic Park, Newark. The leading parts were taken by Genevieve Finlay, Amelia Summerfield, Henry Norman, Henry Coote, Ned Nye, Constance Farmer, Gertrude Des Roche, George Shields, Lizzie McCaul and Robert Pitkin. The piece deals with the matrimonial entanglements of a retired sea captain in the Shrewsbury River and Rumson Road colonies of New Jersey. It was warmly received. * * * George Behan, the character actor, appeared for the first time recently in vaudeville last week at the Colonial Theatre, presenting, with the assistance of Frank Sheridan and company, a one-act skit called The Sign of the Rose. The story deals with a Black Hand kidnapping, which pleased the gallery, and a large house applauded Mr. Behan generously. * * * Alick Lauder, brother of Harry Lauder, made his first appearance in this country as a comedian last week at Keith & Proctor's Fifth Avenue Theatre in a character sketch called The Christening, with which he has been identified in English music halls. Mr. Lauder is a clever comedian, and portrays an amusing type of Scotchman. * * * It became known here last week that the recent mysterious visit to Cincinnati of William Morris, independent vaudeville booking agent of New York, was to close a deal with I. M. Martin to book all the attractions in Martin's New Orpheum Theatre and roof garden, which is to be erected in the Walnut Hills residence district. This means, it is said, another vaudeville war in Cincinnati. It is the first time Morris has invaded this field. * * * Mrs. William E. Annis, whose husband was shot and killed by Captain Peter C. Hains, Jr., U. S. A., appeared in vaudeville last week in Hammerstein's theatre for the first time in New York. Mrs. Annis, who is clever at the piano, was assisted by the five instrumentalists. She will probably remain on the stage until married again—which the press agent says will be soon. * * * Charles Frohman announces in Paris that he has secured Edmond Rostand's Chanticleer for America. Mr. Frohman expects the play to produce a sensation in New York. The famous barnyard drama, which the author of Cyrano de Bergerac spent so much time writing and rewriting for Coquelin Aine, and the future of which at Coquelin's death Rostand said was to be decided by his son, Jean Coquelin, has not yet been produced on any stage. The difficulties of representation are increased by the fact that all the characters are animals. * * * In laying plans for their repertoire of Shakespearean characters for next season, Julia Marlowe gave Edward H. Sothorn the surprise of his life yesterday when she stipulated that she would alternate with him in his own favorite role of Hamlet. The conversation occurred while the stars were doing a rehearsal of their company at the Academy of Music in some of the scenes of Twelfth Night. Mr. Sothorn at first refused to accept Miss Marlowe's proposition seriously. But a few minutes' talk showed him that she was in earnest. Then the details of her project were gone over. Miss Marlowe advanced arguments, artistic and business, why it would be advisable for her to attempt the experiment which has enticed other important actresses in the past. Mr. Sothorn finally yielded and consented to appear in the role of the king on the nights when she assumed the character of the prince. The agreement was then made binding and the plan was officially announced. Intense womanliness has always been the keynote of all Miss Marlowe's characters. Nevertheless she has acted masculine roles in the past, notably among them, the boy poet, Chatterton and Prince Hal, and of course, the legitimately feminine assumption in Twelfth Night and As You Like It.

SALT LAKE CITY, June 14.—Salt Lake Theatre—Marie Doro played to large audiences last week and made a great hit with her charming style. Colonial Theatre—Three Weeks has just closed a most successful engagement at the Colonial, and after a great deal of unmerited adverse criticism, proved itself a clean and interesting play. Next week the Ralph Stuart company will play The Master at Arms. All the other theatres have closed for the season and all the houses are being overhauled. At Saltair Grigolati's Aerial Ballet is playing a summer engagement.

GLEN SMYTH.

SAN DIEGO, June 16.—Garrick (J. M. Dodge, mgr.)—The Bishop of Birmingham is the piece presented by the Raymond Teall musical comedy company at the Garrick this week. The piece is a little different from the average musical comedy inasmuch as it has a strong plot which is seldom lost sight of. Wm. Friedlander appears as John J. Smith, a salesman. Max Steidle as Crazy Jake. Cash Night as Michael Finney, a New York merchant. They all have good parts and make the most of them. Raymond Teall is seen in a character part for the first time since the beginning of the engagement. He appears in the role of Felix, a negro servant, and provides plenty of fun. Nan Halperin, Mattie Hyde and Grace Wolf are congenially cast. A number of catchy songs are introduced, among them are Reed Bird, by Nan Halperin and chorus; I'd Like to Have a Girl Like You, Orvie Post and chorus; Heinie, by Nan Halperin; Everybody's With You When You Smile, by Wm. Friedlander; Mandy Lou, by Evelyn Bunin and chorus. The chorus is well dressed and sing and dance well. Lillian Sutherland and Jack Curtis appear in a vaudeville sketch during the olio and make a big hit. Pickwick (Scott A. Palmer, mgr.)—The Armstrong musical comedy company is putting on a musical absurdity entitled College Days. Barney Williams, Walter Spencer and Billy Onslow handled the comedy end of the piece in a first-class manner. Ethel Davis and Elma Elwood also did full justice to their respective parts. The chorus, as usual, is well dressed and work hard. Good business continues to rule. Queen (John Donnelon, mgr.)—The bill as presented this week is a very good one and is headed by the Monetta Five, who have one of the most refined musical acts seen here in many a week. Second to them comes Hasse and Mariette, who scored a big hit with the sensational Apache Dance. Grace Carlyle and Carroll England also scored with several popular songs. Cowboy Williams pleased with his juggling act. Good moving pictures conclude. Grand (Fred Ballen, mgr.)—The Grand has a good show this week, which is composed of the following acts: Christopher, the magician, and The Lazwells, premier singing and dancing artists. Latest moving pictures. Empire (W. W. Bosley, mgr.)—The Empire has an unusually good show this week. Phil La Tosca, the talkative juggler, has a very good act of its kind. Elliott Beamer, basso, delighted with several songs. The Hill Sisters, song and dance artists; latest moving pictures. Union and Bijou offer moving pictures and illustrated songs.

SPOKANE, June 13.—The Servant in the House, by Charles Rann Kennedy, at the Spokane for one week, pleased large houses. Pixley-Ludors, The Burgomaster, was well received; good company; here for three nights, 13-15. Nat Goodwin, 20-21. John Drew, July 5-6. There is an excellent bill at the Orpheum this week. In the headline position is Helena Frederick in The Patriot, other good ones are Charlotte Parry, Selma Brattz, World-Kingston, Jarrow, John Keller, Marie Russell and Orpheum pictures. Headliner at the Washington is Mlle. Alice Loretta and her $10,000 statue dog, Ben. Others are, Glendower-Marrion; McDevitte-Kelly; Rae-Brosche; Jere Sanford, and moving pictures. A good bill at the Pantages. The Huntress; White City Quartet; Louise Kent company; Naples Quartet; the Prentiss Troupe, Bert Murphy, who "sings to beat the band," at the Nataritorium Park, is making a big hit. There were over 5,000 at the park Sunday, the largest crowd that has attended the park this season. Bowen's American Band give band concerts every afternoon and evening. Sells-Flotow Circus 14, at Recreation Park. Laura Adams, late of the Jessie Shirley stock company, has gone to San Francisco to spend a month with her sister.

SEATTLE, June 14.—Moore Theatre—The Broadhurst play, The Easterner, which opened last night at the Moore, has an intelligent interpretation at the hands of Mr. Goodwin, and the beauty of Miss Goodrich is also a saving part, but the work is not up to the standard set by The Man of the Hour. Beginning Thursday, the remainder of the week's engagement of the co-stars will be filled by The Genius, which will no doubt prove more acceptable. Mr. Goodwin is as easy in his acting as ever, and the radiant Miss Goodrich has advanced perceptibly as an actress. Grand Theatre—Ferris Hartman and his company opened their second week's engagement with It Happened in Nordland, which is a good clean musical comedy, with rollicking songs and amusing dialogue. The chorus did good work, and a few of the support have almost equal opportunities with Mr. Hartman to make a hit. Seattle Theatre—A thrilling melodrama, Tennessee Tess, is offered this week to Seattle Theatre patrons, and as this is the style of play which most pleases them, the engagement should be a successful one. Miss Bunting as Tennessee Tess has ample opportunity for her acting, and enlists the sympathies of the audience. The five acts are filled with stirring situations. Lois Theatre—On Parole is having its first presentation in this city at the hands of the Pantages players. This famous war play is filled with quiet, effective scenes, and makes a very pleasing evening's entertainment. The parts were well handled, special mention being due Miss May as Constance, and Mr. Holuber as Dale, who were particularly effective. Following last week's good bill comes another crackerjack to the Orpheum. Margaret Moffat and her company present Awake at the Switch. Redpath's Napanes with George Hillman have a miniature musical comedy, Fun in a School Room. Armstrong and Clark, Loney Haskell, monologist; Londe and Tilley, European gymnasts; and the Three Bohemians are a tuneful trio of strolling minstrels. At the Star—Albini, the magician and illusionist; Carita Day and her dancing Adonises; the Barnes-Reming company in Mrs. Potter's First; Sados, the London juggling eccentric; Bessie Allen, the dancing Californian; Eva Mudge, a character change artist, completed a strong bill. At Pantages, the Original Svengali Trio offers a novelty. The explanation of the act is this: One man works in the audience, with his back to the stage at all times; a lady sits at a piano on the stage, with her back to the audience; a second man stands on the stage, with his back to the audience. If one whispers to the man in the audience the name of a musical selection, the lady instantly starts to play and sing it; if one whispers to the man in the audience the name of any character, the man on the stage appears dressed as that character.

TACOMA, June 12.—Matters theatrical are rather quiet here. The Goodwin engagement, 3-4, served to bring out fashionable audiences who seemingly enjoyed The Easterner and The Genius. Mr. Goodwin has many faithful admirers in Tacoma who always turn out when he visits Tacoma and laugh with him and at him. Miss Goodrich was much admired. Of the excellent supporting company, Miss Tilbury and Neil O'Brien are well known here. The stage settings and costuming were all that the most exacting could desire. Moving pictures of the Burns-Johnson fight were well patronized at the Tacoma, 10th to 12th inclusive. The house remains dark until the 18th, when The Merry Widow comes for three performances, followed 21-22 by John Drew. The McRae company last week successfully produced Lord Chumley at the Tacoma and the week previously satisfactorily explained What Happened to Jones. In both plays Philip Sheffield, the latest recruit to the McRae players, made an excellent impression. His singing and playing was a feature that added distinctly to the success of the productions. Miss Robeson appeared in character roles in which she shone resplendent. Miss Oswald as always was excellent and the whole company were seen to distinct advantage. With this week's engagement the McRae players will close for the present in Tacoma, probably returning in July. They will open in Bellingham the 20th inst., for a short season of stock. John McCabe, Thos. Sullivan and Bingham Percival closed with the McRae company May 30. Miss Erba Robeson, the popular character woman, leaves June 18 for San Francisco, where she will begin a vaudeville engagement. Mr. Mandel Lune, last winter manager of the Savoy Theatre, was married June 6 to Miss Rae Cohen of this city. The marriage service and banquet took place at Temple Beth Israel, and included many Seattle and Portland guests. Miss Marion Van Tassel, who was such a favorite with Star Theatre patrons, was married May 16 to Franklyn Stevens (non-professional) of Seattle, Wash. Mr. Albert Gray will produce The Chimes of Normandy at the Tacoma Theatre June 24. A chorus of seventy people have been rehearsing for months and a finished performance will doubtless be given. The vaudeville and picture shows are all doing a good business. Miss Mabel McKinley at the Grand last week was a good drawing card. Francesca Redding and company amused with a play. Miss Redding is a handsome and talented woman, who deserves a better vehicle. The hit of the bill was Cooke and Rothert, who certainly got the laughs and who made the Apache Dance attractive and interesting, and free from vulgarity. This week the Mararenko Gypsy Troupe of Russian singers and dancers pleased everybody. Faust Brothers, pantomimic comedians, and Horace Mann and Cad Franks, in travesties, are all old favorites here and as such were warmly received. The rest of the bill was fair. At the Pantages last week the one big hit was Bonner, the educated horse. This week a troupe of trained rats, presented by Prof. Roberts, gave a unique act. The Four Bards had a meritorious acrobatic act, and the Terry Twins, a laughable skit. Ella Garrison and company appeared to advantage in Shakespearean travesty.

BELLINGHAM, June 9.—The management of the Beck's Theatre is now in a position to announce definitely the date of the inauguration of the summer stock company, which has been secured for Sunday afternoon, June 20, when a production of In the Bishop's Carriage will be given. This will be followed by The Spoilers, The Heir to the Hoorah, When Knighthood was in Flower, Dorothy Vernon of Haddon Hall, David Harum, Old Heidelberg, The Love Route, Way Down East, Leah Kleschna, The Climbers, Brown of Harvard, Sherlock Holmes, If I Were King, The Warrens of Virginia, Cousin Kate, Pride of Jennice, My Wife, The Prisoner of Zenda, Caught in the Rain, The Crisis, and others. The management has arranged with Henry McRae to put in his company.

Ethel Barrymore Denies Story

The news collectors of the daily press, finding they could not get an interview out of Ethel Barrymore, proceeded to bait and worry the young bride by hinting at a business alliance with the Shuberts. The scheme worked, for on last Wednesday they got a small but forcibly worded contribution from the young Frohman star, as follows:

"I wish to deny most emphatically the report that I am contemplating leaving the management of Mr. Charles Frohman for that of the Messrs. Shubert. I would rather work in the chorus for Mr. Charles Frohman than be starred in the greatest part ever written by any other manager in the world ETHEL BARRYMORE.

Seibert & Lindley & Co.

San Francisco is enjoying itself hugely this week over the clever, clean-cut fun that is so plentifully provided in Her Own Mother, the comedy playlet that DeMoine Seibert, Alice Lindley and Gavin Dorothy are presenting this week at the National Theatre. It is not saying too much to characterize this sketch as one of the big vaudeville hits of the season. It is a hit because it has merit and because real actors are playing it. Many sketches fail because those presenting it have never had the proper training for acting. Because a person has a certain funny streak, it does not follow that he or she is an actor. With the Seibert-Lindley Company all are real actors, with all kinds of experience and decided ability. Alice Lindley, the star of the little company, is an exceedingly clever comedienne of great magnetism and a most pleasing personality. Her dressing is distinguished for its richness and its exquisite taste. Mr. Seibert is a clever character man and director, and Gavin Dorothy is a reliable, pleasing juvenile, who is good in most any thing that he may be called upon to do. In fact, all three are trained dramatic people as well as experienced vaudevillians, and wherever they have appeared have won instant and great popularity.

OAKLAND.—At the initial appearance of Landers Stevens and Georgia Cooper at the Broadway, Monday eve, the house was packed to the doors. Manager Smith put on Raffles, for the opening production, and in no production did Stevens or Miss Cooper appear to better advantage. The supporting company proved capable of handling the difficult play, especially is this true of Roy Clements as Capt. Bedford, Al Hallett as Crawshaw and Priscilla Knowles in the role of Mrs. Vidal. The play will continue the balance of the week and will be followed by My Tom-Boy Girl. At the Liberty, James Keene is presenting Fabio Romani to fair attendance. The play, which is a dramatization from the well-known novel, The Vendetta, was elaborately staged. Mr. Keene gave a clean and meritorious rendition; and in the double role of Fabio Romani and Cesare Oliva. As Piccio and Respetti, George Webster and Henry Shumer were responsible for some good character work. Robert Lawlor was also in the cast and deserves special mention. Of the women, the most praiseworthy work was done by Lillian Elliott and Laura Hudson. Next week The Girl of the Golden West, which is now under preparation by Bishop's new stock company. The Opera Company from the Princess journeyed over here, 14th, and gave one performance of Piff, Paff, Pouff to a capacity house. Fred Mace and May Boley, in the leading roles, were very much to the good, and their support by James Stevens, Walter Catlett and Zoe Barnett was all that could be desired. John Drew was here 15-16 to capacity business; Ethey Barrymore, 21-24; Merry Widow, 28-July 4; Marie Doro, 5-7. This week's program at The Orpheum is an exceptionally strong bill. Mabel Hite and Mike Donlin make an immense hit, and the sketch presented by Claude Gillingwater & Company causes no end of laughter. Billy Van in his monologue keeps the audience in good humor and the balance of the bill does not lag for a moment. Good specialties are given by Mazzuz and Mazette, The Vindobonas, Donald & Carson, Saader-Lavalle Trio. Mrs. Fiske will give one performance at The Liberty during July. The First Born will be the attraction, week of the 28th, at The Liberty. Miss Helen Hill, a graduate of the University of California, has joined the Ethel Barrymore Company and will go East with that organization.

PORTLAND, June 14.—The past week has not been a very lively one in theatredom as far as this city is concerned. The three principal theatres are closed, the Bungalow bringing a very successful season to an end last Saturday night, the Baker closing with the engagement of The Burgomaster towards the middle of last week, and the Heilig having been closed as noted last week by the city officials. The Bungalow will re-open, however, next Sunday night, with The Merry Widow. The K. & E. shows will be housed at that theatre until the opening of the stock season in September. The close of the Baker stock company last Saturday night was quite an event. The house was packed and at the end of the play, The Girl of the Golden West, every member of the company was called out and given an ovation. Only three members are announced to return for the next season, Izetta Jewel, Mina Gleason and Donald Bowles. William Gleason will be unable to act on account of sickness for several months, but it will be a pleasure to his many friends to learn that he is improving. Manager James H. Erickson offered a good bill to his patrons the past week. The feature act was the playlet entitled The Futurity Winner, and it was a good one. A real race horse scene is introduced, on the plan of the race in Ben Hur. Another first-class act was offered by Sullivan-Pasquelena company. James Thornton proved to be one of the most entertaining monologists that has appeared here. Frank La Dent was also entertaining with his juggling act. Tonight the bill is as follows: Laddie Cliff; Eight Original Madcaps; Three Leightons; Max Witts' Singing Colleys; Ollie Young and Brothers; Gattelle Brothers; and Evans and Lloyd. For the second week of his engagement at the Lyric, Edward Harrington and his musical comedy company produce The Isle of Zaza. The company are doing nicely and no doubt will remain for the entire summer season. Ed Harrington and Charles Connors are the principal comedians. The chorus is well trained. At the Grand the bill for this week is Makarenko Troupe; Clara Thropp; Mann and Franks; Faust Brothers; The Torleys; and Fred Bauer. Pantages has The Four Bards, in feats of balancing, for this week's feature act. The Burns-Johnson pictures are being displayed at the Baker this week. Manager Calvin Heilig says that he has just completed arrangements for a new Heilig Theatre to be begun at once at the corner of Seventh and Taylor streets, and to be completed by January 1 next. It will cost $200,000 and will seat 2,000 people. E. W. Houghton will be the architect. Until this playhouse is completed, the first-class attractions in Portland will be played at the Bungalow. This means that George Baker and his stock company will have to find another house temporarily. That house will probably be the old Baker Theatre. A. W. W.

Van Ness Theatre

Ethel Barrymore's second and last week in Lady Frederick has held up wonderfully in interest and attendance and Miss Barrymore will have to her credit two weeks of extremely good business. Next week comes Marie Doro, in The Morals of Marcus.

Alcazar Theatre

It is like old times to see Florence Roberts once more the attraction at the Alcazar, and that those old times still hold most potent powers is proven by the large business that has been attracted to the theatre all week to welcome the star and to see the riotous exhibition of splendor in the Du Barry scenes. Probably of all the Belasco plays Du Barry heads the list in the measure of gorgeous mountings, and as the play itself deals almost solely with the whims and passionate outbursts of the royal mistress, the chief aim of this article is to discuss the acting of Florence Roberts. First of all, the part of Du Barry is a most arduous and exacting one and the physical strain, to say nothing of the mental effort, must be something tremendous. Miss Roberts comes through all this with no abatement of a powerful portrayal to the end. Du Barry is not the best thing she does, largely for the reason that it is not a particularly well drawn characterization. Miss Roberts, from the moment of her first light comedy scenes in the first act to the strongest ones in the succeeding places maintains a high efficiency and plausibility and to most of those present it was generally conceded that her efforts were much more successful in the part than those of the original Du Barry as known to the American stage. In the supporting company there were any number of small parts well played. Thurlow Bergen, as Cosse-Brissac, was less ardent and more confidential in his portrayal than the part seemed to warrant. In the rear seats his voice could not be heard. Louis Bennison gave a superb picture of the king and Burt Wesner was forcefully pleasing as the captain of the guard. Norval MacGregor, as the Papal Nuncio was adequately dignified and Wm. Garwood, who has a most pleasant manner and evident ability, will be a welcome addition to the company. It might be suggested that his depiction of the character of the young Richelieu was such as to convey the idea of approaching senility. It would have been better, even if it were necessary to stretch historical license, to play the part with a little more stamina, for it must be allowed that even if the Marshal of France were a rouse and reveler, he would have some moments of dignity and weight. Alfred Aldridge read his few lines as the Lord Chancellor well, and Walter Belasco pleased very much in the small part of Du Barry's father, a character he created in New York. Marie Baker was exactly suited to the part of Hortense and gave a particularly good characterization. The personal charm of Bessie Barriscale was effective in the part of Sophie, and Adele Belgarde was, par excellence the grande dame, Marquise de Crenay. Du Barry is in for several weeks of great business.

Valencia Theatre

Predisposed against it from reading the story of the play, because it treated of the low and the vulgar and the vicious elements of life, Salvation Nell took me into camp the other night, bag and baggage, and for two and a half hours held me spellbound. The vicious cruelty of poverty, of degradation, the repellant aspects of the slums, all fade away from the mind as the actors develop an absorbing story of life—elemental and brutal but so strong in its human features that it is absorbing every minute in its appeal. Mrs. Fiske, by introducing this play to the theatregoers does much to wipe out the mistake of last season when she brought out that wretched Ibsen nightmare, Rosmersholm. She still has much of that muffled, indistinct enunciation that is so exasperating, but notwithstanding this she is vitally human and understandable as Salvation Nell, and in her best moments in the play, she brings tears to the eyes, whether you are willing or not. Holbrook Blinn, who, although a San Francisco product, has been away so long as to be almost unknown except in a vague way, as rumors of his success come floating in from London or New York, is a magnificent actor, of the finest intelligence and poise. His treatment of the character of Jim Platt, the tenderloin tough, is characteristic of the keenest artistic perception and largely to his efforts is the sordid nature of this man beast relegated to a background of obscurity. In him the primitive qualities dominate because of the lack of rightful influences in his early and subsequent life, up to the conversion of Salvation Nell, when he, too, responds to the finer and more uplifting influences of an awakened ambitious conscience. Next to these two characters, that of Hallelujah Maggie, played by Charlotte Thompson, who has taken the stage name of Mary Madison, stands out with singular distinctness. Charlotte Thompson made her real theatrical advent in a department of bright writings in THE DRAMATIC REVIEW, called The Ravings of Charlotte Thompson. The Ravings were the sanest and most brilliant imaginings contributed by any writer in the United States. The speeches and sermons and epigrams of Hallelujah Maggie are the Ravings of Charlotte Thompson brought to life. Her lines are given with a most unique and forceful manner, and she presents a most convincing type of self-sacrificing and practical slum worker. Hope Latham is a vivid, fleshly impersonation of a girl of the red light district, and down the whole line of similar characterizations there are many that could be held up to unusual commendation. The direction of the stage is a positive achievement and I commend it to other directors who can learn much in the way of the proper handling of large numbers. The tension was established early in the first scene and never allowed to break during the rest of the performance.

Princess Theatre

Grand opera in San Francisco may be characterized as a sure fire proposition if it has any excuse for existence at all. Little was known in advance of the singers who make up the principals of the Edwards' Grand Italian Opera Company that opened at the Princess Monday night, but as night after night went by we were forced to realize that this is an organization that is superior to any popular priced grand opera company we have ever known here, and if it does not develop a Tetrizzini it will at least show a more uniform grade of high talent. The week has been devoted to repertoire as follows: Monday and Saturday—Aida, with the following cast: Aida, Mme. Bertossi; Amneris, Daughter of the King, Mlle. Strauss; The Priestess, Mlle. Zarad; Radames, Captain of the Guards, Mm. Bari; Amosastro, King of Ethiopia, Father of Aida, Mm. Arcangeli; Ramphis, Mm. Gravina; The King, Mm. Oteri; A Messenger, Mm. Giuliani. Tuesday, Wednesday matinee, and Friday—La Traviata (Camille). Cast of characters—Violetta Valere (Camille), Mme. Norelli; Annina, Mlle. Zarad; Flora Bervoise, Mlle. Donner; Alfredo Germont, Mm. Amadi; Georgio Germont, Mm. Zara; Baron Danphol, Mm. Di-Giacomo; Doctore Grenvil, Mm. Oteri; Marquis D'Obigny, Mm. Kaplan; Gaston, Mm. Giuliani. Conductor, G. Merola. Wednesday evening and Saturday matinee—Fedora. Cast of characters: Fedora, Mme. Therry; Countess Olga, Mlle. Donner; Dimitro, Mlle. Williams; Louis Ipanoff, Mm. Colombini; De Sirix, Mm. Arcangeli alternating with Mm. Di-Giacomo; Dsire, Mm. Giuliani; Rouvel, Mm. Di-Giacomo alternating with Mm. Frasca; Cirillo, Mm. Gravina; Borov, Mm. Di-Giacomo alternating with Mm. Frasca; Grech, Mm. Oteri; Sergio, Mm. Correnti. Thursday and Sunday, June 20—Cavalleri Rusticana. Cast of characters: Santuzza, Mme. R. Duce-Merola; Lola, Mlle. Strauss; Mamma Lucia, Mlle. Kaplan; Turridu, Mm. Bari alternating with Mm. Colombini; Alfio, Mm. Zara. Conductor, G. Merola. I Pagliacci. Cast of characters: Nedda, Mme. Bertossi alternating with Mlle. Donner; Canio, Mm. Bari; Tonio, Mm. Arcangeli; Beppe, Mm. Giuliani; Silvio, Mm. Zara. Conductor, G. Merola. The company has several very good singers, namely Mme. Bertossi, Mlle. Strauss, Mme. Norelli, Mme. Duce-Merola, and Bari, Colombini and Arcangeli. In addition to being splendid singers, these artistes are actors of eminence. A strong feature of the performance is the conducting of Merola. He holds his musicians together with a strong and intelligent personality. Business has been very large and the season of five or six weeks promises to be a record breaker.

American Theatre

The Blue Mouse is heralded as an adaptation from the German by Clyde Fitch. Its alleged origin and adapter are apt to create false impressions of the piece, despite the press agent reputation given the play during its Eastern run, for it is bright with the near spice of a French farce, while it is almost, if not quite, totally lacking in the usual Fitchian brilliancy of dialogue, epigram and what-not that has heretofore distinctly typified the Fitch comedies and dramas. It is racy—a bit racy—without being at all what one could call objectionable, but its dialogue is quite commonplace, relying rather on situations than upon its verbiage to make its appeal. That the appeal, humor and enjoyable entertainment is there has been attested by thousands upon thousands, and will be doubtless endorsed by countless thousands to come whose enjoyment of the dainty Elsa Ryan and her capable support is still in futuro. The story of the play may be briefly summarized as the tale of an ambitious young railroad man who employs a notorious actress to personate his wife that he may allow the president of his road to make love to her and thus bring about his promotion to the post of division superintendent. Of course, the appointment is secured through the wily offices of the young woman who, though as "wise" as they come, is still at heart a good woman and thoroughly in love with a young author to whom she is engaged. But the complications! They are endless and indescribable. Were I to attempt an accurate description of the playlet, the prospective playgoer would be robbed of his right—the enjoyment of the plot development—hence I refrain. There are two stars in the company, the Messrs. Shubert have selected for their initial seasonal offering at the American, viz., Elsa Ryan, the Blue Mouse, and Wilton Taylor, the "Joie" Llewellyn, railroad president and ladies' man. The rest of the cast is most competent—in fact there isn't a bad spot in the cast—but it is upon the shoulders of these two, principally assisted by Geoffrey C. Stein, as the young secretary, that the burden of the active fun-making falls. Most of the humor is that of situation, but the vivacity and naturalness of the two chief actors makes the success of the play. There are a half dozen good "bits" well done. Inda Palmer, as the kittenish although somewhat antique wife of the railroad president, is excellent. Caroline Pearce is a winsome Mrs. Rollett, while G. D. McIntyre, as her father, Harry Millarde as the young author, Edgar Elkas as the auctioneer, and John Thatcher as "The Old Boy" all do work worth mentioning. Somehow or other the setting and furnishing of the first act is hardly all that it might be made, showing the offices of the railroad president and his secretary, while the second act seemed not unusually elaborate as the home of the Blue Mouse. But despite its somewhat meager setting the play itself hits true and has just enough of the suggestiveness to give it all the appeal of the French farce, without the opportunity for censorship usually found in the Gallic vehicle. Capacity houses have ruled all week, and will doubtless continue during the fortnight run scheduled.

Personals

MARY BOLAND has recovered sufficiently from her appendicitis operation to reappear with the John Drew company.

This is the last week of the Francis Murray company in Petaluma. Following the engagement there the company will play the small towns in the northern part of the state.

Terry McKean and Walter Newman, who have out Terry McKean's players, now playing Airdome time in Modesto, have decided to separate. Mr. McKean will continue with the present company, getting two leading people in place of Walter Newman and Bertha Holtz, who will immediately organize their own company and tour the state.

JENNIE KELTON and Del Lawrence were married at noon on June 14th, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Alf Layne in Portland.

WILLIAM ABRAMS and Agnes Williams have returned from Seattle, where they have been members of the Lois stock company.

The Orpheum

Talk about your "half-price bargain sales" and other fancy "money's worth twice over" ideas, Morris Meyerfeld's show shop is double discounting the idea this week, and the bill offered at the O'Farrell Street vaudeville emporium is well worthy of a place in that "all-star-olio" class, even though it isn't particularly so heralded. Our friend, Gerald Dillon, might have worked himself overtime had he known beforehand exactly what his material was going to be, but mayhap it's just as well that he spelled out only the cut and dried vernacular of the craft, for as it is the houses all week have been crowding even the excellent "S. R. O." records of the house, and if the public had been really "wised up"—!!! It's a cracking fine bill all the way through, from our old comic opera friend, Cheridah Simpson, with her so-called pianologue, to the Sisters Gasch, who are gymnasts of sterling worth, and there are so many particularly brilliant spots in it that the one or two which don't scintillate quite with the brilliancy of the stellar numbers may be well passed without unfavorable criticism. There are several distinct hits, as I said before, but the one bright and particular star who, according to the program isn't a star at all, is chic, petite little Louise Meyers in a soubrette role. The sketch which provides her excuse for being is yclept When Dreams Come True. I'm not at all clear about just the plot (?) of the "sketch," but one thing is certain, Miss Meyers with her pick-out song and mirror search-light stunt during the chorus makes easily the hit of the offering. Mildred Warren and Bert Lyon, the other members of the company, are well worthy their mode of praise as well, but the French maid is all "it," so much so, indeed, that her encores have been numberless. Miss Simpson has lost none of her flirtatious grace with the gain in experience with the flight of time, and the rendition of her piano monologue is beyond reproach and as popular as may be. Dainty Adelaide does toe dancing that can only be truly appreciated when seen in her Bill Poster's Dream, and the settings provided are most realistic. When the lady steps from the scenic frame of which at the rise of the curtain she seems an integral part, it is a keen surprise to the audience, while her achievements in toe dancing are even more so. Elizabeth Murray's Irish and negro melodies are not only tunelessly rendered, but are acted with an unctuous humor which goes far toward making them "go." The Ellis-Nowland Comedy Circus is hilarity in extremis, while the Novelty Dancing Four have certainly mastered the intricacies of Terpsichore most pleasingly. The "heart-interest" appeal of A Spotless Reputation continues, with Messrs. Pellaton and Foran contributing equally to the technical merit of the skit. Unusually effective motion pictures and some delightful music complete a most diverting entertainment.

Fischer's

A one-act musical comedy, entitled Are You a Tourist, has been playing to very good business at this theatre for the past week. It consists of a number of hilarious situations, which keep the audience in a continual round of laughter. Ben T. Dillon, who handles the part of Alonzo Block, the wealthy tourist, is seen to advantage, the character being one of the best in which we have seen this capable comedian. Leibman Geysler, manager of the hotel, was played by Will King, whose Hebrew impersonations always make good with the audience. Tracy MacDermott and John W. Beane, as Ed Fox, the stock broker, and Wun Lu, the Chinese porter, respectively, did some very good work, the former singing some catchy songs which were well received. Miss Raymond was good as Catherine and received many recalls in her song, Dainty Little Ingenue. Miss Carter, the detective, and Uneda Newface, Catherine's mother, were in the hands of Nellie Montgomery and Anna Clack, both of whom did justice to their parts.

Pantages-Empire

The head-line act for the week is in the capable hands of Walter Montague & Co., in an intensely dramatic offering entitled The Under Dog, telling the story of two men in love with the same woman. The scene opens with one of them at the phone receiving a message from the woman he loves warning him to beware of his rival, who has sworn to kill him for ruining him in a stock deal, which he claims was accomplished by dishonest and underhanded methods. From here on the act is intensely interesting. The woman they both love comes to the apartments of the successful broker, where she is found by his rival, who forces her to conceal herself behind the curtains and overhear their conversation. He confronts his former friend, who contemptuously calls him "The Under Dog." Her subsequent confession of love for the Under Dog and the discomfiture of the dishonest rival is cleverly worked out and leads up to a fitting climax. The respective characters are capably handled and cleverly portrayed. Scott and Whaley are a couple of colored comedians who are as funny as they are clever. As gloom dispellers they are IT. Pederson Bros. have something new to offer in the line of Roman ring gymnastics. Their work is clever, startling and well received. McGloin and Shelley dance and sing. They are not much on the sing, but they certainly can dance. Madame Wanda's troupe of trained dogs provides an interesting and well-received portion of the entertainment. Dan J. Harrington is a decidedly clever and versatile ventriloquist. The motion pictures and the Pantages-Empire orchestra combine to make the program most enjoyable.

The National

An unusually pleasing program is to be found at the popular Steiner Street show-shop this week. The Weston-Young Co. have something new to offer in a musical skit entitled The Young Reporter, which is brimful of catchy songs and clever dancing. There are three men and two women in the act who cleverly uphold the many laugh-provoking situations. They have a breezy air about them which makes them decidedly likable. Nadje, billed as the "Queen of Equipose," comes in for hard-earned and well-merited applause, although she is placed at great disadvantage on the program. Toma Hanlon supplies some male impersonations of a clever nature. Her song, Gee! I'm Glad I'm Single, is one big hit. A dainty little comedienne is little Zena Keith. Matt Keefe, again on the bill, warbles as sweetly as ever and comes in for a warm welcome. Martynne, the mirror dancer, supplies some beautiful terpsichorean features. Kessler and Dunn, a couple of clever dancers, are nothing startling, but are up to the standard. A couple of good contortionists and equilibrists are to be found in Genero and Theol. DeMoine Seibert and Alice Lindley, assisted by Gavin Dorothy, present a bunch of nonsense, entitled Her Own Mother. The situations are amusing and capably handled by the individual members of the cast. This act is one of the big laugh-producers of the season and shows the performers to be unusually clever performers. The animated pictures are enjoyable and round out a refreshing programme.

The Thalia

Managers Kelley and Riley have an exceptionally strong offering for this week. Edith and Sig Franz contribute some comedy trick bicycle riding of a clever nature. Sig Franz is easily one of the cleverest trick riders seen in some time, his balance riding on one wheel being exceptionally so. He is capably assisted by his helpmate. Eldid's Chileans are seen to advantage in a foot juggling and equilibristic turn. Some good comedy acrobatics are well received from the Boldens. Murilla and Par Mar are clever singers and dancers. Rose Stevens offers popular ballads. Eva Rowland in her original dancing, Mlle. Lucille and other favorites contribute their share to a good show. Moving pictures complete the bill.

The Wigwam

Manager Harris has a program this week of exceptional talent and versatility. La Loi Helene is the sensation in her original terpsichorean creation, Cleopatra's Death Dance. While in the category of Salome dancing it is of a more refined and artistic nature. La Loie's beautiful presence holds her audience in a thrall of delightful expectancy, depicting a picture of the most sublime happiness to the most tragic despair. The most fastidious and critical can find nothing in La Loie's interpretation of poetic grace but admirable enjoyment. In Harry Le Claire is to be found a female impersonator that is a hilarious enjoyment every minute he is on the stage. Le Claire enjoys the happy faculty of making friends with the audience as soon as he appears. His work is the essence of cleverness and composed of good, clean, wholesome comedy. His travesty of the Devil is decidedly original and calls for a good round of applause. De Butz & Tossell, billed as clever bicycle cut-ups, contribute some clever stunts, although nothing new or startling is introduced. The greater part of the act is composed of kidding. The power house gag is sadly out of place. Mr. and Mrs. Edward Lucas are well received in scenes from Dicken's Martin Chuzzlewit, David Copperfield and Bleak House. The play is novel, interesting and composed of very clever work. Zay Holland, violin soloist and singing comedienne, is well received. The Elite Four contribute some delightful ensemble and solo numbers on numerous musical instruments. They are all clever artists. Sidney Grant, with a line of funny stories and a Chinese act in which he is the whole thing, shows some class. Motion pictures, as ever, are thoroughly enjoyed, and complete the bill.

Vaudeville Notes

A decision was handed down by the Supreme Court on Monday afternoon in the case of Addison Gooding against the Chutes Company, upholding the verdict for $8,000 damages awarded the plaintiff by a jury in the Superior Court. The action has been in the courts for several years. Gooding was one of the animal keepers at the Chutes Zoo and among his duties was that of feeding the camel, reputed to be a very vicious animal. Gooding in his suit for damages contended that he was not warned of the viciousness of the animal, and when he entered the stockade to feed it the camel became enraged and seized his leg in its teeth. His leg was so badly crushed that amputation was necessary. The Chutes Company appealed the case on the ground of insufficient evidence.

Reno, Nevada, June 15, for two weeks is the present stop in the eastward homeward march of J. B. Dyllin.

Verden and Dunlap have retired from the Raymond Teal company and are playing dates in and about Los Angeles.

Toma Hanlon, the male impersonator at the National this week experienced a most harrowing experience one day recently. Together with a merry crowd of fellow-performers, she started out for a horseback ride through the Park. Everything was serene and lovely until the beach was reached, when everything went wrong. Instead of her mount following the rest of the party, who had turned toward the Cliff House, it wheeled to the left and started off at a swift canter which Miss Hanlon was unable to control. The rest of the party was unaware of what was occurring and went merrily on their way, and Miss Hanlon was at her wit's end as to what to do. The refractory beast finally brought up in front of one of the road houses, where she was received with a hearty laugh for a welcome. She appealed to the bystanders, explaining that her mount was unmanageable. At this point one of the crowd stepped forward and, patting the horse, called by the name of Queenie, at the same time calling for a glass of beer, which was given (not to Miss Hanlon, who refused) to the horse, who, after draining the contents contentedly answered the rein, and Miss Hanlon thankfully departed to regain the bunch. Miss Hanlon refuses to accept a mount hereafter without first scanning its pedigree.

Walter Montague is busily engaged in perfecting the details of his new vaudeville vehicle, which is to be entitled Hunting an Heiress. Nothing personal in the title, as Walter has already a charming better-half.

W. E. Thomson (Zeke), the advertising man, is sojourning for a few days in his bungalow at Camp Meeker.

Our old friend, Carroll Johnson, opens an engagement at the Wigwam. Lots of old friends to greet you there, Carroll.

Manager Kaiser of the popular Grauman house in the Mission, has a strong offering for his patrons this week. Kewana, a Japanese juggler, has a number of new and interesting stunts of dextrous nature to hold attention. Leo Murphy, a little tad, shows remarkable talent on the violin. His touch shows the making of an artist. A few more weeks of vaudeville will rub off the rough edges and put him before the public. Du Vaull and Lotta in a comedy sketch manage to please. Joe Valle renders some lively and artistic airs on the Hoodlum's Piano. Trixeda and Robinson open their act with a great line of up-to-date slang, which is thoroughly enjoyable. Trixie should take the tip I gave some time ago and contribute a little more dancing. It would go mamense. Salvo & Co. in a shadowgraph offering prove quite novel entertainers. Olive Reed is becoming a big favorite in the rendering of the illustrated songs. Three sets of motion pictures complete a bang-up show.

The Board of Pardons of Pennsylvania last Thursday recommended to Governor Stuart that a pardon be granted to James B. Gentry, who has been in prison for nearly 15 years for the murder of his actress-sweetheart, Madge Yorke, in Philadelphia. We hope he will have to stay there the rest of his life. Murder is too common these days.

Louise Kent and Company

Louise Kent, supported by Donah Benrimo and Wm. V. Mong, opened on the Pantages Circuit in Spokane, Wash., June 13, playing an eighteen-minute comedy, entitled Sold. Miss

Kent has long been known as the best-dressed woman in stock, and she will, no doubt, soon acquire the title of the "best-dressed woman in vaudeville." Her supporting company is the best obtainable. Miss Benrimo, late of the S. Miller Kent (no relation to Louise) company on the Orpheum Circuit, is a clever woman of the striking brunette type and also a splendid dresser, while Mr. Mong, late star of the Clay Baker, is too well known as a capable and versatile actor to need further comment. The progress of the act will be watched with interest, as Manager Johnston of Portland (Pantages Theatre) pronounces it "The best try-out ever given in the house."

GEORGE LASK WRITES: Paris, May 26.—Over here for a week. Sail back next Saturday. The Naked Truth a great success in London. Just met Mr. and Mrs. Morris Meyerfeld. Lots of new ideas in costumes, lights, scenery and effects. Best wishes.

The Orpheum

That the Orpheum is highly successful in its quest after novelties, will be strikingly evidenced next week, when Joseph Hart's Futurity Winner will be presented. It is a one-act drama in two scenes by Edmund Day, which is difficult to adequately describe. The first takes place in the jockey's headquarters at Sheephead Bay Race Track, just prior to the big racing event, The Futurity. The second is "in the stretch" on the track itself, showing an actual race between three thoroughbred horses. While all this is accomplished within twenty minutes, the story is completely, faithfully and interestingly told. James Thornton will renew his acquaintance with the Orpheum patrons next week. Mr. Thornton is a witty entertainer. The Camille Trio, comedy horizontal bar performers, will also be included in the coming bill. They are marvelous gymnasts and original and amusing comedians. Gladys Clarke and Henry Bergman will present a divertissement called The Chaffeur and the Maid. It consists of comedy dialogue and some lively singing and dancing numbers. Next week will be the last of Elizabeth Murray, Warren, Lyon and Meyers and of Adelaide and her dancing four. The finale to the programme will be a series of Orpheum motion pictures of extraordinary merit and interest entitled A Day in Peking.

Alcazar Theatre

As only praiseful things have been written and said about the Alcazar's production of Du Barry, it is not surprising that a second week of Belasco's historical play is announced. No previous enterprise of the Alcazar management could be compared to this one in point of artistic histrionism, elaborate staging and pecuniary outlay. Combined with the lavish public eulogisms bestowed on the production as a whole is distinct compliment to Florence Roberts for her work in the title part. She is exceptionally qualified to give faithful portrayal of the sublimated milliner—the doll of history—who swayed a monarch of France and made the most fastidious aristocracy on earth respond in servile humility to her most absurd whims. The people supporting the star have also had flattering things said and written about them, and the scenic investiture is generally pronounced both stupendous and artistic. There will be many false prophets in stageland if Du Barry does not run a third—or even a fourth—week.

Valencia Theatre

Mrs. Fiske will enter upon the second and final week of her engagement in Salvation Nell on Monday night. Not in years has San Francisco been so stirred by a play as by this colossal drama of the slums. All San Franciscans who desire to see Mrs. Fiske in her latest and one of her greatest triumphs will have to visit the Valencia Theatre during the coming week. San Francisco has merely duplicated the conspicuous stamp of approval which was accorded Salvation Nell in New York and all across the continent. For her present tour Mrs. Fiske enlarged her Manhattan Company to more than fifty members. Never has this stirring aggregation of dramatic players appeared to better advantage. Salvation Nell unfolds a marvelous love story—a love story that goes straight to the heart of every spectator. As Nell Sanders, in the play, Mrs. Fiske says, "Love, they say, it's strong as death, but I know, Oh, I know, it's strong as life itself." In these words is contained the entire keynote of this "divine comedy of the slums." Mrs. Fiske's only matinee is Saturday. At the matinee, Sunday, June 27th, Arthur Cunningham and the Valencia Stock Company, greatly refreshed after a two week's vacation, will return in an elaborate revival of Dion Boucicault's ever-green drama, Arrah-Napogue, or The Wicklow Wedding.

WALTER NISSON, now on the door at the Valencia, will be the advertising agent of the new Colonial when that theatre opens next September.

Fischer's Theatre

The regular devotees of Fischer's seem to care little as to plot or congruous action, so long as it is humorous. A medium that will answer all these requirements will be next week's bill, Twins. It possesses less of plot than any of its predecessors, but is plethoric in mirth. An impoverished physician, with a lovely daughter, has advertised for patients of all styles and a rejected suitor arranged to supply them. He engages the services of Mike Maloney and Mose Askstein to impersonate the Siamese Twins. They are joined by a ligament of sawdust and in the subsequent operation, which is screamingly ludicrous, the doctor becoming frightened that he will be prosecuted for malpractice, is compelled to give his consent to the marriage of his daughter to the persistent suitor. As the twins, Messrs. Dillon and Vack should be in their element. The musical contributions will be up to the usual standard and embrace a number of recent successes.

Spotlights

Dick José and his company are now playing the Nevada country to big business. The José tour this spring has been a huge success.

The Valencia stock company and Arthur Cunningham, after a two weeks' rest, will come back to their own at the Sunday matinee, June 27, when Dion Boucicault's brightest and best drama of the "ould sod," Arrah-Na-Pogue, or The Wicklow Wedding, will be revived on an elaborate scale.

George Foster Platt, stage director of the Valencia Theatre, accompanied by his assistants, Gilmore Walker and George Von Blix, has been enjoying his vacation in the Yosemite Valley and at the Mariposa grove of big trees. He will be back, ready to begin staging Arrah-Na-Pogue, on Monday morning.

It is computed that The Merry Widow, although produced only two seasons ago, already has been played over 15,000 times by the numerous operatic companies that are presenting it in England and in all the cities of any importance on the continent. The American production which Henry Savage has been presenting in New York for one year, and in Chicago for six months, will be seen at the Van Ness Theatre on the Fourth of July. It is undoubtedly the reigning musical sensation of the world.

The scenes of Polly of the Circus, Frederick Thompson's elaborate production, are laid in a small town in the middle west, where a circus is playing on a lot adjoining the parsonage. Polly, the principal rider, has a mishap in the ring, and as there is no hospital in the town, she is taken to the clergyman's home for care, up to that time she has known nothing of any life except that under the white top. The story of how the clergyman falls in love with her is the pivotal point of the play.

Thursday night, June 10, was "purple night" at the Princess Theatre. On that occasion San Francisco lodge of Elks No. 3 visited the playhouse. Six hundred seats were set apart for this purpose. The attractions included Fred Mace, Stevens, Budd Ross, Hynes, Bulotti, Conlan, May Boley, Zoe Barnett and Miss Nelson. The jinks was given in appreciation of the many courtesies extended the lodge by Manager S. Loverich and Harry Campbell. The chorus was enlarged for the evening by the addition of twenty-five members of the lodge.

Personals

THE Place-Bell company are playing in stock at Swain's theatre in Santa Cruz. Ralph Bell, who is playing the leads, has become very popular in the seaside town.

BILLY ROCHESTER, the ex-Tivoli singer, who has been at death's door the past year, is greatly improved in health now as the result of a five weeks' stay at Rio Vista on the Sacramento River. He has returned to town and feels like a well man.

GEORGE SEYBOLT, secretary of the Actors' Society, will retire from that office, July 1st, and return to the stage.

EDDIE BOLAND, who has been acting as treasurer of the Oakland Orpheum for the past two years, has retired from the position.

THAIS LAWTON, formerly leading woman for the Alcazar stock company is playing the leading role in Our Boys in Khaki.

HENRI GRESSIT, the diplomat from the Savage office, who always does the most difficult things with an easy grace, has struck the town, three weeks ahead of Mme. Butterfly, the biggest money-maker in a theatrical way of the last ten years.

ADELE RAEFFER, leading woman with the Kolb and Dill company, was quite severely injured in an automobile accident in Pasadena, Wednesday night. She was taken, unconscious, to the Pasadena hospital, but later regained consciousness. Her injuries are not serious.

HAROLD ASHTON, general manager of J. C. Williamson's theatrical enterprises in Australia, is paying San Francisco a flying visit and making the Valencia Theatre his headquarters. He is negotiating with Blanch Stoddard for a starring tour of the Colonies, and has also made Grace Travers of the Valencia company a very tempting offer to go to the antipodes.

EUGENE REED, who plays the part of "Squirt" Kelly, the bartender, in the first act of Salvation Nell, was married to Miss Florence F. Caldwell, who travels with Mrs. Fiske's company, last Monday morning on the arrival of the company from Los Angeles. Judge Flood performed the ceremony and the young couple was extended the hearties of congratulations by all the half hundred people of the Manhattan Theatre company.

MARGUERITE BANKS, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Banks of No. 834 Prospect Boulevard, Hollywood, a suburb of Los Angeles, went to Italy as a music student two years ago. She has returned accepted as a prima donna. She brings with her a three-year contract as first dramatic soprano of the new Boston Opera, and will also sing at the Metropolitan Opera House next winter. She is 20 years of age.

AMBROSE MILLER, who has not been in town since the adventurous days of The Girl from Kays, is the Shubert manager back with The Blue Mouse.

FRANCIS REID, the brilliant newspaper man ahead of John Drew, has been joined by his wife, the gifted emotional actress, Josephine Victor, and for the rest of the season she will be with him. After the closing of the company Mr. and Mrs. Reid will take a short trip to Europe to look up a play for Mrs. Reid.

contracted for from the rental ex- it is only a question of time before the change, exclusive reels are made by the theatre's own operators. The customary, sentimental, illustrated song has been omitted from the program and trained singers have been substituted. "Illustrated talks" are features, and aside from the travel and historical pictures, films with social bearings have been successfully produced. The Boston Trade School for Girls, The District Nursing Association, The Industries of Quincy and School Gardens are among the subjects. Other departments are Current Events in Pictures and Daily News in Brief, consisting of pictured paragraphs of municipal, civic, social, educational, literary and dramatic interests. The Bijou Dream has a weekly attendance of 20,000, and in spite of a lack of blood and thunder and the absence of the lovelorn soldier and his dying sweetheart, the theatre is a practical business proposition. "It is all so very interesting," writes the manager, "and such wonderful things are possible in the future, that there is no end when one begins to talk of possibilities."

In Paris in the Opera Comique, moving pictures are sometimes used in place of the old-time scenery. Rostand and Paul Hervieu have written moving picture plays and many of the French films exhibited in this country were posed by the best actors of that country. Bernhardt and Rejane have acted before the camera and one Parisian theatre has used motion pictures in the Götterdämmerung to illustrate the fall of Valhalla. Sweden has already endowed a moving picture theatre for presenting historical scenes.

Fourteenth Street, New York, the Rialto of twenty-five years ago, has become the hotbed of moving picture shows. Only one burlesque house remains. Five of the larger shows can accommodate 2,000 persons an hour, and are open from ten in the morning until midnight. Opera seats, sloping floors and uniformed ushers all lend the appearance of a real theatre. Such shows as these, and they are not uncommon in the large cities, point the way to the introduction of first-class moving picture houses at regular theatre prices where programs in life-like tints may be given to "Broadway" audiences. And one important development that will follow the building of the better class houses is the gradual abandonment of ill-ventilated dark and dangerous store shows on which public odium has rightly centered. Agitation against this class of shows has resulted, however, in general improvement. Better lighting devices have been perfected, fire exits have been enlarged, fire-proof film rooms for the picture machines installed, and the danger from conflagration reduced to a minimum. A prominent New York architect states that the fire risk in a moving picture show is not as great as in the regular theatre with inflammable stage settings and opportunity for a sweep of flames through the stage to the audience. In the modern moving picture machine the roll of film is exposed to the danger of fire in just the one spot where the glare of the light strikes it. The operator runs the roll by hand power from one fireproof box on the top of the machine to another at the bottom. Unless the film is held in front of the ray of light it cannot take fire; and an automatic device shuts off the light as soon as the operator stops winding the roll. And non-flammable film is perfected. The article in Insurance Engineering shows that in 115 towns from which reports had been received, there had been minor fires in seventeen theatres, with no loss of life.

Lecturers like Burton Holmes and Fred Niblo are already using moving pictures almost entirely to illustrate their travelogues.

In the Brooklyn Navy Yard a moving picture camera has been fixed on one of the government tugs for photographing speed trials, gunnery practice and maneuvers for the Navy Board in Washington, and a plan is under consideration in the army to use motion pictures as targets for the new coast defense guns which are to be installed in all coast artillery armories around New York. The guns will be fitted with sub-caliber devices, and the moving pictures will complete the idea of a hostile fleet steaming up the harbor.

Although these new uses and plans for motion pictures point the way to still wider educational and scientific use, the specially posed variety of films predominates today. According to the register of copyrights in Washington, about seventy per cent of the copyrighted films are specially posed. Twenty-five per cent include localities or scenes from actual life; while the remaining three or four per cent are historical, portraying McKinley's funeral, Queen Victoria's funeral, the opening of the Williamsburg Bridge, the inauguration of President Roosevelt, the installation ceremonies of President Butler, Corpus Christi procession, Orvieto, the proclamation of King Edward at St. James Palace, Prince Henry at West Point, and the like.

New Theatre for Market Street by Spreckels Estate

A petition by Rudolph Spreckels and Claus Spreckels, as executors of the estate of Claus Spreckels, deceased, for permission to construct a class A theatre and store building in Market Street, between Fifth and Sixth, was filed with the Superior Court last Monday. The building is to cost $250,000. Plans of the structure are filed with the petition. It is to be known as the Theatre building, and will be a superior building to that which stood on the same site before the fire.

The new Cort Theatre in Chicago will be opened October 10, with The Belle of Bohemia, with Amelia Stone in the title role and a company of sixty-five. At the end of the run of The Belle of Bohemia, the same company will appear in a new bill, it being Manager Cort's intention to conduct his Chicago playhouse as a home for musical stock productions, the most successful of which will be duplicated on the road by specially organized companies. The Cort is on Dearborn street, near Randolph. The seating capacity will be 1,000.

Lee Willard writes from Idaho that a considerable part of that State seems to be full of scarlet fever and bad business.

CLARENCE ARPER is once more acting, playing in stock in Sacramento.

Baseball As It Was Played 25 Years Ago

By George Barnum, Ex-Umpire National League, Now Playing in The Third Degree

The great question so often asked the old ball-player is "What is the difference between baseball as played now and twenty-five years ago?" Whenever I am asked this question I invariably reply: "Practically none at all. This at first glance may appear laughable and paradoxical. Not so. Baseball today is practically the same as it was not only twenty-five years ago, but fifty years ago. It could not be anything else; for baseball is the evolution of the old English game of Rounders, and from its earliest formation the playing of it was fixed and set by prescribed rules. One has only to read and compare the modern rules of baseball with those enforced when the game was first evolved to see how little material difference there is in them. Hence, the evolution and progress of baseball can only be based upon the progress and skill of the players and the changing of various rules in the points of attack and defense; the discipline of players; the morale of the game; the betterment of conditions for the spectators, and the character of the men who control it. There were nine players in those days placed on the field and designated as now. The distance between the bases was ninety feet then as now. The ball, as far back as I can remember, was  $9\frac{1}{4}$  inches in circumference, and weighed  $5\frac{1}{4}$  ounces as now. The bat prescribed by rule was also the same and the only difference is that in those early days baseball was played as a sport, while now it is a profession. In those days the players were clerks, bank cashiers, physicians, dentists, mechanics, or anybody that could play good ball was made a member of a baseball club. They received no pay, no emoluments of any description, save the honor and the glory of belonging to one particular baseball club, and the gratification of feeling that it was the best ball club in that vicinity. Now they receive salary, and it is only natural that when men are paid for skill and devote their lives to the playing of baseball, that they should be better players, and the game should be better played now than then. That there has been great improvement and progress in the game of baseball from what I saw as a kid in the Elysian fields at Hoboken, and the Capotoline grounds of Brooklyn, until now, is but natural. Its evolution from a gentleman's sport, if I can call it so, to a profession, demanded these improvements. Baseball, in common with other sports, professions and trades, cannot and must not stand still. Its success and popularity depends as much and more upon these successive improvements, and upon brain, than upon brawn and muscle. It would be the height of folly to compare the baseball of the early 60's with the baseball of today. But in all baseball justice, I must say that when I saw the Atlantics play the Eurekas of Newark in 1865, I was just as enthusiastic, just as ardent a rooter for my home team, as I was for New York against the Cubs last season. The fans and rooters in those days were no different from the ones of the present day, either. In those days the Atlantics from Brooklyn, the Mutuals of New York, the Irvingtons, the Athletics of Philadelphia, and later the Haymakers of Troy, and the Nationals of Washington, were household words, and Dickey Pierce, Ferguson, Creighton, Joe Start, Lip Pike, Al Reach, Andy Leonard, Bill Sweazy, McMahon, Berthrong, and later in the early 70's, George and Harry Wright, Tim Murnane, A. G. Spaulding, Anson, Davey Force, and many others, were as great heroes to the baseball loving public of those days as McGraw, Chance, Brown, Evers, Donlin and Mathewson is today. The progress in baseball has been slow, very slow. It has taken many years of careful thought to bring it to the stage of perfection that it is in today. It has many ardent followers, but I question very much if there are many that can tell you who introduced the Knickerbocker uniform worn today, or who invented the mask or the mits and gloves and other mechanical devices used for the protection of players. Personally, my first recollection of the Knickerbocker uniform was when Harry Wright introduced them with the Cincinnati Reds in '70. Doc Bushong was the first one I ever saw with a mask on, and who wore the first big mit or who evolved it, I do not know, and I question very much also if there will be anyone who can remember ten years from now that Roger Bresnahan was the first one who ever wore a shin guard.

Frawley Still Has Idea of Oriental Conquests

With reference to the proposed invasion of the Orient by T. Daniel Frawley, published in THE DRAMATIC REVIEW last season, his original plans are to be strictly carried out. "My time in foreign countries," says the doughty Tim, "is now already booked up to next spring. The Orient is surfeited with vaudeville, but it is hungry for the high-class dramatic productions, of which it has had none for years. I will leave the Lois in Seattle early in August, as my company is to be rehearsed, and I aim to have it play for one week in that city before our departure in order to get all productions in smooth working order. About August 25th we will take steamship from Seattle for San Francisco, leaving the latter port immediately for Honolulu, where on September 4th we open a three weeks' engagement. On October 10th we open in Yokohama, Japan, and one week later begin a very brief engagement in Kobe. October 16th to 30th will be spent in Shanghai. Our season of two weeks in Hong Kong will begin on October 31st. November 20th will see us installed in Manila for our long engagement in the Philippine capital of six weeks. Then will follow engagements in Singapore, Penang, Colombo, Rangoon and Mandalay, bringing us up to February 4th, the night we open in Calcutta, India. All of February and March we spend in India, including two weeks in Bombay. I open in Cairo, Egypt, on April 3d, for a stay of four weeks. That is as far as the tour has been definitely mapped out. However, Mr. Harold Ashton, an Australian manager, representing J. C. Williamson, the Charles Frohman of the antipodes, was last week in Seattle, and from my conferences with him, I find I will be able to meet Mr. Williamson in Seattle before my departure. If satisfactory arrangements can be made with him, I will take the company from Cairo direct to Australia to play all of the leading cities."

Chinese Dramatic Crudities

Here is a sample of one of the naive bits of Chinese stagecraft. Hom Ling, leading tragedian, playing the part of the Younger Son, renders a solo which means that the widow and orphans are going to the temple to celebrate funeral rites. The property man sets on the stage a little box for an altar and throws over the widow's head a white veil, symbol of mourning. Then Hom Ling, as the Younger Son, waves his hands and kicks his foot like a man punting a football. This signifies that the rest of the family is out of his sphere of action. The scene has officially changed from a house to a temple. So while the rest of the family kneels before the altar. Hom Ling strolls over and chats with one of the musicians who happens to be resting. —Will Irwin, in the June Everybody's.

The Menzel stock company, which is headed by Kernan Cripps, will close their Fresno engagement on July 4. The Empire Theatre, which is playing the company, will remain closed until September 13.

The election of candidates for the board of directors of the Actors' Society was held in the rooms of the society, Wednesday, June 9th. The annual meeting was held June 10th, at 11 a. m., at which the officers were elected for the ensuing year.

Carrie Goebel Weston

This charming young daughter of Mrs. Ella Weston of Pantages Theatre in this city, will complete her local musical education next week and will probably next year be sent to Europe for the finishing touches. Miss Weston has been musical from her childhood days, and as Little Carrie was known as the child wonder with the violin. With the development of temperament and through the succeeding years of hard study, she has become an exquisitely beautiful player on the violin, and the future will, we feel sure, proclaim her a great mistress of the instrument that can be made to speak with almost human power.

News and Notes of Actors Fund

Thomas McGrath, in charge of the registration bureau, reports the continued enthusiasm throughout the profession regarding the new departure of the Actor's Fund averaging about one hundred registrations each week and new members to about half that number. The promised lists from managers are beginning to come in and activity about the fund offices is now up to fever point. The members of the profession are demonstrating their interest in their own charity (the Actors' Fund of America), and every day brings new converts to the cause. Registration is nearing the 2,000 mark and the annual list has passed the 3,000 mark. Some of the reasons, etc., why you should register at the Fund. Why not have your professional address "The Actors' Fund of America?" it is the legitimate clearing house for all things theatrical. Addresses are 'phoned for every day. Is yours among the number? The cost is nominal ($3), and you are not only helping yourself, but also the grandest and broadest charity in any profession in the world. Is it worth your while to join the Fund? There is but one answer, don't delay, even tomorrow your address may be asked for. It can not be sent out if you are not a registered member of the Actors' Fund. Your name and address reaches all the large producing managers. In no other way except as a member can such a result follow: Show all managers that you have some business ability, and also a pride in your own charity—if you are not registered do so at once. There should be 5,000 registered members of the Actors' Fund of America by or before September 1—think of it as a business move if nothing else. Don't continue to put off becoming a member of the actors' fund. No prouder statement can be made by any member of the profession than this: "I am a registered member of the Actors' Fund of America."

vorite with the public than any other dramatic author. * * * The Germans take the theatre seriously, as a record of the performance of the works of great authors during the season of 1907-1908 plainly shows. The list has been compiled by Breitkopf and Hartel of Leipzig, and covers all the first-class theatres in Germany. Schiller was played 1,441 times, William Tell, alone having reached 292 performances; Sudermann was played 1,202 times; Shakespeare, 945; Nildenbruch, 938; Goethe, 705; Bernstein, 510; Hauptmann, 476; Hebbel, 409; Lessing, 370; Gillparzer, 369, and Moliere, 185. ### Seattle Fair

Twenty Southern Pacific passenger agents from all parts of the Pacific system visited the Alaska-Yukon Exposition today and were unanimous in their praises of all that they saw. It's a wonder, unique among all similar expositions. It tells a big story to the people of all this nation, true story of what there is to be found today in Alaska and the great Northwest. Every building ready on opening day, June 1, and flags flying and bands playing just as they will continue until closing, October 15. The exposition as it stands represents an investment of about ten million dollars. The forestry building, made of monster timber from forests of Washington, is most remarkable of all the buildings, while the Alaska exhibit tells in detail of the country that has yielded two hundred and ninety-six million dollars worth of products in the past thirty years. The buildings and grounds are remarkably well arranged, so that one can get about easily without weariness and all details most artistic in conception.

F. W. Walters of Medford, Ore., is planning to present a series of opera there this summer, for four nights a week.

George Bovyer

The most enthusiastic "Coast defender" of them all, whom a cruel fate called East about ten years ago and kept there until two months ago, is George Bovyer, the new manager of the Sullivan & Considine houses in Los Angeles. ## Managers Elect Officers

The National Association of Theatrical Producing Managers, which met recently in New York at the Hotel Astor, elected the following officers and directors: Henry B. Harris, president; Jules Murry, secretary; Henry W. Savage, Hollis E. Cooley, B. E. Forrester, Joseph Brooks and W. F. Connor, directors. After being escorted to the chair the new officers, Messrs. Harris and Murry, made short speeches expressing their appreciation and pledged themselves to devote all their energy to the faithful performance of the duties entailed. The association since its incorporation has won a number of victories for its members. It has obtained an amendment to the criminal code in Canada with respect to play piracies and is assured that a new copyright law will be acted on by the next session of Parliament; it has been instrumental in obtaining the new copyright law in the United States; has secured thirty-five rebates on overcharges by railroads; out of twenty-two complaints made to the Interstate Commerce Commission it has won twenty; more than 100 disputes which would have entailed litigation have been amicably settled and a large amount saved in court costs; approximately 500 complaints involving legal rights have been received and all but four adjusted, and 300 instances of play piracy have been acted upon and in every instance successfully, in some cases even resulting in the ringing down of the curtain during the performance.

Election in Actors' Society

The 13th annual meeting of the Actors Society of America was held Thursday, June 10, at 11 a. m., in the rooms of the society, President Thos. A. Wise in the chair. After the secretaries and treasurers reports had been read, the officers for the ensuing year were elected. Thos. A. Wise was re-elected unanimously to the office of president; Miss Fanny Cannon, re-elected to the vice-presidency; H. Nelson Morey was unanimously elected to the office of secretary, replacing George Seybolt, who was not a candidate. George T. Meech was re-elected treasurer. The following directors were elected: Ralph Delmore, Fanny Cannon, Wm. Courtleigh, Oscar Eagle, Edward Locke, Lionel Adams, W. D. Stone, Harold Woolf, George Seybolt, Lillian Kingsbury, George T. Meech. The president in his address congratulated the society upon its very healthy and flourishing condition and the deep interest that all of its members have taken in this well-known society. He drew attention to the fact that one year ago the society was heavily in debt, but owing to the splendid work of the board, was pleased to state that all outstanding debts had been paid and that we now start the new fiscal year with a healthy bank balance. Almost 200 new members have been elected to the society during the past 11 months. The society numbers almost 1,000 members in good standing. Mr. Wise also spoke of the great amount of work that has been done by the play-reading committee. Out of 300 plays that have been read, 10 have been accepted as worthy of production. Three of these have been placed with responsible managers for next season. The play-reading bureau will certainly be a big factor in the society's future. The Actors' Society was largely instrumental in getting the Voss employment agency bill through at Albany. Over 700 engagements have been made through the society's dramatic agency since last September, the commissions on which will net the society over $8,000. The idea of the actors' fund and the Actors' society working together under the same roof was thoroughly discussed and referred to the board of directors for their final action. Valuable donations to the library have been made by Georgia Wells Memorial consisting of 80 books, and the Sarah Stevens Memorial, consisting of 8 volumes of the Furness Variorum edition of Shakespeare. Also a new limited edition of The Drama in 22 volumes, by the president, Thos. A. Wise. Regular monthly receptions with prominent people as guests of honor will be held throughout the coming season, and on June 30 at 11 p. m., a reception will be given to the officers of the society at their home, 133 West 45th street.

German Actors Are Illy Paid

After reading official reports and calmly considering the figures which tell of average salaries, the stage-struck boys and girls of Germany still persist in chasing the rainbow. It can be said that they are at least courageous and that they have been duly warned. That the alluring brilliancy of the stage covers a lot of misery is shown in the statistics furnished by the stage association. A few theatrical artists in Germany receive salaries of $6,000 to $10,000, but at the same time 50 per cent of the theatrical people, including chorus singers and supernumeraries, receive less than $200 a year. About 20 per cent earn $200 to $300, 20 per cent $300 to $600 and the remaining 10 per cent rise above $600 a year. Thus it appears that only 10 per cent of the stage folk in Germany gain enough to enjoy anything better than a meager living. The best salaries, of course, are paid at the court theatres and at the municipal theatres of the big cities. All in all, the figures present only a miserable perspective for the aspirants. Theatres in the provincial cities and the smaller court theatres pay an average yearly salary of $240. Stars in these theatres are paid from $200 to $480. Out of these meager sums the artists are frequently obliged to expend from $40 to $160 for their wardrobes. A few instances are cited showing what kind of lives some of the actresses lead. In Hanau an actress was engaged at $8 a month. The engagement was made on condition that she also play fourteen days in Putbus and a month in the Kurhaus Theatre at Hamburg with no pay at all. Furthermore, she was obliged to pay her own traveling expenses in going to these places from Hanau. At Erfurt, where there is a population of more than 100,000, the director of a theatre made a contract with a "leading lady," according to which she was obliged to play in the municipal theatre and appear at a cabaret, all on no salary at all. Another of the terms of the contract was that she take lessons in dramatic art from the director, paying him $9 for eight lessons. At the Volks Theatre in Nurnberg, a city of 230,000 inhabitants, the salaries range between $12 and $35 a month. All the figures quoted above are taken from reports relating to 411 theatres in Germany for the season of 1908-09.

Burroughs Stock for Santa Rosa

Clarke Burroughs inaugurated a season of stock at the new Columbia Theatre in Santa Rosa last Sunday, playing three nights a week there and then moving over to the Unique Theatre of Petaluma. Mr. Burroughs will have a small company and will present 40-minute sketches, filling out the entertainment with vaudeville acts. The company will be composed of Clarke Burroughs, Maud Frances, Paul Brattain, Marie McCourt and Edward Flynn.

MME. LILLIAN NORDICA gave her farewell concert at Queen's Hall in Paris last Thursday, amid scenes of extraordinary enthusiasm. Americans in the big audience included the Duchess of Marlborough, the Duchess of Manchester, Countess Strafford, Lady Lister-Kaye, Lady Paget, Lady Craven and J. P. Morgan. When the singer first appeared the entire audience arose and cheered, and she received a memorable ovation at the close of the concert.

Something of a Sensation

One of the new sensations of the season is the Virginia Shelton company, which is now playing three weeks over the Great Western Theatrical Circuit time. At Napa, last Monday, the play scored heavily, as will be seen by the following from the Napa Journal: "Only a fair-sized audience greeted When Love Is Young at Napa opera house on Monday evening. The company was one of the strongest and best that ever showed here, and the theater should have been packed. A heavy play, the touching little love story that runs through it makes it highly interesting. The production of it greatly pleased those who were fortunate enough to be present. When Love Is Young is a play in three acts which Charles Swickard has adapted from one of the great German dramas of the present generation. The action is laid in a small village of Polish West Prussia, away from the railroad, in a quiet nook in the hills, untouched by the hustle and bustle of modern life and as calm and placid as are its surroundings, so does the play open in the parish of Rosenau. The plot is confined to the household of the village pastor, which consists of Father Vincent, Anna, his niece, over whose birth there hangs a cloud, her half-brother, Amandus, and Father Gregory, the curate. The latter is secretly arranging for Anna's entrance into a cloister, to which she reluctantly consents until the arrival of Hans Hartwig, a young student and distant relative of hers, whose appearance not only disturbs the calm serenity of the parish household, but who also brings with him the first discordant note from the great outer world. Previous to his arrival, her sole concern besides administering to the wants of the small household, is the welfare of her half-witted brother, Amandus. All this is suddenly changed when Hans appears on the scene and Anna instantly falls in love with him. All her affections are from that moment transferred to the subject of her love and as a natural consequence her brother is slighted. This arouses in the dull intellect of the idiot a bitter resentment toward Hans, the unwitting cause of his sister's change toward himself. Therewith Anna has unconsciously sown the seed for the coming tragedy. Her uncle, a man of gentle and tender sentiment, is too busy with his own thoughts and dreams of his past youth to notice what is taking place around him. The zealous curate, ever ready to suspect, warns him in vain and Anna, whether from inborn weakness or sheer desperation, it matters little, follows in the footsteps of her unfortunate mother. The sole witness of her clandestine meeting with her lover is her brother, who in a fit of rage at her refusal to give him sweetmeats when he demands them, reveals all to the suspecting curate, who in turn informs the pastor. The latter, finally realizing what has happened, demands the immediate separation of the lovers, and as the two erring children are saying a tearful farewell the idiot brother takes his final revenge, which, though directed at Hans strikes Anna, in her vain effort to save her sweetheart from harm. This is a brief outline of the play that is bound to create a sensation.

Navassar Band At Idora Park

The Navassar Ladies' Band, which has been delighting the eye and tickling the ear at Idora Park, Oakland, for a fortnight past, is now in the midst of a series of farewell concerts. These concluding programs of a pleasing engagement will be rendered every afternoon and every evening up to and including next Tuesday night. On Wednesday the fifty girl musicians will leave for the East, and, on the afternoon of the same day, the vacated music shell will be filled by Erlinger's Band, of Chicago, and Bert Morphy, "the man who sings to beat the band." The Navassars will terminate their stay at Idora with concerts that promise many treats. The daily change of program will be made up of those selections which have proved to be the greatest favorites with music lovers during the engagement. Marches and spectacular pieces will predominate, with an occasional digression to the heavier compositions. All of the soloists will be heard at every concert. At least two of these Nellie Mae Hoone, triple-tongue cornettist, and Elizabeth Shipley, clarinet, have proved themselves clever artists. Particularly delightful are the renditions of The Death of Custer and The Anvil Chorus, among the many descriptive numbers played by the Navassars. These will be given frequently before their engagement terminates. Of the entertainers who arrive Wednesday, there has been much favorable comment by the Eastern press and public. Erlinger's Band is said to be an exceptional organization. It carries such well-known soloists as William Pixley, euphonium, and Victor Trovato, clarinet. Miss Beatrice Fischer is the vocal soloist. Bert Morphy, who does not travel with the band but will sing to its accompaniment, is said to have a voice of phenomenal strength. His repertoire is composed almost entirely of popular songs, which he sings to the accompaniment of the band playing full forte. Thus has he earned the reputation of "the man who sings to beat the band." Another of the many attractive offerings at Idora is Kennedy's X. I. T. Wild West Show and congress of nations, which has been brought from New Mexico and which will camp in the field encircled by the auto race course. It opens Sunday.

Frazee is Busy

These are busy times, writes H. H. Frazee, the Chicago manager, to THE DRAMATIC REVIEW, preparing six big musical comedy companies of from forty to sixty people each, in time to open in August. Mr. Frazee will have two companies of The Time, Place and the Girl, two companies of The Girl Question, and one each of A Knight for a Day and A Girl at the Helm. Each play will be seen on the Pacific Coast the coming season, one of which has never been seen in the West, and in it Mr. Frazee will present Billy Clifford, who made a wonderful hit with the show last season.

The building will be ready for its opening with a new musical comedy about November 1st.

ANNOUNCEMENT has just been made at Los Angeles of the engagement of Marguerite Favar to Captain F. D. Tompkins. Miss Favar is virtually a newcomer on the Coast, having removed to Los Angeles from Chicago about a year ago, but already is popular in the southern part of the State, where she has met with success as a clever and dainty soubrette in musical comedy stock. Captain Tompkins is in charge of the property division of the Los Angeles Aqueduct and is the son of the late W. C. Tompkins, for many years a successful manager in New York and a member of the old firm of Liebler & Maas.

The Princess Opera Company Shows Los Angeles That It is a Good Organization

LOS ANGELES, June 24.—The Belasco company are repeating their success of last week in The Lion and the Mouse and are filling the house at every performance. Kolb and Dill closed their season at the Majestic, Sunday night, with a final performance of The Politicians. Percy Bronson of the Kolb and Dill forces will return to play under Harry Girard's direction when Sergeant Kitty is put on at the Majestic Theatre. Bronson is a good dancer and a clever comedian and his many friends here will be glad to hear of his return. Principals in the Morosco-Girard company will include Mary Nelson, Maebelle Baker, Percy Bronson, Agnes Cain-Brown and Mr. Girard himself, who will have the leading "straight" part. The chief comedy role will be entrusted to Henry Stockbridge, with Charles Giblyn also in the company. George Towle will direct the orchestra. William Collier has telegraphed Mr. Morosco that he has acceded to the terms offered, and has cabled to Charles Frohman for his consent to the local engagement. If this is given, Collier will come West at once, and will open at the Majestic about the middle of July in The Patriot. John W. Burton of the Burbank stock company will go East on a vacation trip next month. He expects to be gone six weeks, returning by September 1. Henry Stockbridge will play Francis Wilson's role in When Knights Were Bold, at the Burbank next week. The week following he will be transferred to the Majestic and will have an important part in Sergeant Kitty, which Harry Girard is to stage at that house and in which Agnes Cain Brown and Mr. Girard himself will sing the principal roles. We have missed the genial smile of Joseph Montrose, in his accustomed place at the Majestic this week. Mr. Montrose is ill and is confined to his home. We hope that his recovery will be speedy.

BELASCO—The immense success of the first week of The Lion and the Mouse at the Belasco has warranted Manager Blackwood's keeping it on for a second week. There is every indication that the house will be sold out at every performance this week.

BURBANK—The Traitor, a dramatic sequel to The Clansman, is the offering at the Burbank for the week. The Traitor is not a good play, and the characters are impossible. Mr. Morosco's company work hard to make the play a success, but even they can not do the impossible. The story of the play represents the effort of John Graham, chief of the Ku Klux Klan, to break up his organization after it has served its usefulness and is becoming a mere excuse for rascality, and at the same time to free himself of an ugly charge of murder hanging over his head as a member of the clan. William Desmond is cast as John Graham, Charles Giblyn is Steve Hoyle, the villain, and Willis Marks and Henry Stockbridge have negro character parts. Louise Royce is a negro mammy. A. Byron Beasley is a North Carolina mountaineer. Blanche Hall does good work as Stella Butler, and John Burton is good as the Hon. Reverdy Johnson of Maryland.

The balance of the long cast is in able hands and the company are to be congratulated on their efforts to make the thing "go."

MASON—The Princess Theatre Company in Piff, Paff, Pouf, is holding forth at the Mason. There is good fun in this bill, but it requires no serious thought and hence furnishes a pleasant entertainment. Fred Mace plays the Eddie Foy part, and he is very clever in the role. James F. Stevens as Piffle does some really good singing. He has a fine baritone voice of richness and power, and he uses it well. Budd Ross is cast as Paffle and is a very clever comedian. Zoe Barnett, who is a Los Angeles girl, is being cordially welcomed by her many friends here. She does good work with the company. May Boley does some good story telling and is a clever mimic. Helen Darling has a pleasing soprano voice. The chorus is all that can be desired, and the Princess Company is a good stock organization. Their other bills are stronger, and each one will have an opportunity to show what he can do.

MAJESTIC—That much-talked-of play, Three Weeks, holds the boards at the Majestic this week. All that can be said in praise is, that the players are capable and really could do good work if they had an opportunity. The people in the cast include Beryl Hope, Harry C. Brown, William T. Hayes and a few others.

GRAND—The play which is furnishing all kinds of excitement and is also a favorite with the gallery is Bunco in Arizona, at the Grand. Alice Lewis is Bunco, and George Webb, the cowboy hero. Grace Rauworth and Marjorie Dalton make the most of their parts. George Fields does some excellent character work as Frenchy. A good line of comedy is done by Franklyn Hall, a new member of the company.

ORPHEUM—The bill for the week at the Orpheum is not as good as usual. The Baader-Lavelle trio of cyclists head the bill. They are indeed clever. They do everything imaginable with a wheel. Mazuz and Mazette are seen in an acrobatic absurdity. Frank and Jen Latona do several musical specialties. Peter Donald and Meta Carson have a Scotch interpolation, which is very good. The jokes are not only clever but really new. The Sunny South is done by ten colored entertainers. It is a song and dance specialty. The holdovers include Countess Rossi and Flo Adler and the Lulu Beeson Trio. Motion pictures complete the bill.

LOS ANGELES—The bill at the Los Angeles this week is a very good one. It is headed by the well-known comedian Sydney Grant. The Elite Four are second on the bill. Miller and Tempest present their acrobatic and dancing skit, Kix and Trix. Count de Butz and Fossil do some clever tricks on the bicycle. Zay Holland plays the violin and does it well. The Boyerscope shows new pictures and concludes the bill.

FISCHER'S—Annie Montgomery and the Eight Roly-Polys head the vaudeville bill at Fischer's this week. Miss Montgomery's swing song and two specialties make a pronounced hit.

Priscilla Knowles

It is good news to Oakland theatre-goers that Priscilla Knowles has consented to remain with them. In the consequent reorganization of the Broadway stock, when Landers Stevens purchased an interest and changed the name to the Stevens-Cooper Stock, it was feared that Miss Knowles might not stay. Never in the history of Oakland theatricals has a leading woman endeared herself more to theatre-goers than has this handsome, clever young woman. Her work has received unqualified approval and her personality and exquisite taste in dressing make her a valuable member of any stock. As an emotional leading woman, she is of the first rank.

Miss Swan Wood is featured in a solo dance, the Blue Feather. Frank M. Weeks, who bills himself as America's greatest banjoist, proves an adept at picking the strings and supplying black-face comedy. Ballard and Alberta have a pleasing little sketch, Dick's Return, which abounds in farce-comedy and new song hits. Leon Le Chatier has a pleasing voice and sings character and popular ballads effectively.

UNIQUE—Three excellent vaudeville acts and a sparkling musical comedy comprise the bill at the Unique this week. La Salle and Lind present a clever club juggling act in which they pass eight clubs at the same time. Fern and Mack present a tramp specialty. Harry Fields has a clever monologue, during which he introduces his Hebrew and Italian character work. My Uncle from Japan, J. T. Kelly's second production at the Unique, is the funniest comedy yet presented by the Unique players. It serves to introduce the three new members of the company, Lillian Massey, James T. Kelly and Louise Lytton, in roles in which they are at home. James Kelly handles the principal comedy part of the role of Obadiah Dawson, who falls in love with a photograph and sends his nephew, Jack Martin, to interview her. The latter marries her, and the resulting comedy is keen and amusing.

WALKER—Elizabeth Houston and company of three people head a bill of rare excellence at the Walker Theatre, in a merry farcelet called A Cousin of Mine. Clever Madeline Rowe repeats the hit she made on her last visit. Her sweet voice, winsome manner and quick changes please. Wilbur S. Western, a newcomer, makes a pronounced success of his original offering, demonstrating why he has been a star in the Hi Henry aggregation for two seasons. His quaint Southern dialect is perfect, while his facial expressions fairly convulsed the audience. The new illustrated song, as sung by Joseph Manley, has a great swing and whistling quality. There are new motion pictures, and the "pop. concert," arranged by Director Nelson.

A four weeks' engagement of William Collier, in a repertoire of his most popular recent successes will follow the production of Three Weeks, at the Majestic Theatre. This is Manager Morosco's definite announcement. The plays in which Mr. Collier will appear have not yet been decided upon, and it is possible that Los Angeles may see another production of his stellar vehicle for the coming Eastern season. FLORENCE EMERY.

PHILIP SHEFFIELD, Verne Layton and George Clawson are in Tacoma with Henry McRae in his new stock venture in Bellingham.

NEW YORK, June 20.—F. Ziegfeld's latest "revue," entitled The Follies of 1909, was presented last Monday night at the Jardin de Paris, on the roof of the New York Theatre. The show consists of two acts and thirteen scenes, many of which are decidedly novel, including an airship which circles around the roof of the theatre over the heads of the audience. The lyrics were by Harry B. Smith, and the music by Maurice Levi. Half a dozen numbers are worthy of notice. The show started off with A Court of Venus and a burlesque upon the opera situation as it existed in New York last season. There is a Got a Cazzaza and a Herr Dimpel who have trouble over the policy of their opera house; a Caruso the Second and a half dozen Hammersteins made up to resemble the real owner of that name. A scene which was put on with considerable elaborateness was a representation of an African jungle. Harry Kelly made up as T. R., a Mighty Hunter, and Jack Norworth as Kermit provoked considerable amusement. There were many jibes at Mr. Roosevelt, and the way in which he is supposed to bag big game was thoroughly burlesqued. Interspersed throughout the two acts there are several unique numbers which give rapid action to the show. Bessie Clayton, the dancer, received much applause. Harry Kelly, Billy Reeves, Arthur Deagon, William Bonelli, and Maurice Hegeman furnished the fun. The best of the women parts were taken by Annabelle Whitford, Edna Chase, Elise Hamilton, Lillian Lorraine, Nora Bayes, Sophie Tucker, and Mae Murray. * * * Down near Coney Island a new vaudeville theatre was opened last week. It is called the New Brighton Theatre and stands at the foot of the Ocean Parkway. It is not the usual summer theatre, but is built of steel and cement and is quite as handsome and luxurious as many of the newer houses along Broadway. The spacious lobby resembled a flower garden at the opening performance. Percy G. Williams is the manager, and Dave Robinson is the active head of the syndicate which built the theatre. Of course there was a big audience. There was an excellent vaudeville bill to open the Brighton. Some of those who appeared were Valerie Bergere, in Billie's First Love; Raymond and Caverly, German comedians; the Willy Pantzer Trio, acrobats; Montgomery and Moore, in a musical act; Paul Kleist, in black-face fun; Bobby Dohn, the Rooney Sisters, and Stuart Barnes, in monologue. * * * That Shakespeare is not obsolete and that, in the hands of competent players, his work can attract large audiences was shown once more last week by the Sothorn and Marlowe Company in the Academy of Music, in Twelfth Night, a comedy whose humor is somewhat old-fashioned, although its love scenes have the perennial glory of youth. From beginning to end the audience laughed at and applauded the grotesque pomposity of Mr. Sothorn's Malvolio, one of his finest Shakespearean parts, as well as the antics of Mr. Buckstone's Sir Toby Belch, and Mr. Bradley's Sir Andrew Aguecheek, capital performances both, while its applause for the graciousness, loveliness and sweet, womanly dignity of Miss Marlowe's Viola—a womanliness that could not be hidden underneath her masculine hosen—was as spontaneous and continuous as that which greeted her companion's Malvolio. It was a perpetuation of the best Shakespearean traditions informed throughout with a pleasant individuality. All the supporting company showed careful training and intelligent comprehension of the text. * * * Henry Hall last week succeeded William T. Hodge in the role of Mr. Pike in The Man from Home, at the Astor Theatre. Mr. Hodge, who married Helen Hale on Sunday, has started on a honeymoon trip which will last two months. Mr. Hall has been playing the leading role on tour. * * * Mrs. Fiske, who has been appearing in Salvation Nell in San Francisco, will be seen in a new play early next season. Her New York engagement will be played in Dalys Theatre. She will open her next season in October and will continue to present Salvation Nell in cities where it has not been seen until the new play is ready. * * * Adelaide Wise, a sister of Thomas A. Wise, now playing the title role in A Gentleman from Mississippi at the Bijou, has been engaged to play the role of the stenographer in the comedy.

ROB ROY.

SAN BERNARDINO, June 22.—After having been dark for several weeks, the Opera House (Mrs. M. L. Kiplinger, mgr.) afforded its patrons a veritable treat last night with Kolb and Dill, in The Politicians. There was an excellent house to enjoy the comedy, singing and dancing. Next Saturday night, 26, Murray & Mack will hold the boards in A Night on Broadway. The Unique Airdome (J. W. Leonard, lessee and mgr.) opened last Monday with an excellent vaudeville bill. This open-air place of amusement, with change of bill weekly, promises to be a popular and well-paying place of amusement during the coming summer. At the Unique Theatre (J. W. Leonard, lessee and mgr.) Harry Hollingsworth and company are presenting melodrama of the lurid type nightly, with frequent change of bill; business has been fair and the productions all that could be expected at popular prices. M. B. Curtis of Sam'l of Posen fame has been in this vicinity for several months, endeavoring to finance a new theatre building. He claims now to have plenty of money in sight to purchase the lot and erect a modern theatre building, at a cost of about $25,000, seating about 1,700, at which the initial performance will be given this winter. J. E. RICH.

SAN RAFAEL, June 23.—Tom Phillips is leaving San Rafael! Tom Phillips, the impresario, booster and king of hustlers, will go back to Gotham to take up once more the burdens of a stage manager. Eighteen months ago Phillips came to San Rafael in search of health, having suffered a physical breakdown in Nevada after blazing the way for the Southern Nevada Theatrical Company. He was the first theatrical man to open up Southern Nevada to managerial enterprise. When Phillips came to San Rafael he took over the management of the Garden Theatre. He has placed San Rafael on the map, so to speak, for theatrical enterprise, and while his efforts have not always met with the appreciation on the part of the public to which they were justly entitled, he has never lost faith in his profession. Tom Phillips is going home now. San Rafael is sorry to lose him. To show him that he takes with him their esteem, friendship and appreciation his friends have decided to induce him to accept a benefit performance in which those whom he has charmed with his theatrical efforts will now assume the roles of erring thespians. They—and this includes a conglomeration of local talent such as has never been gathered before at any occasion—will sing, dance, play, recite, move to laughter and sway in tears the host of people who are expected to assemble that night to bid farewell to "Genial Tom." Saturday, July 17, is the date set for the gala performance.

PETALUMA, June 24.—Hill Opera House (J. R. Roche, lessee and mgr.)—Richard J. Jose and company was the attraction Wednesday night, and the famous contra-tenor was greeted by a full house. The three-act farce comedy, Jane, was presented. Jose sang as usual between acts and the old melodies were enjoyed by all. Friday night, June 25, Damon and Pythias. At the Unique Theatre the Clark Burroughs company is giving a sort of vaudeville-dramatic attraction, which is ordinary. Beginning Sunday, Manager A. L. Wells of the Hill will open a season of high-class vaudeville.

EUREKA, CAL., June 17.—Ingomar Theatre (Willard Wells, mgr.): The Elleford Company is playing to fair business and giving splendid satisfaction. They have always been great favorites here. Auda Due was given a great reception upon coming back, as was also Pietro Sosso. The company is good and are presenting their plays very satisfactory. Their first week they changed plays every other night, while this week they changed every night. The Osborn Children have made a hit here. Margarita Theatre (Shaw & Girton, mgrs.): The Harry Hollingsworth Company closed last week after playing fourteen performances to fair business. Iva Shepard, the leading woman, was greeted and entertained by her many friends while here. The Burns-Johnson fight pictures were presented last Friday, Saturday and Sunday, being booked by the Great Western Circuit. The pictures were good, as was also the business. Empire Theatre (Jas. Van Sant, Jr., mgr.): The Carless Company is playing to good business at this theatre. They change plays twice weekly. The company is booked for four weeks. Pastime Theatre: Moving pictures, to fair business.

SPOKANE, June 20.—Nat Goodwin and Edna Goodrich appear at the Spokane Theatre, 21-22, in The Easterner and The Genius, to a large sale. The bill at the Orpheum is headed by the English comedienne, Lily Lena. Her songs are excellent, catchy, and she sings them with charming expression. Charles Dana Gibson's electrified Girl Review; Julius Tannen; Luigi Brothers; Whittier-Harries Players; the Three Donals; Hyman Meyer, and Orpheum pictures. Washington has a good bill. It includes the Five Jordans; Four Telegraph Messenger Boys; Alta Yolo; Frank and Black; Gruet and Gruet; Commencement Days, by Phyllis Lee company; Four Fantastic Ladells; L. A. Lawrence and G. E. Edwards; Marguerite and Hanley; Kimball and Donovan; William D. Gilson, song illustrator, and motion pictures. The Majestic Theatre with vaudeville and moving pictures are doing well. Bert Morphy, "The man who sings to beat the band," has closed a two weeks' engagement at Natatorium Park. He is a strong attraction. His voice is a marvel to all who have heard him. He will be heard next in Idora Park, Oakland. Bowen's American Band is one of the best organizations Spokane has ever had and the afternoon and evening concerts are drawing large crowds to the park. Liberati's Band will play here July 11-12; Fifty-sixth Regiment Band, August 7-10; St. Olaf College Band, August 21, and week. SMYTH.

Pretty, talented and popular Grace Travers will have a splendid opportunity as Arrah Meelish, the sweetheart of Shaun the Post, in Arrah-na-Pogue at the Valencia Theatre this coming week. Miss Travers has a native brogue that trips from her tongue most readily, and with her blue eyes and coal black hair will certainly look the character to an eyelash.

PORTLAND, Ore., June 21.—BUNGALOW THEATRE (George L. Baker, mgr.; Milton Seaman, business mgr.)—At last The Merry Widow has arrived. For many months we have heard of this wonderful success, but it was not until yesterday that Portland theatregoers had the pleasure of witnessing the production. Meanwhile we just sat down and waited and the more we heard of the play the more we wanted to see it, and be it said to its credit that when it did come we were not one bit disappointed, for it is really one of the most pleasant things that one has ever witnessed. We all know that when a play comes labeled Henry W. Savage that we are to get full money's worth, and that, although it may not be the original company, nothing will be lacking that would not put it on the same footing as the originators. In yesterday's production in this city, Mabel Wilber was cast as Sonia, and be it said to her credit that it would be hard to think of any one playing the role better than she does. Her singing is first class, her dancing is graceful, and withal, she has a bewitching personality. George Damerl was cast as Danilo, and, barring some evidence of hoarseness, was satisfactory. The principal comedy roles are entrusted to those two past master comedians, Tom Leary and Oscar Figman, and all the comedy that was possible was well accounted for. The company carries a large orchestra, which adds greatly to the enjoyment of the performance. Taken altogether it is really the hit of this season's offerings. Ethel Barrymore comes to this theatre, 27. John Drew follows.

ORPHEUM THEATRE (James H. Erickson, mgr.)—It was a toss up for honors the past week at this house. Laddie Cliff was billed as the feature act, but the Eight Madcaps and the Three Leightons could easily be mentioned as the headliner as well as the one mentioned. The Eight Madcaps did a singing and dancing act that could not be excelled, and the Three Leightons offered the playlet, A One-Night Stand in Minstrelsy, which was one continuous laugh. Ollie Young and brothers in their hoop rolling was also a first-class act. This week's bill is as follows: Margaret Moffat and company in Awake at the Switch; George Hillman; Sisters Athletas; Armstrong and Clark; Loney Haskell; Londe and Tilly, and the Three Bohemians.

LYRIC THEATRE (Keating & Flood, mgrs.)—The musical comedy announced for this week is Uncle Heinie's Vacation. The Imperial Musical Comedy Company are doing well at this house and give a creditable popular-priced performance. In yesterday's bill Charles Connors and Ed Armstrong played the principal comedy roles, and Clara Howard, the soubrette of the company, was well received.

GRAND THEATRE (James H. Erickson, mgr.)—The bill for the week commencing today is: Dumitrescu Troupe are the headliners, and the other acts are Leo Cooper and company; Kelly and Remo; Virginia Grant; Don and Thompson; The Darts, and Fred Bauer.

Pantages has Wise and Milton for their headliner and Ying Lee and Athon Company for their added act.

OAKLAND, June 24.—Monday night we had the pleasure of witnessing Bishop's new stock company, and Bishop's promise of a fine production of The Girl of the Golden West was more than fulfilled. Of the new leading players there is much to be said. Sydney Ayres has everything that his friends have claimed for him—a tall and stately appearance, well modulated voice, easy, graceful movements and a very conscientious regard for detail work. In addition to all of this, he showed a thorough understanding of his role. Florence Oakley, who will in future be seen in all the leading feminine roles, gives one the impression that she is the best leading woman that Bishop has ever had. She has a wonderful personality, beautiful features, a stunning figure and a winning way about her that made an immediate hit with the audience. Her work was finished and effective. Of the old faces, George Webster, Henry Shumer and Robert Harrison, were prominent in the cast and did splendid work. Robert Lawlor, Walter Whipple and William Wolbert were new to the audience and gave performances thoroughly satisfactory. The play was presented on an elaborate scale, the stage settings and scenic effects being much in evidence. The play will continue all week and will then give way to The First Born. At the Macdonough, Ethel Barrymore gave two performances of Lady Frederick, 22-23, and those who attended were accorded a rare treat. Miss Barrymore was seen to the very best advantage, and her support was good. The Merry Widow, week of June 28th, and then Marie Doro, July 4-6. At the Broadway, Landers Stevens is in his second week of Raffles and is packing the house at every performance. Nightly ovations for Stevens, Georgie Cooper and Priscilla Knowles still prevail, and all the company share in the applause. Faust is in preparation for next week. At the Orpheum everything is running smoothly, and a small house is an unknown quantity. This week's bill is fully up to the Orpheum standard, and the reputation of the house for high quality entertainment is easily sustained. The following roster of acts will speak for itself: A Night at the Circus, Cheridah Simpson, Novelty Dancing Four, Pellaton and Foran in A Spotless Reputation, The Vindebonas, Billy Van, Claude Galling water and company, Mabel Hite and Mike Donlin. Kessler and Dunin, the Great Martynne, Toma Hanlon, Seibert-Lindley Co., Weston and Young Company and Mile. Nadje, are at the Bell and are giving good results. Seibert and Lindley and Gavin Dorothy have a splendid act and are greatly liked. Business continues good and there seems to be no diminishing in the size of the attendance. Mrs. Fiske will give one performance of Salvation Nell at the Liberty, 28. The Heart of Maryland will be the Fourth of July attraction at the Liberty. The Navassars are in their last week at Idora, and their departure will be a matter of regret, as their concerts were very much appreciated. The X. I. T. Ranch Wild West will follow.

LOUIS SCHEELINE.

PITTSBURG, June 18.—Mrs. Laura Biggar Bennett, the former famous theatrical star, has decided to resume the stage. Here today she said: "I am going on the stage again. Any act which I may put on now I presume will be tame, the public has become used to such as Salome or The Easiest Way. My former The Clemenceau Case would be simply a side-show to these, but I'm going back into the business anyway. I've had mine as an editress. Yes, I've had mine. I used to laugh at the stories about the editor of the Arizona Tombstone, but since I was an editress in Albuquerque, N. M., I believe all that I ever read. You see, I started in down there as editress of a paper to boost Bull Andrews in congress at Washington and succeeded in doing that. Then I would go out and solicit advertisements and would get a whole lot of them, leaving the office 'devil to run the sheet. Things would go fine until the collector would go round to collect on those advertisements I had obtained and then the people would laugh and say they never ordered any advertising." Mrs. Bennett created some excitement in court today appearing as her own counsel protesting against holding up of the sale of the Bijou Theatre to Klaw & Erlanger. She was told she must wait until Monday, when the case comes up for hearing.

PHILADELPHIA, June 20.—When Clyde Fitch started to write The Girl Who Has Everything he may have meant to produce a comedy, but apparently the plot got away from him and developed into melodrama. The comedy qualities are most nonexistent, but it is nevertheless an entertaining play as presented by the Orpheum Company at the Chestnut Street Theatre. William Ingersoll well carries on the work of the lawyer-lover, and Marion Barney is delightful as 18-year-old Sylvia Lang. The play has some sentimentality and a little humor and many dramatic points that arouse and hold interest. The most novel feature of the bill at Keith's Theatre is a monkey who can ride a bicycle. This simian was one of Normwood troupe of dogs and monkeys. Bert Leslie's act, Hogan in Society, was well liked. The rest of the bill was well up to date.

A. Burt Wesner

A real likeness of a real comedian. That is what is shown on our front page today. Burt Wesner, who has been in San Francisco now for nearly three years, is one of the valued members of the Alcazar Stock Company. He is an actor of the finest methods and is generally recognized as an exceptionally clever man. His best work is done in comedy portrayals, although in exacting and strong character parts he is extremely successful. We recall just now his masterly portrayal of the King in If I Were King, last year. It was one of the finest things done in this town in years.

Divorce a Great Boon to the World, Says Elinor Glyn

Elinor Glyn's dramatization of her own story, Three Weeks, points out most emphatically the great boon divorce is to the world, for were such a thing possible in the life of the "lady" in Three Weeks the play might have a different end. In this respect it is a powerful rebuke to the narrow-minded bigots who would make men and women bear for life the consequences of mistakes they made in unconscious ignorance. It also contains a mute appeal from women for love and affection from man—love that lives and manifests itself as much after marriage as before. In this everyday world man takes too much for granted, and many a wife who should be nourished and inspired by affection and love, figuratively starves from want of it. "My story and play have both aroused much discussion pro and con from the greatest minds of the day, but those who have looked for truth and beauty have pronounced for it with unerring enthusiasm, and those who have condemned it have done so either by delving beneath the surface for hidden meanings and judged it by their own coarse and vulgar inferences, or else have given it but superficial consideration and passed judgment without thought or justice. Those interested in the dramatic exploitation of my play have sought the uplifting view alone and by vitalizing the characters and reproducing the pictures of the beautiful localities in which the action occurred, hope to arouse an interest and receive a support that will not only be of pecuniary value but also serve all the more strongly to impress upon the public mind the lessons I have tried to put forth in my book and play." Three Weeks will be seen at the American Theatre, following The Blue Mouse.

The Merry Widow's Business Manager, Henri Gressitt, Arrives In San Francisco In His Private Car, Sonia

Henri Gressitt, business manager for Henry W. Savage, owner of many theatrical enterprises, arrived in San Francisco last week in the interest of that merry Viennese person known as Mine. Sonia, the blithesome widow. Mr. Gressitt has had many years of experience in the world of theatricals. His rise has been steady and he has seen the profession in most of the civilized countries of the globe. "But," says Mr. Gressitt, "my largest and most eventful experience has been in connection with Mr. Savage's greatest success, The Merry Widow. Mr. Savage is a Napoleon of managers, the only difference being that there is no St. Helena ahead for the man who has popularized Parsifal, whose Madam Butterfly was the artistic achievement of the decade, whose productions of The Merry Widow have even astonished Vienna. It was Mr. Savage who first thought of the idea of a special car for his business manager. He brought the matter to my attention when we were touring the country with Madam Butterfly. At that time he said it was obvious that a business manager who had a good many important matters to arrange, a good deal of writing to do, would save money and do better work if he had his secretary and other assistants in a private car, practically the same conveniences as we have in the New York offices. So the car was designed, and we have named it the Sonia, after that fascinating creature in Lehar's The Merry Widow. As we are on a tour of just ninety-two weeks, you can readily imagine how delighted I am with Mr. Savage's thoughtfulness." While on the subject of cars, it is not too much to say that this man Gressitt is a hero of one of the best jokes traveling about railroad circles. Gressitt, as his friends know, inclines to clothing. His wardrobe is a marvel of beauty and completeness. He is the Beau Brummel of the business. Several years ago, when Mr. Gressitt was managing Zaza, he was very much dissatisfied with the short cars the railroads were furnishing him for the purpose of carrying the scenery through the country. After several weeks in which the stuff was broken or damaged, Mr. Gressitt wired to his advance agent to see the railroad and get longer cars. "See here," said the agent, "my manager wires me for a 60-foot car and I have got to have it." "Who is your manager?" asked the railroad man. "Henri Gressitt," said the agent. "Oh," said the railroad man, without loss of time, "he wants a 60-foot car for his clothes." The business manager of The Merry Widow tells me that the work of Sonia and Danilo, particularly in the famous waltz scene, is tremendously trying. Not only do the two persons dance furiously, but there is a bending swing to the waltz which is very bad for breathing. The result is that the principals, seeking to produce a full volume of sound in the famous melody which they sing, are compelled to draw upon their energies to the limit. Mabel Wilber, a famous beauty, dancer and singer, has sung the part a great many times. Even Miss Wilber finds it absolutely necessary to take an occasional rest. "We have had several very strong companies playing The Merry Widow," said Mr. Gressitt, "but it is my belief that the organization which Mr. Savage is sending to the Pacific Coast is the best in the world, and when I say that, I mean it, and I think I know of what I speak. You know, of course, that this piece is now being played in every country of Europe from Scandinavia to Naples, from Madrid to St. Petersburg, from London to Belgrade. We are to send a company to Australia, and I have recent information that Hashima Yamagata, the well-known Tokio manager, is negotiating for the Japanese rights to the piece. I am a little puzzled whether the Japs can properly appreciate this operetta and whether the waltz will be a possibility with them. The chief musical instrument of Japan, as you know, is the samisen which will not lend itself, to my way of thinking, to the dreamy Viennese strains of the Lehar score. The Mexican rights to the piece have already been disposed of, and South America, as far as Buenos Ayres, will soon be in for a time of Merry Widow hats, skirts and waltzes. Thus, if I may be allowed to paraphrase, we find that one touch of melody makes the whole world kin. I am pretty sure that some of the good people of this city, and, in fact, the entire Pacific Coast, think that they have been treated badly by not having had The Merry Widow before, but this has been the great complaint ever since we left New York City. St. Louis, Kansas City and Cincinnati had The Merry Widow before Baltimore, and poor old city of Washington was unable to get it until we had a new President in the White House, and, believe me, when I tell you that we will play many so-called week stands next winter for the first time, so it is simply an old complaint. Mr. Savage could have sent out any number of companies, but he who has sent you the very best, still insists that you shall have the very best, or none, as far as he is concerned."

American Theatre

The Blue Mouse enters upon its third week at the American Theatre tomorrow. The Fitch farce has jumped into instant favor with theatregoers and crowded houses have greeted the performance nightly. The reported salacious and risqué comedy turns out to be just to the contrary and those who have gone to see it have been rewarded with a bright, sparkling play with plenty of action and clever lines. Elsa Ryan, as the Blue Mouse, is as charming as ever. By picking Miss Ryan for the Blue Mouse character, Clyde Fitch made no mistake.

Van Ness Theatre

When Charles Frohman took the ex-musical comedienne, Marie Doro, under his wing, with the determination to make the American public realize the worth and attractiveness of the young star. When Mr. Frohman shall have happened upon the right play, then Marie Doro will be good for at least a year in New York, and perhaps two. For there is no actress before the American public today who has quite the charming qualities of this young woman. There is a daintiness and an irresistible appeal about her. And there is, too, a very strong suggestion of emotional power, which probably will be found ready when the occasion requires. In the Morals of Marcus, a very pretty and sugary fancy, Miss Doro is a wholesome exposition of attractiveness, and her portrayal is developed in a highly intelligent way. Edwin Arden, who is a most entertaining middle-aged bachelor of somewhat prosy philosophical views and attitude, was magnificent. His great ability as an actor was once more given ample play, and his work was enthusiastically received. Mary K. Taylor a stunning woman of fine poise, made a great deal of a rather foolish character, the divorced Mrs. Mainwaring. Marion Abbott furnished a gem of a portrayal as the French maid, Antoinette. Fred Tiden has done better work than he gives us in the part of Pasquale. Mr. Tiden, who used to be possessed of a most admirable enthusiasm, is seemingly in a fair way to lose that very estimable quality. Too much repression is not good art, and does not particularly appeal to an audience. Marie Wainwright is the grande dame to the life. Her part is not of much opportunity. The setting of the first act was noticeably pleasing. The Morals of Marcus will continue next week.

Valencia Theatre

The second week of Mrs. Fiske's presentation of Salvation Nell is productive of extremely good business, many people who saw it the first week having taken the opportunity to witness a second performance, for there is so much to see, and such a wealth of detail beautifully done, that two, or even three visits, are necessary for the proper appreciation of this play and the intelligent efforts of the players. Following the last performance tonight, the stock company, headed by Arthur Cunningham, will return for a week of Irish comedy, and then a series of farces and comedies will be produced.

Princess Theatre

The popularity of the grand opera season continues without abatement. The very favorable impression left last week has resulted in creating a decided enthusiasm among both music lovers and theatregoers, and the house is practically sold out at every performance. The six weeks' stay of the company will be a record-breaker for this city, and will redound greatly to the credit of the management, who induced the company to come directly across the continent especially for this engagement. Commencing with Sunday night, the change of bill nightly has been adhered to, and the following repertoire has embraced the week's offering: Sunday evening, Cavalleria Rusticana and I'Pagliacci; Monday and Saturday evenings and Wednesday matinee, Lucia; Tuesday evening and Saturday matinee, Il Trovatore; Wednesday and Sunday evenings, Carmen; Thursday evening, Cavalleria Rusticana and I'Pagliacci; Friday evening, Fedora. This afternoon, Il Trovatore will be the bill, and tonight Lucia will be offered. A notable list of operas will constitute next week's repertoire.

Alcazar Theatre

Du Barry, a veritable triumph of pictorial opulence and finished, gripping acting, is finishing its second week to splendid business. Florence Roberts dominates the play with a wonderful portrayal of the name part and her support is in every way good. Following Du Barry, on Monday will be a comedy bill—The Country Girl—in which Miss Roberts is particularly clever, and a little classic in dramatic construction, Journey's End in Love's Meeting, which has never been seen in this city.

American Theatre

The Blue Mouse continues to do a wonderful business and the feeding of laughter to our theatre going public is evidently just what is wanted in San Francisco at the present moment. This, the first of the Shubert offerings, under the new condition of affairs, will continue for a third and last week.

Reno Will Have New Theatre

RENO, Nev., June 21.—The contract is believed to have been signed and the bond for lease accepted this week for the construction of a $40,000 theatre in First Street by United States Senator Nixon. Arthur Aylesworth, manager of theatres in Goldfield and Tonopah, was to put up a sufficient bond to insure Nixon for the lease to extend ten years. The theatre is to be constructed in accordance with plans submitted by the lessee, subject to the approval of the Senator.

August Belmont to Wed Eleanor Robson

LONDON, June 20.—It is learned on very excellent authority that the engagement of August Belmont and Eleanor Robson is to be announced and that the marriage of the American financier and the actress will take place in Europe this summer. It is impossible at this moment to confirm the report. Miss Robson, who has just crossed on the liner St. Paul from America, has only just reached here. The information, however, is most reliable and states that the news comes direct from one of the parties concerned.

The Richard Jose company closes July 3, after a prosperous tour of the State.

The Kolb & Dill show, after closing in Los Angeles, Sunday night, played San Bernardino, Santa Barbara, Monterey, Santa Cruz and San Jose, reaching the latter city last night, after which it closes.

Personals

The Elleford Company leaves today for six weeks in stock at Goldfield.

CHAUNCEY SOTHERN has joined Walter Sanford, who has a small company in Calgary.

WALTER HOFF SEELEY expects to leave today for New York City on a short business trip.

PHIL HASTINGS has added to his many duties that of press agent for Herr Fischer of Sutter Street.

DARRELL STANDING has joined the Lois forces in Seattle. He recently closed with the stock in Victoria.

The Place-Bell Stock Company closes in Santa Cruz tomorrow night. Show business in Santa Cruz has been decidedly quiet.

ROBERT H. BRACKETT, of the Clunie Theatre enterprises in Los Angeles, is in town for a few weeks, with Fischer's Theatre as his headquarters.

MYRTLE VANE, who was a great, glorious success in Vancouver as leading woman for Walter Sanford's Stock, returned to San Francisco last week, upon the closing of the stock, which gave way to Frank Healey's San Francisco Opera Company.

FRED E. WRIGHT, Shubert Brothers' special representative in advance of The Blue Mouse company, relates many interesting anecdotes of the Hoytian days at the old Bush Street Theatre. Wright was general agent of all the early Hoyt successes and passed a great deal of his time in this city when David Warfield was an usher at the old Bush.

GUSTAV FROHMAN, the eldest of the three Frohman Brothers, who are such distinctive figures in American theatrical life, is in town with the Marie Doro Company. Years ago, Mr. Frohman was the dominating theatrical figure in this city and promises before he leaves to give THE DRAMATIC REVIEW readers some recollections of those days. They will be extremely interesting.

AN interesting feature in Mrs. Fiske's production of Salvation Nell at the Valencia, is the appearance of the Merideth children. Little Meridith is the small, dirty faced urchin that nightly comes in for applause by his inimitable characterization of a slum swell. Los Angeles people will be surprised to learn of the success these talented children are meeting with while members of Mrs. Fiske's company.

Kolb & Dill will play a season in Seattle, opening early in August.

When Love is Young closed in Merced last Tuesday night. The excessive hot weather of the valley towns cooled the ardor of theatregoing to the extent that the management concluded discretion was the better part of valor and closed, although the show had received fine notices.

Vaudeville

The Orpheum

The Camille Trio at the Orpheum this week seem to supply the demand of vaudeville audiences by their "low comedy." Fifteen minutes of which is devoted to "slapstick" horizontal bar eccentricities that draws to a finale grotesquely hilarious. This trio have been top liners for many years in the leading vaudeville houses and those who will witness their very entertaining act this week will find it no less entertaining than their effort on past occasions. Warren, Lyon and Meyers in their clever little one-act musical comedy—as it may be classed—continue to make good with their audiences. It appears by the tumultuous applause accorded to this act each evening, the continued decline from the serious to the frivolous and the reception given this unique concoction of woman, song and music easily entitles it to the first mention of this week's review. Miss Meyers is a comedienne through and through and delighted the audience with her "Reflectograph" as well as little by-play and mimicry. An innovation comes to us with the opening of the program, Sisters Gasch doing marvelous feats in gymnastic equilibrium. Their act is a happy diversion from the usual "World's premier" as well as some of their attitudes. They are modest, refined and altogether interesting in their work. Miss Clark and Henry Bergman do some foot work and try a whirl in comedy repartee. James Thornton comes to us with a pleasing sermon and delights the audience with his humor as well as his barbershop talk, evidencing much real wit. His voice is not as good as it was wont to be, nevertheless his medley of many choruses proved a strong climax to his turn. From laughter we were carried into realms of melodrama with The Futurity Winner, which is rich in situations. It is the best picture ever presented on the vaudeville stage. Those horses alone are enough to thrill you, they lunge neck and neck for supremacy. The Orpheum feature picture, A Day in Peking, affords one a splendid spectacle. The holdovers, Elizabeth Murray and Adelaide in The Billposter's Dream, continue popular offerings.

Pantages-Empire

The Apache Dance is again offered for this week, but this time it is in the hands (or rather the feet) of a couple of clever performing canines. The Murrays present their clever little animals in a number of acrobatic stunts, but it remains for their Apache Dance to save the day. Shale and Cole, in a song and dance turn, in a tired-appearing manner, contribute a few songs and several clever steps. Abrams and Johns, in the old-reliable theme of a confiding wife and a deceitful hubby, bring forth many a laugh. Miss Johns is especially good in her tipsy scene. The Four Lincolns, as a singing quartet, can vastly improve on the comedy portion of their act, as it could easily be dispensed with as it is at present. The Saytons introduce an act of startling realism in the guise of alligators. The scenic effects are in strict keeping with the haunts of these reptiles and worthy of special mention. A canine member of the team as the baby member of the family forms an amusing feature of the act. Miss Evans, a singing and almost dancing soubrette, takes up a good portion of the bill with a big bunch of near-jokes and several songs. Moving pictures complete the roster.

Fischer's

Herr Fischer and his well trained troupe of clever actors are giving the Sutter street district a great laughing diversion in the form of Charley Alphin's absurdity, Twins. There is some good music thrown in, a number of comely dancing girls and the genial atmosphere of the Fischer Theatre, and the result is "good show." The leaders in the riot of fun are Ben Dillon, Will King, Tracey McDermott and Cecil Fitzgerald, the latter being called on a few hours' notice to take Comedian Vack's place, and to his credit be it said, he scored heavily and made decidedly good. Nellie Montgomery is still the pretty and vivacious soubrette. The show is one to please.

The National

If there is anyone that cannot find complete satisfaction in this week's program at this staple house, they should at once consult their family physician, as it is without a doubt one of the best offerings of the season. Mabel McKinley is the hit of the show. Miss McKinley has a beautiful voice, which is equally pleasing in either rag-time, classic selections or ye olden-time ballads. La Loie Helene, who created a sensation here some time ago in her Salome dance, returns with her new creation, Cleopatra's Death Dance. La Loie is magnificently costumed, in keeping with the character, yet modestly so, and her dancing is a revelation of dancing grace. Francesca Redding & Co., in a farce entitled The Man from Texas, are a relief from the slapstick acts so prevalent in vaudeville. The act is brimful of good sane comedy situations requiring clever and finished acting ability and again the parts are all evenly balanced and the unison of their work and support given each other combine to make the act a screaming success. Salome is backed off the boards when Ward Bros. appear in their abbreviated kilts and liberal display of shapely underpinning. Did I say shapely? Pardon me! But they are certainly side-splitters. A coming genius is to be found in Leo Murphy, a little shaver who shows a phenomenal touch on the violin. Cook and Rothert, in their own original Apache Dance, eliminate the suggestive features found in other dances of this nature. Miss Rothert is a danseuse of exceptional grace, and Cook contributes some clever stunts and impersonation, the one of D. J. Grauman as the next mayor of this city taking the house by storm. The Intruders, a comedy sketch, offered by Brennan and Downing Co., is a scream from start to finish. Moving pictures complete the bill.

Jessie Shirley, late of the Jessie Shirley Stock Company, will appear on the Orpheum Circuit in a dramatic sketch, The First Woman Governor, written by herself. Her support numbers three men. at every performance, and, as usual, complete satisfaction is carried away. Carroll Johnson is the feature attraction, and it is superfluous to say that he ably upholds the distinction. Carroll has lost none of his popularity with the audiences here, and his dancing is as graceful as of yore, and his usual immaculate appearance is in evidence. His recitation, The Fight to a Finish, is well worth hearing alone, aside from his other entertaining features. Al Cameron & Co. present a story in song, The Last of the Regiment, which is one of the prettiest acts seen in some time. The harmony is delightful, the scenery most picturesque and the comedy clean and wholesome. Bert Shepard, the Australian Whip Manipulator, introduces a novel and intensely interesting act. The accuracy with which he handles his whips is remarkable. Harry Burgoyne is a most entertaining feature of the bill with his typical Cockney songs and impersonations. Saona, presenting impersonations of celebrities, past and present, proves himself a master of the art of makeup. A versatile ventriloquist is to be found in Dan J.

Vaudeville Notes

A vaudeville circuit extending around the world is planned by John P. Squire, who arrived here with his wife, known on the stage as Rosa Barnes, on the steamer China Tuesday. Squire is interested in the Arcade Amusement Company, which controls a string of theatres in Northern China. He says that it is extremely difficult to get performers there because of the distance from the theatrical centers, and he is now on his way to New York to confer with a representative of Harry Rickards, an Australian manager, and thence to London to confer with other managers, with the idea of forming a circuit in the Orient which will make a complete round-the-world chain.

Billy Malan and Jim McGrath received the shock of their lives this week. Last Wednesday, June 16th, with a couple of fair friends, whom they were showing the rustic delights of Golden Gate Park, they came upon the badly decomposed body of a man who had killed himself several months ago. They notified the police, and then decided that was enough for one day.

Rumor says that Sid Grauman dropped a good-sized bundle of the long green on Frankie Neil last Saturday. Sid's middle name is Patrick. Maybe that accounts for it.

The Garrick will open about July 3d with the Yiddish Players as the attraction.

HOWARD HICKMAN and wife (Bessie Barriscale) and Fred Butler and wife (Adele Belgarde) have had their cars put in shape and next week will find them starting on a two weeks' vacation where the roads are good.

MORTIMER LAZARD, who has been managing the tour of Emma Eames and Emilio de Gogorza, is at home in Los Angeles after a busy season in the East. Mr. Lazard will remain there during the summer, and in the fall may return to New York to take up an important executive position in the office of the Henry Wolfsohn Company.

GEORGE FOSTER PLATT, stage director of the Valencia Theatre, and Gilmore Walker, his assistant, enjoyed their vacation during Mrs. Fiske's engagement seeing the wonders of the Yosemite Valley. Paul McAllister took an extended automobile tour through Lake County, George Osbourne visited his ranch near Fresno, Gerald Harcourt camped out on the Russian River, Robert Homans took his bride of a few weeks to Laurel Dell and Charles Dow Clark and Lillian Andrews visited friends in Los Angeles. They and the other members of the Valencia stock company feel greatly refreshed by their fortnight's rest, but all are eager to once more face the footlights and familiar faces of the Valencia's audiences.

A CABLE from London says that Maud Allan has signed a contract with R. E. Johnson of New York for an American engagement next year. The contract with Johnson stipulates that she is to give fifty performances in the United States; also that the orchestra accompanying her dances shall never number less than sixty players. Her first appearance in America will be in the Metropolitan Opera House in New York. Miss Allan's engagement will include San Francisco, her old home, where she was known as Miss Maude Durrant.

In his dressing-room at the Bentley Theatre, Long Beach, last Sunday evening Stanley Twist, a member of the stock company, shot himself in the left hand accidentally. His hand was fearfully powder burned. The accident happened after Twist had survived five acts of a thrilling military drama with all sorts of terrible escapades without getting a scratch. The cartridge in the weapon which caused the injury was a blank.

told it to a married man and so it is now an open secret. The young bride-to-be is Miss Edna Masonave, known professionally as Edna Mason, under which name she has appeared upon the stage. She possesses a beautiful contralto voice and has refused a number of flattering offers to appear in musical comedy. The last public appearance of Miss Masonave was with the Edgar Temple Comic Opera Company at the Auditorium in Los Angeles. The fact that Charlie Pike had even contemplated marriage comes as a distinct surprise to many. Pike has been connected with the Salt Lake road practically since the road was opened. It can be safely said that much of the Salt Lake Route's passenger traffic has been worked up by the genial Charlie, who has made a host of friends all over the Coast.

The Orpheum

The program for next week indicates a continuance of that high standard of vaudeville for which this popular theatre is so famous. Laddie Cliff, the seventeen-year-old English singer, dancer and comedian, who scored such an immense success recently in New York, will make his first appearance in this city. His humor appeals as much to the American as it does to the Englishman, and his eccentric dancing never fails to excite the greatest enthusiasm. That fascinating aggregation of twisting, twirling and dancing wonders, The Eight Original Madcaps, are included in the coming attractions. Max Witt's Singing Colleens, a feminine quartet, which presents a delightful tuneful novelty, entitled Songs of the Old and New World, is sure to be a delightful feature of the new bill. Ollie Young and brothers will offer a distinct novelty, for in addition to their hoop rolling, which, by the way, Ollie Young was the first to introduce on the stage, they will introduce a wonderful exhibition of Diabolo playing and boomerang throwing. Next week will be the last of James Thornton, the Camille Trio, Gladys Clarke and Henry Bergman, and also of Futurity Winner with its thrilling horse-race. A series of Orpheum motion pictures of novelty and interest will terminate the performance.

Valencia Theatre

Arthur Cunningham and the Valencia Stock Company will follow Mrs. Fiske at the Valencia Theatre, beginning the summer season this Sunday afternoon in an elaborate revival of Dion Boucicault's evergreen and always interesting drama in three acts, Arrah Na Pogue, or the Wicklow Wedding. Of all the Boucicault plays, Arrah Na Pogue is easily the best, the characters of Shaun the Post, Colonel O'Grady, Beamish McCoul, sweet Arrah herself, and that most villainous villain known to the stage, Michael Feeny, being well known to all patrons of the Irish drama. There is life, excitement, snap and loads of good comedy in all of the twelve stirring scenes of the play and the costumes of the Irish peasants flaunting the green in spite of the laws, together with the gold and scarlet of the English, add the charm of vivid colors to the picturesque grouping of the incidents attendant upon the wedding and the homecoming. All of the Valencia favorites will appear in the cast, including Paul McAllister as Colonel O'Grady, George Osbourne as Michael Feeny, Gerald Harcourt as Beamish McCoul, Grace Travers as Arrah Meelish, Edith Lyle as Fanny Power, and Lillian Andrews as Katty Walsh. The Wednesday and Sunday matinees, discontinued during Mrs. Fiske's engagement, will be resumed, as well as the customary popular prices of this theatre. What Happened to Jones, George Broadhurst's best and brightest farce, with Paul McAllister as the bogus Bishop of Ballarat, will follow Arrah-Na-Pogue at the Valencia.

Alcazar Theatre

A double bill is announced for the coming week in the Alcazar. Wycherley's three-act comedy, A Country Girl, will be preceded by Journey's End in Lovers' Meeting, a playlet by the late John Oliver Hobbs, which has never been presented in San Francisco. Florence Roberts and Thurlow Bergen will appear in both plays. A Country Girl has been selected to follow Du Barry, because it will remind this city's playgoers that Miss Roberts is no less magnetic as a comedienne than in emotional work. She will have the role of Peggy Thrift, a rustic heiress, who is less of a fool than she looks and acts. By her clever interpretation of the somewhat complex character, Miss Roberts made one of her biggest hits in the old Alcazar. A sub-plot is deftly interwoven with the love affairs of Peggy, and it shows how Sparkish, a young coxcomb, allowed his vanity to override his discretion when he permitted his fiancée, Moody's sister, to be made love to by Ned Harcourt, her brother's former companion and pupil in the frivolities of the town. There is almost enough fun in this side issue to make a first-class comedy of itself. Journey's End in Lovers' Meeting has been presented in this country only by Ellen Terry, and the Eastern critics pronounced it a masterpiece of short-play writing. It tells the story of a society woman who is estranged from her husband but continues to live in the house with him. On returning home from a ball she is followed by an old admirer on the pretext of restoring some article she dropped during the dance, and while he is with her the husband returns. She conceals the admirer in the library, and the delightfulness of the play consists of the manner in which he is got rid of and a reconciliation between husband and wife is effected. While the theme itself may not be new, its treatment is decidedly novel, and as the wife, Miss Roberts will be afforded opportunity to display her art in a role that has been a favorite of Miss Terry and the Eastern public.

A. H. Canby

Mr. Canby, who passed a few weeks on the Coast recently as manager of Madame Nazimova, is one of the finest examples of ability and affability that our managerial ranks know. There is probably no man in the show business today who has so many friends—nor is there any perceptible dissent from the general opinion that he is unusually well equipped for successful management.

Maud Dawson last week sued the Auditorium company of Los Angeles in Justice of the Peace Stephens' court for $120. She avers that on March 27 she was engaged to sing and dance for a period of three weeks for $60 a week, and that she was given employment only until April 3. Miss Dawson is also assignee for Olga Stech, now with Kolb & Dill, who alleges that she had a contract for three weeks at $40 and worked but one week, in view of which she asks for $80.

Correspondence

MINNEAPOLIS, June 12.—The Orpheum Theatre opens its doors August 20. The Princess Theatre opens its doors August 30, and will be booked by the Pantages. The moving picture houses are all doing a nice business. The Scenic, Isis, Milo and Wonderland, down town, are having a nice run of pictures. The houses on the outskirts, the Adkel, Peoples and Family, are doing well. Week of 12—Vaudeville is a go at Wonderland Park, judging from the size of audiences at the new aerodome, when it was both chilly and dreary. The Suit Case, a lively farce in which the Sully Family of five comedians appear, headlines the bill. They also sing and dance. Ruth Burnett, a soubrette, sings three ballads and makes a good impression. Her "company" is a man who does eccentric dancing. George Fredo, a German monologue, comedian and musical specialist, is a good entertainer, and Bobby Robison's illustrated song gets by. Motion pictures are also shown and the bill on the whole is decidedly pleasing. A troupe of seven Arab acrobats, and the Two Jolly Rubes, Patrick and Francesco, with concerts by the Minnesota State Band, are the open air attractions. Forest Park is having a nice run of the best vaudeville attractions being offered in the city at present. Admission is free. Rose of the Rancho has set a new record in Minneapolis for stock companies. It is impossible for the Lyric Theatre to accommodate in one week all who want to see this beautiful play, so The Rose of the Rancho holds the boards another week, and The Rounders will be postponed until June 13. The Metropolitan—A Stranger in New York, Charles H. Hoyt's charming comedy, is the offering of the Ferris stock company at the Metropolitan this week. Dick Ferris himself assumes the title role of the stranger, and is received with enthusiasm. This is his first appearance here this year and as he is an old favorite everybody in the Ferris following is glad to see him back in the East. There are twenty people in the cast and for the first presentation Sunday night they spoke their parts much better than is the rule in stock company productions of this character. The stage setting is adequate. Florence Stone, of course, is the star, and her playing of the part of "Hattie, the best fellow of them all," is thoroughly enjoyable. PERCY S. SMITH.

PHILADELPHIA, June 13.—Dorothy Vernon of Haddon Hall, the beautiful romance dramatized from Charles Major's novel, which is based on an incident in the time of Queen Elizabeth, is reproduced at the Chestnut Street Theatre this week by the Orpheum company with the usual skill and attention to detail noticeable in the productions of that organization. The leading role fell to Marion Barney. William Engersoll enacted the role of Sir John Manners. The other leading roles that contributed to the success were in the hands of Geo. D. Parker, Peter Lang, Kathleen O'Donnell, Ada Boshell and May Desmond. The staging was excellent. Keith's Theatre—It is not too much to say that Bert Williams is one of the best entertainers on the vaudeville stage. He deserved the applause with which he was greeted, for the stories he told were humorous in themselves and they were told with an unctuous spirit that made the most of every detail, and that was always most effective. The bill had several other features of much merit, among them being Annette Kellerman, the famous Australian swimmer. Walnut Street Theatre—Trixie Friganza at the Walnut continues to be the bright particular star of the Aarons musical comedy, The Girl From Yama. Bijou—The Girl in Blue, who is always sure of large audiences, was the chief feature of the Billy Watson show at the Bijou. Gayety—The all-star stock company at the Gayety had an enjoyable burlesque bill to offer this week. Julia Sinclair's dancing was a feature. The Grand Opera House and the Liberty are doing good business with vaudeville and pictures. The New Hippodrome has some very interesting features to offer. Virginia Hennings, recently with the Stanford and Weston stock company, was given a tryout at Forepaugh's Theatre Tuesday afternoon and was given a great send off. This means a larger card for Miss Hennings. Julian Rose has been obtained for the McIntyre and Heath company. "That" Quartet has disbanded. Bert Leslie is again in vaudeville. The Dixie Quartet is taking a week's rest in order to prepare for their summer trip. CALVIN M. FRANKLIN.

ATLANTIC CITY, June 7.—The most pretentious productions attempted by F. Ziegfeld, Jr., The Follies of 1909, made its premiere at the Apollo Theatre Monday evening. Theatrical managers and critics from New York, Philadelphia and elsewhere came in large numbers, and they voted the new show a great success. The Follies of 1909 follows the lines of Mr. Ziegfeld's previous Revues, being divided into two acts and showing eighteen scenes, some of them elaborate. The words and music, which comprises thirty numbers, is by Maurice Levi. Everything important and every person in the public eye has been touched upon with a light, humorous hand. Distinctive hits were scored by Nora Boyes, Harry Kelly, Lillian Lorraine, Jack Norworth, Annabelle Whitford, Billie Reeves and Arthur Deagon. The production here is preliminary to what is expected to be an extended run in New York.

CALVIN M. FRANKLIN.

CARSON CITY, June 12.—Carson Opera House (C. H. Peters, mgr.)—Richard Jose and his excellent company appeared here June 11 to a record-breaking house. The presentation of the comedy, Jane, received the highest commendation from all sides. Jose, who was a lad in this city and who is a general favorite here, was greeted with thunders of applause and responded to repeated encores until his repertoire was almost exhausted and he concluded with a speech which was bristling with appreciation of his reception and filled with expressions of his pleasure in meeting old friends. The pupils of Stewart Institute, the Indian school here, gave a most interesting entertainment Monday evening at which the farce, The Billposter's Dream, was presented. An unusual feature was the delineation of dialect parts by several of the Indian boys, a fancy scarf drill by pretty little Indian maidens, and the representation of the Zuzu chaps and the Gold Dust Twins, made so familiar by the well-known advertisements, by four tiny Indian boys who were remarkably clever and were natural comedians, in spite of their tender years. Lake Theatre—Manager Ryder manages to have new attractions each week, Herr Von Engell, the strong man, exhibiting at the popular place last week. Edgar Ryder sings the illustrated songs this week and sings them well, too. Electrical fans have been installed and everything is done to enhance the comfort of those who attend. A. H. M.

Newman & Foltz

Walter Newman and Bertha Foltz will sever their connection with the players managed by Terry McKean on July 4th. They will take a few weeks' much-needed rest after a very successful tour, before making final arrangements for their season beginning early in September. Mr. Newman and Miss Foltz have received the highest praise for their good work and have gained much favor and many friends in every city in which they have appeared throughout the State. The following was taken from the Fresno Republican: "One of the best stock organizations that ever played Fresno was the opinion of all who attended the opening performance, last night, of the company headed by Walter Newman and Bertha Foltz. The bill to introduce these clever people to Fresno theatregoers was The American, a society comedy-drama, new to the local stage. It is filled with clever dialogue, strong dramatic situations. The possibilities of pictorial stage settings was not lost sight of by Mr. Newman. More than passing notice is due Walter Newman, who proved to be a handsome fellow and clever actor. Good work can be expected of him during the engagement at the Novelty. Miss Bertha Foltz, the leading woman, made an excellent impression. She is pretty, active and puts a great deal of originality in her work. Both played right into the hearts of their audience last evening, which was large and enthusiastic. The opening bespeaks a successful season."

Long Sues Mrs. Carter

According to a dispatch from St. Louis, John Luther Long, playwright, has filed suit in the Circuit Court there against Mrs. Leslie Carter to collect $4,084.43 in royalties alleged to be due him for writing Kassa for her, and an order was issued by the Court to attach the receipts of the production of The Heart of Maryland, in which Mrs. Carter was appearing at Delmar Garden, a summer park theatre. The play was produced in Washington, Buffalo, Rochester, New York and St. Louis, and Mr. Long declares that the receipts were $94,000. He declares further that Mrs. Carter paid $750 in advance and has since paid $200 to him, leaving a balance of $4,084.43.

One of the notable attractions of the past season in the East has been the dramatic success, A Gentleman from Mississippi, which has been booked for the Van Ness Theatre.

Spotlights

The Circus Man, Klaw & Erlanger's play by Eugene Presbrey, based on Holman Day's stories, will open at McVicker's Theatre, Chicago, Aug. 28th. This play will employ thirty-five people in the cast, not including Imogene, the elephant, and the parrot. Maelyn Arbuckle will play the role of "Hime" Look, the circus man. The play is one of fun and human interest, with a good strong love story running throughout. Arbuckle will have the part of his career in the production, which will be on the usual lavish scale employed by Klaw & Erlanger in their offerings.

McIntyre and Heath will open their new show under the management of Klaw & Erlanger at the Circle Theatre in New York on August 30th. The title of the entertainment has not yet been selected. The book is by John J. McNally, and the lyrics and music by William Jerome and Jean Schwartz. Carl McCullough will play the leading juvenile role. The production will be on the usual elaborate scale, in which Klaw & Erlanger have put McIntyre and Heath before the public. The company will number more than a hundred. The scenes of the play are laid at French Lick Springs and in the Republic of Hayti.

Little Nemo, the biggest and best musical comedy ever staged, will open its season in Syracuse in Fair week. Klaw & Erlanger have arranged an extensive tour for the production, including the leading cities of the Middle West and South. The season closes in Boston in the spring. Master Gabriel will play the part of Little Nemo. Aimee Ehrlich returns as his little playmate. Joseph Cawthorn and Harry Kelly will appear as Dr. Pill and the Dancing Missionary.

Klaw & Erlanger and Joseph Brooks have arranged to produce Through a Window, in which Lillian Albertson will appear, in Boston, November 9th. Gertrude Andrews, the playwright, writes that her dramatic composition is not a political play, but it brings forward the women who, because of their economic dependence, are victims of our present political system. Heretofore these women have remained in the background. Much has been written of the demoralizing effect of our political corruption upon men; of the disintegration of men's characters, of the warping of their souls; but of the women who are the innocent victims, who are supported and educated with tainted money, nothing has been said. Their humiliation has been taken into small account. Felipe Costello, Miss Albertson's role, is one of these women. Her father, Judge Costello, is the tool of the political ring in San Francisco. She has been educated in an Eastern school and in Europe and has been very little associated with her father, but she loves him with an ardent devotion. She has idealized him. He is a man of great personal charm. The great earthquake acts as a Nemesis. It brings about a situation that reveals to Felipe the other side of her father's character and the humiliating influences which have shaped her own life. Mrs. Andrews has drawn the character of Costello from that of a man conspicuous in the San Francisco fraud exposures. Her Brad Hamilton, Felipe's sweetheart in the play, is drawn from Francis Heney, the lawyer.

Klaw & Erlanger have arranged to produce Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm, by Kate Douglas Wiggin and Charlotte Thompson, in New England in November. The play will be brought into New York in January.

Maud Raymond will be featured with Max Rogers next season by Klaw & Erlanger in a musical comedy entitled The Young Turk, by Max and Aaron Hoffman. The production will be an elaborate one with plenty of girls. Its scenes are laid in Constantinople.

Rapley Holmes heads the new cast of The Round-Up, playing Maelyn Arbuckle's role of "Slim" Hoover. Klaw & Erlanger will open its season at the Colonial Theatre, Boston, Sept. 6th. The Round-Up will travel through the South and out to the Pacific Coast next season.

Rochester, N. Y., will witness the first production of The Barrier in September. The dramatization of Rex Beach's famous novel was made by E. W. Presbrey. Guy Standing will play the part of Lieut. Meade, and Theodore Roberts will assume the role of the father.

Ben-Hur opens its eleventh season under the management of Klaw & Erlanger in Utica early in October. Richard Buhler will play the title role. A new and enlarged production is being built. Twenty-four horses will be used in the chariot race. Only the larger cities in the East and Canada will be played.

Klaw & Erlanger and Joseph Brooks will produce the dramatization of The Inner Shrine early in January with a notable cast. The stage version of the story will be made by the author of the novel. Book reviewers have agreed that Mildred Howells is the writer, because they say only a woman and one who has deep insight into the social life of Paris and New York could make such a study of Diana, the leading character. They guessed wrong not only the first, but every other time. Harper & Bros., the publishers, have successfully preserved the secrecy of authorship. One of the terms of the contract with the producers was not to divulge the name of the author.

Contracts have been signed between Henry B. Harris and Harriet Ford, who, it will be remembered, dramatized A Gentleman from France, and Miss Caroline King Duer, a sister of Mrs. Clarence Mackay, for the rights to their new comedy, entitled An American Girl from France. The contracts call for a production of this play early in the coming season. Grace Elliston, the original Shirley Rossmore in The Lion and the Mouse, and who lately appeared in the leading female role in Harrison Grey Fiske's production of The Devil, will be the star. The scenes of the play are laid in New York and deal with an American girl who was reared and educated in France and comes to America and becomes prominent in New York society.

After Arthur Cunningham's engagement of one week in Arrah-Na-Pogue at the Valencia Theatre, a summer season of farce and comedy will be inaugurated with a rattling revival of What Happened to Jones, George Broadhurst's first and best farce. Those who saw Paul McAllister enjoy himself in The Man from Mexico, look forward with lively interest to his characterization of the nifty drummer who sells playing-cards and hymn-books with equal facility. The rest of the stock company will also be thoroughly at home in the quick work of the comedy.

The Macdonough Building at the corner of Fourteenth Street and Broadway, Oakland, has been sold by William G. Henshaw and his wife to James S. Fearon of New York, said to be a banker. The building and lot are estimated to be worth $600,000. In the building are included the Macdonough Theatre, a large number of offices and several stores.

Dan Kelly has taken Charles A. Murray's place with Ollie Mack in the Murray & Mack company, just starting on a Coast tour. The company will be billed, as usual, the Murray and Mack organization. A Night on Broadway will be presented, concocted for this short tour from the third act of Finnegan's Ball, the third act of Shooting the Chutes and a general potpourri for the remainder. Blossom Seeley, Clara Edwards and the Marquis Ellis Quartet will accompany them on this trip.

Los Angeles is losing its manners. News comes from that busy show town that, Sunday, June 12th, Murray & Mack revived one of their old, old joshes, termed a musical show, once too often, and a rough house resulted that brought the stage into intimate association with many large and copious bunches of decayed hen fruit.

Mrs. Temple's Telegram, another great laugh-producer, is underlined at the Valencia Theatre, to follow What Happened to Jones.

Henry Miller's Servant in the House will be seen in Oakland on July 12 for a week.

Frederic Thompson, the noted manager and producer, will send his notable production of Polly of the Circus to the Van Ness Theatre late next month, following the engagement of The Merry Widow. Edith Taliaferro will be seen in her successful portrayal of the young circus rider. The production is a very elaborate one.

Correspondence

SAN DIEGO, June 23.—Garrick (J. M. Dodge, mgr.): The Raymond Teal Company have a good piece in The Man Behind, which they are putting on in a very satisfactory manner at the Garrick this week. Cash Knight as Colonel Gall, and Max Steinle as Major Bluff do most of the work in the piece, and they keep the audience in almost a continuous laugh. Frank Morton as Lawyer Marks also comes in for a share of the fun-making, his interpretation of the part being one of the cleverest things in the show. Nan Halperin made her usual hit. Raymond Teal appears as Ginger, a colored servant, and, as usual, had little trouble getting the laughs. Mattie Hyde as Marie Travers, an actress, appeared to advantage, her stunt with Mr. Steinle in the first act being one of the distinctive hits of the piece. Miss Hyde sings a song while Mr. Steinle, standing behind her, puts his arms out in front and goes through all the motions usually made by a singer. This brought down the house. The music is catchy, the chorus works well together. In a word, the show is excellent in every respect, and is as good or better than many of the musical comedies that visited us last season and charged $1.50 and $2.00 a seat. Pickwick (Scott A. Palmer, mgr.): Bargain Day, a merry musical farce, is the offering by the Armstrong Musical Comedy Company at the Pickwick this week. The plot has to do with the loss of a lace collar, borrowed by the proprietor's daughter, and supposed to have been stolen. Detective wanted is the sign hung out. Jerry Dooley and Hans Dinklespiel, impersonated by Billy Onslow and Barney Williams, respectively, apply for the job, and both are accepted, and the fun comes fast and furious. Edward Armstrong appeared as the proprietor of the store. Walter Spencer appeared as a clerk, and both did good work. Six former members of the Kolb and Dill Company made their appearance with the company. Olga Steck was given a hearty reception upon her reappearance. Al Carlton did some clever eccentric dancing. One of the big hits of the piece was My Dusky Salome, by Ethel Davis and chorus. In this song the chorus is made up in Salome style, and Miss Davis as a tough kid. The audience couldn't seem to get enough of this. Miss Steck and Walter Spencer scored with I Only Thought I Would Ask You. The chorus is well dressed and sing and dance well. Queen (John Donnelan, mgr.): Cal Stewart heads the bill at this popular little house this week, and he scored one big hit. Grace Dean Forbes and Company presented a one-act playlet, A Wild Rose, in a first-class manner. Grover and Richards have a good musical turn. Fox and Crystal, Hebrew comedians, also have a good act. Moving pictures conclude a good show. Grand (Fred Ballien, mgr.): The Grand has a good bill this week and is composed of the following: Joe Goodman has a clever monologue act; Varden and Dunlap scored with their act; the Hill Sisters in illustrated songs and moving pictures conclude. CARL E. LUNDQUIST.

SEATTLE, June 21.—Moore Theatre: Monday until Wednesday, moving pictures of the Burns-Johnson fight. Balance of the week, John Drew in Jack Straw. Grand Theatre: Ferris Hartman & Co., in the Sultan of Sulu, gave the best performance of their summer engagement at the Grand yesterday. Mr. Hartman makes a very good Sultan, and the chorus is improving steadily. Seattle Theatre: A change from the usual melodramas seen at this playhouse is At Cozy Corners, which opened last night at the Seattle. The play is filled with all the New England charm of pathos and humor, and Miss Bunting is admirably adapted to the role of Avis Merrill. Lois Theatre: A rather large undertaking is that of T. Daniel Frawley and the Pantages stock players in the production of The Great Ruby, at the Lois this week, but the play no doubt will prove the biggest attraction of the summer season at this popular playhouse, for the story is one of interest and in the hands of the local company it is well presented. A new member has been added to the company, namely, Darrell Standing, who does good work as Longman. Orpheum: A strong bill at the Orpheum this week commences tonight, with Helena Frederick & Co., Charlotte Parry, Selma Braatz, World and Kingston, Jarrow, John Keller, and Marie Russell. Star: Mlle. Alice Loretta and her $10,000 statue dog, Ben, are the headliners. The woman and the dog appear in a series of startling poses and reproductions of famous paintings and come to Seattle direct from the Wintergarten in Berlin. McDevitt and Kelly, eccentric dancers; Jere Sanford, the whistling and yodling comedian; Rae and Brosche, in Too Much Woman, and Glendower and Manion in an amusing playlet, A Christmas on the Comstock, comprise a fine bill. Pantages: Huntress, impersonator and drapery dancer is the headliner. His impersonations include Anna Held, Blanche Ring and Salome. In connection with this latter character, Huntress presents his drapery and fire dance, a triumph of electrical and scenic art. The five Prentice Naples Quartet, saxophone artists; the White City Four, comedy and harmony quartet, and Louise Kent & Co., in a playlet entitled S. O. L. D., which makes a big hit, are other numbers of the bill. E. MORGENSTERN.

Here Is One of the Finest Press Agents' Stories Ever Turned Out and It Is True

When Polly of the Circus comes here this summer, little Ida Leon will be seen in the title role, in which she succeeds Mabel Taliaferro next week. The peculiar fact in the cast is that Ida will be a leading woman on her very first appearance on the stage. She is 17 and a member of the Leon Family of circus acrobats, and is now performing with her family at Luna Park. She was born in Cochin China, and is better known to the amusement lovers of Australia, Siam, the Philippines, China and Japan than she is to the patrons of tent shows in the United States. For the past two years she and the other members of the Leon Family have appeared in Miss Taliaferro's company. Her elder sister, Elsie, did the riding in the circus scene of this play, and little Miss Ida in this scene appeared as an acrobat. During these two years the little girl stood in the wings throughout the play and has watched every gesture and listened to every word of the star. Finally she memorized the lines. It was quite by accident that the fact that she knew them came to the notice of Miss Taliaferro and Frederic Thompson. They first learned of it at a rehearsal in Bridgeport, Conn., three months ago. This rehearsal was one of the ordinary drills which are held every few days for the purpose of keeping a uniform pitch to the performance. On this occasion the star was a few minutes late, and as the drill was more for the benefit of the supporting players than for her, the rehearsal started without her. When the time came for Polly to make her entrance the stage manager handed the manuscript to little Miss St. Leon and asked her to read the lines. She told him that she did not need the book. To the surprise of everybody she spoke the part perfectly and acted it well. Out of curiosity Miss Taliaferro on her arrival allowed the circus girl to continue the rehearsal, and when it was finished she communicated with her husband, Mr. Thompson. She told him that there was in her company a real "Polly of the Circus," a girl who was precisely the character which the author of the play had in mind and not a make-believe circus rider. Up to that time Miss Taliaferro had paid little attention to the girl, but for the remainder of the season she watched her carefully, and so did Mr. Thompson. Miss Taliaferro will not play Polly of the Circus this coming season, as a new piece has been written for her by Booth Tarkington and Harry Leon Wilson. With the close of the theatrical year, therefore, Miss Taliaferro and Mr. Thompson agreed that no more capable person could be found for the leading part than a circus girl who is a Polly in real life. When the original company starts on its ten months' tour,

June Van Buskirk Wants Her Child

June Van Buskirk's five years of separation from her nine-year-old son, George Russell Wilson, may end this week in Denver, Colo. The success of a continental pursuit of her child, which ran its course from New York to Switzerland, back to New York, Chicago, Colorado, and recently through Alameda and Oakland, looping back to Denver, hinges now on the adjudication of a writ of habeas corpus.

The mother, Mrs. June Van Buskirk, once a popular actress, the wife of George Francis Wilson (Sedgwick, the actor), who was father of the child in controversy, is now the wife of Percy J. Mitchell, a wealthy English engineer. Never was a mother put to more agony and adventure in her efforts, first to keep, and then to regain, her offspring, than has the woman known best to the public as June Van Buskirk, the actress. June 10 last in Oakland she was just about to be able to present her claim to the child to a court, after five years of fruitless yearning, when fate and a grandmother intervened. The child had been traced by the Pinkerton detective agency to the Wilson home at 1522 Lafayette Street, Alameda. From their home in London, England, Mrs. Mitchell, accompanied by her husband, sped to San Francisco. They registered at the St. Francis Hotel and immediately engaged attorneys to represent them. These legal advisers June 10 last applied to Superior Judge Everett Brown in Alameda County for a writ of habeas corpus to have the child brought into court. The writ was returnable at 5 o'clock the afternoon of that day. Mrs. Mitchell and her husband haunted the courtroom for hours preceding the stated time. But at 5 o'clock no child was produced. Mrs. Linda Wilson, the grandmother, had grown suspicious that her house was being watched and had had the little fellow spirited away to the ranch of her husband, George Russell Wilson, at Lamar, Colo. Mitchell later went to see Dr. Charles E. Wilson, uncle of the child, a dentist, with offices in the Elkan Gunst Building in Geary Street. At Wilson's office the character of Mrs. Mitchell was assailed by Wilson, and Mitchell and he had a lively row which ended in blood and disorder on both sides. And at that the quest of her child is but one aspect of the cruel life which June Van Buskirk has led. The married life of the actress and her actor husband was not to the tune of the romantic comedies they played. After about five years of critical unhappiness Wilson brought suit for divorce on the most serious charge a man may make. He accused the wife of having been faithless to him and named Felix Isman, a millionaire, as correspondent. The testimony of a porter at the Hotel Carlton, London, went far toward strengthening the husband's case. The porter was later to appear in the wife's story in a better part. About the time of the divorce proceedings Mrs. Van Buskirk Wilson felt that her case was hopeless in the face of the efforts which her husband was making, and fled New York, taking with her the boy. Together the mother and son went to London. Detectives from the father were hot on the trail. From London the mother fled to Paris, and then to Switzerland, but her husband's agents discovered her at Zurich and the child was taken from the mother, who failed afterwards to locate the child. She went to London and engaged as a volunteer nurse in the Royal Hospital. Her charity found a quick and unexpected reward. One day as she was administering to the afflicted in the tuberculosis ward a wan man called to her. She approached his bedside. He said that he had been the Carlton Hotel porter who had testified against her at the divorce trial. He confessed on his dying bed that he had perjured himself there, had sold the woman's name for the bribe of her husband. The repentant witness was near death, but a magistrate was called to take the man's statement. That magistrate happened to be Sir William Gilbert, the writer of the merry books of the Gilbert and Sullivan operas. In that deposition the blot was removed from the actress-nurse's 'scutcheon. She tried to reopen her divorce proceedings in New York, that she might secure the custody of her child, but without avail. Later Felix Isman used the deposition to secure a vindication and a claim for damages against Wilson. With her name cleared, June Van Buskirk could again enter the world. She there met and later married Edward J. Mitchell of Regent Park, a wealthy Englishman, according to advices received from London. February last Wilson died at Atlantic City, N. J. A detective agency was put on the trail of the child, and when it was positively located Mrs. Mitchell and her husband came to San Francisco, registering quietly at the St. Francis and taking few about the hotel in their confidences. Failing in their search and heartbroken, the mother started Monday last on her return to England. But the child was located before she reached Denver, and there the mother was intercepted, and, according to a dispatch received from the Colorado city, is now waiting to prove her case.

Idora

Singing forte is Bert Morphy's forte. Morphy is the "man who sings to beat the band," and he has been doing that very thing at Idora since last Thursday when he opened a sixteen days' engagement at Oakland's pleasure resort. Erlinger's Chicago band of fifty musicians is the organization with which Morphy vies. That he "beats it" in point of volume none of Idora's auditors or neighboring residents deny. That he outstrips his accompanists from an artistic view-point is a different matter, for the Chicago musicians are artists of the premier order and their recitals are as fine as anything yet heard at Idora. But whether the New York barytone's singing is artistic doesn't matter—not even to Morphy. He simply goes at his scores of popular ballads and march songs in steam calliope fashion, and he "gets" the audience every time. Morphy will be one of the features on tomorrow's program when he will sing a half dozen of his most popular numbers. In addition to playing Morphy's accompaniments Erlin-ger's band will give a program of twenty-four numbers. Among the selections will be gems from Madame Butterfly, the grand fantasia from Samson and Delilah, melodies from Strauss' Gipsy Baron, the intermezzo from The Love Tales of Hoffman and scenes from La Boheme and Carmen. Beatrice Fischer, soprano soloist with the band, will sing Ardit's Enchantress and Rossini's To Thy Holy Care. All of the instrumental soloists will be heard. The X. I. T. Wild West Show that has entertained thousands of people during the past week will give four shows tomorrow, introducing new steer tying contests and surprises by the cowgirls. De Hollis and Velora, comedy bar acrobats, and Ernest Yerxa, posturer, will be other new features on Idora's free, open-air bill.

Paid in Full, which created nothing short of a sensation when played here at the Van Ness Theatre last season, is announced for a return engagement of two weeks. The dramatic work played to enormous business and is sure of a successful second run in this city. Eugene Walters' other great work, The Easiest Way, is also to be seen here during the season.

Len Behymer Will Be the Shubert Manager in Los Angeles

LOS ANGELES, July 1.—There are several changes to take place in the near future among the local stock players. Florence Reed of the Belasco forces leaves quite soon for the East, where she is under contract with the Shuberts. DeWitt Jennings is also to leave the Belasco. Charles Giblyn has resigned from the Burbank company and will join the Belasco company. Percy Bronson and Maybelle Baker, formerly of the Kolb and Dill company, have come back to town. Both of them will be in cast of Sergeant Kitty when that popular musical comedy is staged at the Majestic under the direction of Harry Girard. Marie Nelson will be the prima donna of the company. Miss Nelson is a clever girl and she possesses a fine voice. In the opening bill Sergeant Kitty, Agnes Cain-Brown has the principal role. Others in the cast include Harry Girard, Charles Giblyn, Henry Stockbridge, William Yerance, Edna Mason and Louise Royce. A notable feature of the production is the fact that there will be an all show girl chorus, no broilers at all. No chance for the small ones here. The company in all will number seventy-five persons. A host of the actor folk were entertained at the Jacoby home last Saturday night. The occasion was the twentieth wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Jacoby. Music and recitations were the order of the evening and among the notables who took part were Mrs. Wm. Desmond, Harry Mestayer and J. Sidle Lawrence. Roland Paul is at his home in the city for a brief stay. The Orpheum is being decorated for the Elks' coming. Several hundred dollars will be expended on the exterior alone, and the interior will be completely transformed as two gigantic theatre parties will be given at the Orpheum by the local Elks for the visitors during the week of July 12. Patriotic colors and large Elk designs are the keynotes of the exterior display, and the combination is artistic and pleasing. There is a rumor about town in regard to a romance between Eugene Nowland, well-known local musician just returned from Seattle, and Clara Williams, actress, who has been playing at the Grand Theatre in Long Beach. There is still nothing definite in regard to William Collier and his coming to the Majestic. Wilmer Walter, who has been playing the title part in Klaw & Erlanger's principal Ben Hur production the past two seasons, has been signed as second man of the Burbank stock company. Wm. C. Bates, who will be the new treasurer of the Los Angeles Theatre, owing to the resignation of Ira Joseph, arrived in the city from Seattle yesterday. For the past few years he has been connected with the Sullivan & Considine vaudeville houses in the northwest. L. E. Behymer will probably be the Shubert representative at the Auditorium. Mr. Behymer is now in New York. A letter from J. J. Shubert, vice-president and business manager of the Shubert firm, to an acquaintance in this city states: "I have already taken Mr. Behymer under consideration, and I think that if we can come to terms I shall appoint him my manager. I hope to see Mr. Behymer shortly." The management of the Auditorium under the Shubert administration has been a question of interest to local theatrical people. Mr. Behymer's experience and knowledge of the local field give him abundant equipment for this position.

BELASCO—For the third week, The Lion and the Mouse is doing capacity business at every performance. It has been a tremendous success and could do the business for several weeks more, but Manager Blackwood has announced this as positively the last week. The bill for next week has been changed and the company will put on Hoyt's A Day and a Night instead of The College Widow as formerly announced.

BURBANK—The Burbank company gives us the best thing they have done in many moons. When Knights Were Bold is a charming farce in three acts. It is the play in which Francis Wilson made such a hit. Henry Stockbridge, in the Wilson role, is every bit as funny as Wilson and his work is far ahead of anything he has done here. He has the center of the stage all the time and although the support is good, Stockbridge is distinctly "It" from the time the curtain goes up on the first act to the close of the last. The second act is the best in the show. It is the one in which Sir Guv dreams that he is back in the eleventh century. Mr. Beasley is good as Sir Brian Ballymote. Mr. Yerance does some particularly good work as the Jew, and Lovell Alice Taylor is cast as his daughter. Miss Hall is as charming as ever in the role of Lady Rowena. The rest of the parts are all well taken. It looks as if the play were good for two weeks at least.

MASON—Peggy from Paris is the offering of the Princess Theatre company at the Mason for the week. The production is a good one and the work of the chorus deserves special mention. Both May Boley and Fred Mace have bad parts and that in a measure at least mars the performance. Zoe Barnett as Peggy from Paree, is pretty and vivacious and adds much to the general success of the piece. Reginald Travers is good as Capt. Plummer. The show goes, and each part is well handled. Budd Ross is a big hit in the old Arthur Degan role. We are told that the Princess company will move onto the Grand stage at the completion of their Mason engagement, July 12, and will displace the thrills of melodrama during Elks' week. The bill for the week has not, as yet, been announced.

MAJESTIC—Three Weeks is running for the second week at the Majestic. There is a new ending this week. Instead of the curtain falling abruptly upon the deaths of the king and queen a tableau is presented, showing the dream vision that comes to the queen in her final moments. The program explains it as follows: "She sees her son, the little Paul, upon Sardalia's throne and knows that her death has not been in vain; that she has given to the people of Sardalia a man child who will some day rule them wisely and well."

GRAND—A Man's Broken Promise is another one of the Mortimer pieces being given on the stage of the Grand Opera House this week. It is a good melodrama and is well acted. Chester Stevens is the villain as usual, while George Field is a cripple. Carl Birch and Franklin Hall do good bits of comedy characterization. Gertrude Clair also does some good acting. The balance of the cast includes George Webb, Robert Leonard, Jack Donald, Marjorie Dalton, Grace Rauworth, Alice Lewis and Harry Earl.

ORPHEUM—Mabel Hite and her husband, Mike Donlin, head the bill at the Orpheum. Mabel is much the same as the last time we saw her in musical comedy, only she is much improved in many ways. Mike does not have a great deal to do, but he does that little well. Mrs. Donlin sings an Italian dialect song which is a whole play in itself. She is a great favorite here and receives tremendous applause. Another very good number is Claude Gillingwater's skit, A Strenuous Rehearsal. It is not new by any means but it continues to please. Particularly good acting is done by Carolyn Strelitz in the small part of the maid. C. C. Gwynne and Teresa Dale play the other principal roles. Billy Van is again with us with a few new jokes. The Vindobonas are musical comedians. The Baader-Lavelle Trio of cyclists, Donald and Carson, and The Sunny South are holdovers from last week.

LOS ANGELES—Manager Bover has a carefully selected bill for the current week at the Los Angeles. The feature act is Al Cameron and company, comprising a male sextette, who present what is called a military story in song, called The Last of the Regiment. Harry Burgoyne is a favorite London character singer who introduces the newest coster ditties. Harry LeClaire presents a series of clever imitations of famous actresses and his latest hit, The Devil. A comedy sketch entitled Home Sweet Home is offered by Burt and Anderson. Burt Shepard, the Australian whip manipulator, Zena Keith, a rapid change artist and singer of latest songs, and new motion pictures complete a very entertaining bill.

FISCHER'S—Cunning child actors would do no more startling feats than do Tony Ryder's troupe of trained monkeys at Fischer's this week. Next to them, Ouda's stage gymnastics deserve mention. Joe Goodwin talks and dances with polite originality. Miss Annie Montgomery sings With You in Eternity, with sudden solemnity, and then doffs the somber masque for a frolic with the Roly Polies. Le Chatier, French tenor balladist, warbles a moon song and High Old Time in Dixie, and the rotund band of charmers chime in with the refrain. There are interesting motion pictures, as usual.

WALKER—A good show at summer prices is being offered at the Walker Theatre. The new bill of the week is being headed by the Ito-Kimura troupe, Japanese artists of equilibrium, jugglery and foot balancing. Madeline Rowe has been retained for another week, and offers an entirely new act. Ford West, story teller, singer and dancer, has some lively new comedy material. Joseph Manley has a new illustrated song, and a new Travelette and new motion pictures are shown. Orchestra Director Geo.

Nelson has arranged another "pop" concert program.

At the Empire the musical comedy, A Trip to Turkey, is the satisfactory offering.

UNIQUE—Another combination bill, comprising a crisp musical comedy and several vaudeville acts is given at the Unique Theatre this week. Zamloch and his company have a new act in magic. Buchanan and Russell present a new comedy sketch. Dale and Dale are singers and dancers of the up-to-date order. The Unique players present Casey's Courtship, a comedy by James T. Kelley. In this play Mr. Kelley has the leading role, that of Michael Casey, who has become wealthy and who now seeks a sweetheart of bygone days. The sweetheart has married, has become a widow, and is running a boarding house, with a German as a strong suitor for her hand, when Casey appears on the scene. In the end the Irish beat the Dutch. Jack Martin plays the German, Miss Massey is the widow, and other members of the Unique company have congenial parts and new song numbers.

A scene from The Merry Widow at the Van Ness Theatre next week

Oakland Has Had a Banner Week

Oakland's status as a show town was pretty well defined Monday eve, when Mrs. Fiske opened at The Liberty and The Merry Widow commenced a week's engagement at the Macdonough. Both houses were entirely sold out and hundreds were unable to secure seats at the Macdonough. The Merry Widow is having the biggest engagement ever seen here. The house is practically sold out for the entire week and orders are streaming in from everywhere. With but a couple of exceptions the company is practically the same as that which was seen in the New York production and although everyone expected something out of the ordinary, their expectations were fully realized. Standing out most prominent of all the features were the stage settings, costumes and the music. The latter was the very essence of poetry and the famous dream waltz was encored time and time again. Of the company, Mabel Wilbur as the widow and George Damerl in the role of the prince, were great. Their singing, dancing and acting was faultless and their ovations were well deserved. Of the others, Oscar Figman and Thomas Leary were easily the best. Marie Doro is booked, 5-7. Just one performance of Salvation Nell was given at the Liberty, as that was all the time that could be spared by the stock company. It was a dramatic treat and is by far the best performance that we have ever seen by Mrs. Fiske. Tuesday eve, the regular stock opened in a fine double bill, David Garrick and The First Born. The plays are entirely different and afforded an excellent opportunity of observing the great versatility of the company, especially of the new leading man, Sidney Ayres, who enacted the principal roles in both plays and consequently had more than his share of the burden. The audience seemed to favor the Oriental play the more and were very much interested in the various phases of Chinese life. Florence Oakley as the slave girl looked and acted the part to perfection, her characterization of the Chinese girl being a work of art. An elaborate production of The Heart of Maryland is in preparation for next week. For the second week of the Stevens engagement, Manager Smith of the Broadway is offering his patrons Faust. The play is carried through with great skill by the company with Landers Stevens as Mephisto, and Georgie Cooper in the role of Marguerite. The latter is compelled to show considerable skill as her role is quite a transition from the jolly laughing maid to the sinful woman of the world. Miss Cooper was fully equal to the occasion and handled the part in a capable manner. Stevens was excellent and never once did he overdo the part, although the role of the mocking, jeering character is one difficult to sustain. Georgie Woodthorpe made a hit as Dame Martha. At the Orpheum business is good and vaudeville is still keeping up its popularity. Of this week's bill it affords a fine evening's entertainment and is deserving of all good patronage. Pellaton and Foran; Novelty Dancing Four; Mildred Warren; Bert Lyon and Louise Meyers; The Sisters Gasch; Cheridah Simpson; Adelaide; Elizabeth M. Murray; The Ellis-Nowlan company. Mabel McKinley is the chief attraction at the Bell and is the medium of much enthusiasm. Her songs are well selected and well rendered and find much favor with the audience. The balance of the program contains some good numbers and gives good satisfaction. There are some new attractions at Idora that ought to prove of big benefit to the box office. This week the management is offering Erlinger's famous concert band, Bert Morphy, and Kennedy's Wild West Show. The Regeneration and The Adventures of Lady Ursula will be early productions at The Liberty.

LOUIS SCHEELINE.

Marie Doro Denies Sensational Story of a Mother Living Here

Marie Doro, now starring in The Morals of Marcus at the Van Ness Theatre, has been made the center of a mystery and police investigation through the claims of Mrs. Douglas Saunders of San Rafael that the young woman before the footlights is her daughter. Miss Doro is mystified by the woman's strange fancies and says Mrs. Saunders is advancing a fanciful claim. Miss Doro was born in Duncannon, Pa. Her father's name is Stuart and he is a practicing attorney in New York. Her mother is now in Italy. Mrs. Saunders has brooded for years over the loss of a daughter who she believed ran away to become an actress. Upon the arrival of Miss Doro here she immediately sought the actress, but could not see her.

Correspondence

PHILADELPHIA, June 27.—Leah Winslow gave a surprisingly clever interpretation of Carmen in the play of that name at the Chestnut Street Theatre. The Orpheum Company had the romantic drama well in hand, and it moved along with satisfactory smoothness. William Ingersoll displayed more than his usual robustness of action as Don Jose, and Robert Cummings was an admirable Escamillo. The familiar story by Merimee is adapted by Canna Jordan. Percy Winter has achieved a remarkable piece of stage work in the production. Every act on the bill at Keith's Theatre this week is of a high order of excellence, and it would be impossible for anyone to be bored by any of the acts or the entertainers. It is really difficult to assign stellar honors, so excellent is the bill throughout. Vesta Tilley, the famous London music hall entertainer, holds the headline position. An excellent program is to be found at Forepaugh's Theatre this week, with Virginia Hennings topping the bill. Miss Hennings is a favorite among Philadelphia theatregoers, having been connected with ingenue roles of the Forepaughs and Girard stock companies, and lately with the Stanford and Western Stock company. She is personally most attractive and has ability as a comedienne, as the audience quickly discovered. Although this is Miss Henning's fourth week in vaudeville, there is no question that her work has developed along artistic lines. She sings very agreeably, too, and offered some dashing songs in a way that held attention and won her applause. Miss Hennings is featuring her Red-Head song to excellent advantage. Next week she plays in Hazleton and returns to the Girard for another run. "Good evening."

Maude Adams in Stupendous Production of Joan of Arc

BOSTON, June 22.—Before an audience of 15,500 persons, and under the immediate direction of the German department of Harvard University, Maude Adams and a company of players, with the assistance of 1,400 supernumeraries, gave tonight the greatest spectacular out-of-door performance, all things considered, ever attempted in this world. The play was an English version of Schiller's dramatization of the story of Joan of Arc, maid of Orleans. And it is well nigh impossible to describe adequately the stupendousness of the task of producing the piece on the scale on which it was given by John Alexander, the artist. The mere vastness of the stage set all theatrical standards awry, dwarfed the crowds of people in it, made speech and lighting totally new problems. Luckily the audience was composed, for a large part, of persons who knew their Schiller and to whom the production was as much a ceremonial, a celebration of the historical fame of Joan of Arc, as it was a spectacle, and it was to them far more a spectacle than a drama. Half way down the sides of the great stadium the scene was set at the back of a "cyclorama back drop" of blue sky cloth stretched across the great field from wall to wall, supported by spruces still in their bark which would have made mainmasts. The top of the cloth came to the top of the stadium itself. Inside this was set scenery representing wonderfully well the great triplicate porch of a cathedral with its broad steps. West of the cathedral—each of whose portals swallowed easily marching columns of six or eight men abreast—flowed down to the plain two roads from a skyline height. One ran around and below the other, the rocky ramparts dividing them. And finally on each side was a clear road. At the front of all and quite near to the seats stood a lowering oak tree. Round the wall of the stadium had been erected a covered way in which lights were set, supplementing calcium lights on the colonnade high over head. The costuming, especially the plate armor, was marvelously beautiful and historically accurate, through the utmost of painstaking. Miss Adams was received with tremendous enthusiasm at every appearance, from the time when, as a simple peasant, she saw the vision commanding her to serve her king in war, to the last, when a huge knight in armor bore the body of the maid—for in Schiller's play she is killed in battle, not burned at the stake—on to the scene and the soldiers carried her off again on their shields. With Miss Maude Adams was a company numbering about 2,000 persons. The greater part of the working force of the Frohman syndicate was actually engaged in the production. The motley crowds of serfs were made up of Harvard students. Men of the State militia marched as archers and spearmen in the French and English armies. Horsemen from militia batteries clattered into the arena in coats of mail, while able actors in armor tramped the greensward and clashed in duels in the most realistic manner. And through all the scenes threaded the slim figure of Miss Adams as the French maid in a homely peasant's dress, then in a brilliant armor and seated on a milk white charger, and finally in the knightly costume that at last became her shroud. The performance moved with remarkable smoothness, considering its immensity and the fact that opportunity for repeated rehearsals had not been found.

Olga Nethersole Here In January

Olga Nethersole, the distinguished English actress, prior to sailing for London last week, gave the following interview through her manager, Wallace Munro: "I am going home for a little quiet holiday, to build up for my strenuous transcontinental tour of America this autumn. I will spend part of my time at my country place at Biarritz on the Bay of Biscay, then go salmon fishing with some friends to the north of Scotland, and return here in time to inaugurate my season around the first of September. The enormous amount of interest manifested by my presentation of The Writing on the Wall has encouraged me to offer next season another play by an American author, dealing with another vital social question that has heretofore escaped the dramatist's pen, one that is as bold in exposition and treatment as the crusade on tenement reform expounded in The Writing on the Wall, and one that I hope will receive the approval of the public and the endorsement of the press. The immediate steps taken by several corporations and individuals to remedy some of the evils exposed by my play leads me to believe that the truths told have been driven home, and a move forward has been made in the emancipation of the tenement slaves. For many years I have exposed to the glare of the footlights the social corruptness of the individual, aiming thereby to disclose the pitfalls in the social structure, and placing the danger sign-posts thereon that others might profit thereby. Now I have advanced from the individual to the community and corporation, laboring to unveil certain sociological conditions that have been influenced by an undesirable environment, the rectifying of which would surely and speedily redeem a certain percentage of weary souls, whose existence is stifled by unsanitary surroundings or dwarfed by social conditions over which they are helpless. As the moving picture is the great educator to those who cannot afford to travel, so is the disclosure upon the stage of social conditions the best avenue by which the public at large becomes acquainted with these problems as they exist, and judging by my observations and experiences this season, the great American public is ever ready to endorse and support a play that deals with a live, vital issue and has something more in it than mere amusement. I feel the great drama of the future will be woven around sociological themes; the tear-bedecked, villain-pursued heroine of our past must give way to the woman of brain and ideas, the creative and controlling power for good in man. The hero must be a man of thought, not a mere masculine shell of mock heroics, but the dominating influence of a future generation. Such a man, woman and theme I have in my mind's eye for the coming season. In my repertoire I will also retain some of my former successes, thereby giving, during my city engagements, a cycle, as it were, of psychological and sociological expositions that ought to merit approval."

Joe Weber and His Win-Out With The Climax

Whatever profit accrues to the production of The Climax—and everybody concedes that its sponsor has a vast fortune in sight—Joe Weber deserves every last penny of it, writes Rennold Wolf from New York. But for the absolute courage of his convictions and his unwavering tenacity of purpose in the face of adverse opinion, the delightful little play might by this time be accumulating dust in the desk of a saddened playwright. Weber liked the piece from the very outset. Although essentially a dealer in musical entertainment, he was quick to foresee the danger of presenting a three-act drama that employed but a single "set" and four players. And being also essentially a sound business man, he just as quickly appreciated the economic advantages of such an enterprise if by rare chance it happened to succeed. From Edward W. Locke, the "glass-blower dramatist," he purchased the producing rights, and then set out to place the piece on trial. One Sunday night, at his theatre, before an audience consisting of managers, players, dramatists and Broadway friends supposed to be in touch with the needs of the theatregoing public, The Climax was presented at a special performance. The stage-setting was crude, the piece had not been rehearsed properly, two of the players were grossly miscast, and the general conditions of the performance suggested gloom. After the final curtain, one after another of that specially engaged audience sought out Weber and begged him to "forget it." They shook their heads sadly, as the little manager met every objection smilingly. "I think it's there," he replied in the vernacular of his kind, "and now I'm going to try it out before a regular audience." Accordingly, he booked a route of three weeks in Canada and Central New York. It was my privilege to attend one of these preliminary performances in Utica, after the production had been on tour a fortnight. Weber and his own big musical company had only a few weeks previously visited Utica with tumultuous results. In advertising The Climax, he announced it as "Joe Weber's Production of a Melody-Drama," and from the remarks made by patrons entering the theatre that night, it was evident that they expected to attend another big musical entertainment, replete with giddy chorus-girls and flippant comedians. "The audience is going to meet a frightful disappointment," said the local manager to Weber ruefully. They think you are in the cast, and that it's another of your musical shows." The manager was not altogether wrong. When the curtain arose on the first act, with its plain setting of a combination kitchen, dining-room and living-room, they clearly made known their surprise. Along toward the end of the act they began to study their programs more closely. It was with an air of resignation that they remained in their seats. The reception accorded the play that night was not exactly boisterous. The audience paid strict attention and applauded politely. At the conclusion they left the theatre without any outward signs of approval. But do you think that Weber was discouraged? Not a bit of it. For, when Weber, the author and I met at a restaurant a few moments later to discuss the performance, the manager's first remark was: "You could have heard a pin drop in that second act, and I saw one woman wiping her eyes. Those are the signs that count." Even the author, that most optimistic of mortals, was not unduly elated. His criticism, of course, was directed chiefly to the acting itself, but he showed a rare willingness to make proposed changes in the text, and joined in the common demand for an improved cast. What followed is now theatrical history. Presented before a regular audience—the actual receipts were $65—at Weber's Theatre one afternoon about two months ago, every dramatic critic in the city declared that the play was one of the gems of the season. Two of them likened it to The Music Master. Another wrote that The Climax will prove to be another Old Homestead. The critic of the Evening Sun attended three performances during the first week, and the following Monday organized a box-party of prominent stars to enjoy the play with him. Charles Frohman cabled from London for the English rights. J. C. Williamson, through his New York representative, entered a bid for the Australian rights. The firm of M. Witmark & Sons obtained an option on the rights in German. David Belasco witnessed a performance, and congratulated Weber during each intermission and again after the last curtain. Five companies will present the play on tour next season, and Weber has purchased a new office safe—three times the size of the one he used in the old Weber & Fields days.

John Cort's Activities

John Cort is one of the busiest managers in the Western theatrical field just now. Aside from running one or two big concessions at the current Alaska-Yukon Exposition, besides his three theatres there, he is spending a little spare time acquiring a few more properties in the Sage Brush Territory and building a new theatre in Chicago, which is to be ready to open on or about October 15th, and to be devoted to musical productions. It is to be known as the Cort Theatre, and in point of structural beauty and comfort for both player and playgoer, it will be unrivaled in the West. It is also rumored that some big capitalists are trying to arrange with Mr. Cort to build theatres for him in some of the more Eastern cities. Mr. Cort will occupy a conspicuous position among the road managers this season. His production of Commencement Days, which pleased the Bostonians so immensely last fall, has been converted into a musical play and is full of dash and vim. Frederick V. Bowers will be featured in this production. The most important, however, of Mr. Cort's itinerant attractions, will be his star, Max Figman, who is considered one of the best exponents of light comedy on the present day stage. Mr. Figman will have a repertoire of three plays, each of which will be a complete and elaborate scenic production. He will repeat his last season's play, The Substitute, and will revive his first stellar triumph, The Man on the Box. The novelty feature of his season will be a production of The Old Curiosity Shop, made into a play from Dickens' story, by Edgar Mawson. In this version Mr. Figman will appear as the happy-go-lucky knight of fortune, Dick Swiveler. Another property in which Mr. Cort will be interested will be the revival of the delightful Pixley-Luders' musical play, King Dodo.

Polly of the Circus, with Edith Taliaferro in the name part, will be in California in July.

Dustin Farnum will be seen here some weeks hence in his latest success, Cameo Kirby. May Buckley and James Lackaye are in the supporting cast.

NEW ORLEANS, June 20.—Since the closing of the regular theatrical season there has been nothing of interest to chronicle. West End, our lake resort, has opened with a band concert daily and a vaudeville program furnished by the Orpheum Circuit, but the acts have been of indifferent calibre. A pretentious effort was made to open White City, our only summer amusement park, and this, with all previous attempts, died a-borning, chiefly because vaudeville was the attraction. Our people get an indigestion of vaudeville during the winter season, with the Orpheum and the numerous ten cent picture shows, and won't enthuse worth a cent during the hot period. But things at the White City will from now on take on a new lease of life, for the Orpheum Opera Company, headed by Lottie Kendall, has returned to whoop things up. It is strange how repeatedly this resort has to throw out a life line and equally strange that Ed Seamans is always here to grab it; and this is best explained by the fact that Seamans is the pioneer of musical comedy and knows what the people want, and as opera or musical comedies are the only attractions that can draw the crowds it is safe to predict that Seamans and his Olympia Opera Company will repeat past successes. The opener was The Belle of New York, which was given a most creditable presentation. The company is a good one, too. Robert Lett and Dan Young will take care of the comedy roles. Herbert Carter is the tenor. Albert Wallerstadt will become a local favorite, as he has the voice and the physique to win favors. Keora Farmer will do the vocalizing, as she has a voice well trained besides possessing personal attractions. Bertha Dale and Nina Seamans are strong acquisitions. Violet Gray is too subdued a role for Lottie Kendall. We like her best when she is vivacious and smiling. But everybody in the cast and New Orleans knows what she can do, so let's be patient and wait—only the best pieces will be presented during the season, after which the company goes to the Coast. Next week The Telephone Girl.

W. L. McCONNELL.

From Chicago

The merchants of Chicago have decided to make Dearborn street the show street of that city, with purpose to attract transient visitors to the beauty of what is styled the Loop district. Already preparations are being made to arch the street with electric lights from the Polk street depot on the south to the Chicago River on the north. Here and there will be erected electric pedestals for color light display. With the depot a blaze of light on one end, and the United States Government Building in the center, and the New Cort Theatre at the north end, Dearborn street will rival in beauty any business street in the world. The New Cort Theatre, owned by H. H. Frazee, U. J. Herrmann and John Cort, is now in the progress of construction and will be opened early in November as a musical comedy producing house.

Shubert Attractions In Sacramento

The Shuberts will probably invade Sacramento this fall. It is now learned that a deal has been closed with Manager Goddard of the Grand Theatre whereby the Shubert attraction, The Blue Mouse, will be presented in that house. The Del S. Lawrence stock company will play during the winter at the Grand, but Manager Goddard hopes to arrange to have the stock company play in some of the valley towns on the nights when the Shubert attractions are at his house if final negotiations are consummated.

The Orpheum

The Orpheum program for next week indicates an entertainment of a delightful, varied and novel character. The headline attraction will be Redpath's Napanees, in which George Hillman is featured with four clever girls and the same number of boys. It is the most charming school act in vaudeville today. The Three Sisters Athletas, who will make their first appearance here are famous throughout Europe as acrobats. Harry Armstrong and Billy Clarke, two of America's best known song writers, will contribute to the coming bill a little one-act divertissement, called Finding a Partner, which introduces many of their newest song hits. Herr Londe and Fraulein Tilly will present one of the most unique athletic novelties ever imported from Europe. Fraulein Tilly created a sensation in the fort Tilly created an immense stir abroad as the ladder manipulations in which she carries off the burden of the act were considered to be the most marvelous exhibition of its kind ever witnessed in the Eastern Hemisphere. Next week will be the last of Eight Madcaps, Max Witt's Singing Colleen, Ollie Young and Brothers and of Laddie Cliff, England's boy comedian and grotesque dancer. As usual a series of novel motion pictures will close the show.

Fischer's Theatre

The last performances of Off to Mexico will be given this Sunday afternoon and evening and at the matinee on Monday, "the day we celebrate," Stageland, styled "a potpourri of jingles and chatter," by the same author and composer will be staged in splendid style. Stageland will be particularly entertaining to those interested in theatrical affairs, as some of the characters to be represented are such magnates in the show world as Abraham Erlanger and William A. Brady, and such well-known stars as Lillian Russell, Eva Tanguay and George Cohan. Ben Dillon will characterize Brady; Will King, the clever Hebrew impersonator, will be Erlanger; Dave Morris, George Cohan; Maude Rockwell, the divine Lillian; and Mabel Montgomery, the extraordinary soubrette, Eva Tanguay, who has not been seen in San Francisco since she appeared at the California Theatre at the beginning of her career, and was billed "the swiftest soubrette on the American stage." The scene will be laid on board of a ship, of which Tracy McDermott will be captain, and the comely and energetic chorus will have plenty to do during a rehearsal of a musical comedy that is called for all hands.

American Theatre

Commencing with a matinee Monday, July 5, the Alcazar's attraction during the week will be Sapho, with Florence Roberts in the title part. It was in response to insistent public demand that Belasco & Mayer decided to revive the play in which Miss Roberts made one of her memorable hits when she headed the corps of players at the old Alcazar. It then had a run of six consecutive weeks. Alphonse Daudet's main purpose in writing Sapho was to convey to his young son a practical warning to beware of wanton's wiles. To make the object lesson impress the immature mind at which it was aimed, the great French dramatist painted it in strong colors, but in the play there is nothing that could really offend modern moral fastidiousness. Since it was first produced many American plays which depict more unequivocally unconventional sex relationships have been approved by all except the ultra-prudish. Fanny is a great character for interpretation by an actress possessed of the qualities that won for Miss Roberts her fame. Thurlow Bergen will play Jean, and the remainder of the cast is filled by the cream of the regular Alcazar company, with many extra people as silent auxiliaries. In the staging there has been no sparing of expense.

Now They Say Goodwin and Frawley will make Oriental Trip

Developments of the past week make it seem certain that T. Daniel Frawley will not only postpone his proposed trip to the Orient from September of this year to June of 1910, but that when he does go it will be in company with Nat C. Goodwin and Edna Goodrich. While in Seattle recently, Nat Goodwin learned of Mr. Frawley's intended Oriental tour and was himself so struck with the idea that he proposed sufficient delay to permit of his wife and himself joining in the trip. He made the Seattle manager a definite and tempting partnership offer in this connection and Frawley promptly accepted it, contingent upon his being able to gracefully withdraw from the Oriental bookings already made by him for the coming fall and winter. If all are favorable, as he thinks they will be, Frawley will remain at the Lois until early spring, then joining Goodwin in Los Angeles for a ten weeks' season in this country before sailing for Honolulu in June. Four weeks are to be devoted to Southern California, four weeks to San Francisco and the remaining two weeks in Seattle, the sailing point being Vancouver.

Some Hints On Play-writing by a Man Who Knows

Henry W. Savage, busy as he is, answers all letters with religious sincerity. Recently he took time to reply at some length to a man who complained of having his third manuscript turned down. The rejected piece was entitled The Jolly Smugglers—a near paraphrase of The Pirates of Penzance. To the disappointed author Mr. Savage sent the following "don'ts," which might be digested with profit by all would-be playwrights:

Don't write about smugglers, pirates or bandits.

Write a clean love story—the kind that, when you were a boy, made you curl up in a corner and continue reading while the folks went to dinner.

Write something new, even if you never saw it on the stage before. It might go.

Don't select as a subject any current news topic.

Don't attempt to write about anything with which you are not familiar.

Make your characters natural. To be so they must do only what men and women do in real life, and not what the story books say they do.

Make your characters speak good English.

Don't use stilted words.

Don't say, "I have found the papers with the old man's will secreted," etc.

Don't give the villain whiskers nor make the hero clean shaven. Try it the other way for a change.

Don't make your hero a black sheep returning from Goldfield with the wealth of a Havemeyer; make him a smart chap disinherited for marrying a chorus girl.

Don't make the injured husband seize the heroine by the wrist and fling the lady from him with a curse on his lips.

Don't preach. The public can secure free seats in a church.

Don't forget the audience has imagination.

Don't forget the public reads newspapers and has real human intelligence.

Don't use soliloquies. Monologues are for vaudeville and minstrel shows.

Don't put too much in your play.

Don't have one scene on an island, another at Herald Square and a third in Chicago.

Don't begin the first act in a cheerless garret in the winter of 1866 and then jump to the summer of 1909. Those forty-three years contain enough material for a thousand good plays.

Make the action of your play take place all in one day if possible.

Don't think all managers are vampires. Brains are a common article. A dozen people may have thought your thought before you thought it.

Don't expect a manager to produce your play this season. The Merry Widow was in my office nearly eighteen months.

Don't submit your first manuscript until you have written a second one. Then go back and rewrite the first.

Before submitting a manuscript, go out behind the barn and read it aloud; then ask yourself if you would pay $2 for a seat in the first row to see it acted.

THE DRAMATIC REVIEW is advised that once more melodrama is not a drawing card in Los Angeles and that after this week the melodramatic stock at the Grand will be closed.

Once An Oakland Grocery Clerk Now a Great Singer

Says a recent telegram from Berlin, Putnam Griswold, the principal barytone basso of the Royal Opera of Berlin, signed a contract recently for three years, beginning in the autumn of 1910, with a representative of the Metropolitan Opera Company of New York. Griswold's six year contract with the Berlin opera still has two years to run, but with the consent of the emperor he has been allowed leave of absence to sing in America. In the history of music no more interesting romance of a young man's rise appears than that of Putnam Griswold. From grocer's clerk to Metropolitan opera star in a decade or less is the record the former young Oakland barytone holds. Griswold came west from his home in Massachusetts, living for a time at Topeka, Kan. When he reached Oakland with his mother he gave some attention to music as an item of entertainment for himself. His working hours were put in at a grocery store. Thence he graduated to be a floor-walker at Taft & Pennoyer's old store, Fourteenth street and Broadway. Griswold and others musically bent decided that he had a voice. He studied and for two years was bass soloist in the First Congregational church choir. As his voice developed he decided to go to Europe to study. This was about eight years ago. Gris-would circulated between London, where he first worked, and Paris. In a comparatively short time the young musician had shown the masters of the old world that he possessed a remarkable voice, so remarkable, in fact, that the attention of the music masters of Berlin was attracted to the former Oaklander. He was summoned to the German capital, where he made good to such an extent that he was signed for six years with the Royal Opera Company. Friends in Oakland were delighted to know that Griswold had won further musical fame by getting a contract with the Metropolitan Opera Company in New York.

New Theatre For Tonopah

Tonopah is promised one of the most up-to-date playhouses in Nevada at an early date. A. J. Aylesworth of Tonopah and Goldfield has an option on two splendid sites in the former city and from advices received he will take up the option immediately upon his return from the East, where he has been for the past several weeks in connection with the financing of his enterprise and visiting with relatives. It is proposed to build a theatre of the most modern type. It will be located in the heart of the business section of the city.

Horace McVicker $100,000 Richer

CHICAGO, June 28.—The appellate court today reversed a judgment in the circuit court awarding $100,000 to Dr. L. C. H. E. Zeigler against the estate of Mrs. Harriet G. McVicker, widow of J. H. McVicker, once a prominent theatrical man in Chicago. The opinion held that the contract providing for the payment of the money at the death of Mrs. McVicker was contrary to public policy, and, therefore, void, in that it offered a premium to the physician to accelerate the death of his patient. The judgment was recovered in the circuit court in 1907 after a prolonged trial. The damages were awarded upon an appeal from the probate court, where the claim had been disallowed. Dr. Zeigler had been allowed $10,000 by Probate Judge Cutting on an oral contract. Mrs. McVicker died in Pasadena, Cal., in 1904, after she had been under Dr. Zeigler's care for about five years. Horace McVicker, the only son, and a well known Frohman manager, will get this money in addition to several hundred thousand dollars he has already received.

Censorship for Nickelodeons

The board of censors appointed by the mayor to keep in touch with pictures exhibited in nickelodeons and other places of amusement, so that nothing objectionable from a moral standpoint may be exhibited, met in the rooms of the police commission last week. The board consists of J. C. Astredo, who was appointed chairman, N. W. Hall, secretary, and Miss Edith Hecht, Mrs. F. M. Malloye and Detective Sergeant Joseph Redmond. The city was divided Monday into five districts and each member will cover a district and the results will be reported as soon as possible. Those interested have been seen and promise to co-operate with the board. There are, it is estimated, about 3,500 pictures in the city and it will take some time to examine them all. The secretary has been in communication with boards in eastern cities and has received valuable information as to the work there. The board here will work in harmony with the national board.

The Elleford season in Goldfield opened very auspiciously, and business wound up to be something immense. The company went to Tonopah last Monday.

Sure New Theatre for Reno

The contract is believed to have been signed and the bond for lease accepted last week for the construction of the $40,000 Nixon Theatre on First Street, in the rear of the Federal Building, facing Center Street. The announcement of the enterprise was made in Reno last Saturday from those directly interested in the project. Arthur Aylesworth, manager of theatres in Goldfield and Tonopah, left for the national capital last week and it is presumed brought the matter to a final conclusion. Aylesworth was to put up a sufficient bond to insure Nixon for the lease to extend ten years. The structure is to be constructed of brick and stone, two or three stories front, with a broad foyer at the main entrance, its structural beauty to surpass anything yet seen in the city. The seating capacity will be about 2,500.

Spotlights

The Viennese comedy, Lori Pollinger, which Henry W. Savage is to produce in New York in September, probably under the title of Miss Patsy, will be the first of a series of foreign plays that have enjoyed huge success abroad and which he has secured for a company which he will organize and maintain especially for imported works. It will be in the nature of a stock comedy company, with the individual players selected for their versatility and ability to play a repertoire. Lori Pollinger was written by Franz von Schoen-than, a number of whose earlier plays were adapted and presented by Augustin Daly. American play-lovers long ago applauded his Railroad of Love, A Night Off, and others. His works are always wholesome and charmingly naive and rank among the best examples of the German school of refined light comedy. In other words, they are real plays that live, and not frothy pot-boilers constructed to furnish excuse for keeping a theatre open. Lori Pollinger is his latest success, with a long run in Vienna to recommend it.

Polly of the Circus, the dramatic spectacle as staged by Frederic Thompson, will be the attraction to follow The Merry Widow at the Van Ness Theatre. It is from the pen of Margaret Mayo, and ran for an entire year at the Liberty Theatre, New York.

In a speech to the graduating class at West Point, Secretary Taft, then a candidate for the Presidency, brought his remarks to a close by saying: "I shall not speak any longer, for I know you are all anxious to get to The Merry Widow this evening in time for the first curtain. I don't blame you. It is a great show." A few hours later the West Pointers occupied a majority of the orchestra chairs."

The educational theatre which was organized by Mark Twain and others to train East Side children in New York in the dramatic arts and which has been run in connection with the Educational Alliance, got an order from Supreme Court Justice Geiger last Tuesday to show cause why the corporation should not be dissolved. The application says that there are no creditors and that the directors deem it beneficial to dissolve because the theatre has been supported entirely by voluntary contributions and the work has fallen on the directors.

At the time the final curtain fell at the Colonial last evening, Don Caesar de Bazan was alive, and so was his lady love, with a few others, but a terrible slaughter had preceded. At times it was a question whether even Don Caesar would survive, but faith in the author of The Master at Arms led one to be hopeful. These few remarks about the opening of Ralph Stuart and company in the play mentioned are not intended to be disparaging, but merely descriptive. The piece is one of those sword and buckler, cut, thrust and parry romantic dramas, with court intrigue and all those things. It is interesting withal, and the company is deserving of high credit for the manner of presentation. Ralph Stuart, of course, has the leading role, and it is one well adapted to his personality. Anna Cleveland, formerly seen in secondary feminine parts, rises well to Maritana, the leading woman's role. Perhaps the best piece of acting was done by T. N. Heffron in his characterization of the weak-minded, sensualistic monarch.—Salt Lake Herald.

The Princess Theatre Company of this city play San Diego the week of July 12-19.

SANTA BARBARA, June 28.—On July 3, at the Unique Theatre, William H. Wright will present the Wallis stock company of a dozen people for an indefinite engagement. The Unique has been thoroughly overhauled and bettered in many respects. The first play presented by the new company will be The Miller's Daughter. The company numbers Marion Melville, Virginia Mardson, Adeline Fountain and Messrs. Henry A. Sturdy, Richard L. Sheridan and William J. Evans.

SAN DIEGO, June 30.—Garrick (J. M. Dodge, mgr.)—Week June 28—In Gay New York is the piece being presented this week at the Garrick, and it is about the best the company has put on here. The piece has a good plot and an abundance of catchy songs. Raymond Teall as an office boy demonstrated that he can be something other than a black face comedian, and he had little trouble keeping the audience in a continual roar of laughter at his funny pranks. He made a pronounced hit with his old song I Must Have Been a Dreaming. Cash Knight and Frank Morton both do excellent work. Nan Halperin as usual works hard. Between the acts Burton and Wolf entertained with a clever little act. The chorus is well dressed and work well together. July 24-25—The Elks in A Night in Bohemia. July 12-19—Princess Theatre Company. Pickwick (Scott Palmer, mgr.)—The Devil's Doll is the offering by the Armstrong musical comedy company this week. The piece has a strong plot which provides plenty of fun. The comedy is handled most effectively by Barney Williams, Walter Spencer and Billy Onslow. Olga Steck and Ethel Davis as usual do good work. Among the big song hits was Katy Krouse by Barney Williams, I Remember You by Ethel Davis, Beautiful Eyes by Olga Steck, Absinthe Frappe by Walter Spencer. The costumes, scenery, etc., were up to the Pickwick standard. Queen (John Donnellan, mgr.)—It would be hard to get together a better vaudeville bill than the one being offered at the Queen this week. The bill is headed by Sidney Grant, who has an exceedingly clever monologue act. Another popular number is that of Zay Holland who scored a big hit with her violin playing and singing. Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Ellis pleased with their sketch. Grace Tempest and Leon Miller have an excellent offering. Latest moving pictures conclude. Grand (Fred Ballien, mgr.)—The Grand has a good bill this week which is composed of the following: Harry R. Fields made a good impression with his monologue act. The Hill Sisters scored with their singing specialty. Fern and Mack, college tramp team, were well received. Moving pictures conclude. Empire, Bijou and Union offer moving pictures and illustrated songs to fair business.

Paul Gilmore Has New Manager and Two Plays

"The play's the thing," said Shakespeare, and most every wise prophet of modern theatrical affairs agrees with the bard of Avon. The popular young romantic actor, Paul Gilmore, who has been making annual starring tours of America successfully for a decade, is so firm in this belief that he has just changed his management in order to secure a new play which he considered "the thing." Mr. Gilmore read the manuscript of this drama, called The Candidate, and was so struck with its fitness for his use that he at once began negotiations to secure it, when he found that the well-known manager, A. J. Spencer, had bought the play. The only way he could secure it as his starring vehicle was to get under Mr. Spencer's managerial wing, and this was soon arranged. In the meantime, Mr. Gilmore had contracted to use The Call of the North during the coming season. The Call of the North is a dramatization by George Broadhurst of Stewart Edward White's novel, The Conjuror's House. A. J. Spencer will present Paul Gilmore for the main part of the coming season in The Call of the North, and will produce The Candidate for him in the spring, the latter being delayed until that time in order to get a New York opening for Mr. Gilmore.

A Departure In New York

Klaw & Erlanger have made another innovation in the theatrical business of New York City which has proven an enormous success, namely, the production of a dramatic offering on a roof garden. Brady & Grismer's A Gentleman from Mississippi, in the Aerial Gardens, which crowns the lofty parapet of the New Amsterdam Theatre, has been received just as cordially as it ever was on an indoor stage. The success of the departure is revolutionary. It has been held most vigorously that only a show with music and lots of girls would appeal to the summer theatregoer. New York, however, has grown in such favor as a summer resort that the increase in visitors will keep open any house that is cool and comfortable. It was A. L. Erlanger's idea to make this wide departure from set custom and habit. He waited until time and tide were right and then launched a venture which will lead to an entirely new departure in the summer theatrical offerings of New York City. Light, breezy comedies will surely hereafter vie with musical productions for the entertainment of summer theatregoers. Mr. Erlanger just saw it first. The Aerial Gardens has a stage as completely equipped as any theatre in the city. The house itself is complete. With the lights of New York twinkling on every side of the cool and spacious auditorium, the voices of the players carry easily to all parts of the theatre, and not a word is lost. Best of all, the spectators are comfortable, and the breezes that blow over Manhattan at the height of the gardens fan audience and actors alike, so that no one need sit in a stuffy hall and sweltering watch the players' collars and acting go limp under the strain of the heat.

The Orpheum

A genuine novelty will be presented next week in the shape of a one-act grand opera, entitled The Patriot. Its action takes place during the American Revolution at the time when the English government was offering a reward of $25,000 for the capture of George Washington, who is saved from a bloody death at the hands of the Tories by a young girl named Marion, who purposely changes the apartment in which Washington is to sleep and perishes in his stead. The principal feature of the cast will be Helena Frederick, a gifted dramatic soprano of most attractive appearance and a graceful, feeling and forceful actress. Miss Frederick will be supported by Huntington May, Pacie Ripple, Fred Hanley, John Rogers, J. V. Prescott, James Wall and the old Tivoli favorite, William Schuster. Other attractions for next week will be The Three Leightons, among the most popular comedians of the Orpheum Circuit, in a new version of A One-Night Stand in Minstrelsy; Selma Braatz, the feminine Cinqviali and the greatest of all European feminine jugglers, and Charlotte Parry, an extraordinary protean artist, whose versatility and ability is exhibited in an interesting one-act play called The Comstock Mystery, in which she impersonates seven separate and distinct characters in rapid succession. Next week will conclude the engagements of the Three Athletas, Armstrong and Clark, Herr Londe and Fraulein Tilly and George Hillman and his Redpath Napanes. A new series of Orpheum motion pictures will be an interesting finale to one of the best of vaudeville entertainments.

Alcazar Theatre

The Frisky Mrs. Johnson, a Clyde Fitch comedy, is announced as the Alcazar's attraction this coming week. Florence Roberts regards it as one of the best vehicles in her repertoire. She starred in it one whole season, under Frederic Belasco's direction, and everywhere it was presented the critics praised her work in the title part. All the scenes are laid in Paris, but the principal people are Americans, with one Englishman prominent in the plot. Florence Roberts is cast as Mrs. Johnson; Thurlow Bergen as Jim Morley; E. L. Bennison as his brother; Ernest Glendinning as Lord Bertie; William Garwood as Lal Birkenread; Norval MacGregor as Professor Chardly; Andrew Bennison as Mr. Bowler; Burt Wesner as Monsieur Max Dindeau; Charles Trowbridge as Boles; Roy Neill as a page boy; Louise Brownell as Mrs. Frank Morley; Christis MacLean as Mrs. Chardly; Diana Argall as Mrs. Bowler, and Claribel Becker as a maid. When the play was presented in the old Alcazar about six years ago it scored a three weeks' run.

Monday matinee, Charles Alphin, the versatile composer and author, will present his "meteoric musical mixture, Ski Hi, which was a great success under his direction at the Madison Square Roof Garden last season. The scenes and incidents of Ski Hi are far removed from earth, the action taking place on the planet Jupiter, where three earthly mortals are carried by a runaway air-ship. Upon their arrival they are cordially welcomed by King Ski Hi, who promptly makes Isador Grabalski, played by Will King, his court jester. An old San Francisco favorite, Gus Bruno, one of the best comedians in the country, comes direct from New York and will play Grabalski's bosom friend. Juanita Holmes, an attractive and talented soubrette, also new with the Fischer forces, has been especially engaged to play King Ski Hi, and will be heard in several new and catchy songs. Maude Rockwell, the third of the visitors to Jupiter, will sing The Nightingale and Some One, two of the latest and most popular song hits, and Dave Morris, who is becoming a great Fischer favorite, will be heard in The Sights We See in the World Below, a topical number by Mr. Alphin that was a great go on the Madison Square Roof.

Manager Morosco is Going to Make a New House Out of the Los Angeles Burbank

LOS ANGELES, July 8.—The Burbank Theatre is to have a fresh coat of paint inside and a general repairing. Manager Morosco is going to spend a large amount of money on the repairs of the house and we are to have a rare treat when the whole thing is completed. There are to be new orchestra chairs also. These were to have been in for Elks' week, but it has been impossible to get them in so soon, so they will be installed the following week. Thos. P. Jackson of the original Witching Hour company, with Mrs. Jackson, is passing a vacation in Los Angeles visiting the latter's mother. The Ollie Mack Amusement Company, comprising as principal members Ollie Mack, E. P. Foote and Walt Leslie, was formed last week. A number of pieces will be sent out on tour this fall. Sheldon Lewis, the new second man of the Belasco company, has left New York for Los Angeles. Helen Holmes, who will replace Florence Reed during the latter's stay in the East, will arrive here next Friday and make her first appearance with the Belasco company in The College Widow. Maude Beatty, who first came to Los Angeles as a member of Frank Healy's San Francisco Opera Company, has joined the Morosco Musical Comedy Company at the Majestic. Charles Giblyn's first part at the Belasco will be as Stub Talmadge in The College Widow. Florence Oakley has been engaged by George Broadhurst as leading woman of the Chicago Dollar Mark company. Dorothy Bernard, former member of the Belasco company, is married, and the lucky man is none other than our old friend A. H. Van Buren, former leading man in the same company. Her many friends here wish her well.

BELASCO—Hoyt's farce-comedy, A Day and a Night, is the attraction at the Belasco for the week. The first act is lively and brisk, but the play itself is old and most of us have seen it so many times that it is anything but new. However, in the hands of the Belasco players it is a very pleasing production and all of the specialties are well done. Richard Bennett as Marble Hart is the funniest thing in the show, and it is hard to realize that it is the same Dick Bennett who played John Shand. This Hoyt character is awful, but Mr. Bennett puts the best of himself into the part, and the result is that he makes a hit in the role. Miss Reed does good work as Bawn Touraine, the actress, but we know the part is not one to please her. She sings Marie Cahill's Arab love song well. Charlie Murray as an old actor is fine, and his song, I'm Glad I've Got a Job, is great. He also does some clever dancing. Mr. Vivian is cast as the stage manager and Mr. Jennings as the manager of the theatre. The best of the musical numbers is furnished by Bessie Tannehill, who has been engaged for this week particularly. Fay Bainter has a song number, and she also has a castanet dance with Marion Rochester which is pleasing.

The rest of the cast includes Adele Farrington, Louis Morrison, Harry Oakes, Howard Scott, Beatrice Noyes and others. There is a possibility that this play will be held over for Elks' week.

BURBANK—That always popular play, Sherlock Holmes, holds the board at the Burbank for the current week, and they are turning them away at every performance. Mr. Desmond for the first time is seen in the title role, but he is not a disappointment; he plays the part with the surety and quietness which it demands. Messrs. Beasley and Mestayer are seen as Moriarity and the cockney Sidney Prince respectively. David Edwin is cast as Forman, Frederick Gilbert as Larrabee, Willis Marks as Bassick, and Lovell Alice Taylor as Madge Larrabee. Blanche Hall is good in the trying role of Alice Faulkner and Pete Clancy is a very lively Billy. The whole play is most satisfactory and well acted.

MASON—The Princess company appear at the Mason this week in The Umpire. This is by far the best bill they have given us. However, if they had selected this as the opening bill, the result would have been more gratifying from a financial standpoint. Fred Mace in the title role has a part that just suits him, and he does it well. The best of the specialties are May Boley's You Look Good to Father, Helen Darling's The Drums of the Fore and Aft, May Boley's Quarterback song, and several interpolated airs by James E. Stevens and Mace. Edwin T. Emery plays Dutch comedy and Budd Ross is cast as a trust lawyer. Miss Barnett has a small role and Mr. Stevens one of about the same size. The work of the chorus is good and the music lively, costumes pleasing and work of all the principals good. The company will appear for Elks' week at the Grand.

MAJESTIC—Sergeant Kitty is the opening piece of the Morosco-Girard company at the Majestic Theatre. The company deserves much praise, because they have triumphed over a very bad play. There is nothing to it, and yet the actors themselves have made it go. The principals are all clever, the chorus can sing and is composed of girls who are good to look at, the costumes are attractive and the orchestra is well handled. If the piece itself was good there would be nothing to be desired. Agnes Cain-Brown plays the leading feminine role, and plays it well. Harry Girard has several song numbers, among them being I Want What I Want When I Want It, Tonight, and, of course, Prairie Land. Maybelle Baker has a small part, as has Marie Nelson, a new member of the company. Mr. Stockbridge plays the simple-minded orderly of a soldier and puts more comedy in the part than the part has. Mr. Giblyn also has a bad part, but he makes a good deal of it and gets some real humor out of the lines. Percy Bronson has a good song, but his part is not much. The Runaway Girl will follow this show and should prove itself a better piece.

GRAND—Lillian Mortimer's A Girl of the Streets is pleasing patrons of the Grand this week. This play is making more of a hit than any of the previous offerings. Alice Lewis has the principal part. The piece does not lack exciting situations, but they are of a different variety. The balance of the cast includes George Webb, Robert Leonard, George Field, Carl Birch, Franklyn Hall, Marjorie Dalton, Gertrude Claire, Grace Rauworth and Mrs. Frank Frayne.

ORPHEUM—With a political sketch, a baseball episode and a circus on its bill this week, the Orpheum comes near to running the gamut of American pastime. Possibly a bigger act than A Night at the Circus has been presented somewhere in vaudeville, but it would be hard to find it. Not fewer than thirty persons must have part in the turn, not to speak of the highly tickled small boys called in to fill the bleachers during the circus scene proper. Politics are represented in the sketch, A Spotless Reputation, presented by A. L. Pellaton, as a candidate for Governor, and William Foran, as The Smiling Kid, who has discovered a blot on the former's spotless life and makes him withdraw from the race in revenge therefor. Though no woman is present during the sketch, one is constantly talked about, and the action hinges upon the candidate's past actions toward her, and the "Kid's" desire to get even—for he has married her. Cheridah Simpson, known here for her success in King Dodo and Red Feather, comes this time, in skirts, to sing a few songs and play a bit on the piano, and she wins as cordial a reception as when she appeared last, minus the petticoats, in opera. Miss Simpson's voice is still her chief asset, though she has a delightful stage presence and some superb gowns. She makes Carissima her principal vocal offering, and then gives us a few story songs and piano bits, all well rendered. The Novelty Dancing Four consists of two clever boys and two bright girls, who do team work in stepping that is remarkable for close time and agility. The holdovers include Mabel Hite and Mike Donlin, in Stealing Home; the Vindobonas, Claude Gillingwater and his company, in A Strenuous Rehearsal, and Billy Van.

LOS ANGELES—An entirely new vaudeville bill without a hopelessly dull number is that furnished at the Los Angeles Theatre this week. Four of the six big acts are of first-rate caliber, and the only feature which opens poorly, the song and dance specialty of Kessler and Dunn, redeems itself by a whirlwind finish. Saona's best living pictures are those of Carnegie and General Robert E. Lee. Alice Lindley is the life of the skit in which her company appears, entitled Her Own Mother. She is an exceedingly clever comedienne. Martynne not only is a worthy successor of Papinta as a fire dancer, but as a female impersonator will deceive you if you're not forewarned. Weston and Young might as well call their rapid-fire collation of merry folly Looking for Something? or Calcimining Broadway, for The New Reporter never comes within profane distance of his office. He doesn't cover many assignments, but he always covers his retreat with a laugh, honestly won. The act is good, fast fun. Nadje, artist's model, combines trained equivoise with a talent for dancing and a pert ability to make the most out of any turn, which would seem to guarantee her Parisian nativity. The Laugh-o-scope has a good series of pictures called Miss Faust, in which a guardian angel driving an auto utterly discomfits a bicycling devil and all his relations.

FISCHER'S—A bill of ten numbers, in addition to the moving pictures, is provided by Messrs. Smith and Warren at their First Street theatre this week. The Grace Twins, singing and dancing soubrettes, are toplineers. The larger twin does a clever take-off on Vesta Victoria's song, Poor John. Annie Montgomery and her Roly Poly chorus are seen at their best in My Dusky Salome. For this number the girls are strikingly clad in Turkish costumes, very much on the sheath gown order. Joe Egan, the Broadway boy, gives a little inside story of pugilism in rhyme. Mabel Le Barron, a quick-change monologist, tells some of the troubles of a waitress looking for a job. The rest of the bill is made up of chorus numbers by Annie Montgomery and her Roly Polys, and songs by Leon Chartier, the most pleasing of which is The Serenade, in which he assumes the role of a Spanish lover. He is assisted by a chorus of Spanish maidens.

UNIQUE—Rainbow-hued gowns and good voices are the stock in trade of Kelly and Violet, who are pleasing Unique patrons this week in their well-known act. Goodhue and Burgess are the other vaudeville performers in a Hammock Built for Two. They introduce good singing, dancing and a banjo solo. James Kelly and Al Franks star in this weeks comedy, which is labeled The Two Twins. Winnie Baldwin, Lillian Massey, May Parker and Denton Vane take the other principal roles. The Unique-o-scope shows some good pictures.

WALKER—The Walker Theatre presents another bill of good vaudeville this week. It is headed by Helena Butler and her company in a sketch, entitled A Rural Romance. Jessie Lee, a little girl with a big voice, who made a hit at the theatre a few months ago, returns with a novelty act. Woodward and his trick dog, Girlie, have a novelty offering in music and comedy. Joseph Manley as well as Jessie has new songs, with illustrations. The orchestra gives a concert program and new motion pictures are shown.

Correspondence

NEW YORK, July 1.—Hot weather having closed nearly everything theatrical in this city except the vaudeville and roof attractions, we have to look to the road for our new summer productions. Mrs. Augusta J. Evans-Wilson's novel, St. Elmo, was seen for the first time in dramatic form in Richmond, Va., last week. The play adheres closely to the original story. The uplifting influence of Edith Earl upon St. Elmo is made the central theme. Willard Holcomb, who dramatized the story, also played the role of the negro servant, to which he did ample justice. In response to the applause, he made a happy and graceful speech of thanks, in which he gave the greater share of the credit for the performance to the authoress and the company. * * * There was something of a novelty at the Belasco Theatre in Washington, D. C., last Monday night, when the Shuberts' Theatre company presented a play without a name for the first time on any stage. The name is to be supplied by the audience, a prize being awarded for what is judged the most appropriate one suggested. The new play tells an interesting story of American life and was well acted. * * * The Gentleman from Mississippi opened last week in the Aerial Gardens on top of the New Amsterdam Theatre, for its summer run. Brady and Grismer have built an entirely new production for the engagement. Thomas Wise and Douglas Fairbanks head the cast. * * * Arrangements have been completed between the management of Palisades Park and William Morris whereby, beginning next week, the latter will take charge of the booking of the Open Air Theatre in that resort. * * * Nina Morris has been engaged by Henry W. Savage to play the principal comedy role in The Florist Shop, which opens next month at the Liberty Theatre. * * * Mrs. Newton Bemington, wife of the once well-known horseman, now helpless with paresis in Middletown, N. Y., has returned to the stage. She appeared at the Royal Theatre, Brooklyn, in a sketch written by herself entitled Mary Ellen. * * * A new act called the Kangaroo dance was introduced in the jungle scene in the second act of The Follies of 1909 at the Jardin de Paris by Thomas Almond last week. The dance is a decided novelty and was well received.

ROB ROY.

NEW ORLEANS, June 27.—After viewing a second week's production of the Olympia Opera Company there is every evidence of their getting into their stride, for things are running more smoothly and there is a better esprit du corps visible. Although The Telephone Girl does not offer individual roles that are in any sense great, the work of the majority of the cast was distinctive. Lottie Kendall, as Estelle, comes into her own and what a delightful telephone maid she did make. Sprightly, animated and with an opportunity to look and act her best, she drew the most favorable criticism. I was pleased to see my old friend Dan Young get so much out of the role of Hans Nix. It was not altogether in Dan's line, but he received well merited praise. Keara Farme as Beauty Fairfax looked the part and sang Cupid and I delightfully. The best song number was Put Me Among the Girls by Robert Lete and chorus. As Goldtop, Lete gave flashes of intelligent interpretation. Possessing one of the best voices of the company and with a method that is easy and graceful, we can expect some great work at his hands. I want to predict a great future for Nina Seamans. She is pretty, graceful and appears to throw her whole soul into her parts. Her dancing is capital and before long she will be reaching for flowers over the footlights. Albert Walledstadt is too tall to essay roles like Slinkey Rice and Snuffles. I want to see him in better parts. He has a fine voice and a fine stage presence. Herbert Carter is a fine actor and was creditable as Dick Marvel. The chorus for the most part is comely and show intelligent training. One of the tall blondes exhibits dramatic fire that should draw her out into the spotlight.

W. L. McCONNELL.

BOISE, IDAHO, July 2.—Though the thermometer is registering 105 in the shade up this way, the Eckhardt Stock Company is still playing stock in the beautiful Pinney Theatre. The Della Pringle Company closes here on the 3d, until September, when they open again in the Turner. Charlie Pyle, who is well known in California, was forced to give up Riverside Park in this city, on account of bad business and disagreement with his partner, who claims Mr. Pyle did not live up to his agreement. The Orpheum, a vaudeville moving picture and stock house, has been closed for one week to make improvements, but will open on the 5th of this month with vaudeville and stock. There are some three or four other moving picture places of amusement in Boise, and all seem to be doing fairly well. I would rather sweep the streets in San Francisco and live there than be a millionaire in Idaho, Washington or Oregon. Let me tell you that when a fellow gets away from California and sees other countries, then he knows how to appreciate good old San Francisco. Yours,

J. E. CAVEN.

SANTA BARBARA, July 3.—The Wallis stock company opens a four weeks' engagement at the Unique Theatre tonight, presenting a comedy drama The Miller's Daughter. Marian Melville plays the leading role. William H. Wright, who has been in Santa Barbara at the head of his own company returns as director.

MODESTO, July 3.—Tonight and tomorrow night will be an event of no little importance to the local theatre-goers, marking, as it does, the farewell performance of two clever stage people, who, during their season here, have made many personal friends and have won the admiration of all the patrons of the drama. Walter Newman and Bertha Foltz will close their engagement at the Airdome with their appearance tonight in the Divorcons and Sunday night in the patriotic drama, The American. Miss Foltz has shown herself an actress of no mean ability and her cleverness in handling the varying roles in the plays of their varied repertoire, show her to be a performer of enviable versatility. That she has pleased us is putting it mildly and it is only to be regretted that she must leave us now. She appeared to best advantage in Sapho and the Divorcons, but her handling of the comedy roles was all that could be desired. Mr. Newman has handled the varied characters assigned to him in the most satisfactory manner, showing well in comedy roles but being most pleasing in the serious parts. His work in The Devil was the best that has yet been seen here, and in this unique play he ranks with those who made it famous. Mr. Newman has kindly consented to remain over the Fourth and read the Declaration of Independence at the exercises in connection with the celebration.

PETALUMA, July 8.—Hill Opera House—Petaluma Lodge No. 901, B. P. O. E., gave a minstrel show on the night of Monday, July 5th, playing to a large audience. The house is closed to vaudeville this week. The Unique continues to play vaudeville.

J. R. B.

SAN RAFAEL, July 4.—Dick Jose, the tenor, and his company of fourteen were prevented by the police tonight from producing Jane in the Garden Theatre. Back of it all is a fight in the courts and on the street. Fists have been doubled up and writs have been invoked, but Jose was unable to appear tonight. Fully ten weeks ago Manager Thomas Phillips of the Garden Theatre booked Jose and company through the Great Western Theatrical Circuit for tonight. Soon afterward Building Inspector J. Millen decided that the house was not properly wired. He notified Phillips that the theatre could not be used according to the building ordinance. Phillips insisted that Jose would sing anyway, and so last night secured an injunction from Judge Murasky of San Francisco to restrain the police from interfering with the performance tonight. The writ was made returnable Wednesday, three days after the date of the performance. The writ aroused the ire of Town Marshal Haley, and when he and Phillips discussed the matter on the street they had a chinning match hot and heavy. Today Phillips got a brass band and paraded the streets, announcing that Jose would surely sing. About this time, however, Town Attorney Joe Hawkins found that Phillips' license to operate a theatre in San Rafael had expired July 1. He advised with various lawyers concerning the matter, and they agreed that Phillips was not entitled to open his theatre without a license. Just before the time for opening the performance tonight, three policemen and two plain clothes men went to the theatre and prevented the box office from opening. Every seat had been reserved and more than 200 persons were seeking standing room, but the police turned every one away from the theatre. Jose paid the members of his company out of his own pocket and Phillips has instituted damage proceedings because he was not permitted to open his theatre.

SAN DIEGO, July 7.—Garrick (J. M. Dodge, mgr.)—For the farewell week of their engagement here the Raymond Teal Musical Comedy Company is putting on for the first time on any stage The Spooners. The piece is a lively comedy with many catchy songs interpolated, and is undoubtedly the best the company has produced. The words and music are from the pen of Wm. Friedlander, principal comedian of the company. Cash Knight is seen as old Pennylee, a spendthrift; George Burton as the divorce lawyer; Nan Halperin as a telephone girl; Orvey Post as a clerk; Frank Morton as a bell boy; and Wm. Friedlander as a college chap. All handled their parts in a faultless manner. One of the big song hits was The Girl I'm Crazy. About, by Orvey Post and chorus. Nan Halperin also scored with The Jack O'Lantern Man. The olio is given by Nan Halperin, Evelyn Constance and Grace Wolf. The chorus as usual worked hard. Pickwick (Scott A. Palmer, mgr.)—Facing the Powder, a melange of nonsense and music, is the bill which the Armstrong Musical Comedy Company is producing for their last week at the Pickwick. Mr. Armstrong appears as Mr. Rockafellow, Walter Spencer as the son, Barney Williams as Jake Myers, a servant, Billy Onslow as Mike, a Butler. All give good interpretations. There are a number of catchy songs, chief among them is Diana, written by Mr. Armstrong and sung for the first time by Ethel Davis. Olga Stech scored with Reed Bird. After closing their engagement here the Armstrong company will go direct to Vancouver, B. C., for a lengthy engagement. Manager Palmer will inaugurate a dramatic stock company. Queen (John Donnelan, mgr.)—Harry LeClair, an unusually clever impersonator tops the bill at the Queen this week. Anderson and Burt have a good comedy sketch in Home Sweet Home; Zena Keefe danced and sang her way into the hearts of her auditors; Harry Burgoyne pleased with his English coster act. Latest moving pictures conclude a good show. Grand (Fred Ballien, mgr.)—The Grand has a good bill which is composed of the following acts. Dale and Dale, dancing act; Francis Hoyle, singing act; Hill Sisters in illustrated songs. Latest moving pictures.

CARL E. LUNDQUIST.

PORTLAND, July 5.—BUNGA-Low Theatre (George L. Baker, mgr.; Milton Seaman, bus. mgr.)—Ethel Barrymore opened her engagement at this theatre last Monday night in her latest success, Lady Frederick, and packed houses witnessed the play at every performance. Miss Barrymore takes advantage of every chance given to her by the play. Her support was good in every respect. Following Miss Barrymore, John Drew finished out the week in Jack Straw. Drew lived up to his high reputation in every manner and gave us a very enjoyable evening's entertainment. The supporting company was also very good. Rose Coghlan treads closely on the heels of the star for honors. Both of these productions, the Barrymore and the Drew, were not lacking in any way from the stage standpoint. Tonight Mrs. Fiske opens in Salvation Nell. Henry Miller's Associated Players follow in The Servant in the House. Marie Doro is an early booking.

Manager Calvin Heilig, who has been playing the bookings of the K. & E. shows at the Bungalow, owing to the closing of his theatre, announces that by the latter part of this month the New Heilig Theatre will be a reality, as ground is to be broken at Seventh and Taylor streets for the house at that time. Sufficient money has been subscribed to erect the house. At the same time it is rumored that the old Heilig will be rebuilt for the Shuberts.

ORPHEUM THEATRE (James H. Erickson, mgr.)—The hit of the past week's bill at this house was Charlotte Parry in the playlet, The Comstock Mystery, in which the lady impersonates six different characters. We have had several acts of this kind, but the present one is by far the best of them. Helena Frederick and her company in the one-act opera, The Patriot, which was the headline act, was also well received. World and Kingston and Jarrow had entertaining acts. Commencing tonight, the bill is as follows: Lily Lena is the headliner; The Electrified Girl Review; Julius Tannen, Hymen Meyer; Whittier-Harris Players; the Three Donals; and Luigi Brothers.

LYRIC THEATRE (Keating & Flood, mgrs.)—The Imperial Musical Company are playing a musical comedy entitled The Miffiffiff of Mulvul-bulluu this week—do not know where they got the name, but it seems to please the patrons of the house. Next week Shubert's Blue Mouse opens for one week at this house.

GRAND THEATRE (James H. Erickson, mgr.)—Albini is the headline act and the other numbers are Wyatt and Rice; Gillihan and Murray; Billy Windom; Bessie Allen, Mabel Carew and company; Mlle. Rialta and company; and Fred Bauer.

Pantages has the Svengali Trio for the feature act for this week.

Coney Island's Popular Playground

With "everything new but the ocean," Greater Dreamland, Coney Island's favorite amusement park for the fun seeking New Yorkers, has started on its season. Originally a beautiful playground right on the beach of the broad Atlantic, the management has transformed it into a still more enchanting place, with more novelties, more surprises, more features than have ever been known on the Island. From the gateways on Surf Avenue to the ocean front, everything is new and Greater Dreamland is now a golden rainbow city basking in the near-summer sun. From the very start of its season this park has taken a firm and lasting hold upon popularity and prosperity. Its broad avenues, its beach, its promenade, its gaily-hued and bunting-bedecked buildings being crowded every day and night. The largest free show ever given in a park is the pre-eminent feature this season. In a ring over the lagoon, where the boats come shooting from the chutes, a big circus is given twice a day and night, entirely free, and where it can be viewed from tete-a-tete settees and little tables beneath a wistaria shaded arbor. The Dreamland Band of eighty pieces, gives continuous concerts, while in the new ball-room, the largest dancing space in the world, there is a fine orchestra with well-known soloists. Among the many attractions in Greater Dreamland are Bostock's arena, with new and startling animal acts; Creation's Fall of Man, with its wonderfully impressive scenes; the Village of Bontoc Head Hunters, directly from the Philippine Islands. In the chutes, the ascent of Mt. Blanc, the crossing of the Great Divide, the Streets of Venice, Hell Gate and the Scenic Railway, new and sensational rides with lots of fun and surprises are supplied. Sorcho's deep sea divers, the Electric Dairy Farm, A Night in Paris, Wonderland, The Human Butterfly, Beautiful Melodia, Blake's dog and pony circus and a host of other attractions are among the multitude of new things at Greater Dreamland. Visitors to the park this year will find one unending tour of new things. The most elaborate changes have been made at a most expensive layout, and the wisdom of the management is shown in the response of Manhattan, its hosts of visitors from all parts of the country, and its surrounding suburbs have made by the crowds they are sending to the city white and golden by the sea.

Notes from Actors' Fund Bureau

Thomas McGrath reports continued enthusiasm among members of the profession for the Actors' Fund and its new departure. Even at this early day something only hinted at in the inception of the Bureau is now almost an established fact, both men and women are becoming imbued with the necessity of seeing the managers in person. The Bureau is encouraging the idea, and to such an extent has it been put into practice in the few months of the Bureau's existence that more than fifty per cent of the registered members are under contract for the coming season. Most of them made their arrangements personally without the assistance of any outside agency. Seventy-five members have registered since last week's report. Fifty-five new annual members have been added, and the following names added to the Life Membership List during the month: John B. Park, Bessie Taylor Bennington, Harry H. Campbell, Frank Keenan, James Forbes, Norman Tharp, William Collier.

Paris courts for a long time. It is the action which Mr. Clarkson, the famous London wig-maker, has brought against the managers of the Porte St. Martin Theatre. Clarkson claims $10,000 damages for the supply of theatrical costumes and properties for the production of Chanticleer. When Clarkson goes into the box to explain how he made the rooster's dress for Coquelin, the court will be sure to have some amusement. It appears that in order to get a very life-like resemblance to a barn-yard fowl the famous wig-maker procured the finest specimen of the bird that he could find and practically lived with it for a week in his studio, watching it crow, strut, feed and flap its wings. Then he made the costume and went over to France with it, where one of Rostand's sons dressed up in it and rehearsed in the author's garden. When the production was postponed this famous costume was thrown on Clarkson's hands.

Personals

BERYL HOPE, the leading woman with the Three Weeks company, is one of the handsomest actresses who has been seen in San Francisco this season. Her gowns are marvels of the dressmaker's art.

CECILE LOFTUS was married June 9 in the Kensington registry office, London, to Dr. A. H. Waterman of Chicago. On her return from her American tour Miss Loftus is going to take up legitimate drama in England and Dr. Waterman intends to practice in London.

WALTER HOFF SEELY, the energetic manager of the Valencia Theatre, is in New York arranging for new plays and several new players for the Mission playhouse. He expects to return with many surprises for the Valencia's patrons. J. Charles Green, the leading spirit of the Valencia corporation, is also in New York.

GROPING her way through flames and smoke which awakened her from sleep early in the morning of July 2, Grace N. Wishaar, scene artist of Ye Liberty Playhouse in Oakland, reached a window of her room and jumped to the ground to escape death. Her handsome home at Folkers and Lake Shore avenues, Piedmont, was burned to the ground.

ACCORDING to letters received from Count Bozenta, husband of the late Madame Modjeska, who is now on his way to Poland with the body of his wife for interment in her native country, public officials of Poland desire to make the Modjeska funeral a state affair and to lay the body at rest in some national building. The funeral will be held in Cracow about July 17. Various plans of paying honor to the memory of the distinguished actress are being worked out by the people of Poland.

FRANK J. KIRK, who is playing the part of Dimitry in Three Weeks, is, when on the stage, an exact counterpart of Judge James V. Coffey, the nestor of the San Francisco judiciary. His manner, voice, dress and general appearance all bear a striking resemblance to those of the worthy probate judge. So much alike are they, that if Judge Coffey were to see his counterpart, he would hardly dare say: "One of us is rotten." In fact, he could not.

REPEATED playing of the dual personality of Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde on the stage has driven Guy Mercer, an actor well known throughout the Middle West, violently insane, and he has been sent to an asylum at Worthington, Indiana. There he goes through the regular dramatization of Stevenson's dramatized story from morning to night. Mercer organized the Guy stock company and played in St. Louis theatres among many others in the last few seasons.

SIGNORA PUCCINI, wife of Giacomo Puccini, the composer, was sentenced in Rome, Italy, last Wednesday, to five months' imprisonment and a fine of $120, in addition to costs and damages. Some months ago Signora Puccini accused her husband of paying attention to her maid. It was proved that the girl was innocent, but she committed suicide. The accusations of the wife, however, resulted in a separation and then the mother of the girl instituted suit against Signora Puccini.

LESLIE KING, who left last season with E. H. Sothern and finished the season with that eminent actor in New York, is headed this way with Polly of the Circus company. Mr. King was offered a return engagement with Mr. Sothern, but as his season would not start until late in the year, Mr. King decided to accept the offer from Polly of the Circus, which opened on June 29 at Ashbury Park. On the 1st of July the company jumped across the continent, playing three nights in Salt Lake, then a week in Los Angeles, after which they come to San Francisco for two weeks, opening on the 25th of July.

William L. Thorne

Looking about for exceptional material for the season of stock at the American, the managers of that theatre selected William L. Thorne, an actor of fine presence, much experience and of positive attainments for the position of heavy man of the company. Mr. Thorne is a Native Son who has been one of the successful ones of the East. His first experience occurred about ten years ago, and since that time he has played with Nance O'Neil, Louis James, John Craig in Boston, Ralph Stuart, and with various Eastern stocks, as both leading and heavy man. Mr. Thorne has a magnificent bass voice and for a season sang the bass roles for the famous Bostonians, and a couple of years ago was the original American basso in The Rose of Alhambra in New York. Mr. Thorne is an all-around actor of ability, but his predilection is for Shakespearean characters, and next season will probably find him with one of the big Shakespearean stars. He opens at the American on the 18th, in The Duel.

Nellie Holbrook Blinn is Dead

Mrs. C. H. Blinn, wife of the deputy surveyor of the port of San Francisco, famous as an actress, political speaker and woman suffragist, and a woman of strong mentality and charming presence, died at her residence, 100 Edgewood Road, at 7:45 o'clock Monday morning. She had been ailing for the last six years from cancer, although she had hope that Christian Science was curing her. Her son and only child, Holbrook Blinn, leading man with Mrs. Fiske's company, playing Salvation Nell, came to San Francisco from Sacramento Saturday but left again to join his company at Portland as he thought his mother's condition greatly improved. The death of Mrs. Blinn brings to a culmination a life replete with successes, a career remarkable for its unselfish devotion to her country and a dauntless striving for the attainment of her ideals. She was born in Salem, N. H., the eldest child of Albert Holbrook, a noted lawyer, and Lucy Laten. She was educated at Barre Academy, Vermont, and from her earliest youth was remarkable for her intellect, graduated with the highest honors, and at 16 years of age, became a teacher. She came to San Francisco in 1868 and soon after was appointed vice-principal of the Washington grammar school. Two years later, December 15, 1870, she became the wife of C. H. Blinn. Following her marriage she went upon the stage, taking the name of Nellie Holbrook. Her beauty, her personality, intellect and, above all, her exceptionally fine and musical voice soon won her fame. Her first appearance was as Lady Isabel in East Lynne, played in San Francisco. From that time on she went from success to success, till, following a performance in New York, a grateful and fascinated audience took the horses from her carriage and hauled the vehicle themselves through the city streets. She took up the stage on the advice of John McCulloch and Lawrence Barrett and played with these famous actors in the California Theatre. She then went to the Grand Opera House with the Kennedys; after that with Barry Sullivan at the Baldwin in Shakespearean plays and later as leading lady with the famous Sheridan. She was the first woman to play Hamlet in the United States. While at the height of her theatrical success she left the stage and entered the political field. It was in this sphere that she was at her best. The funeral took place Wednesday and was strictly private.

The Dramatic Review Is Warned

Last week, following out the purpose of THE DRAMATIC REVIEW—to report all the theatrical happenings in the great West—we chronicled briefly an "odorous" incident connected with the closing night of the Murray and Mack engagement in Los Angeles, which was far from being a success. Since that item appeared, through the telephone and the mail, we have been warned by one Walt Leslie that he proposes to do this paper all the harm he possibly can (a most amiable and gentlemanly spirit to possess).

Well, if Walt Leslie or any of his bunch can do us any harm—we deserve it. In the course of the long life of THE DRAMATIC REVIEW it has been a well established fact that this paper has made it a point to be extremely lenient with persons and with companies. We believe in encouraging anything of the least merit and overlooking anything that is not too bad. This attitude of ours is well known and generally commended. So, in conclusion, if the very popular, very talented and very garrulous gentleman who is going to do so much, succeeds—why, well time will tell.

Oakland Has an Alluring Theatrical Bill

OAKLAND, July 7.—Marie Doro has been the attraction at the Macdonough Theatre the first half of the week. This young star has been successful in pleasing. For week of July 12, Henry Miller's Associate Players offer The Servant in the House. At Ye Liberty, The Heart of Maryland is given a great performance. Florence Oakley in the Leslie Carter role, is magnificent and Sydney Ayres, who has strongly established himself as a favorite, is handsome and effective in the male lead. Next week The Regeneration. At the Broadway the stock company is offering Jim Corbett's one time play, Pals. Next week Strongheart. At Idora Park Erlanger and his band are attracting large crowds, in conjunction with such offerings as Beatrice Fischer, soprano; Bert Morphy, X. I. T. Wild West Show and numerous side issues. At the Bell, the pioneer vaudeville house, the program consists of the usual carefully selected bill, headed by Mme. Makrenko, dancer. At the Orpheum, the regular high class selections from the best vaudeville talent is offered as follows: The Futurity Winner; James Thornton, in Songs and Sayings; Camille Trio, comedy horizontal bar performers; Clarke and Bergman, The Chauffeur and the Maid; Elizabeth Murray, character songs; Warren, Lyon and Meyers, comedy sketch with music; Sisters Gasch, lady gymnasts; Orpheum motion pictures; Adelaide and her dancing four; The Billposters Dream.

New Columbia Progresses

The new Columbia Theatre will, it is expected now, be ready for its Christmas attraction. THE DRAMATIC REVIEW is in a position to announce that the Van Ness Theatre will continue to book Syndicate shows when the big attractions move to the new Columbia. In fact, several attractions are already booked for the Van Ness after the first of the year.

New Pantages Theatre

Manager Tiffany of the local Pantages Theatre, is in receipt of a letter from Alex. Pantages, in which that hustling show man says he will be in San Francisco shortly and will then conclude the deal whereby a new Pantages Theatre will be built on the site next to the American Theatre. The new theatre, he promises, will be ready inside of a year.

WALTER NEWMAN and Bertha Foltz will head their own company this fall, opening about September 1. Their tour is now being booked. They will have a good company and will present Sapho, Divorcons, The American and several other plays not yet decided upon.

Van Ness Theatre

San Francisco is enjoying the finest musical treat in years in the presence of Henry W. Savage's Merry Widow company, or, to be exact, one of the Merry Widow companies. And this company, in the opinion of those who have seen the others is no whit inferior to the best, in fact, it has several features that surpass the others. First of all, in writing of The Merry Widow, it is necessary to state that the music of the opera is of superior class and the orchestration is superb. Then again, there is a real story built around the "merry widow" and a real play developed. The story is well and interestingly told and the music, with a thousand and one little superior fancies, possesses a series of haunting melodies that will not leave you. The mechanical equipment of the piece is on a par with the usual Savage productions—and that is a standard that has no superior in this country. And the company, well, it is in every way entirely satisfactory. There isn't a single fault to be found. The Prince Damilo of the play is George Dameral, who is an actor and a singer and a handsome, magnetic man. While not possessing the greatest tenor voice on the stage, he uses what he has with admirable method and his buoyant personality is used with artistic effect in his portrayal of the gay young Prince. Mabel Wilber, who is the widow, is the very embodiment of dainty charm, and as an actress and dancer, she is superb. Her light soprano voice is handled with good effect and her magnetic personality endows the part with a charm that can hardly be described. Oscar Figman, as the Marsoviau Ambassador, and Tommy Leary as the messenger, do excellent comedy work. John O'Donnell, as the love lorn, disappointed suitor, has a small part, but he came near being the artistic hit of the performance. Theresa Zan Brune, as the Ambassador's wife, was a most pleasing personality. The large number of minor characters were in the hands of competent and good looking young men and women, and the production was gorgeous to the extreme of lavishness. The Merry Widow is a great success because it possesses great merit. It is not a fluke, but one of the few real things that has been uncovered in recent years.

Valencia Theatre

A most wholesome comedy performance is that of What Happened to Jones that is being given this week. Jones, sinful charmer of the fair sex and plausible hypnotizer of the sterner variety, is capably impersonated by Paul McAllister, who gets every laugh that lurks in the Broadhurst lines that are assigned to Jones. He is materially aided by Charles Dow Clarke, as Ebenezer Goodly, and by George Osbourne as the Bishop of Ballarat. Robert McKim is a good looking and pleasing Richard Heathley. Robert Homans plays the bogus Indian from the sanitarium and a group of beautiful and charming young women—Grace Travers, Edith Lyle and Antoinette Crawford—play the three girls most bewitchingly. Karra Kenwyn is a handsome Mrs. Goodly and Lillian Andrews is particularly good in a sane way as the old maid. Peggy Monroe, as the Swedish servant girl, shared with Mr. McAllister the comedy honors of the play. Her assumption of the stolid servant was a genuine treat.

Princess Theatre

It was an enthusiastic, as well as a crowded house, that greeted the first American production of Mascagni's opera, L'Amico Fritz at the Princess on Tuesday evening. While the opera is all that is to be desired musically, it is to be regretted that Mascagni frittered away his time upon such a trivial book. There are times when the action of the piece, especially in the second act, drags almost to tediousness. The tragic interest of Cavalleria Rusticana is entirely wanting. In fact, interest of any kind, except for that of the music, comes dangerously near occasionally to being temporarily extinguished. Whatever the faults of the scenario may be, the music is unquestionably that of genius. There is a love scene in the third act that is without a parallel in modern musical composition. It goes without saying, after having listened to the International Opera Company for four weeks, that the individual singers were all that could be wished. Mme. Bertossi and M. Columbini were without criticism. Mlle. Strauss as Beppe was all that the word "satisfactory" means. The same may be said of Mlle. Donner. Archangeli was a capital David. The other parts did not appear to good advantage, the composer having made very little of them in his score. The chorus did not appear at all, singing off the stage the entire evening. This is a decidedly modern idea, and one that does not altogether appeal to San Francisco audiences. The orchestration of L'Amico Fritz will always be remembered as something little short of marvelous by those who heard it on Tuesday evening. Merola, the faithful, was as satisfactory as ever as the leader. On Monday evening La Traviata, which is based upon the same plot as Camille, was presented to a large house. Faust was the bill for Wednesday evening, with Mme. Norelli as Margharita, Bari as Faust and Gravina as Mephistofeles. On Thursday evening Samoiloff made his initial bow in Otello. He reminds one of Salassa. He has all the dignity, insight and reserve that this great artist had when in his prime. On Friday the double bill of Cavalleria Rusticana and I'Pagliacci was presented. The vacation season does not seem to affect the attendance at the Princess.

Alcazar Theatre

Monday night saw Florence Roberts return to one of her earlier and greatest triumphs—Sapho. In this play, which is a specially fine vehicle for her brilliant emotional qualities, Miss Roberts gives a remarkable portrayal, putting forth in abundant measure the human qualities that must go into any characterization to make it lasting and attractive. Her tremendously impressive stage appearance and her superb grasp of the character of Fanny LeGrande were in evidence throughout the evening. Next to Miss Roberts, Burt Wesner, as Uncle Cesaire, was the best of the company. Mr. Wesner played the part in a straightforward, legitimate manner, and his ability found ample opportunity to bring out a continuous outburst of laughter, without resorting to buffoonery. Thurlow Bergen was, in the early stages of the play, altogether too rough in his repulse of Fanny LeGrande's advances. Louis Bennison, as Dechelette; Norval MacGregor, as Caoudal; Walter Belasco as Hettama; and Ernest Glendinning, as Flamont, played their parts with pleasing effect. Marie Baker was a good Mme. Hettama and Christie McLean pleased as Aunt Divonne. Louise Brownell as Rose headed the score of attractive young women who thronged the first act—an act that was brilliantly staged. In fact, the performance all through is magnificent and the settings gorgeous.

American Theatre

When a novel has been, not only one of the six best sellers, but the best best seller, so to speak, and when its output is measured not in editions but in tons of paper, it is safe to say that the reading public cares not a fig for the literary value of such a book or of any criticism of a serious nature concerning it. When the same novel is reduced to dramatic form, it is equally safe to assume that the theatregoing public cares not a fig whether the play is a good one, from the playwright's point of view or the dramatic reviewer's analysis. Such is the case with Three Weeks. As a play, not much is to be said for it. It is never wicked. It is often vulgar. At times it stands still. But as a money-getter, the play keeps up the pace it set in the book markets of a year ago. Three Weeks is an excellent exemplification of the fact that it is not the material that makes a play bad, but the treatment of such material. The drama centers about the maneuverings of the Queen of Sardinia, a mythical kingdom in the Balkans, to secure an heir for the childless throne of her country. Under certain forms of government, such plotting might be quite the proper thing, for political reasons, to indulge in. In Mrs. Glyn's play, however, all that is erotic and suggestive of such scheming is made the subject of stage representation. Briefly summarized, the play is written about a few salacious situations. The rest is mere padding. Whatever may be said regarding the piece, it is but fair to the cast to state that all its members are without exception far above any demands made upon them. Beryl Hope is a most excellent queen and is an unusually pleasing actress. She dresses with exceptionally good taste. If all of the feminine portion of the crowned heads of Europe are as comely as she is, they are to be congratulated. William T. Hayes played the heavy part of the king, a drunken, profligate monarch, as well as it could possibly be done. His acting and his make-up in the prologue were wonderfully realistic. Paul Verdayne, as characterized by Harry C. Brown, left nothing to be demanded. Mr. Brown should have a role that demands more of him. A small part that stood out, and which will be remembered by all who saw it, is that of the head waiter, for which Robert G. Thomas is responsible. He has evidently made a study of the European flunkey, who is all servility to those from whom he expects petty favors, and who is a despot to the unfortunates over whom he has control. The waiter of Mr.

Thomas was quite a change from the imperious Petrovitch of the prologue. Lionel Moncrief, the bloodthirsty Verchoff in the prologue, became the silent Thompson in the remainder of the play, who saw none of Paul Verdayne's, his master's, faults. Will T. Chatterton, as the jovial Captain Mark Grigsby, made the most of his opportunities. It is safe to say that, better cast, he can do even more satisfactory work. Frank J. Kirk as Dimitry was excellent. Lillian Rhodes, as Anna, and Clara LaMar, two pretty and capable women, were satisfactory in the small way that Mrs. Glyn has provided for them. The same is to be said of J. W. McConnell as Sir Charles Verdayne, Sydney Price as Vasli, Albert Duall as the first waiter, and William Casey as the spy. After all is said and done in the way of criticism, with all its faults, Three Weeks is without doubt one of the big money-getters of the season, as the packed houses at the American testify.

Spotlights

ANSWER TO INQUIRER—Edward Harragin's last appearance in San Francisco was as a stock star at the Grand Opera House in 1904, with his nephew, Dave Braham, Jr. Among the plays presented were Old Laverder and Waddy Googan.

Going Some, Paul Armstrong and Rex Beach's farce, which was recently transferred from the Belasco to the Maxine Elliott Theatre in New York, will continue at the latter theatre until the middle of the summer, when it moves to Chicago.

It is estimated by the management of the Van Ness Theatre that The Merry Widow, during the three weeks of its stay at that playhouse will secure over $10,000 more in receipts than any run of that length made here in past seasons by notable attractions. San Jose, Stockton, Sacramento, Fresno are all sending in orders galore, as the big production does not visit those cities this season.

The scenic production of Polly of the Circus is most elaborate and the circus scene true to life, with acrobats, tumblers, clowns and trainers. The story of the play is rather novel and it has that which holds the heartstrings and invites even the jaded taste to a simple revel in romance. Polly of the Circus will follow The Merry Widow at the Van Ness Theatre.

The Third Degree, acknowledged to be the greatest effort of the well-known playwright, Charles Klein, will be seen in San Francisco before the close of the year. It is a powerful story which introduces in a telling manner the police methods of securing their evidence from suspects. The performance proved one of the real hits of the past season in New York.

Cameo Kirby, the play in which Dustin Farnum is now appearing with so much success, will be seen here next month at the Van Ness Theatre. Farnum is very popular with San Francisco theatregoers and his engagement in the new drama should be one of the most successful of the season.

The Ed Redmond stock in San Jose is meeting with great success at the Victory. The bill this week is An American Citizen, and Charley Gunn, Ed Redmond, Griffith Wray, Sidney Payne, Alta Phipps and Garne Virden are most happy in their portrayals.

Vaudeville

The Orpheum

The Orpheum has the regulation bill of excellence this week. Something is to be found that will suit every taste. Ollie Young and his three brothers, Jack, Bernie and Avery, demonstrate themselves to be masters of the diablo, hoops and the boom-crang. Those lively young ladies, The Madcaps, prove the right to their claim that theirs is the most agile and skilful act in vaudeville. The ease with which they perform their difficult feats seems apparently impossible for such demure young ladies. Their turn is a very popular one. Max Witt and his singing Coleens dispense vocal music of a pleasing order, which includes everything from Come Back to Erin to When I Marry You. Herr Londe and Fraulein Tilly are nothing short of wonderful in their ladder act. The fraulein is a young woman of pleasing personality, and is a great favorite with her audiences. Harry Armstrong and Billy Clark are receiving three and four encores a performance, so popular is their singing, and audiences are not anxious to let them go at that. They may consider themselves San Francisco favorites. An act of exceptional grace is that of the Three Sisters Athletas. They are gymnasts quite out of the common. That clever youngster Laddie Cliff still holds his place among this week's performers at the Orpheum. A pleasing musical comedy is George Hillman's Fun in a School Room. It has plenty of melody and ginger in it. Rosner, the reliable, is as excellent as ever with his augmented Hungarian orchestra.

Pantages-Empire

Manager Tiffany has a most appetizing program on tap this week, headed by the Four Brothers Bard, acrobats, who have some entirely new and original stunts in the gymnastic line that will astonish you. Numerous feats of a most difficult nature are neatly and cleverly accomplished. The neat costuming of their act is also worthy of mention. A decided novelty in the way of educated animals is introduced by Prof. Roberts with his troupe of educated rats, cats and dogs, which includes wire walking, trapeze work and stair climbing, all of which is accomplished with almost human intelligence. Marie Herdlicka, lyric soprano, entertains with some delightful vocal selections. Her voice is exceptionally clear and sweet, which she well knows how to handle. The Terry Twins who look so much apart you can't tell them together, supply a most amusing turn entitled Which is Which? Adams and Mack in legerdemain have several new and interesting stunts with which to mystify the audience. Their work is exceptionally clever and some good comedy relieves the serious nature of the act. The motion pictures in conjunction with the Pantages-Empire orchestra comprise a most satisfactory and entertaining program.

Fischer's

Stageland, Charles Alphin's latest happy conception of "jingles and chatter," served to introduce such well known people in the amusement world as Abe Erlanger, William A. Brady, Lillian Russell, Eva Tanguay and George Cohan to the audiences in Fischer's Theatre this week. Will King and Ben T. Dillon, as the theatrical magnates, supplied a liberal amount of theatrical comedy, while Nellie Montgomery as Eva Tanguay, the St. Vitus soubrette, known only by reputation in San Francisco, gave what was said by theatregoers who have seen the original to be a capital impersonation of the vivacious and energetic singer and dancer. I Don't Care is capitolally sung by Miss Montgomery. Maude Rockwell, the favorite soprano, as Lillian Russell, brought down the house with her renditions of Il Bacio and Glow Worm, and Dave Morris had a great song hit, assisted by the captivating Fischer chorus, in It's Always the Same Old Colors, the latest patriotic effusion. Tracy McDermott was warmly endorsed for My Own Sahara Belle, a decidedly catchy number. Stageland is out of the ordinary and makes good entertainment.

The National

As usual a most entertaining programme is to be found at the popular Grauman house this week. Leo Cooper in an intensely interesting act, entitled The Price of Power, from the talented pen of Harry D. Cotrell, supplies the dramatic portion of the bill. The story has to do with the chief executive of a State placed in an embarrassing position 'twixt love and duty, in which his conscience is saved by the object of the controversy committing suicide. Mr. Cooper gives a splendid interpretation of the Governor. Fair support is contributed Mr. Cooper, and although the act has been seen here before it still holds intense interest. Kelly and Reno, billed as marvelous acrobats are far from the real meaning of the word. The act is composed of knock-about slap-stick. Martinez and Martinez should invest in new costumes of which they are sadly in need. A little polish on their instruments would also be an improvement. The Dumitrescu-Vermette troupe entertain with neat and clever horizontal bar gymnasts. Virginia Grant has a most pleasing voice which is heard to advantage in a number of character songs. The Daring Darts introduce a decided novelty in an aerial act which is composed of some daring and clever work. McGloin and Shelley contribute some of the neatest dancing seen in some time and well merited applause is the result of their clever efforts. Joe Valle on the accordion is a hit. Motion pictures, as usual, complete a splendid programme.

The Wigwam

Manager Harris is to be congratulated on having without a doubt the best programme he has presented the patrons of his popular house this season. To name a headliner is beyond me for of a truth they are all in that category in their own particular line, so I will name them in the order of their appearance. La Toska entertains with some neat and clever juggling. Brenon and Downing, assisted by Raymond Clure, present The Intruders, a farce that is a scream from start to finish. Mr. Brenon has the act mostly to himself in the division of parts and most capably takes care of the many laugh provoking situations. The act is of the slap-stick order, but it is good slap-stick. Some of the dialogue pertaining to a wet and bedraggled appearance which is very amply contradicted by their neat and immaculate clothing could very easily be cut as a sacrifice to detail. Clara Thropp, singing comedienne, sings her way into your good graces before she is in evidence very long. Bonner, the horse with the human brain, is a marvelous specimen of equine knowledge. His tricks are too numerous to mention. Mabel McKinley, who is and always has been a great favorite with the audiences of San Francisco, comes in for a typical Western welcome. Miss McKinley has an exceptionally sweet voice with a world of feeling and expression and she not only sings her songs, she acts them with a swing and a dash, or with a depth of feeling (whichever is required) that commands appreciation. What may be said to be one of the cleverest comedy acts seen for many a day is contributed by Francesca Redding and her capable company in The Man from Texas, which is full of good clean and sane comedy situations requiring experienced artists and not novices to bring out and depict in a truly natural manner the many laugh provoking situations which would border onto the truly ridiculous in less capable hands. Miss Redding is well known as an actress of exceptional versatility and has surrounded herself with exceptionally talented support, namely Mr. Lee Calder, as the captain, which he acts in a most brusque and natural manner, and Mr. Gibson as the Willie, the fop, who keeps the audience in a continual peal of laughter. Cooke and Rothert in a wide range of variety in their act, including a little talkfest, jiggling, acrobatics, impersonations and their own original version of the much discussed Apache dance. The motion pictures are as usual entertaining and complete a programme of excellence from start to finish.

The "greatest act in the world" is bound to fall down some place, and the "worst act" make good somewhere else.

You don't see many "spangles" on the costumes of "sister acts" and "female single acts" nowadays, and the slap-stick doesn't go with its former bang, which goes to prove vaudeville is really getting advanced.

Some vaudeville comedians have a way of mystifying their audiences by laughing at their own antics.

Noah's ark would make a great animal act if some enterprising manager could dig it up.

Vaudeville Notes

Manager Bernard Wolf, or Damager Wolf as he will be called hereafter, had quite a strenuous argument with one of his musicians at San Anselmo last Sunday. Wolf, who is running the Airdome in that metropolis, had some trouble with the piano player who at the last moment refused to play. Wolf went before the audience and explained the cause of the delay and gave as his opinion that the musician had cold feet. This was repeated and the disgruntled ivory pounder lay in wait for Wolf at the station where he proceeded to vent his wrath when the object of his hatred appeared. From here on it is a sad story, therefore we will draw the curtain, except to say that Damager Wolf still wears his pleasant smile and his handsome face is free of any bruise or blemish.

W. D. Casey, usher, National Theatre, is making friends among the patrons of that popular house by the courteous treatment accorded all with whom he comes in contact. The staff in the front of the house has much to do with its popularity and in this respect the Graumans are to be congratulated.

McGloin and Shelley are booked for United Time for next season.

Grant Gardner and Marie Stoddard returned to America from their six weeks' engagement in England last week. So successful were they that they brought back a contract for next summer in London, opening at the London Alhambra.

William S. Cleveland, the ex-famous minstrel manager and now a vaudeville booking agent in New York, and John S. Beger, a theatrical manager, who controls circuses and traveling animal shows, fought a fist and cane duel at Thirty-ninth street and Broadway Friday of last week, as a result of which Mr. Cleveland has a large lump on his head from Mr. Berger's cane, and Mr. Berger's face is somewhat discolored. Cleveland and Berger had had a dispute over a business affair recently, and when they met on Broadway they commenced to belabor each other, Berger using his walking stick and Cleveland his fists. A crowd of several hundred persons were watching the encounter when the police arrived and arrested both men. At the Tenderloin police station the antagonists tried to get at each other again, but were restrained by the police. Both provided bail for their appearance in the police court.

Fred Lincoln, John Considine's chief of staff, is in town and making headquarters with Mr. Reese at the S. & C. office in the American Theatre building.

J. B. Dyllin is playing the Central Theatre, Oakland, this week.

White Rat Expenses

Harry Mountford, as secretary of the White Rats of America, has filed with the Secretary of State of New York, a statement of the expenditures of the organization incurred under the anti-lobbying law in connection with the proposed legislation to regulate the charges of theatrical employment agencies. Of the aggregate of $4,844 expended, $2,343 went to James C. Sheldon, counsel for the White Rats, for legal services and expenses, and the balance of the money was paid out for expenses of committees and delegations in connection with hearings had on the bill, which passed the Legislature but failed to become a law owing to the veto of Mayor Adam of Buffalo, the proposed law being drawn to apply to the first class cities of the State.

Tetrazzini's Admirers Have a Beautiful Scrap

In a brief but very pretty fight in Paris, Friday of last week, over Mme. Tetrazzini, John Salter Hansen, an American, proved the victor, while Bazelli, the prima donna's personal manager, got a blow on the jaw that staggered him. Every effort has been made to hush up the affair. It occurred when Mme. Tetrazzini appeared at a gala matinee at Trocadero Hall. The performance was for charity and drew a great audience of fashionable people. On behalf of Hammerstein, John Salter Hansen searches all Europe for budding artists. At the gala matinee he was at the back of the stage of Trocadero Hall. Mme. Tetrazzini and Hansen have known each other a long time. He met her in San Francisco, and even there Bazelli did not like him. Bazelli, who weighs more than 200 pounds, saw Tetrazzini talking to Hammerstein's representative in the wings at the gala matinee and became furious. "You shall not speak to madame," he cried, going up to Hansen. "You must not talk to her. I forbid you to." Hansen smiling retorted that he should not have thought of presenting himself to the prima donna unless she wished to see him. "Put that man out," Baselli said to the director of the performance, pointing to Hansen. "I won't have him here. I'll make you go; I'll show you, —" At the words he slapped Hansen's face. The American, who knows something of boxing, countered with his right on Bazelli's jaw, the blow staggering the bulky manager. Mme. Tetrazzini saw it struck, but, of course, did not know what led up to it. She screamed and, running to the Duke De Nolailes, a patron of the performance, begged him to interfere. The duke, the director and others sprang between the fighters and led them in opposite directions. It is whispered that Bazelli and Hansen will meet in a duel.

dled by its interpreters. Lola Fawn contributes some good singing which is well received. Linden and Wren are seen to advantage in a good comedy act, which includes some very clever dancing. Madaline Le Sar, English singing comedienne, has a distressing habit of waiting for the audience to show some appreciation for every joke she springs before going on to the next. Billy Vest in black-face can't seem to give them enough of his warbling. Billy's voice is exceptionally strong and he knows how to handle it. Georgia White is very much in evidence with some good and lively coon shouting. Olive Reed, as usual, handles the illustrated songs in her capable manner, and three reels of excellent moving pictures complete the bill.

Vaudeville Notes

From latest reports Nat Magner has given up the idea of organizing a musical comedy show for the road, to be known as a No. 2 show. William Kolb is on his way to New York by way of Seattle, and Max M. is taking a vacation in his auto. The regular Kolb and Dill company will probably be reorganized some time in September.

Captain Moore, who was injured in the explosion of his airship America at Redding, California, July 3, died of his injuries the next day.

Puerl Wilkerson is busily engaged in organizing a musical comedy company for Ben Sharp of the Grand Theatre, Reno, Nevada.

Personals

THE wife of A. W. (Zeke) Thomson has received word that she is one of seven heirs to an estate in New Zealand valued at $7,000,000.

EDWARD MURPHY, who has been working with the Selig Polyscope people, has signed for the balance of the season and will do moving picture stunts on the Coast.

GEORGE FOSTER PLATT has finished his new play, The Desert, and will take it East with him in August when he goes to his new duties as director of the New Theatre.

GEORGE DAMERAL, of The Merry Widow company, is accompanied on this trip to the Coast by Mrs. Damerl. Another family party in the company are the Learys—Tommy, Mrs. Leary and their handsome daughter, Georgia, now grown to womanhood.

VIRGINIA THORNTON arrived from Seattle early in the week. Miss Thornton and Evelyn Selby have purchased a home at San Pedro Terrace, near Santa Cruz, and will put in the summer superintending the erection of a bungalow upon their property.

FRANK MONTGOMERY, the well-known leading man, received the sad intelligence last Tuesday of the death of his father, Capt. Geo. S. Montgomery, in Los Angeles. The funeral took place on Wednesday, the body being interred with full military honors.

EDWIN MILTON ROYLE, author of The Struggle Everlasting, which he has rewritten, arrived in San Francisco Thursday night. Mr. Royle will be present at rehearsals of the play which Florence Roberts will soon produce at the Alcazar. Mr. Royle has been busy lately, having also just finished putting the revised touches to his sequel to The Squawman, which he will call In the Blood.

Louise Brownell after but one day for preparation, assumed the title role of Sapho last night at the Alcazar and scored one of the most decided hits in the history of the playhouse. Florence Roberts, who has not been feeling strong lately, was ordered by her physician to rest after Wednesday night for a day or two, and Miss Brownell was asked to play the part, and she studied until morning, rehearsed in the afternoon Thursday, and played at night with marvelous success. Letter perfect in her lines and temperamentally fitted for the role, she was repeatedly encored, particularly in the third act.

Great Doings At Idora Park

Music of every style—instrumental and vocal—will be the big feature on Sunday's program at Idora Park, Oakland. While Erlinger's fifty bandmen, Beatrice Fischer, the delightful soprano with the organization, and Bert Morphy, the gentleman who vocalizes to supersede it, will entertain their many admirers for a week to come, tomorrow will be their last Sunday at Oakland's pleasure resort. A week from today band and vocalists will depart for the East, to make way for Frederick Neil Innes and his band. Because tomorrow will be their last Sunday at Idora, the present entertainers will deliver a programme of unusual merit. Erlinger will select his numbers in the main from the light opera successes of the day with a liberal addition of those marches and quicksteps which his musicians play with such unusual skill. While the lighter music will predominate, digression will be made to such selections as Brahms's Hungarian Dances and Svensden's Swedish Wedding March. One of the finest concerted numbers will be From Fireside to Battle, a reminiscence of the Civil War. The number will be given with spectacular effects, in which fire and different colored spot lights will be used. Miss Fischer will give four songs, among them Tosti's Good-bye and Bercuse by Goddard. Bert Morphy is becoming a greater favorite every day, and his ringing baritone will tomorrow be heard in many new songs. De Hollis and Velore, Ernest Yerxa and "Toto" Ducro will entertain during the concert intermissions. Skaters will be treated to a special musical program in the rink.

Gustave Frohman Recalls Memories of Old San Francisco

Last week in the lobby of the Princess Theatre I was introduced to Gustave Frohman, who is on the Coast managing Marie Doro, for his brother Charles. Mr. Frohman was surrounded by members of the Doro company, and the Rev. William and Mrs. Danforth, who are with Miss Doro and Mr. Frohman on the present tour. Mr. Danforth is here mainly for the purpose of consulting with Mr. Frohman relative to a mission play, which the manager has been talking over with parties in Riverside, with a view to something unique and distinctly Californian, and the clergyman-playwright, having had one successful play, The Gates of Eden, already produced and en tour in the East under the management of Nelson Roberts, with Betty Bancroft, a beautiful young English actress, as the star, and also having just finished a dramatization of Cy Whitaker's Place, a novel by Joseph C. Lincoln, has come West at the invitation of Mr. Frohman full of enthusiasm for the new mission play project.

But, however interesting any of the people around Gustave Frohman may be, he himself always forms the most interesting, not to say picturesque, figure, for it was back as far as February, in 1866, that he stood on Telegraph Hill, San Francisco, and surveyed the young city, a boy of eleven, who had run away from New York with the idea of hunting gold and Indians in California. Instead of digging gold he dug potatoes for Jared Strang in the Sierra Valley. Later, he brought attractions to every theatre in San Francisco.

Mr. Frohman said he had nothing specially new that he cared to say about theatrical matters, but he confessed that the memories of old San Francisco were coming back to him with depressing effect. He seemed to be under the spell of the pathos of the contrast of the old and the new.

"While I confess to a spell of depression," he said, "it is merely that I miss that indefinable atmosphere of romance which made the old city distinctive among all the cities of the world, but as I look about I realize that the fire acted as a purifying flame, wiping out whatever there was of ugliness, and clearing the way for the greater and more beautiful.

"One thing that strikes me forcibly is the wonderful buoyancy of the people of the present San Francisco, who were able to wipe the lines of horror from their faces so quickly after the great disaster, and, setting their faces toward the sun, begin to build anew. Such a people will not be long in making one of the greatest and most beautiful cities of the world on the new foundations, making even devastation and disaster stepping stones to higher things.

"As I look around," continued Mr. Frohman, his face lighting with enthusiasm, "I can see a vision of what is still to be, with your new ideas of reinforced concrete construction, to defy quakes and the forces of nature, and your cisterns as safety reservoirs—the idea caught from the cisterns, which, I understand, were instrumental in saving the old missions at the time of the fire—with all the lessons learned, there is scarcely anything too extravagant to predict on the line of the San Francisco to be, with all your natural resources and the remarkable buoyancy and optimism of your people."

Asked as to his idea of San Francisco's theatrical future, Mr. Frohman said: "Oh, it goes almost without saying that the theatrical outlook here is great. Frisco always has been a remarkably fine city theatrically, with the discriminating tastes of its people and its appreciation and loyal support of all that is best in dramatic art and music."

In a glow of enthusiasm, Mr. Frohman turned to Rev. William Danforth, who stood beside him, saying, "And while I think of it, Mr. Danforth, you are going out to Muir Woods, where, if I'm not much mistaken, you'll find inspiration for a sermon or a play, under the spell of the mysticism of that beautiful primeval forest, so near to this great city, where not even the all-searching winds seem to penetrate to disturb the peace and serenity, and where it is natural for one to think fine thoughts and dwell on the deep things of the spirit."

Fired by Mr. Frohman's enthusiasm for Muir Woods, the clergyman-playwright decided then and there to spend a day and a night in the forest, and who knows but we may have a play from that quarter.

To those who seek for personal interviews with Miss Doro, the young star of The Morals of Marcus, Mr.

Frohman answers, "No," as her time and strength are not to be taxed that way. She works so earnestly in giving her all to the public over the footlights that it is the Frohman policy to conserve her energies.

"But I can say for her," Mr. Frohman explained, "that she has been simply delighted with the generous and enthusiastic reception accorded her on the Coast. She is like one of the flowers of California, and she has expanded wonderfully in this genial atmosphere. Generous hands have vied with each other in making her dressing-room a bower of flowers, and her face has been as radiant as the blossoms. This young star essentially typifies the spirit of youth, and she has found her own public. Audiences everywhere like her, and that tells the whole story of an actress' talents and future. She steals into the heart of her audiences like a strain of music, and her performances linger in memory like the subtle delicacy of fine perfumes. I was confident that theatre-goers—and that includes nearly everyone on this Coast—would be enthusiastic over her, and I find that I made no mistake in the prediction."

San Francisco Has Its Chutes Again

The new Chutes, San Francisco's mammoth playground which is to have its home in the block girthed by Fillmore, Turk, Eddy and Webster streets, will throw open its gates to the public next Wednesday afternoon. The event should mark an epoch in the history of local outdoor amusements for the new enterprise will be the most elaborate undertaking of its character ever attempted in this city. It will offer an amusement garden of the most up-to-date type, brimful of laughs and lined with thrillers and fun devices contrived by the world's cleverest inventors. Those "joy rides" that have contributed to the success of Coney Island's latest seasons and the whirls and the loops that have made Riverview Exposition famous will be found in duplicate at the Fillmore street Chutes. Added to the scores of amusement concessions will be a cafe and grill in which entertainers will amuse the patrons; a big dancing pavilion; special attractions for the children and a line of open-air attractions unrivaled in the West. The New Chutes management is laying particular stress upon its opening free attractions and a review of next Wednesday's bill would seem to warrant the emphasis. First in importance will be the Royal Banda Roma, one of Italy's finest bands under the leadership of Signor Guiseppi Sirignano. This splendid organization is now speeding across the continent from Dreamland, Coney Island, where it has scored a triumph. With the Banda Roma comes Mme. Ermin Arnolde, soprano, who, with the band, will be heard every afternoon and night beginning next Wednesday. Sensational to a degree will be the acts of Desperado, Florence Spray and Demon. Desperado will do a seventy-foot dive from a ladder to the mouth of a wooden chute. He meets the chute with his chest and is projected the length of the trough at break-neck speed. It was he who was stopped by the New York police while performing at Madison Square Gardens. Florence Spray is said to be the world's greatest lady high diver. She will cover a distance of sixty-five feet into a tank. Demon will stride a flaming bicycle and ride it from the top of the chutes into the waters of the lake. These sensationalists will perform every afternoon and night beginning Wednesday.

Witching Hour Opens the Fall Season at the American

Following the successful engagement of the Blue Mouse on the Coast, the first Shubert attraction for the regular "open door" season will be John Mason and the original New York cast in The Witching Hour, by Augustus Thomas. Mr. Mason, by the way, opens the season for the Shuberts, beginning in Atlantic City, July 26th, after which the entire production will be moved across the continent. The play ran over one season at the Hackett Theatre in New York, over six months in Chicago, and met with unqualified success in all of the larger Eastern cities.

Florence Roberts To Be Shubert Star

The most recent engagement announced by the Shuberts is that of Florence Roberts, who, beginning December next, comes under their management, and Corinne. Miss Roberts is now playing at the Alcazar. She is considering a drama by Henry Colville, author of The Feud, which bears the tentative title of The Fruits of Divorce. Miss Roberts is also considering Dakon's Daughter, which was last week's play of the Shubert Stock Company, Belasco Theatre, Washington.

ESTHER RUJAERO has joined the Deemer Theatre summer stock at Springfield, Mo.

Personals

FORBES ROBERTSON and Gertrude Elliott, who will tour this country, under the direction of the Shuberts, are expected to open one of the New York theatres now in the course of construction.

WHEN George Foster Platt leaves the Valencia Theatre to assume the stage direction of the New Theatre in New York, he will be succeeded by that veteran actor and producer, George Osbourne.

HARRY BLANEY will play the part of Flip next season in the Klaw & Erlanger production of Little Nemo. Joseph Cawthorn and Harry Kelly return to the roles of Dr. Pill and the Dancing Missionary, respectively.

HARRY RIDINGS, who has been back with The Merry Widow the past season, was succeeded in Portland by Arthur Finney, prominent in the Savage office. Mr. Ridings will report in New York for a detail in the office.

EVELYN SELBIE, who was making a sensational hit in The Law of the Desert in vaudeville, was compelled to cut her season in Bisbee week before last, owing to illness. She returned to San Francisco, where she will rest for a while.

JOHN C. FISHER, of Florodora fame, now of the staff of Klaw & Erlanger, is on the Coast. It is supposed that Mr. Fisher as the syndicate representative will make a thorough investigation of the real Pacific Coast situation and the prospects for next year.

MAY DE SOUZA, of Chicago, who has risen from the ranks of the chorus to be a favorite of the theatregoers of London and Paris, has been engaged by Klaw and Erlanger for the leading role in a new musical comedy which Victor Herbert and Harry B. Smith will write for her.

The Merry Widow Makes a Tremendous Hit

Henry W. Savage's production of the world-wide musical sensation, The Merry Widow, has made the record hit of San Francisco theatricals. Franz Lahar's delightful and fascinating music could not be interpreted with more effect than it is by the splendid company and superb orchestra sent here by Henry W. Savage. George Damerl, as the Prince, has made a pronounced personal hit, and the same can be said of Mabel Wilber in the role of Sonia. She is a handsome and talented young song-bird who can dance her way into the hearts of all. Thomas Leary and Oscar Figman do not miss a point in the comedy element of the operetta, and in fact one cannot find fault with the minutest detail of the magnificent production which has stirred all San Francisco. The engagement of The Merry Widow is positively limited to two more weeks.

New Law Deals Death Blow to Play Piracy

The new copyright law of the United States, which went into effect on July 1, 1909, is simple and direct in its rulings and will afford much protection to theatrical people which they could not secure under the old laws. It will be of special value to vaudeville people, lecturers, and entertainers of all kinds, as, for a small sum, they can copyright and protect their specialties and quickly proceed against any piratical versions. The method of securing copyrights is simple. All that is necessary is to send a complete copy of the material that is to be copyrighted to the Register of Copyrights, with a fee of one dollar. The material can be printed, typewritten or written with a pen. In fact, any manuscript that is legible will be accepted. All postmasters are required to forward this without cost to the applicant and to give a receipt for it, with the time stated thereon, and this will be evidence of priority of claim in case of a dispute. The different classes of copyrighted works that interest the profession are as follows: C, Lectures, sermons, addresses, prepared for oral delivery; D, Dramatic or dramatico-musical compositions, and E, Musical compositions. Legal experts who have carefully digested the new law, state that manuscript copies of any kind will be accepted. The copyright gives the owner the sole right to produce and also to authorize translations and adaptations. Adequate penalties are provided for any offenders against the owners of the copyright. Infringers on the copyright of any lecture, address, etc., can be mulcted fifty dollars for each infringing delivery. Pirates who steal plays can be made to pay one hundred dollars for the first unauthorized production and fifty dollars for each subsequent performance. Musical compositions performed without authority from the owner of the copyright will cost ten dollars for each infringing performance. The copyright certificate will be accepted by any circuit court of the United States, the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia and all other United States courts as evidence to secure injunction against any offending party and for the collection of penalties provided. The suits can be brought in any district in which the defendant or his agent is an inhabitant, or in which he may be found. Any injunctions issued will be operative in all parts of the United States. In addition to the above penalties, the new law states that any person who wilfully and for profit shall infringe any copyright secured by this act, or who shall knowingly and wilfully aid or abet such infringement, they can be convicted of a misdemeanor and punished by an imprisonment of not more than one year or by a fine of not less than one hundred dollars or more than one thousand dollars. This clause will effectually end the play-pirate bureaus who have been copying plays and selling same to small repertoire companies. The new law also gives ample protection to the composers of music and prevents the reproduction of any music on mechanical instruments without the payment of a royalty. The duration of the copyright is the same as under the old laws and the copyright can be transferred or assigned or left by will. It is one of the best laws passed at the last session of Congress and will be of vast service to the theatrical profession. In the vaudeville end, many a performer who has been compelled to stand idly by and see his best work used by other performers, will now be able to protect the product of his brains or a specialty or a sketch that he may have purchased. It will stimulate the profession in the securing of new material, and many authors who have been kept from furnishing material for theatrical use will now be able to get safe protection and will devote their time to this class of work. All material copyrighted under the old laws will be given the same protection as before, but that law is so dense that the smartest lawyer cannot tell a client how to proceed when suit was brought. With this clear, broad copyright law the day of the pirate is past.

Klaw & Erlanger and Joseph Weber will jointly manage Weber's Theatre in New York next season. The Climax will go into the house, July 12th, to complete its phenomenal run in New York City.

Spotlights

One of the earliest productions to be made by the Shuberts will be a new play by Olive Porter, hitherto unknown as a playwright. Her first dramatic work was produced by the Shubert Stock Company in Washington a few weeks ago under the title of The Son of His Father. It proved to be a virile story with a third act, which, according to the reviewers, contains enough unusual situations to supply several productions. The name of the piece, however, will be changed to that of The Ringmaster. The cast has not yet been announced. Miss Porter, it is understood, is connected with a broker's office on Wall Street, which accounts for her wonderful knowledge of the technique of affairs financial, as The Ringmaster deals with the morals, or rather the lack of morals, of a certain class of financiers which she has embodied in her play.

The last performances of Broadhurst's highly hilarious farce, What Happened to Jones, will take place at the Valencia Theatre this Sunday afternoon and evening and on Monday night Mrs. Temple's Telegram will be given in capital style.

Bickel and Watson, Lee Harrison and Barney Bernard will be members of the big company with which Klaw & Erlanger will surround Mlle. Genée when she enters on her career as a star under the management of this firm. The book will be by Harry B. Smith and the music by Maurice Levi. Mlle. Genée returns to America in August.

An interesting bit of theatrical news during the week was the definite announcement that the Shuberts had secured control of the entire block fronting on Broadway and running from Forty-seventh to Forty-eighth Streets, New York. The land is now occupied by a five-story old-style factory and is utilized by Brewster & Company, carriage builders. It is understood that the Shuberts will erect thereon a combined hotel and theatre.

Klaw & Erlanger's New Amsterdam Theatre will be opened with The Love Cure, August 30th. The firm opens the Liberty Theatre, August 8th, with The Florist Shop. Cohan and Harris' Minstrels open the New York Theatre August 16th.

Announcement is made by the Shuberts that Lew Fields will follow The Midnight Sons by another musical review, which, if it is possible, will eclipse this remarkable piece. The new production is scheduled to open some time in October, the date and theatre being withheld. Mr. Fields is now at work on the new piece.

The Motor Girl, Frank Hennessy's musical comedy, with music by Julien Edwards, is one of those latter-day successes, which, like Paid in Full, had been in the author's pocket for over five years. The piece is regarded as one of the summer hits and is comfortably housed at the Lyric in New York for an indefinite period.

Thomas C. Leary's performance in the role of Mr. Nish in The Merry Widow is a real comedy treat, for the well known fun-maker does not miss one of the many good points of his role. Together with Oscar Figman he carries through the operetta most of the laughter provoking scenes.

Fresno has two airdomes. One is operated by A. J. Hotchkiss and the other by Gus Lamont. Recreation Park in that city opened Monday.

At the White Horse Tavern, one of the most delightful of comedies and which will be particularly remembered for its realistic rain scene with real water, will be given a painstaking production at the Valencia Theatre in the near future. Its various characters are well adapted to the personnel of the Valencia stock company.

Stranded In South America

To the members of the Broadway Musical Comedy Company lower Broadway never looked as good as when seen yesterday morning from the deck of the Lamport & Holt liner Verdi when they returned after a disastrous season in South America, says a recent issue of the New York Times. After the show went on the financial rocks they had hard work getting back to Broadway and a still more narrow escape in getting away with their effects. They did, however, bring back numberless cockatoos and marmosettes. The players were full of their troubles. H. L. Jackson and his wife, Julia Atkinson, told the story of their journeying south.

"At first we had success," he said. "We had been engaged to go to South America by R. H. Morgan, the executive in a syndicate headed by Signor de Rossi, the impresario. It was to Morgan that we lay our troubles. We left New York in May thirty-five strong. We were delighted with our prospects, for we had contracts to play in the syndicate's string of houses. We opened in Rio Janeiro in The Merry Widow. We met with success and things went finely during our two weeks' stay there. De Rossi paid us our salaries and everything was on the square. From Rio we moved on to Buenos Ayres and opened in the Avenida Theatre. Then the trouble began. We drew good houses. On the first pay day it was a very small ghost that walked. We got 10 pesos, about $4.50 each, and a promise. None of us had been saving, and it was hard work getting enough to live on. Then we learned that the Verdi was in port and ready to sail at the end of our second week. We had return tickets, but on going to the steamer found that about $5,000 had not been paid on them. We appealed to the steamship people and they agreed after some hesitation to take us and look to the syndicate for pay. Morgan pleaded with us not to sail, and assured us that there was money to pay us. Our answer was to either make good and so we prepared to sail. Some one tried to attach our belongings, but we loaded our belongings on mule carts and started to the steamship. At the pier some gendarmes attempted to hold us up, but Miss Foltz jumped on the wagon and drove on. The chivalrous Spaniards let us go. Well, we are back again and mighty glad we will be to see dear old Broadway again."

The company included Miss Virgie Foltz, who played here in Henry Savage's Merry Widow company; August Barrett, musical director for Savage; Billy Wolf, the comedian, and others known in musical comedy.

The Cohan Royals in a Royal Tour

Geo. M. Cohan, who is beyond all question the most prolific native writer of musical plays America has yet produced and internationally famous as the Yankee Doodle comedian, is going to play one night stands next season. The only Geo. M. has decided to make a comprehensive tour of (his United States), and while presenting his latest musical comedy success, The Yankee Prince, pick out a few points on the map that may be in crying need of temples of amusement which he proposes to endow a la Carnegie. Incidentally the presentation of The Yankee Prince, with Geo. M. Cohan (himself) in the title role, assisted by his Royal Family, Jerry J. Cohan, Helen F. Cohan, his father and mother, and Josephine Cohan, his charming and talented sister, enlists the services of more than one hundred players, including an orchestra of ten pieces, that, combined with the regular house orchestra in the cities to be visited by this well beloved family, guarantees a satisfactory rendition of a musical score that is unanimously conceded by musical reviewers a masterpiece of melody. Geo. M. Cohan will inaugurate his season in The Yankee Prince in New York City on September 6th, after a two weeks' engagement there Mr. Cohan will appear at the National Theatre, Washington, D. C., from whence he departs on his long tour on September 27th, the first stop being Richmond, Va., thence south to New Orleans, with engagements at the more important points between these two cities which will cover a period of two weeks, thence through Texas, Oklahoma, Arkansas, Missouri, Nebraska, Colorado, Utah, and the entire Pacific Coast from Los Angeles to Tacoma and Seattle, playing back over the Northern Pacific and reaching St. Paul about the first of the new year.

Bandmaster Innes at Idora Park

The most notable event of the Idora season, musically, commences this Sunday when Frederick Neil Innes, his New York Orchestral Band of sixty players, ten soloists and Virginia Listemann, lyric soprano, will begin a series of festival concerts at Oakland's pleasure gardens. The organization which is to open with a brilliant matinee program is the finest ever gathered together by the noted bandmaster. It was formed in the east to become the official band of the Alaskan-Yukon Exposition, of which Innes is now director-in-chief of music. The entire company of musicians is being brought to Idora direct from the Seattle exposition. Frederick Innes may be said to be San Francisco's favorite bandmaster. He has appeared in this city on several occasions and always with great success. His last appearance was in 1905, when his band was the feature of the May Festival held in the old Mechanics' Pavilion, of which he had personal direction. Among the unique novelties of the present season's programs are the famous Bacchanale from Wagner's Tannhauser; Stanford's Irish Rhapsody; Weingarten's now celebrated transcript of Weber's Invitation to the Dance; a clever skit by Innes on the popular Merry Widow Waltz and The Dance of the Seven Veils from Richard Strauss' world famous Salome. Many soloists will be associated with Innes at Idora, among them Virginia Listemann and H. F. Williams, the Welsh harpist, who will be among the principal features of the Idora engagement. Innes' band and soloists will give concerts every afternoon and night, with daily change of program. All of the open-air attractions will be new at Idora this week. Most notable of the entertainers who will amuse the patrons during the concert intermissions will be the Brothers Bard. These four athletes are among the most perfect specimens of manhood now before the public and they present an act of surpassing merit.

Linton Tedford, a Los Angeles real estate man, has written a powerful play of modern life in four acts. The piece is called The Greater Claim, and it will be produced by Oliver Morosco in that city next week.

The Orpheum

The program for next week is one of the best ever offered in vaudeville and is rich in novelty. The newest girl ensemble, "The Electrified Girl Review," will be a chief attraction. With it comes Clara Nelson, the beautiful girl who has the endorsement of Charles Dana Gibson as being ideally fitted for the part of the Gibson Widow. In addition to a sextette of handsome Gibson women, there will be a male Gibson type of a most pronounced order impersonated by Harry Turpin. The act is in three scenes, the first of which presents an artist's studio in which are posed in a large gilt frame many studies after the most popular of the Gibson drawings. The finale of the skit shows a yacht apparently running at full speed in the water, with the entire company on board. The incidental songs and lyrics are the composition of Alfred Solman and Paul West. Lily Lena, "The dainty Singer of dainty Story Songs," will appear for the first time in this city. Julius Tannen, who since his last appearance here has scored heavily in several important and successful Broadway productions, will be included in this program. He is a natural born monologist, a brilliant wit and clever mimic, and his imitations of De Wolfe Hopper, David Warfield and Raymond Hitchcock are vastly entertaining. The Three Donals are wonderful gymnasts. They excel in feats of Herculean strength. Next week will be the last of Charlotte Parry, the Protean actress in "The Comstock Mystery," The Three Leightons, Selma Braatz and of Helena Frederick and her company in the one act grand opera, "The Patriot." A new series of Orpheum Motion Pictures will conclude the performance.

Fischer's Theatre

The last performance of Ski Hi, that musical eccentricity, will be presented at Fischer's Theatre this Sunday afternoon and evening and at the Monday matinee a brand new musical operetta will be presented. Mr. Mazuma is the title and the story is an interesting one. The action takes place in a department store, where chorus girls prevail. Maude Rockwell will use a song of her own, Love Dreams and In Society will be her second number. Blanche Kuhn, a soubrette new to San Francisco, promises many surprises, and Frank Auerbach, who has never appeared here before, has many things up his histrionic sleeve. Dave Morris will be the tough floor walker, Carleton Chase a remittance man, and Will King the "real thing."

Alcazar Theatre

"The Silver Girl" will be retained throughout the coming week at the Alcazar. All who have witnessed it pronounce it a rattling good play, and as gossip is the best advertiser there has been an increased attendance nightly since its first presentation. The Alcazar players are very happily cast in this story of East and West by Edward People. Louise Brownell, Bessie Barriscale, Claribel Becker, E. L. Bennison, A. Burt Wesner, Thurlow Bergen, Howard Hickman, William Garwood, Charles Trowbridge and Andrew Bennison being especially fitted to suit The Girl and The Judge, a Clyde Fitch comedy, will follow "The Silver Girl," with Mr. Bergen as The Judge and Miss Barriscale as The Girl.

A Sacramento Preacher's Wife and Her Romance of the Opera

New York music lovers are awaiting impatiently to acclaim the return to this country of the lovely Matilda von Herrlich, once the modest wife of an Episcopalian minister in Sacramento, Cal., now the idol of music-loving Italy, and the acknowledged coming star of Metropolitan grand opera. The story of the little Western girl, whose voice and beauty have set Italy raving, is a story of triumphs, but, of heart pangs, too. Twelve years ago her husband, the Rev. John von Herrlich, was rector of St. Paul's Episcopal Church in Sacramento. He occupied the pulpit in that city for four years, and during that time Mrs. von Herrlich sang in the choir and charmed the congregation. It was not until the Rev. John von Herrlich was appointed curate of St. Paul's Chapel, Trinity Parish, New York City, that she felt the call to the stage and first began to turn her attention to a public career. The story of her decision to enter grand opera, with the result she has become the musical sensation of Europe, is as follows: "No, dear," said her husband, when she told him that her music masters had advised her to study for grand opera, "it is God or the world. It is goodness or worldliness. One cannot be saintly and Christlike amid the applause and admiration of the stage. The history of grand opera does not prove that it has been particularly beneficial in saving souls." The Rev. John von Herrlich told her that the work of the church, in which both of them were then engaged, was not only for time but for eternity. He said it was not the mission of grand opera to save souls, nor to put the sinful and wayward on the way to goodness and heaven. She could do more good, he said, singing the grand music of the great masters in the anthems of the cathedral, but his wife declared that it was art and not pride or fame that moved her to leave all that and study for the grand opera stage. She vowed also that if she were blessed with fame and success and accumulated money she would give it to charity. The minister remained obdurate until his wife appealed to the bishop for his advice. "My dear child," he replied, "I could not decide which would be more important, the noble work you are now doing in the church, or to work for God in the realm of music. But it seems, if God has given any one such evident talent, it is one's duty to develop it to the utmost." Mrs. von Herrlich almost cried with joy. "I have now a bishop's decision," she declared. "I'm going to Paris to study, and I'm going to succeed." "God grant you are right," replied her husband sorrowfully. "As for me, I will work all my life for the church and my fellow men. If you say you want to go, may God be with you and keep you as you now are—one of his most pure, noble and saintly children. If the bishop says you can do much good among the rich and noble and by singing for charity, it is not for me to decide otherwise." A few days later she sailed for Paris. For two long, patient years she studied under Mme. Marchesi. During a concert trip through Switzerland she had the good fortune to meet the Baroness Petrosiki of St. Petersburg, who became her firm friend. Through the baroness she became acquainted with Puccini, who was charmed with her voice and undertook her musical education at once, with the result that her debut has been one of marked success and rarely equaled triumph. For three years she lived in the Puccini household as one of the family, and day by day the great singing master trained her for her future career on the operatic stage. Then a few weeks ago she made her debut, and her success was instantaneous. The friends and admirers of the Western young woman who gave up so much—home, husband and country—to strive for fame in a field where success too often proves a mere will-o'-the-wisp, may be interested to learn that the Italian newspapers are devoting columns to praises of her voice, and her great beauty especially, when she appears as Violetta in La Traviata. Floral tributes and costly presents have been lavished upon her, and crowds are turned away from the theatres where she is singing nightly.

How They Made Charlotte Thompson into an Actress

In Mrs. Fiske's company, now playing the Coast, is Charlotte Thompson, who plays the part of Hallelujah Maggie and whose name on the programs is Mary Madison. Miss Thompson has never been on the stage before, and her achievement in Salvation Nell, in which she is an unforgettable personality, is all the more remarkable because she was not trained for the stage and never had any idea of acting. She is a writer of plays and fiction and is the author of the dramatization of Mrs. Deland's Awakening of Helena Ritchie in which Margaret Anglin is to appear next season. She has also made a play of Mrs. Wiggin's Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm, which Klaw & Erlanger are to produce, and has done a number of translations and adaptations of foreign plays for Klaw & Erlanger. Miss Thompson was "discovered" for the part of Hallelujah Maggie quite by accident. She read Salvation Nell in manuscript and remarked casually to Mr. Sheldon's play agent, who is also her own, that if she were an actress she would like the part of Hallelujah Maggie. Later when much trouble was experienced in filling the part and many actresses had been tried who did not realize Mrs. Fiske's ideal of the role, the play-agent suggested Miss Thompson and she suited Mrs. Fiske so well that she was dragged into the role in spite of her screams. "I knew I didn't have time for it," says Miss Thompson, "even if I could do it, and it was so perfectly absurd to suppose that I, who had had no stage training or experience, could manage any part! But Mrs. Fiske insisted and I knew it would be an interesting and

And although I said I would never leave my work in New York and go on tour, she still insisted, declaring she wouldn't go out with the play if I left the company—well, here I am. ## Florence Roberts Is Seriously Ill

Florence Roberts, whose season at the Alcazar Theatre opened four weeks ago, suffered a relapse Saturday morning at 4 o'clock, which will necessitate her temporary retirement from the stage. Three times during her very successful season at the Sutter street playhouse she has suffered from illness. Wednesday night of last week she was so ill on the stage that she feared to sit down during a scene lest she should be unable to arise. With twenty-four hours' notice Louise Brownell went on and took Miss Roberts' place as Sapho. Dr. W. F. McNutt attended Miss Roberts and thought that with rest she would be able to resume her role Sunday night. The relapse Saturday morning makes this impossible. There is a probability that Miss Roberts will have to undergo a serious surgical operation. It was only her grim determination that made it possible for her to continue as long as she did. Although Manager Fred Belasco was urging her not to endanger her health by continuing, she insisted on going ahead with the role of Sapho. The serious illness of Miss Roberts prompted Mr. Belasco to wire all the members of the Alcazar company who are now on a vacation to return at once. Augustus Phillips, the new leading man, has also been instructed to come from the east without delay. The manager will now prepare his company to present the plays which he was planning to have produced at the close of the Roberts season, six weeks hence. Should Miss Roberts speedily recover there may be another change in plans. Edwin Milton Royle, who came out from New York to direct the rehearsals of his play, The Struggle Everlasting, which was to be produced next Monday, left for his

Correspondence

NEW YORK, July 11.—Among the novel holiday entertainments in Adirondack camps was an amateur theatrical performance given by Mr. and Mrs. Archibald S. White, of New York, at White Pine Camp, on Osgood Lake, last Monday night. It was not strictly amateur either, for Mrs. White, formerly known on the light opera stage as Olive Celeste Moore, appeared in the cast. She and Mr. White had constructed a sylvan theatre in the grove surrounding their camp. The scenery is formed by the towering pines and spruce trees, and the wings by green hedges. The spectators' seats are made of pine logs and are surrounded by a hedge. The whole is lighted by electricity. The play was The Call of the Forest, by James Clarence Harvey. It was acted by Mr. and Mrs. White and their guests and the effect of the forest setting, colored lights and beautiful costumes was delightful. The Call of the Forest is allegorical, representing the lure of the city entering the forest domain and bringing with it the Dragon of Care. The Dragon is killed by the Prince and its body placed on a litter. Scalpel and Lancet carried the litter to the shore of Osgood Lake, where it was placed on a funeral pyre and set afloat. Skyrockets and roman candles were hidden in the pyre and were set off by electricity as the burning float drifted away. * * * Consul, the Great, William Morris' latest importation, at last has made his professional debut in America and was received last week at the American Music Hall with wonder and great applause. His face and natural actions are grotesque enough, but combined with the habiliments and comportment of the human animal the little creature becomes truly a marvel. Consul took the situation all very calmly on the opening night, and the applause seemed to affect him in no way at all, but when there was no applause where the Simian thought there should be, he gave a gentle hint by clapping his own hands; the ruse never failed. * * * "Pat" Gilmore's famous artillery and anvil choruses are to be revived at Manhattan Beach as a result of hundreds of requests made to Manager Amer of the Manhattan Beach Hotel. Gilmore's battery of field guns is being cleaned and polished and Lieutenant Carlton and his British Guards Band are delighted at the prospect of artillery accompaniment. All the musicians are war veterans and Sergeant Lazenby, who will fire the guns, wears decorations for valor and long service. Lieutenant Carlton has named one cannon King Edward, another President Taft and a third Bwana Tumbo. Heavy charges will be used and the whole coast will hear the musical bombardment. * * * The Messrs. Shubert announce that there will be no more midweek matinees in the month of July for Havana at the Casino and The Midnight Sons at the Broadway Theatre. This action has been taken at the special request of the principal players in both companies, many of whom are now residing in the suburbs and find it difficult to give two weekly matinees. The Wednesday matinees will be resumed at both playhouses in August. Meanwhile the only matinee performances of Havana and The Midnight

Sons will be on Saturday. The regular Wednesday and Saturday matinees will, however, continue without interruption at the Lyric and the Herald Square. * * * Messrs. Wagenhals & Kemper will reopen their Astor Theatre on Monday, August 2, a fortnight earlier than had been intended. The opening attraction will be the Eugene Walter play, Paid in Full, and the cast will be headed by Fritz Williams and his wife, Katherine Florence, who have recently come under the management of Messrs. Wagenhals & Kemper, and William Riley Hatch. The purpose of putting forward the opening of the Astor is to give Mr. Williams and Miss Florence a New York appearance in the respective roles of Joe and Emma Brooks in the Walter play. * * * Señor Alexander, who has been ballet master of the Empire Theatre, London, for the past fifteen years, and who, by the way, is an uncle of Mlle. Genée, has been engaged by Messrs. Klaw & Erlanger to arrange the ballets for the new play which is being written for Mlle. Genée by Harry B. Smith, and which will be produced at the New Amsterdam Theatre early in November. * * * A satire on the recent police shake-up has been introduced into The Follies of 1909 at the Jardin de Paris. Lillian Lorraine and Arthur Deagon also sing a new song entitled I Love My Wife, So on Your Way. * * * Eva Tanguay may replace Nora Bayes when Miss Bayes leaves. ROB ROY.

OGDEN, Utah—Work upon the remodeling of the Grand Opera House, which will be opened August 15th under the Orpheum management, is progressing very satisfactorily, and Ogden is assured of a beautiful Theatre. * * * The Utahna Theatre, which has been secured by the Northwest Theatrical Association, is being remodeled and will open about September 1 with standard attractions. The theater, which will be under the management of John Cort, will be given a new name. * * * The three moving picture houses of the city, the Globe, Isis and Orpheum, are now under the management of H. A. Sims. * * * The Lyceum Theatre, Charlie Lippincott, manager, is enjoying a prosperous summer season and is producing clean and refined vaudeville. E. T. SPENCER.

CARSON CITY, Nev.—LAKE THEATRE, the prominent moving picture establishment, has changed hands, the present manager being R. D. Clarke. The little theatre is crowded nightly. The illustrated songs are rendered by Mrs. Clarke, who possesses a clear, high soprano. Clyde C. Lewis, a prominent young society man with a fine baritone, has been singing this week as an accommodation to the company and has been a drawing card. A. H. M.

PETALUMA, July 14.—The Hill Opera House has been dark the past week. At the Unique there was a poor vaudeville performance last Saturday and Sunday. Billy Clark, black face comedian; Marson & Co. in Dalson's Honeymoon, and Ruth Le Van, Dutch dancer and warbler, were mediocre. J. R. B.

Marysville theatregoers were treated to one of the best plays ever staged here, The Blue Mouse. The cast was made up of clever people; Elsie Ryan as the Blue Mouse was very cute, witty and fly. Augustus Mollett, secretary to Mr. Lewellyn, also the young husband, was a gay deceiver. * * * The Marysville Theatre will now be closed for the season, and Manager Atkins may rest assured that he has given his patrons the very best and his last effort was a record breaker. The next season opens August 31st with the International Grand Opera Company, which comes with high honors and promises to be a hummer. CHICO, Cal., July 12.—Three Weeks played to poor house the 11th. Hot weather and hard times have greatly affected the show business here.

The Elite picture theatre at Woodland has been sold by D. A. Russell to E. A. Winsell.

Dick Ferris' stock in Minneapolis played The College Widow last week. Earle Gardner was a hit as Bob Hicks. This week A Milk White Flag is crowding the theatre, then follows The Heir to the Hurrah, Sedley Brown is doing himself proud as a stage director.

The Musical Comedy Show At The Majestic, Los Angeles, Is Doing Business

LOS ANGELES, July 15.—Every one is so busy this week entertaining Elks that they have little time for anything else and it is rather quiet theatrically. Many of the stock actors are away on their vacations, and there are several changes in the personnel of the different companies. On account of the absence of some of the people necessary to the cast of The Greater Claim, that first presentation, scheduled for next week at the Burbank, will be postponed, in favor of a revival of The Hypocrites. For the important part played here originally by Edythe Chapman, Mr. Morosco has engaged Lillian Burkhart, while Bertram Grasby, an Angeleno, now ranking high with the Shuberts, will take the part formerly assigned to Byron Beasley. The Hobart Bosworth dramatic school will close Saturday for a ten days' vacation, during which time the students will go "trouping," sailing under faculty chaperonage from San Pedro Saturday for San Diego, where they play a week at the Garrick Theatre. Zoe Barnett will not return to San Francisco with the Princess company at the close of their engagement here at the Grand. She will spend her vacation at her home here before leaving for the East, where she has ambitious plans for next season. Dick Ferris is again in our midst and he is as enthusiastic as ever over Los Angeles. He returned from the East for the Santa Monica automobile race last Saturday. He will remain during the week and we expect him to return here again as soon as his season closes in Minneapolis, which will be about September 1. There is a possibility that he may direct, though not actively participate in, a theatrical enterprise here next winter. The many friends of Florence Barker, a local favorite, will be glad to learn of her success in Hartford, Conn., with the Cook stock company. E. M. Workman and Elmer Comer have leased Fischer's Theatre for five years. About August 1 musical comedy will probably be installed. Mr. and Mrs. Sparks Berry are at Interlaken. F. P. Morse, ex-dramatic editor of the Washington Post, is in town in advance of Henry Miller's company in The Servant in the House. Leslie King, a former member of a local stock organization, is in town this week, playing Polly of the Circus.

BELASCO.—A Day and a Night is running for a second week at the Belasco. Miss Farrington is playing the principal woman's part and Charles Giblyn succeeds De Witt Jennings. Several new specialties are introduced by George Field, Richard Bennett, Miss Farrington and Bessie Tannehill.

BURBANK.—The Burbank company is seen to advantage in Augustin Daly's good old comedy, The Lottery of Love. There is much real comedy in this old piece and the producing company give a very fine performance. The work of William Desmond and Miss Royce is worthy of special notice. Mr. Desmond is better in the part of Adolphus Doubledot than in any part he has played for a long time. Miss Royce is the ever-present mother-in-law and she gives a very satisfactory impersonation of the part. Her dance in a bloomer costume is great, in fact, it is the funniest thing in the performance. Mr. Burton gives a very pleasing picture of the fond widower. Miss Hall is cast as his daughter, the second Mrs. Doubledot. Miss Taylor, Mr. Mestayer, Mr. Duffield, Mr. Marks and Miss Duffet are all well cast. The play and players furnish a very pleasing entertainment.

MASON.—Margaret Mayo's play, Polly of the Circus, is filling the Mason this week. The company gives a good performance. The action is brisk and the story is interesting. Ida St. Leon is a very real Polly and as such makes the part most convincing. The work of Mr. Ryder is very good also. There are two very clever negro impersonations done by Stuart Johnson and Kate Jepson. John Findlay is cast as the clown. Leslie King and David Young are very lifelike deacons. There is excellent team work among the members of the company, each one is willing to share honors with the other members of the company. The attraction is not a great one but it treats of a novel topic in a novel way.

MAJESTIC.—Sergeant Kitty has entered upon its second week at the Majestic Theatre. Maude Beatty makes her first appearance with the company in the part played last week by Louise Royce. There are new costumes for the chorus in the first act. Of course, the colors of these are purple and white. The sold out sign is being displayed at every performance.

GRAND.—The Princess company is playing at the Grand for the final week of the engagement. The offering for the first of the week was The Rounders. That has been supplemented by The Umpire. This is the most popular of the plays put on by this able company. The cast remains the same as when produced at the Mason.

ORPHEUM.—Le Petite Adelaide heads the Orpheum bill for the week. Her sketch is called The Billposter's Dream. Adelaide dances as charmingly as ever and has four very clever assistants. A good bit of fun is furnished by Mildred Warren, Bert Lyon and Louise Meyers in their skit, When Dreams Come True. All three dance and sing well. Elizabeth Murray can surely sing in negro dialect. She has several new songs all her own. The Gasch Sisters are fine in an acrobatic stunt. The balancing is especially good. The holdovers include the Novelty Dancing Four, Pellaton and Foran in A Strenuous Reputation, Cheridah Simpson, and A Night at the Circus.

LOS ANGELES.—Mabel McKinley is the chief attraction at the Los Angeles for Elk week. Miss McKinley is widely known through her songs and she is a good singer as well. She sings many of her own songs in her number. Francesca Redding and her company present a one-act comedy sketch, Her Friend from Texas. The supporting company includes Charles Lee Calder, Charles T. Gibson and Agnes Brooks. A good number on the program is Petroff, the Russian violinist. Cook and Rother do some good dancing, and Toma Hanlon of-

EMPIRE.—For the current week the attraction at the Empire is a showing of the Nelson-Hyland fight pictures.

FISCHER'S.—The offerings at the little First street theatre include La Tarantella, a dance, and the Grace Sisters, singers and dancers.

UNIQUE.—Kelly and Violette remain the feature act at the Unique Theatre. They sing new songs and Miss Violette offers a number of stunning new gowns. Symo and Symma present a novel spectacular act. Their work upon revolving globes is worthy of mention. James T. Kelly's current comedy is an antler special—Hello, Bill. Mr. Kelly plays the part of Bill King, whose wife gives an amateur theatrical performance—the part of the wife being played by Miss Massey. Al Franks plays a German friend, while Hobart Cramer is a broken-down tragedian. Denton Vane as a garrulous boot-agent, Winnie Baldwin as a "wise girl," and Miss Parker as a maid, get the best out of their lines and situations. New songs and motion pictures are offered.

WALKER.—The bill arranged by Manager Pieper of the Walker Theatre this week should please the lover of vaudeville, as it has several novelties. Stella Adams, in her comedy and music, is particularly good. Raymond Merritt has an act different from anything seen here recently, and his burlesque magic is especially well done. Madeline Rowe, with several new gowns and new songs, makes new conquests. Edna Forsythe gives a series of costume dances, which are well done—and done by a pretty girl. New pictures and an attractive musical program round out the bill.

FLORENCE EMERY.

American Theatre

The American Theatre will open its summer stock season Sunday afternoon and continue until August 16th, when the Shuberts will present Augustus Thomas' great play, The Witching Hour. The first offering of the American stock company, which is headed by Herschel Mayall and Harriet Worthington, will be Otis Skinner's great success, The Duel. When The Duel was first presented in Paris, the war between the church and state was at fever heat, which accounts for the interest it excited despite the fact that it presented both sides of the discussion without championing either. The Duel is a romantic little story which weaves itself about the lives of three people, one a woman for whose possession there is a terrible conflict between two brothers. The brothers are religiously opposed, one of them being a doctor with absolutely no ecclesiastical affiliations, while the other is a priest who took to the cloth much to the disgust of his atheist father and as a result brings about a family estrangement that means ostracism for the religious one, who, when he enters the church is forbidden by his parent to use the family name. For ten years he struggles on in his work without ever coming in contact with his favored brother, who is his sworn enemy. The woman in the case is the wife of a debauched duke who is under treatment at a sanitarium conducted by Dr. Morey, and seeing the physician daily a mutual admiration springs up. The duchess is one of Abbe Daniel's communions, although he does not know it until she calls on him in fear of herself and her sinful passion for Dr. Morey. The priest falls in love with her and a battle ensues between the brothers for possession of her. The bishop, a dear friend of Abbe Daniel, brings about a solution of the controversy by deciding that the Duchess must marry the man she loves, the doctor. During the summer engagement of the American stock company capable support will be given Mr. Mayall and Miss Worthington by such players as Lillian Elliott, Gerald Harcourt, James Corrigan, Thurlow White and a host of other prominent players.

Opera House For Clovis

The new fifty foot two-story opera house which is being built on Main street, in Clovis, N. M., will be ready in about thirty days.

Ralph Stuart Once More With Henry B. Harris

Henry B. Harris has engaged Ralph Stuart to create one of the principal roles in Channing Pollock's latest play, Such a Little Queen, which inaugurates the season of the Hackett Theatre opening on Monday, August 30th. When Edmund Breese retires from The Third Degree in October to be starred by Mr. Harris in James Bernard Fagan's play, The Earth, Mr. Stuart will succeed him in The Third Degree in the role of Richard Brewster.

The present summer has been a bad one in Santa Cruz. At Swain's Theatre, at the Airdome and in three moving picture houses in one night last week, by actual count, there was $109.40 paid for theatrical amusements.

Correspondence

CALGARY, Can., July 3.—The Sanford stock is a decided success. In their opening bill, The Man on the Box, the company was fine. The following combinations have been booked: July 14-19, The Black Patti; September 25, In Wyoming; October 12, Gorton's Minstrels.

NEW ORLEANS, July 4.—The Olympia Opera Company exceeded all expectations with their past week's presentation of Florodora. There was a spontaneity and effervescence in both individual as well as the ensemble work. Each individual strove for honors and were accorded the most enthusiastic reception by large audiences, necessitating a continuance of the opera for three performances during the coming week. Barring the original production as seen in New York the present compares favorably with any subsequent offering in this city. The role of Lady Hollyrood by Lottie Kendall was an artistic triumph. It was a snug fit and right smartly did the pretty star nestle up to the allurements of the role and her scenes were not the least conspicuous feature of the success. Robert Lett, as Gilfain, and Dan Young as Tweedlepunk also scored heavily. The former has a natural, graceful method that approaches the magnetic, while Young's comedy was of the best and pleased highly his many local well wishers. Of course the role of Dolores was in the hands of Klara Farne, who handled the same most creditably. Albert Wallerstadt, as Abercord, rendered Under the Sheltering Palms delightfully. Special praise is due the chorus, particularly the Sextette, while none of the girls are likely to create international marriage complications and maintain the prestige of the Originals, they were withal graceful and spirited and were, without doubt, the one best bet of the performance. Next week, The Mascotte.

W. L. McCONNELL.

SANTA CRUZ, Cal., July 14.—Jim Post has closed at the Airdome to accept an engagement in San Diego. He closed notwithstanding Mack Swain, manager of the Airdome, tried an injunction to prevent him. Concessions on the board walk or midway are starving to death. Billy Dailey has a lot of get-rich-quick shows—but the people here are all dead broke. In regular season Knight's Opera House and the Casino play to big business, but the summer snap is a bad fizzle. TAD.

SAN DIEGO, July 14.—Things theatrically have been pretty quiet here the past week. The Raymond Teal company closed a five weeks' successful engagement at the Garrick last Sunday, July 11th. The company jump direct from here to Phoenix, Arizona, where they will open the big new Airdome. The Garrick will remain dark until July 19th, when Hobart Bosworth and dramatic players will play a week engagement. The Merry Widow will be with us August 3-4. The Pickwick is putting on vaudeville this week to good business. Following are the acts: Edgar Temple Quintet in sketch, The Modern Incubator; Happy Joe Egan, monologist; Riesner and Gores, character sketch; The Kramer Trio, gymnastic act. The Queen has an extra good show this week. The bill is headed by Mlle. Nadje, and her act, which is an unusually clever one, won her well merited applause. Saona scored with his impersonation act. Seibert-Lindley and company have a clever little sketch. Kessler and Dunn pleased with their hard shoe dancing. Latest moving pictures and the Queen's peerless orchestra conclude. The Grand has a good bill which is composed of the following acts: The Three Biehles, juvenile artists, pleased. Jas. A. Hennessey has a good monologue act. Hill Sisters have some new illustrated songs. Moving pictures conclude. CARL E. LUNDQUIST.

SAN JOSE, July 14.—The Ed Redmond company is successful this week with A Romance of the South. At the Jose the bill consists of Carroll Johnson, the Beau Brummel Minstrel; the Great Stadium Trio, gymnasts; Borden, Zeno and Haydn Bros., bits of vaudeville; Marie Hrdlicka, Bohemian lyric soprano; Three Silvanis, comedy shadowgraphers; Duprej, Hungarian violinist. Lorraine Buchanan has been in town and it is expected she will consummate a deal whereby she will put in a stock at the Empire Theatre.

OAKLAND, July 14.—There is plenty of theatrical good fare this week. Henry Miller's company is at the Macdonough in The Servant in the House, and it is well acted. Wilfred Roger, as the servant, and Charles Dalton, as the drain man, are most impressive. At Ye Liberty, Sydney Ayres is creating a sensation by a most vivid and highly artistic impersonation of the part first given to the stage by Arnold Daly. Florence Oakley, Laura Hudson, George Webster and Henry Shumer give fine characterizations. At the Broadway the bill is Strongheart, with Landers Stevens, Al Hallett, Jack Bennett, Fred Munier, Priscilla Knowles, Georgie Woodthorpe and Georgie Cooper in the principal parts. The Orpheum and Bell furnish fine vaudeville to the people who love the lighter diversion.

Makes Plea For Shylock of Shakespeare's Pen

Leo Cooper, the well-known actor, spoke last week at the Bush Street Temple on The Merchant of Venice, and made a strong plea for the proper interpretation of the play in the schools. "Teachers should read between the lines," said Cooper, "and explain underlying instincts of Shylock and the years of suffering by himself and his race that caused many of those traits. They should also realize and make clear to their pupils that no Jew could really be the Shylock of Shakespeare. Nothing could be more contrary to the laws of the Jews that have stood for thousands of years, and the characteristics of the Jews, than the shedding of blood. Consciously or unconsciously," asserted Cooper, "Shakespeare, in writing The Merchant of Venice, protested against bigotry."

James W. Coffroth, the prize fight promoter, is now incorporated. The articles were filed with the county clerk last week, and according to their reading, Coffroth will be in the game to promote fights, baseball games, Marathon races, theatricals, and, in fact, everything in the amusement line. He did not overlook a bet.

The Return of Frank Bacon

It must have been very gratifying to Frank Bacon to receive the reception accorded him all week at the National. Mrs. Bacon and Bessie are supporting him in his little playlet, Annie Laurie, which, by the way, is an artistic gem. Mr. Bacon has written a number of vaudeville offerings, among which are: The Spirit of '61, The Managing Editor, An Easy Liar, Annie Laurie, Goin' Home and The Reflection. The Bacons go to Oakland next week, then to the Wigwam in this city, then to the National and from there to their fruit farm at Mountain View for a four weeks' rest. After that Mr. Bacon will return to New York, where his opening has been arranged for.

Bernard Goes Into Vallejo Stock

Harry Bernard opens at the Faragut Theatre in Vallejo next Monday, where he will be seen for four weeks, after which he is trying to arrange for time in Santa Rosa, Petaluma and other good show towns. Mr. Bernard will use himself, his wife, Dave Lerner, Arthur Uline, Lois Gerard and eight girls.

The Oros Off For Honolulu

Joe Cohen, the Honolulu manager, has engaged Charley Oro, his wife, Nat Burton, Frank Earle and a chorus of six girls for a season in Honolulu. The company sails today.

American and English Dramatists

London critics are much exercised over the criticisms of Marc Klaw concerning their work and are anxious to secure a contrary opinion. For consolation they have turned to Charles Frohman and asked him to tell his experiences. This is what he says: "Regarding American players and plays in London, the facts tell the story. William Gillette played one of his seasons in London and cleared a profit of $175,000 for himself, the managers of the theatre and for me. Mr. Gillette had great success in England in Secret Service, Sherlock Holmes and Too Much Johnson. William Collier had success here in The Dictator. No plays could have been more local or American than Secret Service and The Dictator, yet both these plays were thoroughly understood and met with financial success. Too Much Johnson, which was taken from the French, might easily have been an American play, as the scenes were laid in America. It was about Americans and American localities, yet it was a success. American plays and American players can succeed in London—of that there is no doubt. A play that will succeed there need not necessarily be the play that the manager who produces it has faith in, or the play which the press endorses and believes in. The play that succeeds is just the play that hits the public in the right way, and the English public don't care who it is written by or in what locality its scenes are laid if the play goes home to them. There are many other American plays which have succeeded there, but I am just speaking of the plays and players which have had big financial successes through my management. I consider that the best play that Clyde Fitch has ever written was The Truth. This play was not a great success in its own country—America. It was a great success, however, in London. The Mummy and the Humming Bird (a thoroughly English play) was not considered a great success in London. It was a great success financially in America. Every time that there is a cry raised against the chances of an American play succeeding in London, one succeeds. We have just had a string of plays from America which did not meet with financial success, and the cry came up again about the lack of opportunity of American plays there. Then up comes A Woman in the Case, and it succeeds, though I never saw a more American play as far as regards scenes, localities and dialogue. Brewster's Millions, another play which I produced, and which is thoroughly American, had really seven big months at the Hicks Theatre, has been a financial success all over the English provinces and is back in London playing at one of the principal theatres, and is making another tour next season. Are You a Mason? another one of my plays, although from the German, was adapted in America, produced in America and was a great success in London; in fact, it is still touring the English provinces and has been touring for six years. And many more American plays will succeed here. As far as the English critics are concerned, they are often over-fair to American artists; in fact, they say things about their work that is far beyond what is said of their work in America. The critics there have done great work in encouraging American artists, because they realize that they really are visitors from a great distance, and they try always to treat them as their guests. So far as their treatment of American plays is concerned, I can only speak of my own productions, and the manner in which Secret Service, Held by the Enemy and The Dictator were upheld by the critics; and their constant allusion to them as attractive works make any charge against them of animosity toward American plays absurd. I speak of this only 'lest we forget.' I would like to say that the coming of American or French artists and plays during the London season helps to make an interesting dramatic event, and the critics realize and believe this. In New York there are more foreign plays and artists welcomed and successful than in any city in the world, and the English critics are encouraging London to be a rival in this respect to New York. William A. Brady has also contributed to the argument with a few sage words on the subject. He has produced plays in London—successes and non-successes—and he knows what he is talking about. He dismisses at once the idea that there is anything like prejudice against the American play and player. "The reason," he says, that an American actor appearing in an American play over there fails, is this: It is the ambition of every American star to make a hit in London, and he at once expects a success such as comes to Sir Beerbohm Tree or Mr. George Alexander. He forgets that their success has been a growth—something arduously labored for, something gradually and inevitably acquired. These things are not done 'overnight.' 'Ah, but,' you say, 'why not?' Sir Charles Wyndham goes to America with The Mollusc and does succeed 'overnight.' The answer is just this," says Mr. Brady. "In America we know everything about the people in London. A new production in London is dealt with at length the next morning in all American papers. On the contrary, London knows very little about us—except our scandals."

Spotlights

It is reported from Seattle that Charley Kavanaugh has joined Arthur Fox in his Alaska theatrical company proposition.

William Bernard, Chauncey Sothorn, Tom B. Loftus, Frederick Wilson, G. C. Wills, Howard Nugent, Allyn Lewis, C. E. Murphy, D. M. Dunbar, Meta Marsden, Roy Ramond, Margaret Nugent and Tilly Armstrong compose the Walter Sanford Company playing at the Lyric Theatre, Calgary, under the name of The Colonial Players.

In the cast of H. H. Frazee's The Time, the Place and the Girl company that plays the Pacific Coast the coming season, there is a little girl who tips the scale at about 100 pounds. She is Jessie Huston, and she has a most important part. Two years ago Miss Huston was in the chorus. She was ambitious and a hard worker;

A big figure in Sacramento theatricals. It is Billy Ely who represents Alex. Pantages in the Capital city

she watched every line and every move; she received good notices from the critics, she wanted to be a star. That was the height of her ambition. Everyone said she was full of talent. One night one of the principals fell and sprained her ankle. "Now is my chance," said Miss Huston, and running up to the stage manager said, "I'll play the part," and without a moment's hesitation she jumped in and made good, got the best notices in the show, and today she plays the "Girl." "All I can say," said Miss Huston, "is, it's fate. I wanted to be great and this is my beginning."

George P. Webster

George P. Webster, whom theatre-goers still remember as an actor of fine qualities all over the East, and for a long time associated with Coast theatricals, is, and has been for the past four years located in Oakland, where he is one of the popular members of Ye Liberty stock company. This season Mr. Bishop, after much persuasion, has induced Mr. Webster to take charge of the stage and the great success of The Regeneration, The Heart of Maryland, and the recent big productions that have stirred Oakland to a high pitch of enthusiasm, owe much of their success to Mr. Webster's masterly direction. George P. Webster is of the old school—that fine, scholarly, gentlemanly order of actors that embodies thoroughness, versatility and impressive force. There is scarcely a line of stage impersonation that will not rise to prominence in this capable actor's hands. The splendid likeness shown on our first page this week is a reminder that Mr. Webster is still prominent in the game—in fine health, in good spirits and in the prime of life. And if he persists in living in Oakland, where he has property interests and a most happy home life—it is still to be remembered that he is very much alive.

The new firm will send out three musical comedies in August and September, besides A Night on Broadway, which will continue on its present tour through next season. Mack will be starred in The Boy From Yankee-land, a new piece, which will open September 12th in Boston. Miss Bessie Tannehill will be featured in a well known farce-comedy, supported by a company of thirty-two. John Kearney will succeed Charles Murray as Mack's co-star.

This Sunday afternoon and evening the last performances of Mrs. Temple's Telegram will be presented at the Valencia Theatre and on Monday evening Too Much Johnson will be staged. Paul McAllister will have the congenial role of Billings, George Osbourne will be the mild mannered Faddish, Charles Dow Clark the fiery Frenchman and Robert Homans the hot headed Johnson. The parts of the sweetheart, daughter and mother will be played by the Misses Travers, Lyle and Andrews. At the White Horse Tavern will follow Too Much Johnson.

The Criterion Stock Company, managed by Herbert Francis, a newspaper man from Modesto, disbanded in Susanville last week, after a brief time away from this city. The company was composed of Herbert Francis and wife, Jack Massie and wife, James Bradford, Viola Lambert, Arthur E. Hohland, C. C. McCarty, and personal animosities gave the venture a lively aspect before they had been out a week.

Van Ness Theatre

The Merry Widow starts on her third and last week Sunday night, and this engagement will probably go down in theatrical history as the record business for this city for anything outside of grand opera. It is a matter of much regret that this organization cannot remain longer, for there will be many disappointed theatregoers who will not have an opportunity to see this world-wide sensation. In The Merry Widow, Franz Lehar, the composer, has found the missing link that has always crippled comic opera. He has woven romance, pathos and comedy together, blending them into a master plot and song. Through it all there runs a story as complete and fascinating as a Balzac novel. It sparkles with life and vivacity, and there is unrestrained and not a little sensuous joy in every sentence. The company is an effective group of players. Each member is conspicuous for individuality—in short, it is a splendidly balanced aggregation. The orchestra is thoroughly in keeping with Mr. Savage's well-known ideas and high standards. There will be an extra matinee Monday. The final performance will be given Saturday night, July 24th.

Valencia Theatre

In Mrs. Temple's Telegram, Frank Wyatt and William Morris have written one of the best of modern farces. It is unusually well constructed, depending upon neither the slapstick nor the siphon bottle for its effects, but upon a well-planned scenario, good situations and witty lines. Excellent as the farce is, it is fortunate that its present local interpretation is in the hands of such competent people as comprise the Valencia stock company. Paul McAllister, who during the past few weeks has developed unlooked for abilities as a farceur, plays the role of the husband who has been out all night, caught in a cage of a Ferris wheel that refuses to revolve. Robert Homans, as his confidential acquaintance, is cast most happily. He plays the part of the well-meaning, prevaricating friend who assumes the name of John Brown, with exceptional understanding and insight. George Osbourne, as Wigson, the loquacious butler, always making observations when they are not wanted and giving expression to his little conceits in the most unexpected way, presents the character of the servant in a manner that permits of no criticism. His is really a notable performance. Mr. Osbourne depends but little on make-up. His butler's garb is of the most serious pattern, but there is never a moment when he is on the stage when he is not all the dramatists intended he should be. When Mr. Osbourne is on the stage he is the butler. The delineation of Wigson by Mr. Osbourne is a most artistic bit of work, and bears comparison with the delineation of the character when first presented in San Francisco by a high-priced traveling company. Charles Dow Clark, as the hairdresser, the real John Brown, who receives Mrs. Temple's telegram, is worthy of praise. While laboring under the disabilities pursuant to a severe illness, Mr. Clark gave a good rendition of the man who feels that his attractiveness is at last fully appreciated. The Captain Sharpe of Gilmore Walker could be much more ardent without overdoing the military lover in any way. So long as Mr. Walker's art is that of simulation, to carry the amours of the character assumed by him to even greater lengths would be in the end much more to his credit as an actor. The part of Mrs. Jack Temple, the lady who sends the telegram, was never better played than it is this week by Grace Travers, who, as is generally recognized by San Francisco audiences, has not only youth and beauty to her credit, but talent as well. Miss Travers wears a gown in the last act which excites much admiration among the feminine portion of the audience. The Mrs. Frank Fuller of Edith Lyle is marked by its extreme naturalness. Miss Lyle has a sense of humor that is quite remarkable, and she gets it over the footlights, too. Peggy Monroe is sweet and winsome as Dorothy, Mrs. Temple's sister. She plays opposite to Mr. Walker. No fault can be found with the quality of her love-making. The always-reliable Lillian Andrews is capital put as Mrs. Brown, the wife of the hairdresser. Her acting, accent and general conception of the part are all that any one could ask for. Next week, Too Much Johnson will be the bill.

Alcazar Theatre

Sapho was withdrawn Wednesday night, and Thursday night The Silver Girl, which was introduced to New York by George Fawcett and Lillian Albertson, was given its first appearance in San Francisco. The honors of the play went to Louis Bennison in the character of Jefferson Hunter, the Nevada miner, who had for a wife a young and too much petted wife, who came perilously near forgetting herself, her husband and her future for the fascinations of a rich rascal who was attending to the financial and legal affairs of her husband. The part of Jefferson Hunter is a magnificent one, and Mr. Bennison lived up to its possibilities. Burt Wesner, as the mining partner, rough and ready, furnished a fine accompanying example of good acting. Then came Besie Barriscale, friend, guide and philosopher to the entire family, in her position of companion to the young wife and the only daughter. Miss Barriscale rose to the demands of the character with gratifying success. Howard Hickman was a clean-cut, incisive villain, and William Garwood is to be commended for a pleasing and forceful presentation of the part of the young lawyer who falls in love with the rich miner's daughter. Charles Trowbridge gave a highly finished characterization of the butler, and Thurlow Bergen was better than usual as the son and heir of Jefferson Hunter. Louise Brownell, who played the young wife, had a part that was badly conceived or rather conceived fairly well, but one that in the developing was not worked out consistently. Miss Brownell did as well as could be expected with such a part. Claribel Becker is a pleasing ingenue, and as Agnes Hunter was well received. She needs to tone her work down, though. The play is evidently one written to order, and bears all the ear-marks of one that was built with situations and atmosphere the first consideration—the story being a minor thought. In consequence the development lacks continuity and the interest slumbers. There could be no fault found with the direction of the piece, its mounting and its dressing. These details were of the usual Alcazar high order. The Silver Girl will run all next week.

American Theatre

A Night on Broadway is here! Cheer up, showgoers! For look, who's with the aggregation! Why, dear me—it's Ollie Mack, America's most popular comedian. How do we know?—why, Walt Leslie has said so—we see it all over San Francisco—on the billboards—black on yellow. (No, the color has nothing to do with the show.) Mr. Leslie has accused THE DRAMATIC REVIEW with being biased. We are—always biased in favor of a good show. So in this instance we are going to print the opinion of one of our ablest critics—who is not biased—who writes as he sees things. We quote Waldemar Young of the Chronicle: "Murray and Mack are improving. Murray isn't with the show now. Under the firm name, Mack opened a week's engagement yesterday at the American. With Murray out, the show is just half as bad as when the two appeared here some months ago—or, let us say, at any time during the last twenty or thirty years. The public wasn't exactly let in on the glad news that Murray had been lost. This may account for the fact that last night the house was not packed nor near it. Had the public known the full, joyous truth, Blue Mouse business might have resulted. But, of course, there would have been an obstacle to that. Mack is still with the show. Was Murray missed? Gladly. It took the audience some time to discover the fact that he was not among those present. From that moment on there seemed to be an added brightness, a newer luster. Actual hope appeared. The first intermission was very pleasant; the second, after something of a wait, came as a gleam through the fog; the last curtain was a sheer stroke of genius. There are two people with the show, however—and neither is Murray nor Mack—who bring it to a standard rather above itself. They lift it, you might say, by its bootstraps. The first is Sarah Edwards—Sally of the Princess, with her glorious cello voice—and the second is Blossom Seely, who brings back the old Belvedere so vividly that you reach for your stein. * * * Some cheaply costumed broilers, one or two of whom show signs of life, and Ollie Mack are also with the show." The country is going to be given a treat, for the show goes on the road next week, minus Blossom Seely and some others.

WILL L. THORNE, who was to have opened with the American stock on Sunday next, left Wednesday for Seattle to join the company that Charley Taylor and T. Daniel Frawley are to take up to Alaska.

Princess Theatre

The fifth week of the grand opera season brought out L'Amico Fritz on Monday evening and Saturday matinee; Il Trovatore, Tuesday evening; Lucia on the Wednesday matinee and Otello on the same night; Thursday and Sunday nights Giaconda was the bill, and on Friday night the double offering Cavalleria and I Pagliacci; while on Saturday night, the ever delightful Rigoletto was sung. The high and interesting standard achieved earlier in the engagement has been maintained. The sixth and last week will begin next Monday night. A splendid repertoire which includes all the greatest triumphs of the season will be presented. Monday evening Traviata will be sung with Norelli, Zara and Bari in the chief roles. Tuesday evening Aida will be presented with a most interesting cast. Madame Helene Therry will be heard for the first time here in the title role and Samoiloff will sing Rhamades. Arcangeli and Gravina will repeat former triumphs. Wednesday matinee and Friday evening The Barber of Seville will be sung for the first times this season with Norelli, Colombini, Arcangeli and Gravina. Wednesday evening Il Trovatore will be the program with Bertossi, Zara, Samoiloff and Oteri.

Personals

FRED CUTLER has gone for a short rest at his home near Los Angeles.

GERALD HARCOURT and Percy Kilbride have been engaged for the American Theatre stock.

LAURA HUDSON will be seen in The Squaw Man at Ye Liberty Playhouse in Oakland next week.

ELMER BOOTH and Irene Outtrim have joined the Wilkerson Musical Comedy Company in Reno.

IVA SHEPHERD and Richard Scott have joined the stock company at the Grand Theatre in Long Beach.

ALICE SAUNDERS is living in Globe, Arizona, and is pursuing the simple life, conducting a chicken ranch.

BILLIE BURKE comes West in October with her entire New York company and production of Love Watches.

FRANK THORNE has joined the Selig Polyscope studio staff in Ashland and is painting the scenery used in the pictures taken there.

ROBERT A. BRACKETT, who made a record in Los Angeles as a live one and a successful one, has become the assistant manager of Fischer's Theatre in this city.

F. P. MORSE, ex-dramatic editor of the Washington Post, is on the Coast ahead of Henry Miller's company in Charles Rann Kennedy's well known play, The Servant in the House.

RANDOLPH HARTLEY, whom it will be remembered, was out here ahead of The Three of Us, has had his opera, Poia, with music by Arthur Nevin, accepted by the Berlin Royal Opera. The New York reviewers claim that this is the greatest honor ever accorded American music.

ROBERT ATHOL, who is presenting a Chinese sketch at the Pantages theatre this week, has engaged a company, through Menzel's agency, for the Lyric Theatre of Portland. So far he has signed Priscilla Knowles for leads, Jack Bennett for characters, Susie Howard for soubrettes, and Roy Clement and Ralph Bell.

Vaudeville

The Orpheum

The summer season has not appreciably affected the sale of tickets at the ever-popular O'Farrell theatre. From the orchestra to the doors everything is sold out, twice a day. The bill of this week justifies good houses. There are three new numbers that are worthy of special mention. Selma Braatz, a little girl who looks as though she might be in the last year of boarding-school, does wonderful things with lighted lamps, torches, billiard cues and such furniture as she can get her hands on. Then there is a condensed grand opera, in which George Washington sings America, and a soldier of King George responds in doleful tones to the tune of God Save the King. Helena Frederick and William Schuster are the principals. Schuster is still in good voice. Charlotte Parry, who is described on the program as the most versatile actress in America, deserves due consideration if not entire right to the title. In less than twenty minutes' time Miss Parry makes seven distinct changes of costume and at the same time portrays seven distinct characters. The lady is not one of those lightning-change artists who puts on a different hat and thinks she is portraying an entirely different character. It is hard to believe at times that the same person is portraying types so radically distinct. Voice, manner, physique, gesture, all are subordinated to the character under delineation. The Three Leightons, while not new, are always welcome at the Orpheum. Their One Night Stand in Minstrelsy can be seen more than once, which is saying a good deal, in vaudeville. The holdovers, the Sisters Athletas, Herr Londe and Fraulein Tilly, Harry Armstrong and Billy Clark and the Redpath Napanees, are, while in their second week, all popular numbers.

Pantages-Empire

A long and varied program is on tap at the Sutter Street house this week, headed by the Wise and Milton Comedy Company. Special scenery and costumes are carried for the act of a very picturesque nature. The singing and dancing is of a lively and tuneful nature and combine to make the act most pleasing. Jack Hawkins is the center of interest for the college boys of the audience in a number of clever athletic stunts. Would suggest that the trombone gag be cut, as it looks out of place. The act is too neat for any sort of kidding. The Wheelers in a comedy juggling turn with a number of break-away properties are one of the best on the bill. The comedy is good and clever work predominates. Ying Lee and Bobby Athon and company have you guessing where the company is. The company must be the cartoons drawn by Ying Lee. From the amount of gorgeous scenery in evidence when the curtain rises, you surely expect to see something worth seeing, but you are impatiently kept waiting until the curtain falls, when the joke is on you.

You didn't see it. The scenery is probably the excuse for the act being booked. The De Chantal Twins endeavor to start something with a number of songs. I didn't see anything show the inclination to do so. Cooper and Brown, a couple of singing and talking comedians, have a neat and clean act which is found to be quite pleasing. Oh, you Jules. Interesting motion pictures complete the bill.

Fischer's

Ski Hi, another of Charles Alphin's merry musical mixtures, served to please three audiences at Fischer's Theatre this week. The action takes place on the planet Jupiter, where several earthly mortals are transported, and where all kinds of musical interruptions and comedy eccentricities are allowed. Gus Bruno, a former well liked comedian in San Francisco, appeared after an absence of several years and made a hit in a comedy role, with Will King, the Hebrew comedian, as his foil. Carleton Chase, another new face at Fischer's, sang I'm the King and Some Day When Dreams Come True in a way that brought forth plaudits; and Maude Rockwell sang The Nightingale and Some Day in excellent style. Dave Morris, the energetic young singer, dancer and comedian, backed up by Theo Voda and the rest of the lively and comely chorus, set the feet tapping with their numbers. Juanita Holmes, a new soubrette, is good to look upon and made a hit with On San Francisco Bay, a smashing good song. There is plenty of good fun in Ski Hi and the music is catchy.

The National

A splendid and diversified program is to be found at the popular Grauman house this week. Onapi, the Hindu Mystery, appears in a most baffling exhibition of hypnotic influence. His assistant, seated playing at a piano, remains rigidly suspended after the piano stool is removed and the piano whirls about in the air. The act is a decided novelty and is causing a great deal of comment. Frank Bacon, an old stock favorite of this city, assisted by Mrs. Bacon and daughter, Bessie, comes in for a popular welcome at every performance. In a comedy playlet, entitled An Easy Liar, Mr. Bacon has ample opportunity for displaying the wholesome, dry humor which has made him a favorite wherever he has appeared. Miss Bacon, as the daughter gone astray, gives a most finished and pleasing performance. The comedy and pathos is most pleasingly intermingled. The Ramsey Sisters, in a musical turn and a bit of talk-fest, have a pleasing turn. Clever work is contributed on sleighbells and a pipe-xylophone. Slater Brockman, as a character change artist, fails to cause any commotion. A bit of circus atmosphere is contributed by the Royal Educated Horses in a number of graceful maneuvers. Seymour and Hill as comedy acrobats are a scream. Although the act is nothing but slapstick, it nevertheless is thoroughly enjoyable. The Nelsons are a family of clever acrobats, but are greatly lacking in team work. Too much repetition of individual work pre-

The Wigwam

After the strong card of last week it would not have been surprising to have found one or more holdovers for this week. An entire change of program is in evidence this week which is up to the usual high standard maintained by Manager Harris. The feature of the bill is The Four Bards, who are without a doubt the best equilibristic gymnasts seen on any local stage for many a day. Their work is the essence of cleverness and in some respects has to be seen to be believed. It is a pleasure to see a team of acrobats that have something new to offer. The Markarenko Troupe of Russian dancers in native songs and dances are the best seen in their line. The costuming is gorgeous and their act lively and interesting. Clever and difficult bicycle riding is contributed by The Torleys. Faust Brothers in a pantomime musical act have a good line of comedy stunts. Their musical features are nothing to speak of. Abrams and Johns in a little act of domestic felicity contribute a good comedy portion of the bill. They are both clever performers but Miss Johns easily has the best of the honors. The Terry Twins with their quaint cockney accent are an exact facsimile of each other, even their set of ivories are duplicates, they were not made by a dentist, either. They are amusing entertainers and close their act with a strenuous comedy slugging match. Mann and Franks are well received in a singing and burlesque act. The motion pictures are of the usual high class nature and complete the bill.

The Forrest Theatre of Stockton is closed once more. Business has been something fierce there, says a report from the Slough City.

At the Opera House, Watsonville, this week—Jessie Dale and Billy Jones.

At Hart's Theatre, in San Mateo, this week—J. Bernard Dyllin and Cornell and Fischer.

Stella Adams has transferred her abilities from the Unique in Los Angeles to the Walker.

The Thalia

A novelty in the way of Vaudeville entertainment is presented this week, namely Glasscock's elephants. These intelligent beasts perform their numerous tricks in their usual ludicrous manner. George Braun, well known locally, displays his skill as a wrestler. Eva Rowland is still a popular favorite in her terpsichorean offering. Mlle. Lucille in poses plastique and many other favorites are accorded their share of approval. Nellie Hiley is heard to advantage in conjunction with the illustrated songs. Motion pictures complete the program.

Bookings

BELL, Oakland—Ramsey Sisters; Frank Bacon and company; Slater Brockman; Seynour and Hill; Onaip. LOS ANGELES, Los Angeles—Brenon and Downing; Makarenko Troupe; The Torleys; Clara Thropp; Faust Brothers. QUEEN, San Diego—Messer Sisters; Toma Hanlon; Cook and Rothert; Petroff. NOVELTY, Vallejo—Mann and Franks; McGloin and Shelley; Lyndon and Wren.

Vaudeville Notes

Manager Keiser of the Star has another strong card for this week. Madame Wanda and her troupe of coach dogs supply a most entertaining feature of the program. There are ten dogs in the troupe and they are all the more remarkable for the fact that one of them is the mother of the entire troupe. Everybody works and Mother also. Five more are now in preparation for joining the bread-earners. The Four Haydens appear in a clever tight wire offering. Their work is neat and clever. Irene Franklin contributes some cornet solos. Tannehill and Radcliffe in a song and dance turn are well up to the standard. Their singing is exceptionally good, but we know they have a far better offering. Flournoy comes in for a big share of approval in a comedy cartoon drawing act. His work is most entertaining and worthy of the applause received. Lind and La Salle are a couple of most clever club manipulators. The costuming neat and their work far above the average in their line. Mat, the Mission favorite, renders a number of songs in a likable manner, although hitting the high places now and then. Rose Stevens, a contralto, is heard to advantage in a number of vocal selections. Three reels of motion pictures complete the program.

While Mme. Coultitier was displaying her strength against that of a horse and eight men on the stage of the Silver Palace Theatre the other evening, the horse became excited and plunged into the orchestra pit and thence through the audience to the street. On his exit he slipped and kicked a hole in the marble base of the aquarium in the entrance of the house, narrowly missing the heavy plate glass which holds the water. Fortunately no one was injured.

E. M. Workman and Elmer Comer have leased Fischer's Theatre in Los Angeles for five years. About August 1st musical comedy will probably be installed.

Clarence E. Ellis, until recently connected with some of the largest theatrical interests in the East, is now associated with Archie Levy. Mr. Ellis, although a young man, has had a wide range of experience, having been connected with the theatrical business since his youngster days, and is one of those kind of fellows you like to meet. It is safe to say that with this combination of the old and the young school, the firm of Levy & Ellis will make a few sit up and take notice. Mr. Ellis is at present transacting all business of the firm during the absence of Mr. Levy, who has departed for New York.

Sidney Amber, a young and ambitious office boy in one of the local booking offices, has formed an amateur booking agency and is doing a flourishing business. As amateurs receive from two to five dollars for their services, Sidney is starting out on a small scale to become one of our future theatrical magnates.

Great Success of Chutes Opening

The splendid open-air attractions that have drawn thousands of people to Fillmore Street since the opening of the New Chutes will entertain patrons this Sunday at San Francisco's new playgrounds. Preparations have been made to handle greater crowds than those that visited the resort on the opening day. Desperado is proving one of the greatest sensations ever seen in the West. His dive from a seventy-foot tower, designed to represent a seven-story building, to the naked surface of a wooden chute, made without injury and with apparent ease, is the marvel of all who have watched the young man's performance. Florence Spray is another high diver who captures the crowds. Although the distance which she jumps is as great as that described by Desperado, she chooses water to break her fall. Clothed in tights, she stands on the topmost round of a seventy-foot ladder. The powerful searchlight which is a feature of the New Chutes directs the attention of the spectators to her location. The next moment she is whizzing through space and submerged in the diving tank. Demon is another unusual attraction at the Fillmore Street park. His ride down the chutes on a bicycle enveloped in flames is electrifying. During the afternoon performances he rides without fire. At night his descent is marked by a trail of sparks and flames which are extinguished by the plunge into the lake. Sirignano and his Royal Banda Roma are proving an attraction as delightful to the eye as to the ear. In addition to producing fine music, Sirignano is quite a show in himself. His manner of conducting is unique. He does everything in the way of gentlemanly acrobatics save somersaults. Added to the divers, the fiery bicyclist and the fiery conductor, there is the myriad of fun-devices that amuse during the lapses in the open-air attractions. Everything from the clown fleas in the flea circus to the entertainers in the grill have their audiences.

Vaudeville In Reno

Reno, July 10.—The Grand Theatre will inaugurate a season of musical on next Monday night. Pearl Wilkerson and the company arrived from Frisco, Tuesday, and have started rehearsals for the opening bill, About Town. Charles Royal and Edythe Elliott are concluding a three weeks' vaudeville engagement and are the biggest favorites the Grand has ever played. Miss Elliott has been the recipient of many handsome floral offerings and Mr. Royal has received many flattering press criticisms, both for his clever acting and his wonderful playlets. Fer-Don and his medicine show are holding forth on a vacant lot and are attracting big crowds. The Peterson Brothers' road show are also at the Grand this week and are a capable aggregation. The weather has cooled off a bit and business in general is good.

Raymond Hitchcock will open in Rochester on August 26th in a new music play by George M. Cohan, as yet unnamed. A powerful supporting company is already engaged to support the popular star.

For And Against the Present Day Dramatic Critic

THE CRITIC'S SIDE.

It is the business of the dramatist and producer to provide plays that the public is willing to pay money to see. There is no difference of opinion as to that. The business of the critic is to inform the public whether or not, in his judgment, it is worth while to pay good money to find out if it likes the play. The managerial and playwrighting intelligence doesn't subscribe to this definition of the critic's function at all. It is convinced that the critic should write only favorable reviews, closing his mind to all the weaknesses and defects, bending his efforts to persuading the public to pay good money at the box office so that it may judge for itself. Probably the only critic thoroughly satisfactory to theatrical interests would be one who could be persuaded to accept the views of the press department. There are such, I believe, certain newspapers being controlled by considerations of dramatic advertising and of exclusive theatrical news stories. But the Public That Pays feels this when it doesn't know it, and the reviews thus directed have but little weight.

It seems impossible for the managerial mind to realize that the critic occupies a quasi-judicial position firmly established by custom and tradition. The critic is supposed to be able to measure the artistic, ethical, sentimental, or humorous value of a play. He presents what he conceives to be facts, supplemented by deductions and opinions. Manifestly, the public would not accept his verdicts unless it believed in his honesty and the correctness of his judgment. And this confidence is not built up in a day. If the critics invariably praised, what they write would be worthless.

Of course, there is a dispute of some years' standing as to what Art really is. For a long time I was joyously entertained by a sign a few blocks from where I live. It read, "Paragon Pants Are Art." Recently it disappeared, because, as I have been told, there was a dispute among the partners, some of whom maintained it should read "Paragon Pants Is Art!" There was no difference of opinion, however, as to the main issue. I fancy there would be as much difficulty in convincing the cultivated public that a newspaper has not the right to review a play on its merits as there would be in persuading it of the art value of "pants."

By the way, there is a powerful New York newspaper that has adopted the policy of saying nothing about a new production unless it can honestly praise it. Curiously enough, this policy seems to please the managers even less than the practice of impartial judgment. Nothing hurts them so much as to be ignored absolutely, and they are quite right.—July Everybody's.

THE PLAYWRIGHT'S SIDE

In this country there are some two hundred million dollars invested in theatrical property. Each year something like two hundred new productions are made, averaging in cost from five to one hundred thousand dollars each. After the productions are made, it costs from two hundred to one thousand dollars a night to present the play.

Knowing personally most of the men who present these plays, I can assure you that the majority of them think no more of a dollar than of a right eye or an only child; and nothing resembling a habit of spending money on something they do not believe the public will pay money to see, belongs to any of them.

Moreover, knowing playwrights, stage managers and a good many of the best actors, I assure you they are doing the best they can. They realize the seriousness of their work, and it is with infinite toil and with fear and trembling that they approach the stage. And this is the difference between them and the critics.

No one knows when the following dialogue first took place in a newspaper office. That it took place once I know, for I heard it. I was there.

City Editor: "Where can you find a funny story?"

Reporter (after a moment's thought): "There are a lot of openings tonight. Give me some tickets to a show."

And the city editor saw the point, knew he was on perfectly safe ground, and gave the tickets. The story was funny. It ridiculed a structure that cost something like $40,000. It probably reached, say, one in five of the circulation of 500,000 persons—and people are more or less influenced by what they read.

So the next morning 100,000 people were prejudiced, to a greater or less degree, by unconsciously accepting the word of a reporter who had not been sent to review the play as an expert, in order that those who bought the paper might be expertly advised as to how they could get the best for their money in a theatre. They were prejudiced by the review of a funny man, who was to return with a funny story if it robbed one man of a fortune, another of the work of months, and held up to ridicule a company of players whose life work is to give to the public some enjoyment, and who get for their work less money, less home, less happiness than any other people on earth.—Paul Armstrong in the July Everybody's.

Additional Seattle Correspondence Week of July 12.

ORPHEUM

One of the big engagements of the season is the appearance of Sam Chip and Mary Marble. They have what is designated as "A delft dialogue, with ditties," written expressly for them by Mrs. Channing Pollock, entitled In Old Edam. Bob Matthews and Herbert Ashley have a laughable skit, Held Up, which affords them plenty of opportunity for comedy. Another big laughing act is that of Conroy, Lemaire and company, who present A King for a Night. Some new dancing is given by the Six American Dancers. Stepp, Mechlinger and King, that nifty trio, in an original musical act. Olive Helene Greatrix, the whistler, and Charles Marvelle, novelty contortionist, complete a splendid program.

PLANTAGES

A bill just suited to mid-summer requirements is on. Klein, Ott Brothers and Nichols, instrumental musical artists, are features. Lee Beggs and company present a rousing comedy sketch; La Millas and Oreo offer their dramatic pantomime, with singing and dancing; The Three Olivers, tight-wire artists; Sampson and Douglas, in a smart little comedy singing and talking turn, and Charles Sanders, comedy singer, with Mr. Elwell's song, and the Pantagescope complete the bill.

THE STAR

The Irish singing comedian, Charles Mack, is a feature in a tabloid version of his operatic success, Come Back to Erin. On the bill with him are J. K. Emmett, the yodler, in Artie's Dream; The Ernesto Sisters, the European bounding wire artists; Alfred K. Hall, America's eccentric dancer; J. Warren Keane & Co., in a few minutes of sleight-of-hand; and French motion pictures.

The Witching Hour

John Mason in The Witching Hour will be the first Shubert attraction to open this season, the premiere taking place in Atlantic City July 22d. Mr. Mason jumps from there to Seattle.

Cohan & Harris Big Minstrels

The Cohan & Harris Minstrels, with George Evans and one hundred Honeyboys, are already in full rehearsal for the formal opening at the Apollo Theatre, Atlantic City, August 9th. George M. Cohan has written and composed the afterpiece to be known as The Firemen's Picnic. Through competition between the leading dancers and singers of the country Stage Manager James Gorman has secured a full hundred artists who will wear burnt cork in Honeyboy Evans' support.

Articles were filed in Trenton, N. J., on Thursday, dissolving the United States Amusement Company, which was chartered two years ago to consolidate certain Klaw & Erlanger and Shubert theatrical interests. The company was capitalized at $1,000,000.

It has been decided to continue the season of melodramatic stock at the Grand Opera House in Los Angeles, resuming next week.

Correspondence

PHILADELPHIA, July 11.—Unusual merit and snap and vivacity distinguish the program at Keith's Theatre this week. First is the concert by the Faddettes of Boston, an orchestra composed of many ladies who play with splendor under the direction of Caroline B. Nichols. George Ade's playlet, The Mayor and the Magician, is given in breezy style by Edwin Holt and company. Ralph C. Herz, in his monologues, is one of the cleverest of present day entertainers. His depiction of The Old Dandy is unsurpassable, and his portrayal of the old actor is true to facts. Among the stirring players are Rosa Crouch and George Welch in a lively dancing act, and Swan and Bombard in eccentric comedy. It is no easy task to give a play such as Candida, by Bernard Shaw, with satisfactory spirit, but The Orpheum Company demonstrated its ability to handle the comedy just as it should be handled. The way it is done is altogether in harmony with the spirit of the author evidently intended Candida to possess, and no greater word of praise can be said for the Orpheum players. There are only six persons in the play. Miss Leah Winslow is tactful and effective as Candida, and Robert Cummings is an excellent Richard Bagners, Peter Lang carries himself well as James Marshall, the clergyman, and Henry Edwards has a similar role as the Rev. Alexander Mills. Florence Rittenhouse does very creditable work as Miss Prosperine Garnett. The dialogue is given with appreciation of the purpose back of the lines, and the audience followed the play with the deepest interest. At both performances on July 5th William E. Ingersoll read the Declaration of Independence and he was given storms of applause. The stately lines of the great document were given with fervor, energy and patriotic passion. The interest in the series of moving pictures that Lyman H. Howe has been exhibiting at the Garrick Theatre has prompted the retention of the program throughout this week and accordingly spectators at that house were regaled with reproductions of the famous Grand Prix auto races in France and views of the Wright brothers in their most successful flights of aeroplane, etc. The Shuberts announce that their next musical offering will be a production of an Anglicized version of Die Herbst's Manoeuvre, a Berlin success. The book is by Karl von Bakong and the music by Emerich Kalman. The work will be presented by the Shuberts under the title of The Dancing Dragoons. The production will open in Philadelphia the latter part of this month and will then come to New York. Daphne Pollard, the juvenile Australian mimic singer and dancer, well known on the Coast, has scored such a hit that she has been re-engaged by William Morris for an indefinite run at The American, to be followed by a season of thirty weeks over the independent circuit. Klaw & Erlanger have arranged for the production of a musical comedy entitled The Air King. The book and lyrics are by Harry B. Smith and the music by Raymond Hubbell. It will receive an early metropolitan production with a carefully selected cast and a larger chorus. Grace La Rue, the singing comedienne, who returns to America after a stay of six months abroad, arrived yesterday. Miss La Rue spent the greater portion of her stay in Paris. She will make her vaudeville debut in New York under the management of William Morris, Jr., at the opening of the New American Roof Garden at The American Music Hall on July 19th. The Dixie Quartette has disbanded for the summer, in the meantime Manager Franklin will be at work on a new score which the Dixie boys will use for their fall tour. This quartette, which is one of the best harmonizing combinations in the business, will consist of the same four as last season, with Peter Zisgen singing leads, Dave Bristow tenor, Lyn Castor baritone and Calvin Franklin basso. The moving picture business in Philadelphia is moving along at a rapid pace and looks as though it has come to stay at the Empire Theatre, Frankford. Ever since Managers Stanford & Western have catered to pictures they have enjoyed excellent business. These two hustling managers seem to know just what the public wants, for their house is filled at every performance. In addition to 5,000 feet of the best films they also offer four vaudeville acts, changing their bill twice a week. They have installed electric fans throughout the house. Paul Taylor, formerly with the Stanford and Western Stock Company, is now playing with the Belasco Stock Company, Washington. Mr. Taylor has been offered an excellent part in the No. 10 company of The Wolf. Frank Woodwardson, at one time connected with character parts for the Stanford and Western Stock Company, will direct William and Thomas Jefferson, Jr.'s, new show, and Emily Smiley, leading woman for three years with the above company, will tour with the Jefferson people this coming season.

CALVIN M. FRANKLIN.

SPOKANE, Wash., July 18.—John Drew in Jack Straw at The Spokane July 5-6 drew large houses. The house will be dark for two weeks. Mrs. Fiske in Salvation Nell 19-20 will be the attraction. She will be followed by Marie Doro in The Morals of Marcus, 26-27. An all star bill was presented by Manager Muller at The Orpheum, it included Sam Chip and Mary Marble in In Old Edam; Held Up by Matthews and Ashley;

The Six American Dancers, Frank J. Conroy-George Le Maire Co., Olive Greatrex, Charles Marvelle, Stepp-Mehlinger-King are clever entertainers and Orpheum pictures week of 11; Eleanor Gordon Co. in Tips on Taps, La Petite Revue, The Five Avolos, Abbott-Worthley-Minthorne, Martini-Maximilian, Lena Pantzer, The Kemps. J. K. Emmett Co. in Artie's Dream at the Washington. Mr. Emmett is heard in a number of songs, among them are Sweet Violets, Rock-a-by-Baby and the famous yodeling song; others on the bill are J. Warren Keane Co., The Ernesto Sisters, Alfred K. Hall, Charles Mack Co. in Come Back to Erin, and moving pictures. 11-17, The Tora Japanese Family, Mitchell-Cain Mystery, Barry-Johnson, The Sisters Clarence; at Pantages, Klein Ott Brothers and Nicholson headliners; Lee Beggs & Co. in The Old Folks at Home; Sampson and Douglas; La Millas and Oves; The Three Olivers; William D. Gilson, and motion pictures. 11-17, Ben Boyer and Brother; The Five Gardners; Alva York; The Venitian Street Singers; Carter & Taylor Co. The newly elected officers of Spokane Lodge, No. 47, T. M. A., are Harry Hollinger, president; Charles Muchlman, past president; J. Reel, treasurer; George Hedges, recording secretary; S. H. Metcalf, financial secretary; R. Hollinger, marshal; Roy Gilpin, sergeant-at-arms. The new officers of the local Stage Employees' Union are Howard Moore, president; G. G. Nickell, vice-president; G. E. Hedger, recording secretary; H. Culbert, financial secretary-treasurer; P. L. Carroll, sergeant-at-arms.

SEATTLE, Wash., July 12.—ALHAMBRA THEATRE (Russell & Drew.)—Everyone is looking forward with interest to the opening of the new Alhambra Theatre this evening, when Mrs. Fiske will appear as Salvation Nell. A heavy demand has been made on the box office, and from all appearances the engagement will be a remarkable one.

MOORE THEATRE (John Cort).—Beginning Wednesday and continuing until Saturday night, the beaux and belles of Seattle society will be seen in a great and glittering Kirmess. The proceeds of the Kirmess will go to the Children's Orthopedic Hospital of this city. Much local interest is taken in the affair.

to view the Ferris Hartman presentation of The Tenderfoot, which makes a welcome change from the Oriental productions indulged in by this organization. Everybody is given a good opportunity to provoke laughter and applause, and the chorus was especially pleasing.

SEATTLE THEATRE (Russell & Drew.)—That little Miss Emma Bunting can play the part of Carmen to perfection is being demonstrated at the Seattle Theatre this week. Two immense audiences viewed the performance yesterday and gave it their unqualified approval.

LOIS THEATRE (Alex Pantages.)—The Lois will begin a season of vaudeville this afternoon, with Miss Aileen May and company as the headliners, in a sketch entitled A Man of Family. Miss May's support will consist of Harry Cummings, Marie Van Tassell, Clara Kimball, Ed M. Kimball and Fred C. Huebner. There will be five other high class acts on the bill. E. MORGENSTERN.

Theatre For Mountain View

Mountain View is to have a new theatre. Walter A. Clark of that place has about completed the structure. The new theatre will be called The Auditorium. It has a seating capacity of 1,000 and all modern improvements. The stage has a depth of 25 feet, is 60 feet wide, with a 22-foot opening in the proscenium arch. The opening date will be August 19th, when Frank Bacon will dedicate the house. Mountain View has a population of about 5,000 people.

Ed Redmond is doing so well in The Victory in San Jose that Manager Giese is endeavoring to have him cancel the San Diego time. This week the company is playing A Romance of the South, which will be followed by What Happened to Jones.

Spotlights

Business in Boise is slow. The Eckhardt company closed there week before last, and the Della Pringle stock closed last week.

Apparently the Seattle date of Kolb & Dill is off. Kolb is now in New York looking up plays and novelties.

The Metropolitan Stock Company, under the direction of Norman Fusier and Harold Selman, opened last Saturday night in Black Diamond. The company, it is proposed, will play a circuit of the bay towns. A strong cast will interpret the various plays presented. The roster of the company shows Norman Fuzier, Harold Selman, Nellie Lynn, Lizette Holdsworth, Wilson Dale, Claude Hutchinson, Harold Kiter, Edward Edmundson and Lonnie Nelson.

Three justices of special sessions court in New York Wednesday of last week decided that the Salome dance as given by Mlle. Millie de Leon, the "Girl in Blue," is indecent and infamous and a "downright shame." They convicted her of being a public nuisance and suspended sentence, warning her that a repetition of her offense would mean a cell. Mlle. de Leon was arrested at Hurtig & Seamon's Theatre.

THE latest report from Seattle has it that Fred W. Bucey is to be the local manager of The Colonial in this city, instead of Edward Cort.

James Shesgren, in advance for Polly of the Circus, is expected in town today.

Pending complete reorganization the George Howard stock of Vancouver closed last Saturday night and went for a five weeks camping trip in the Canadian wilds.

FRANK RICHARDSON has joined the Selig Polyscope Company that has established headquarters in California for the taking of moving pictures.

Portland to Have Two New Theatres

PORTLAND, July 12. — Every week brings out something new to us from the theatrical standpoint. Since the closing of The Heilig by the city authorities surprise after surprise has been brought to the attention of Portland theatregoers. This paper has already chronicled that since the closing of the principal K. & E. house that the shows booked for that house had been playing at The Bungalow, and would continue to do so until the season of 1909-10 commenced, when the Baker Stock Company would again be found at that house. Meanwhile ground has been broken for the New Heilig at Seventh and Taylor streets. Now comes the announcement from Manager George L. Baker, after his return from Seattle, where he had been in conference with Cort and Heilig that The Bungalow would continue to play the high-priced syndicate shows until the first of January, 1910, which is supposed to be the date that will mark the completion of Heilig's new house. Meanwhile he announces that the stock company will take the road. Further announcement is made that it is not an absolute certainty that at that time the stock company will again be found at The Bungalow, because Manager Baker has made arrangements with local capital to erect a new home for his stock company, and negotiations have been practically completed. Meanwhile the popular priced syndicate shows will again be found at The Baker the coming season.

At The Bungalow the past week we have had Mrs. Fiske in her latest success, Salvation Nell, and the latter part of the week was devoted to Henry Miller's players in The Servant in the House. Of course Mrs. Fiske gave us one of those high class presentations we are always sure to receive at this artist's hands, and it is not necessary for me to state that her support was in every way worthy of the star. In the latter part of the week The Servant in the House came fully up to expectations, and proved to be a play out of the ordinary run of productions, and this together with a very capable company was the cause of satisfaction to every one witnessing the play. Tonight Marie Doro; Three Weeks follows.

Manager James H. Errickson had a good bill for his patrons last week at The Orpheum. It was headed by Lily Lena, the English music hall comedienne. Her songs were all hits especially that entitled Mary. The Gibson Electric Girl Review proved to be a novelty and was the occasion for some fine electrical effects. Hy-men Meyer made a hit with his act, and Julius Tannen was an entertaining monologist. Tonight the new bill is introduced as follows: Sam Watson's Farmyard Circus; The Playlet Trimmed; Herbert & Willing; Griff; Schrodé & Mulvey; Ila Gannon, and The Banks' Breazeale Duo.

The Lyric will present The Blue Mouse for this week. The past week was devoted to The Imperial Musical Comedy Company and their business was good.

The Grand has the following acts for this week: Eva Mudge; Sados; Carita Day; Rae & Broshe; Barnes & Reming; Telegraph Four, and Fred Bauer.

Pantages has The Prentice Troupe of acrobats for their headline act and The Huntress, billed as a character impersonator as their specially added act.

Hagenbeck-Wallace shows are here today and tomorrow. A. W. W.

New Stock For Princess

After a season of twenty-four weeks, the Princess Theatre company will be disbanded by the management in order that a new company may be seen. After the great season of grand opera, musical comedy should be received with open arms.

Victor Moore opens his season in The Talk of New York at Asbury Park on August 23d.

Marie Doro Quite Won the Hearts of Portland People

PORTLAND, Ore., July 19.—BUNGALOW THEATRE (George L. Baker, Mgr., Milton Seaman, Bus. Mgr.)—After an absence of quite a number of years, during which time she graduated, so to speak, from musical comedy to legitimate, Marie Doro returned to this city and offered for our edification the comedy entitled The Morals of Marcus. It proved to be a very interesting comedy, and also introduced to us several old-time friends, and I might add very clever ones. The star, Miss Doro, quickly won herself into the hearts of everyone. She is a talented and charming actress, and she took advantage of every chance given to her in the play. Edwin Arden, her leading man, is a thoroughly capable actor, and it is not necessary for me to pass comment upon the artistic work of Marie Wainwright. Last night at this house Three Weeks opened a week's engagement to a fair house. The play somewhat borders upon the book, and those who have read the same will readily notice the likeness. As one of our local critics says in his review, the manager would like to have it heralded to the public that the play is suggestive, and in this way cause business at the play for this week, but, as he also says, he would not do that, I think the best thing to do is also to pass it up. The company interpreting the play is headed by Beryl Hope, and she is an emotional actress of more than passing notice. Harry Browne was the leading man, and outside of a desire to be loud, was satisfactory. The production is entitled to praise.

LYRIC THEATRE (Keating & Flood, Mgrs.)—The Blue Mouse filled in the past week at the Lyric. It was the first of the Shubert attractions to come this way. There is no plot of any consequence to the play, but it is happily arranged, and is a laugh from start to finish. Elsa Ryan was happily cast in the name part and gave a matchless interpretation of the part, and Wilton Taylor was entertaining as the mag-nate. Last night the Imperial Musical Comedy Company returned to this theatre and offered The Pagoda. The house was full at the performance and the play and players made a hit with the audience. Ed Harrington and Charles Connors had the principal comedy roles and made individual hits with their parts. The chorus was well drilled and sang acceptably.

ORPHEUM THEATRE (James H. Erickson, Mgr.)—We have had quite a few animal acts at this house since its opening, but it was for Sam Watson's Barnyard Circus to carry off the honors along those lines. It consisted of chickens, geese, a donkey, a lamb, dogs and cats, and was entertaining from start to finish. Griff, an English music hall artist, was also a welcome newcomer. This week's bill is as follows: Sam Chip and Mary Marble are the headliners, and the others appearing are Matthews and Ashley; Conroy and Leamire; Six American Dancers; Step; Mehlinger and King; Olive Greatrex, and Charles Marvelle.

GRAND THEATRE (Frank Coffinberry, mgr.)—Glendower and Manion are the headliners, and the other acts comprise Mlle. Lorrete and her dog; McDevitt and Kelly; Jere Sandford; Five Jordons; and Fred Bauer.

PANTAGES THEATRE (John Johnson, Mgr.)—Phyllis Lee and her company in the headline act, and the other acts are Marguerite and Hanley; Kimball and Donovan; Jack Symonds; Four La Dells; Lawrence and Edwards; and Leon White.

The Hagenbeck and Wallace shows were here 12th and 13th and proved to be one of the best circuses we have ever had. A. W. W.

A Strong Company for Aiston's As the Sun Went Down

Arthur C. Aiston's new production, As the Sun Went Down, by George D. Baker, will have a very strong company next season. Estha Williams, to whose work in the leading role of At the Old Cross Roads much of the lasting success of that play is due, will be featured in the new production. Prominent among the well known people who have been engaged for her support are Edwin Walter, W. A. Whitecar, Phil Connor, William Sexton, Jenny Dunbar, Flora Byam, Margaret Millar and several others of equal note are now being negotiated with. Forest Crosman will have charge of the company and Milton Bejach will be in advance. The tour, which will be a long one, will open at Paterson, N. J., on August 23rd, the eastern cities being played early. St. Paul and Minneapolis will be reached in October, and the Grand Opera House, Kansas City, Christmas week. From there a Pacific Coast trip will be played for twelve weeks over John Cort's circuit. San Francisco will be reached on Easter week, a tour of Southern California will follow and the company will return east by Salt Lake City, Denver, etc., not closing before June 1st. The scenery will be painted by the Lee-Lash Scenic Company under the direction of W. F. Hamilton, formerly of the firm of Moses & Hamilton. Manager Aiston, whose name is known from one end of the country to the other as a producer who never slight the company or the production, is spreading himself on As the Sun Went Down, and the indications are that it will more than duplicate the eight years success of At the Old Cross Roads.

zuela in particular, was the last place in the world to go, for art with a big A is not appreciated there, said a recent issue of the New York Herald. Miss Muriel Darling, one of the sprightliest of the lot, was the spokeswoman for thirty-one vaudeville entertainers who returned, and she said that if it had not been for the bubonic plague, the yellow fever and the rain the show would have done very well in Caracas. Then the troupe went to Port of Spain, and while it rained and was hot most of the time, frost fell on the plays and the players. They blamed the man who booked them and a South American theatrical manager, who they said deserted them, and said if it had not been for the United States consul they might never have reached home again.

Frawley On His Way

T. Daniel Frawley is off again to unbeaten paths. He has "hit the trail." Last Friday week he sailed to Skagway, Alaska, on his way to Fairbanks, with a company of twelve people, including Virginia Thornton, Evelyn Selbie, Corinne Walton, Ethel Fox, H. G. Lonsdale, Arthur Elton, Lee Morris, Will Thorne, Dave Williams, E. J. Conway, Harry Russell and one other besides himself. He goes under a guarantee and plans to give the Charles A. Taylor Company, which left a few weeks ago, formidable opposition. The first report that reached here was that Frawley and Taylor were together. He is taking contracts for his plays and will give Fairbanks the best. In the fall after the Fairbanks season is closed the company expects to return to Seattle and after two or three weeks in either Seattle, Portland or San Francisco, to jump to Honolulu to open about Thanksgiving time and play until after Christmas. Years ago when Blanche Bates, Frank Worthing, Madge Carr Cook and other now well-known stars were members of the Frawley company, the organization opened the Royal Hawaiian Opera House in Honolulu and stayed five weeks, getting back to San Francisco with a big sack of real money. But times have changed since then.

Oscar Wilde Re-interred

The body of Oscar Wilde, which was buried at Bagneaux, France, in 1900, was last Tuesday transferred to Pere La Chaise in Paris. A brief religious ceremony was held in the cemetery chapel, attended by a small group of relatives and friends. The ground in which the body is now interred is secured in perpetuity.

Golden Gate Professional Club

NEW YORK, July 19.—In the formal opening and house warming of their new clubhouse at 162 West Fiftieth street tonight the members of the Golden Gate Professional Club realized a hope cherished since their organization was formed about two years ago. The primary object of their club is to furnish a rendezvous for Californians connected with the stage, music, the fine arts and journalism. Having started life with fourteen members, the club begins housekeeping with a membership of 250, among them being David Belasco, Joseph Grismer, Lillian Coleman and Homer Davenport. The officers are: Mrs. Beaumont Packard, president; Mrs. Gertrude J. Sutherland, secretary, with Frank Howard, Frank Winch and William Gregory directors. The musical program tonight was furnished by Misses Fanny Meyer Ellis, Rosa Mary Campbell, Helen Byron and Phyllis Partington. Miss Cecil Kern gave readings from Joaquin Miller, the California poet.

Besides Polly of the Circus, Fred-eric Thompson has on tour the great spectacle called Via Wireless.

Laura Biggar Wanted Hers in Gold

PITTSBURG, Pa., July 4.—According to information leaking out here to-day, Mrs. Laura Biggar Bennett has come as near to the gratification of her wish relating to gold as she could desire. Mrs. Bennett is said to have frequently expressed a longing "just to break her back" lifting gold, her own gold. It is stated that Mrs. Bennett carted away $159,500 in minted eagles and double eagles from Asbury Park, N. J., last Wednesday. The $159,500 in gold she received from the Shuberts for her Bijou Theatre mortgage weighed just 8,549 ounces troy, or 713 pounds. It took six porters and clerks to lug it aboard the train with her when she left Asbury Park after closing the deal. Nobody knows whether she banked the coin in Philadelphia or carried it all the way to her home in New Mexico. Anyway the banks of Asbury Park emptied their vaults of yellow money when they cashed the Shuberts' check for $159,500 in gold. At the meeting Wednesday at a hotel in Asbury Park the Shuberts offered Mrs. Bennett a certified check for $159,500. "But I don't want that," said Mrs. Bennett. "I want cash. Yes. I want it in gold." The lawyers and brokers gasped. "In gold? Why, you couldn't carry it away," they exclaimed. "Never mind, that's the way I'll take the payment, please," said Mrs. Bennett, firmly. The lawyers started out to skirmish for gold coin. They visited every bank in Asbury Park before they raised the 713 pounds of treasure. They delivered it in sacks. Mrs. Bennett was accompanied to the train Wednesday night by a string of clerks and porters bearing bags of coin. She is supposed to have stopped over in Philadelphia. She made a brief visit in Pittsburg on Friday, but it could not be learned whether she paid her bills here in gold coin or not.

Personals

MRS. KATHARINE C. FAY, president of The Dramatic Union, and her daughter, Irene Ackerman, are at Atlantic City. They will shortly leave for Philadelphia, where Miss Ackerman will arrange for a course of original readings.

H. F. MATHEWS, who is rated one of the cleverest agents now in harness, will soon be on the Coast ahead of Victor Moore in The Talk of New York, one of George M. Cohan's greatest successes. The show appears at the Van Ness for two weeks.

E. B. JACK, the manager of Frederic Thompson's Polly of the Circus, which will be the attraction at the Van Ness for two weeks beginning on Sunday night, is a familiar personage in San Francisco. Mr. Jack was for many years the manager of the lamented Roland Reed. He has been associated with Frederic Thompson's business staff for the past two seasons.

SUPPLEMENTARY proof, which

Judge Morschauser held was necessary before Anna Boyd Coyne could be granted a decree of divorce from Joseph Coyne, the comedian, being given, and the circumstantial evidence tendered by Neil McKay, the actor, before Judge Morschauser on March 29 last, being corroborated, the actress, who made such a hit as the original widow in A Trip to Chinatown, was granted an interlocutory decree of divorce in Poughkeepsie, N. Y., on July 10.

GUSTAVUS LEVICK died on Thursday of last week in New York. The services were held at the Funeral Church, 241 West Twenty-third street and the interment was at Woodlawn Cemetery, in the plot in which lie the bodies of his mother and his father, Milnes Levick, who also in his day was a prominent actor. Gus Levick died at St. Vincent's Hospital of cancer of the stomach. He had been at the hospital since May 26 and from that date took no solid food. Only his will-power kept the end off so long. For twelve years or more Levick had taken no part in affairs theatrical. His father died in 1897, leaving him a small fortune, on which he retired. He lost the money, however, much of it being sunk in a farm in Rockland county, New York, where he hoped to live as a gentleman farmer. He was borne on March 10, 1854, was married three times and is survived by a widow, a sister, a daughter by his first wife and a son by his second. Levick started his stage career early in life, and almost immediately won success. In the seventies and eighties he was known as one of the handsome men of the American stage. He was leading man to Clara Morris, Lawrence Barrett, Edwin Booth and other stars. Levick won a reputation as a Shakespearian actor, but was popular in several other lines of "legitimate" work. He was a favorite on the Pacific Coast at one time.

Chicago Theatre for "K. & E."

Klaw & Erlanger have leased for a long term the Blackstone Theatre, which is to be erected immediately in Hubbard place, Chicago. It will be managed by that firm and Charles Frohman, and it will be the first time their names have appeared as joint managers of any one theatre. The Blackstone will be the Chicago headquarters of both firms and will be devoted to their productions exclusively.

Spotlights

Sam Bernard, under the direction of the Shuberts, is to be seen in a new musical comedy, the book of which is being written by Hartley Manners. Julian Edwards is doing the score. The title is withheld.

Len Behmyer has been appointed manager of the Shubert Theatre in Los Angeles. The same firm announces that it will play their attractions the coming season in the Grand, Sacramento.

The Shuberts announce the following engagements for The Son of His Father (now renamed The Ringmaster), Edward Emery, Frederick Burton, William Rossell and Marion Ballou.

Walter Hampden, last season with The Servant in the House, has been signed by the Shuberts for an important role in The City, the new Clyde Fitch play which will open shortly.

Ethel Levy, now in Paris, has made an offer to the Shuberts to produce Nearly a Hero in France. Miss Levy was a member of the original cast of the former Bernard success.

Blanche Ring will continue with The Midnight Sons at the Broadway until that piece takes to the road. Her successor is not known. It is understood that Lew Fields will star Miss Ring in a new musical comedy. The Midnight Sons, which is one of the most phenomenal successes of recent years, is scheduled to give way to a new revue which Mr. Fields will produce some time in October.

The last performances of Too Much Johnson will take place at the Valencia Theatre this Sunday afternoon and evening, and on Monday night. At the White Horse Tavern, adapted by Sydney Rosenfeld from the German play In Weissel Ressel, by Blumenthal and Kaldeburg, will be presented here for the first time in several years.

Will Greenbaum will present during the fall and winter season the following concert attractions: George Hamlin, the American tenor; Dr. Ludwig Wullner, the interpreter of German classics; Fritz Kriesler, the Viennese violin virtuoso; Mme. Marcella Sembrich, the prima donna soprano; Mme. Schumann-Heink, the

How the Lambs Came Into Being

The Lambs is fourteen years older than the Players, the former club having been founded in the winter of 1874-5. At that time Union Square was the strategic center of New York, as Times Square two miles further uptown is today. Wallack's, then the leading theatre, was at Thirteenth Street and Broadway, and here The Shaughraun was playing, with Harry Montague, Harry Becket, George H. McLean and Edward Arnott in the cast. During the Christmas holidays McLean one night asked the others who have been mentioned, with Arthur Wallack, Edward Fox and a Mr. Hurlock, to supper at Delmonico's, which was then on Fourteenth Street. The seven men found themselves such congenial companions that Montague suggested that they form themselves into a club to meet once a week for supper. The others received the idea with enthusiasm; and, a name for the club being in order, Montague proposed "The Lambs," which was the title of a social organization of actors then in existence in London, of which he was a member. The name was adopted by a unanimous vote; Wallack was appointed a committee of one to arrange for the first meeting, and it was agreed that each member should have the privilege of inviting one guest. In view of the subsequent success of the Lambs, it is a matter of interest that the first supper came near being a failure. Each member of the new organization invited a guest for this occasion, and Wallack arranged for the supper at the Maison Dorée, a small hotel in Union Square noted for its excellent cuisine, one night in February. The seven Lambs were on hand, but only one of the their guests put in an appearance. After waiting an hour for the others, George Fawcett Rowe, who lived in the hotel, was routed out of bed and brought to the table with another choice spirit found by chance in the street. That supper of ten in the little hotel in Union Square, however, was the beginning of the Lambs Club of today, with its splendidly equipped clubhouse, and a membership in the hundreds. By the time the Lambs had given two suppers at the Maison Dorée there was such a demand for invitations on the part of the actors and men about town of the day that arrangements were made with the Union Square Hotel for a supper room and a room for regular meetings. The next year they took a floor in the building at 848 Broadway, next to Wallack's Theatre, known as "The Matchbox," but did not remain long, going back to the Union Square Hotel, and in 1877 to the Monument House at 6 Union Square, where the club occupied the entire second floor and was first incorporated. In another year the organization had outgrown its accommodations at the Monument House, and it moved to 19 East Sixteenth Street, where it remained for two years, the Lambs going thence to their first regular clubhouse, where they occupied the entire building at 34 West Twenty-sixth Street, in 1880. During the thirty-five years of its existence the Lambs have kept pace with the northward movement of the life of the city and the theatres, going from Twenty-sixth Street to Thirty-first in 1888, thence to Thirty-sixth in 1896, and finally moving into the splendidly equipped clubhouse erected by themselves, in Forty-fourth Street just off Broadway, three years ago.

RECALLING THE CHARTER MEMBERS.

The membership of the Lambs has included almost every actor and playwright of prominence during the existence of the club, as well as many men eminent in other walks of life, and others, too, who, if not eminent, were eminently clubbable. But neither wealth nor position has ever opened the doors of the Lambs, and the list of those who have been blackballed includes some of the foremost of the jeunesse dorée of Gotham. At the first supper of the Lambs at the Union Square Hotel, which was given in the fall of 1875, there were present as guests of the original members of the club, Lester Wallack, Dion Boucicault, Charles Stevenson, George Fawcett Rowe and Joseph Asch, of the profession, and J. G. K. Duer, John B. Miley and John A. Stow, of the outside world. It was decided at this supper to increase the club membership seven at a time, in recognition of the original number, and this rule held until the applications came in so rapidly that it was no longer practicable. There were twenty-one charter members, however, when the club was incorporated, and among the moving spirits since, aside from those already mentioned, have been such prominent figures in the dramatic world as: William J. Florence, John McCullough, Steele Mackaye, Harry Edwards, John Gilbert, John Brougham, the elder Sothorn, Claude D. Marius, John T. Raymond, Maurice Barrymore, Henry C. DeMille, Nelson Wheatcroft, Charles H. Hoyt, Tony Pastor, Stuart Robson, Louis Aldrich, Nate Salisbury, Kirk La Shelle, and George S. Howe, with such well-known New Yorkers not connected officially with the stage, as Judge John R. Brady, Brockholst Cutting, Stanford White, Augustus Saint-Gaudens, Wright A. Sanford, Robert G. Ingersoll, Charles Gilsey, William R. Travers, Hubert O. Thompson, Frank Worth White, Frederick Hilton, Oliver H. P. Belmont, Herman Oelrichs, Harry F. Gillig, and Dunbar Price, all of whom may—in the sublime phraseology of the poet Odell—presumed now to be:

SOME OF THE "BIG" MEMBERS.

The club's list today includes among the more prominent professional members, actors, playwrights, composers, and managers, the names of: Wilton Lackaye, Augustus Thomas, Charles Frohman, Nat Goodwin, Henry E. Dixey, De Wolf Hopper, William Gillette, Eugene Cowles, Reginald De Koven, Macklyn Arbuckle, David Belasco, Clyde Fitch, Otis Skinner, Robert Mantell, Joe Weber, Lew Fields, George H. Among the Lambs who do not earn a livelihood in the dramatic profession are included men of such diversified pursuits as: Nicola Tesla and Peter Cooper Hewitt, scientists; Bourke Cockran and William Astor Chanler, statesmen; Amos F. Eno,

Oliver Morosco is to Give Real Comic Opera in Los Angeles

LOS ANGELES, July 22.—Harry Girard has resigned as director of the Morosco Musical Company. Mr. Girard has found the double task of singing and directing too much for the energies of one man, in addition to his daily demands as an instructor of music. Grace Marvin of the Morosco Musical Company strained the ligaments of her leg in dancing at the Majestic Theater Monday night and had to be assisted through the last act. She is now getting along nicely, according to the last reports. John Morissey, who runs the new Orpheum in San Francisco, was a guest of the local house management last week. The Orpheum orchestra has donned white summer suits. They at least look cool, whether they are or not. The locally well-known actor, Leo Cooper, will appear soon with his company at the Los Angeles Theater in his brilliant dramatic sketch, The Price of Power, which is one of Harry Cottrell's masterpieces. S. Loverich is in negotiation with John Blackwood and Lewis Stone concerning the Grand Opera House, and a contract may be signed whereby Mr. Loverich will put a musical stock company in that theater, to remain indefinitely, producing late Eastern successes. By announcing that he intends to inaugurate a genuine opera season at the Majestic, beginning next Sunday night, Manager Morosco has given those who enjoy high-grade music the best news of the present summer. The opening attraction will be a big double bill made up of Cavalleria Rusticana and Mikado. For his tenor roles Mr. Morosco hopes to obtain Roland Paul, an operatic singer who is said to be well known in the East, but has been heard here only at private musicals, although his home is in the city. Harry Girard will direct the productions and will sing the baritone roles. In Cavalleria Agnes Caine-Brown and Miss Nelson will alternate in the role of Santuzza, other principals being Miss Beatty and Miss Baker. The Mikado cast next week will be as follows: Nanki Poo, Roland Paul; the Mikado, Fred Huntley; Pooh Bah, Harry Girard; Koko, Henry Stockbridge; Pish Tush, Harry Weil; Kneeban, John J. Cook; Yum Yum, Agnes Caine-Brown; Pitti Sing, Marie Nelson; Katisha, Maude Beatty; Peep Bo, Edith Salyer. Curiously enough, every one of these principals, with the single exception of Mr. Stockbridge, has previously sung the role allotted, most of them many times. Following next week's bill will come The Black Husar and The Beggar Student.

BELASCO—The Belasco company is doing some very fine work in The College Widow this week. Several of the members of the present company were with the company that produced the same play at the Auditorium some time ago. Miss Beatrice Noyes, as Flora Wiggins, is the hit of the performance. Her make-up is a work of art and her clever handling of the part deserving of much praise. Charles Murray as Bub Hicks is wonderfully fine as to make-up and acting. Helen Holmes, the new leading woman of the company, makes her first appearance this week and she is a pretty and winsome young miss. Her part of Jane Witherspoon is a small one, but she makes a very dainty widow. Sheldon Lewis, another newcomer, is seen for the first time in this piece and he is very pleasing in the role of Hiram Bolton. The part of Billy Bolton does not demand much of Mr. Bennett, but he is right there to do all that there is. Howard Scott is very funny as Talbot, the post-graduate tutor. Charles Giblyn is cast as Stub Tallmadge. Louis Morrison is the college president. Mr. Hartford is again in the cast as Matty McGowan, a trainer. Adele Farrington is a most likable Bessie Tanner, the athletic girl. Miss Farrington does enter into her part so entirely that it is a pleasure to watch her. The whole performance goes with a rush and is most pleasing.

BURBANK—The attraction at the Burbank for the current week is The Hypocrites. This is a great play and in it the Burbank Company does the best work it has done in a long time. Lillian Burkhart and Bertram Grassby have been specially engaged for this performance. Miss Burkhart as Mrs. Wilmore does some very fine work and proves herself a valuable addition to the company. Mr. Grassby is not so pleasantly cast as Mr. Wilmore. The part in itself is that of a cad, but Mr. Grassby overplays the part and the result is anything but a pleasing portrayal. William Desmond, as the Rev. Edgar Linnell, does some very fine acting. Miss Hall is excellent as Rachel Neve. Mr. Mestayer is seen as Lennard Wilmore, the young man for whom two women are ready to give up everything. The one is his mother and the other the girl he has deceived. Frederick Gilbert is good as the lawyer. The rest of the company have parts well suited to them. The producing company deserves a great deal of credit for the splendid way this play is put on. In the hands of less clever people the entire beauty of the piece would be lost.

MASON—The Servant in the House is, for the second time, playing for a week at the Mason Opera House. The cast, while adequate in the main, is not as good as the first time the play was given here. Charles Dalton, who plays the Drainman, is a splendid actor and his interpretation of the character strong and convincing. Gladys Wynne is sweet and sympathetic as Mary. Milton Sills and Miss Collier are both rather too cold as the vicar and his wife. Wilfred Roger, as Manson, is satisfactory throughout. George Wilson does a good bit of character work as the Bishop of Lancashire. The play is well handled and the performance pleasing.

MAJESTIC—The Runaway Girl, the offering of the Morosco Musical Company at the Majestic Theater for the week, is a delightful entertainment and much appreciated after the inferior offering of last week. All of the members of the company are well cast and the work of the chorus good. Harry Girard has a character part this week and we are glad to find that he can act as well as sing. He has only one song in this piece, but as usual his voice is perfectly used. Miss Agnes Caine-Brown is the young runaway girl and her singing is better than at any other performance. Marie Nelson also has a better part than last week. Henry Stockbridge, in the part of Flipper, is the funniest thing in the show. The comedy of Mr. Stockbridge is always original and clever. Miss Evelyn Foshia does some pleasing dancing in the second act. Mr. Bronson is doing some good work this week and he has one opportunity to sing. His work with the present company is far better than what he did with the Kolb and Dill Company. Others in the cast are Fred Huntly, William Yerance, Maude Beatty and Mabelle Baker. Miss Beatty sings better than any of the women in the company, with the exception of Agnes Caine-Brown. A Parlor Match is announced for next week.

GRAND—Melodrama is again holding the boards at the Grand this week. The play is called Kate Barton's Temptation. During the course of the performance there is an express train robbery, a tenement house fire and several other scenes that are necessary to keep the interest of the spectator. The new leading lady, Zora Bates, makes her first appearance in rather a light role, but her portrayal of the part is pleasing. The principal part of the piece is played by Grace Rauworth. Harry Earl, Jack Reid and George Webb all do clever work and help to make the performance a success.

ORPHEUM—The headliner of the Orpheum bill this week is Edmund Day's The Futurity Winner. The racing scene is a good one and is about all there is to the skit. James Thornthorpe has a fresh line of monologue patter that is truly funny and he also sings a little. The singing of Gladys Clark and Henry Bergman is far better than their talk. Adelaide has the assistance of Johnny J. Hughes this week. She, Hughes and their team of four brisk dancers, furnish a good number. Warren, Lyon and Myers remain with the sketch, When Dreams Come True. The Gasch Sisters and Elizabeth Murray are also holdovers from last week. The motion pictures show a fine group of views at the Seattle exposition.

LOS ANGELES—The bill at the Los Angeles Theater this week is a very excellent one as a whole and there is sufficient variety to please all. The headline act is the Makerenko Troupe of eight Russian gypsy singers and dancers. The act is novel and pleasing. The Torleys do tricks on bicycles. Some of them are new and some are not so new. Brenon and Downing present their new farce, The Intruders. Clara Thropp sings, acts and does a monologue stunt. One of the best numbers is furnished by the Faust Brothers in a pantomime comedy act. Moving pictures complete the bill.

FISCHER'S—For the last week of vaudeville at the First Street theater, Messrs. Workman and Comer, the new managers, have provided one of the best bills ever seen in the house. The Bruner-Kramer trio of gymnasts are supple and resourceful. Woodward and his trick dog make an interesting number. Woodward is a banjo specialist. La Tosen, Happy Hooligan on Wheels, performs a variety of cycling feats. Annie Montgomery and her Roly Poly girls are seen in two songs, Red Bird and Lonesome. Moving pictures complete the bill.

UNIQUE—With elaborate stage settings and sensational effects The Death Dance of Cleopatra, as presented by Mlle. La Loie Helene, is the feature of the Unique bill this week. De Cotrete and Rego present a neat character singing and dancing act. Oh, You Kid, the one-act comedy by James T. Kelly, is the offering of the Unique players and has many funny complications resulting from the accidental exchange of a baby and a dog. Every member of the company is well cast and the songs interpolated are of the whistly kind. An illustrated song and motion pictures complete an excellent entertainment.

FLORENCE EMERY.

Spotlights

L. A. Wagenhals and Collin Kemper, of the Wagenhals & Kemper Company, producers of Paid in Full, and Eugene Walter, author of the play, are seeking a settlement of a fine point in a gentleman's agreement. It arises from a motor race that wasn't a race, but a series of stops. Mr. Wagenhals and Mr. Walter had been visiting Mr. Kemper at his country home near Oswego, N. Y. The three set out for Broadway last Saturday, each in his own motor car, agreeing to meet at the Astor Theatre, at noon the following Monday. There was a forfeit for non-arrival on time. Each chose a different route, each met with a series of breakdowns, and all arrived at the appointed destination Tuesday, within two hours of one another. Mr. Wagenhals being the first to get in, at one o'clock in the afternoon. Now the question is, do all pay a forfeit, or does none?

Charles Klein's The Third Degree, which has to its credit one of the most decided hits of the New York season, is to be the attraction at the Van Ness Theatre during Portola week. Henry B. Harris will send his company direct across the continent for this engagement.

Messrs. Barton and Mathorst of Los Angeles have purchased La Petite Theatre in Santa Barbara from A. J. Davis.

Correspondence

NEW YORK, July 18.—The dog days of the summer dramatic season were enlivened last week by the return of Eva Tanguay to the "legitimate" from vaudeville. She burst upon the scene in the "Madhouse opera" number of Follies of 1909 in the Jardin de Paris, replacing Miss Nora Bayes. There was a very large audience to welcome her, and when she sang the madhouse opera number Oscar Hammerstein listened attentively. There were other changes in the production. Matinee Girls was a new number, with Harry Pilcer and eight pretty girls singing and dancing. The Bathing Girls was another. In it Miss Annabelle Whitford and ten other comely bathers posed prettily and sang. The Fiacco dance was another novelty that took well. * * * Oscar Hammerstein isn't going to be his own board of directors any longer, according to a statement sent out from Albany last week that the Hammerstein Opera Company was incorporated there with $250,000 capital and Messrs. William Hammerstein and Edwin B. Root as fellow members of the board with the opera manager. The former is his son and manager of the Victoria Theatre and Roof Garden and Mr. Root is a lawyer. William Hammerstein said the incorporation was principally for convenience and to save his father the labor and worry of appearing personally in all transactions. It would mean no division of authority or change at the Manhattan Opera House. His father, he said, would continue to be in complete control. * * * Gertrude Hoffman returned to Broadway last week with her Salome dance, which, in conjunction with Mendelssohn's Spring Song, she gave at Hammerstein's Roof Garden. In the present revival of the Spring Song Miss Hoffmann has ten assistants, and besides the regular theatre orchestra there is a special one gathered from the orchestra of the Manhattan Opera House of thirty pieces. Miss Hoffmann will continue at the roof garden for several weeks. * * * Mr. Louis Calvert, a well known English actor and stage manager, who has been appointed to make the productions of classical plays at the New Theatre, arrived here yesterday on the Atlantic Transport line steamship Minnehaha. With him were his wife and two children, the Misses Beatrice and Patricia Calvert. Just before he left London, where he has been connected recently with the Royalty Theatre, a dinner for Mr. Calvert was given by Sir Herbert Beerbohm Tree. In the season of 1887-1888 Mr. Calvert played here in Mrs. Langtry's company. In the last twenty years he has given much of his time to producing. * * * All California playgoers will be pleased with the announcement that Henry B. Harris has engaged Ethel Brandon for a prominent part in Martha Morton's play, On the Eve, which will have its premier in New York in September. * * * The Climax returned to Weber's Theatre last week. Mr. Weber will keep Edward Locke's play at his own theatre throughout the rest of the summer. The opening at Weber's last week was the 103d performance of The Climax in New York. The cast remains unchanged. Wednesday and Saturday matinees at Weber's Theatre will be continued. * * * Col. Savage and the Shuberts are likely to repeat the Savage-Fisk-Devil controversy, except that in the forthcoming season the bone of contention will be an opera instead of a drama. Col. Savage has announced that he will produce an exclusively authorized version of an operetta which, under the title of Ein Herbstmanöver, has been well received in Berlin, Munich and Vienna, and which he calls The Gay Hussars. Savage said that the announcement made by the Shuberts on Friday that they, too, would produce an American version of the popular continental piece in the near future had not caused him to alter his production, rehearsals for which had been in progress for five weeks. Lee Shubert said that preparations for their production on September 4th of the German operetta under the title of The Dancing Dragoon would not be affected by Mr. Savage's announcement. Mr. Shubert added that Mr. Savage's claim of a contract with the authors of the German piece was a matter open to discussion. ROB ROY.

PHILADELPHIA, July 18.—The concerts of the Fadette Orchestra, conducted by Caroline B. Nichols, which are given at Keith's for an hour preceding each performance, have become a feature at the favorite home of vaudeville. The orchestra alone makes a visit to Keith's well worth while. There are other things worth going to see and hear this week, one of them being Emma Janvier, of musical comedy popularity, who is as funny as ever with her characteristic monologue, of songs and sayings. Fred Bond and Fremont Benton, assisted by Page, Spencer and Mrs. M. Thayer, give a lively if somewhat conventional farce, Handkerchief No. 15, in a manner that wins many laughs. Other good acts are furnished by Silbon's troupe of remarkable trained cats; the Imperial Sextette, six neat boy dancers; and the Great Mangan Troupe, European acrobats. Chestnut Street Theatre (Grant Lafferty, Mgr.)—Nurse Marjorie, a comedy, at times bordering on the farce, written by Izrael Zangwill, is seen for the first time in Philadelphia this week. It is the latest revival of the Orpheum stock company. Though the plot is of flimsy fabric, it is woven together by bright and witty lines, and the piece is at all times entertaining, just the sort of comedy for the hot weather. Leah Winslow, who essays the part of the capricious and coquettish nurse, originally played by Eleanor Robson, succeeded in infusing the dialogue with just the right amount of vivacity, and Geo. D. Parker, as the member of Parliament, Robert Cummings, Ada Bosshell and Peter Lang contributed to the merriment of the play. Ezra Kendall is summering on his farm in Ohio, revising his Vinegar Buyer, in which he will be starred by Liebler & Co. this fall. The new edition is to be rich comedy. The new play in which Sydney R. Ellis will present Al H. Wilson next season has been christened Metz in Ireland. E. B. Tilton is the author. Mr. Wilson will introduce a number of new songs of his own composition, including Love Thoughts, Erin's Isle, Jimmie Murphy, etc. The season will begin at Ford's Theatre, Baltimore, September 6th. John J. Duffy, formerly of the office of the Walnut Street Theatre, will be seen at one of the Market street houses in a one-act play, written by himself. Miss Grace George is to act again in London, but not until September of next year, when, in a West End theatre, she will produce a play by an English writer. Ben Johnson, the original Jimsey of Paid in Full, is not leading the simple life this week. He is giving an original monologue at Keith's in Philadelphia and rehearsing during the forenoons in New York with The Only Law. The Fortune Hunters, by Winchell Smith, author of Brewster's Millions, will open at the Gaiety Theatre, Labor Day. In the cast will be John Barrymore, Forrest Robinson, Mary Ryan, Edna Bruna, Hale Hamilton, Walter Horton, George Loane Tucker, Sidney Ainsworth, Edgar Nelson and J. C. Brownell. The new comedy deals with life in the city and country. The busiest playwright during 1909 will undoubtedly prove to be Cleveland Moffett. When The Battle showed that it was going to be a winning one, Mr. Moffett sat down and did some hard thinking, and subsequently threw his ideas into dramatic form. The result is that four new plays by Cleveland Moffett will be completed in time for production during the season about to begin. One of them is for the New Theatre. One hundred Holyoke admirers of Miss Eva Tanguay will journey to New York next Monday to see the comedienne shine as the star of The Follies of 1909 at the Jardin de Paris. Miss Tanguay hails from Holyoke, and Holyoke is proud of it. Miss Louise Pounds, whom Charles Frohman has engaged for one of the important parts in The Dollar Princess, is the sister of the well known London comedian, Courtice Pounds. Miss Pounds will sail shortly from London to make her first American appearance and to obtain her first glimpse of America. The principal singing part in all the musical comedies written by Leslie Stuart has been sung in London by Miss Pounds for several seasons past. David Warfield can probably claim the high-water mark for a season's box office receipts in America. With his two plays, The Music Master and The Grand Army Man, he began his season in Denver on August 17th and closed in Buffalo on the night of July 3d. During that time the aggregate box office receipts reached over $1,000,000. Mr. Warfield will spend his summer in Europe. His plans for next season are not definitely determined. At Keith's Theatre in Portland, Me., the past week there appeared for the first time on any stage a complete dramatization of Longfellow's poem, Hiawatha adhering closely to the lines of the poem. Sidney Doler is the author and now the leading man at Keith's stock company there. All through out the play the author has followed his belief that Longfellow intended Hiawatha to be an Indian parallel to Christ. His scenic effects were elaborate, and eight real Indian from Northern Maine were in the cast. Longfellow's former home is located right next door to the theatre where it was produced.

CALVIN M. FRANKLIN.

RENO, Nev., July 19.—Fashionable society packed the theater here tonight to witness a performance of Under Two Flags by home talent occupying boxes and other seats to witness the work of their fellow Easterners and prospective divorcees were Mrs. Frances Spies Kip, Mrs. C. Dillon, Mrs. Elihu B. Frost, Mrs. Daniel Frohman (Margaret Illington), Mrs. L. H. Colwell, Mrs. H. B. Tyler and Mrs. Elizabeth Rowell Stoddard. The part of Cigarette was taken by one of the members of the local club and ever since it was announced that Margaret Illington, who attained such honors in that role, was coaching her in the part public interest in the performance was unabated.

TACOMA, Wash., July 17.—The present season at the Tacoma Theatre terminated with the closing of the Marie Doro company and the house will be practically dark until September 6th, when it re-opens with Polly of the Circus. Marie Doro in The Morals of Marcus was a genuine treat and too much praise cannot be bestowed on the excellent supporting company, especially Edwin Arden, Fred Tiden, Marion Abbott and Mary K. Taylor. The play was beautifully staged and in many respects enjoyable. Last week it was Tacoma's privilege to see Salvation Nell enacted by Mrs. Fiske and a fine company, in which Holbrook Blinn was an important factor. Play and players were enthusiastically received by a capacity house, and the stage settings, marvels of realism, were especially pleasing. Daisy Vernon, now with the San Francisco Opera Company, visited in Tacoma last week. Her husband, Richard J. Allen, for years identified with the stage management of the Tacoma and old Star playhouses, is now stage manager at the Alhambra, the new independent house in Seattle. Allen J. Holuber, the leading man of the Henry McRae Company during its stay in Tacoma, is to try out a vaudeville sketch at the Orpheum Theater, Seattle, next week. The title of the sketch is A Man and a Dog, and if successful will be put on one of the circuits in the early autumn. John McCabe, another well-known actor, for a number of years identified with prominent stock companies here, left last night to visit his parents in Denver, after which he goes to Salt Lake City to begin an engagement with a stock company. Agnes Quinn, a young Tacoma singer of much promise, who has been studying in the East for several years, had a tryout before the Marie Doro Company and a party of invited guests to test her voice, with a view to placing her in an opera now being written by Miss Doro and to be produced by the Frohmans. Gus Frohman and the members of Miss Doro's company go direct from Seattle to Yellowstone Park for a brief vacation, thence to Bridgeport, Conn. where they open a summer engagement. The vaudeville houses are all doing the usual good business. The Hagenbeck Wallace circus last week was an excellent one and deserved the large crowds it attracted. Ringling Brothers' circus comes here August 21st. A. H.

SEATTLE, July 19.—The Moore Theatre—Marie Doro will open tonight for the entire week, The Morals of Marcus. Alhambra—The Blue Mouse, this week's attraction at the Alhambra, drew a good house at the opening performance last evening. There is a great deal of quick action in the play, which will undoubtedly prove a drawing card throughout the three weeks' engagement. Grand Theatre—Ferris Hartman and his company is presenting this week The Blue Moon, a musical comedy. This inaugurates the seventh week of Mr. Hartman's engagement and as usual drew a good crowd. Seattle Theatre—Emma Bunting and company will be seen this week in a play of Tennessee, Coon Hollow. Eleanor Gordon will be the headliner at the Orpheum this week, presenting the playlet Tip Taps. She is supported by a capable company. The Five Avalos; the Worthleys, in their dancing and singing sketch; Martini and Maximilian are magicians; Lena Pantzer and Sam Mint, dancers; the Kemps, dusky dancers, along with the usual new motion picture, make up this week's bill. At the Star Theatre heading the seven acts are the Ploetz-Larella Sisters in an acrobatic novelty act. The Tora Japanese Family are foot-balancers, jugglers and mid-air acrobats. Mitchell and Cain have a comedy sketch, The Frenchman and the Other Fellow, and Mysteria, a masked girl, is a sprightly singer and dancer. Barry and Johnson have a new travesty, Held for Ransom. The Sisters Clarence, a pair of Australian nuggets, are further entertainers on the bill. The summer season inaugurated at the Lois last week has proven very popular with everybody. Of interest is the appearance of Chiquita, the smallest woman in the world who sings and dances. Aileen May and company have a romantic sketch called A Romance of Virginia. The Fishers, spectacular contortionists; Harry De Lain, the Gay Old Maid; Gladdish and Blake in a skit called A Jack and a Queen; Zech and Zech, novelty gymnasts; Anita Wickham in pictured melody and the Loiscopes complete the bill. At Pantages, the Venetian Street Musicians, four Italians in picturesque costume, play upon harp and violin in characteristic fashion. Ben Beyer and brother give an exhibition of trick and comedy bicycle riding; Carter Taylor and company have a high-class comedy sketch, the setting of which is a feature. The Four Gardners and their dog Duke appear in a musical comedy skit. Alva York is an English comedienne of much popularity in Eastern vaudeville circles; Herold a man of tremendous physical development, performs feats of strength and endurance and displays his remarkable muscular development.

E. MORGENSTERN.

The Orpheum

The program for next week will be rich in attractive and novel acts. Sam Watson's Farmyard Circus will be seen for the first time here. This quaint European novelty introduces a donkey, dogs, cats, roosters and a tiny pink pig in his routine of comedy. One of the drollest and most unique comedians that London has sent us, according to the New York estimate, is Griff, the Juggling, Jesting Joker, who, assisted by his son George, will be a feature of the coming bill. Griff juggles and talks, his patter being funny, for he is that rara avis, an Englishman with a sense of humor. Walter Schrode and Lizzie Mulvey will appear in a clever comedy called A Theatrical Agency, which is plentifully interspersed with witty dialogue and clever singing and dancing. Herbert and Willing, minstrel comedians, will present their newest skit, Oh, Man. Next week will be the last of Charles Dana Gibson's Electrified Girl Review, Julius Tannen, The Three Donals and of Lily Lena, who has scored such a tremendous hit with her dainty story songs. The Orpheum motion pictures, which will conclude the performance, will be of special interest.

Fischer's Theatre

This Sunday afternoon and evening the last performances of Mr. Mazuma will be given at Fischer's Theatre, and at the Monday matinee there will be presented for the first time in this city Charles Alphin's latest piece of musical frivolity, The Woman Haters. The story is of a peculiarly amusing interest, centering around the inducements of Iwuz Stronski, to be played by Will King, to induce Hugo Grouch, manager of a Rathskeller, impersonated by Henry Auerbach, and Pietro, an Italian organ-grinder, an impersonation of Dave Morris, to join the army, neglecting the fair sex. Suddenly Jack Hardman, an American tourist, to be played by Carleton Chase; Miss Foxie, a dashing coquette, a part written for Maude Rockwell, and Miss Cacklesome, impersonated by Anna Clark, and Miss Baines, a prominent society belle, played by Blanche Buford, arrive upon the scene and then all kinds of interesting complications ensue. The music will be written in Mr. Alphin's most popular vein, and the lively and energetic chorus, for which Fischer's Theatre is renowned, will offer many new dances containing more than ordinary glee.

Princess Theatre

Two announcements of importance are made for the last week of grand opera by the International Grand Opera Company. Carmen will not be sung as originally planned next Saturday evening. L'Amico Fritz will be the bill that evening, in deference to a widespread demand for another hearing of the Mascagni opera. It has proved to be one of the most popular offerings of the present season, aside from the fact that it has received at the hands of the present company its first production in America. Bertossi, Arcangeli and Colombini will be the stars to present L'Amico Fritz for the last time in this city this season. Sunday night next will be the farewell performance and a program of great novelty and excellence is announced. All of the artists who have assisted in making the season at the Princess a pronounced success will be heard in the acts and scenes which they do superlatively well. Five operas will be drawn upon to supply the stars their final chance to shine. The second act of Aida, Lucia's coloratura second act with Norelli as the heroine; the great second act of Il Trovatore, with its splendid climax; the third act of L'Amico Fritz, and the third act of La Gioconda will be presented, and will afford the public opportunity to hear Mme. Therry, Lina Bertossi, Arcangeli, Samiloff, Bari, Mme. Duce-Merola, Mme. Norelli, Mme. Georgiana Strauss, Signor Colombini and Zara at their very best. Commencing Monday night the interrupted season of musical comedy will be resumed, with The Belle of New York as the first offering.

American Theatre

Following the successful first week of the American Theatre stock company, in which the players admirably handled The Duel, Tennessee's Pardner will be the offering. The popular favor into which Herschel Mayall, Harriet Worthington, Gerald Harcourt and the balance of the company jumped, augurs a successful season of stock, and the list of plays selected to fill in the time pending the coming of the Shuberts, promise to be of the same high class as the opening number, The Duel. Beginning tomorrow afternoon an augmented company will present Bret Hart's famous play, Tennessee's Pardner. Several new faces will be seen in the cast, including Pauline Lord, Lillian Elliott, William R. Abrams and G. B. Baldwin. Harriet Worthington will play the title role, Tennessee Kent, Herschel Mayall will do Caleb Swan and James Corrigan will be Geewilliker Hay, the magnificent liar; Gerald Harcourt, Amos Barlow; William R. Abrams, Tom Romaine; G. B. Baldwin, Asa Bice; Miss Lord, Nettie Bice (Kate Cornish, the bride); Thurlow White, the coroner, and Walter Barrett, Phil Flush, a miner.

Alcazar Theatre

The Girl and The Judge, finest of the Clyde Fitch comedies, is announced as the Alcazar's offering throughout the coming week, commencing Monday evening. It has been selected because of the success it scored when last presented by Belasco & Mayer and because of the exceptional opportunities it affords every member of the Alcazar company to do effective acting. Bessie Barriscale is cast as The Girl and Thurlow Bergen as The Judge, and the other favorites will have well-fitting roles. The action of the play takes place in a town in one of the western states, and the time is the present. Mrs. Stanton, the kleptomaniac, has a drunken husband, and a daughter, Winifred, and to the mother is awarded the custody of the girl by Probate Judge Chartris, a young and talented jurist. Taking a fancy to the girl, he persuades his mother to visit the Stantons in their humble apartments, and while she is there a valuable diamond pin is stolen from her by Mrs. Stanton, who secretly pawns it. She is suspected by her daughter, to whom she finally confesses, and when the girl hastens to the pawnshop to recover the jewel and restore it to Mrs. Chartris she finds that lady and her son there in quest of the pin, which they imagine has been stolen by one of the apartment house servants. But when the pawnbroker displays the valuable and explains how it came there, both Mrs. Chartris and the Judge realize the truth. Then a very effective scene takes place. To save the girl from shame, Mrs. Chartris disclaims ownership of the pin. But the girl is placed in rather unfavorable light before the Judge, whose affection she has begun to reciprocate, and some very interesting situations ensue ere the usual happy ending takes place. Cold type is inadequate to convey comprehensive idea of the many clever touches by which the dramatist built an intensely interesting play around a rather commonplace incident.

Carlton Chase

Carlton Chase, the new leading man of the Fischer's Theatre Stock, comes with a decidedly good record. He was the Lord Piffle in Piff, Paff, Pouf, in the original production in the East. He was also in the first production of Mexicana and The Girl from Kays. After these metropolitan productions, Mr. Chase joined the musical comedy stock in Dallas, Tex., and then to get a firmer grip on the acting game, joined the dramatic stock in St. Joseph, Mo. Two years ago he came to San Francisco, and from here he went to San Diego for a short season at the Isis. Following this San Diego engagement, Mr. Chase joined the Kolb & Dill show, playing the juvenile leads, and followed that by a short season at the head of a sketch over the Orpheum time. Then he returned to Kolb & Dill for their recent engagements here and in Los Angeles. His work is marked by a dash and intelligence and embodies an ability to both sing and act. His success in this city is positive, and he has developed a large following here.

Personals

CHARLIE THALL will this season be seen ahead of Under Southern Skies.

DE WOLF HOPPER goes under the management of Daniel V. Arthur this season.

GUS A. FORBES is playing with the Lyric Theatre company, managed by Walter Sanford in Calgary.

HERSCHEL MAYALL has received an offer from Mrs. Fiske to originate the lead in her new play next January.

LANSING ROWAN has returned to the East, and writes that she has signed with Earl Burgess for the next three years.

CHARLES PLACE opens with the Broadway stock in Oakland next Monday in the character of Cæsaire in Sapho.

HELEN REDMOND and Frank Mayne will be important members of Joe Weber's company that comes to the Coast in The Merry Widow and The Devil.

LONNIE NELSON, who was taken ill last week, was operated upon in the McNutt Hospital last Monday. She is suffering from peritonitis and is discouragingly ill.

HOWARD FOSTER has just returned from a six weeks' hunting and fishing trip in Colorado, and is now located in Oak Park, Cal., with his parents for the short time between now and the opening of the season.

FRED BUCEY, one of the big men in the circus game, and an all around show expert, arrived in town from Seattle Tuesday to rush work on The Colonial, of which he will be local manager for John Cort. Mr. Bucey says his opening is scheduled for September 5, but a lot of quick work will have to be done to allow this, as the theatre will practically have to be made over.

ALFRED ROWLAND, of this season's Richard Jose company, directed a performance by amateurs in Pleasanton last night that was a decided success. The play was called His Last Legs, and hits were made by Mrs. C. S. Graham, Miss Mildred Withington, Miss Fern Alderson, R. C. Peach, Elwood Walter, H. H. Hopper, Dr. L. A. Colestock, clever amateurs of Pleasanton, who have the chief parts.

CALVIN HEILIG has instituted suit to recover $5,000 in the State Circuit Court at Portland, Ore., the Associated Investment Company being defendant. Mr. Heilig was lessee of the Heilig Theatre, which was closed by the building authorities, and Mr. Heilig claims that the lease was thus broken through no fault of his, and wants to get back the $5,000 he deposited as security for the rent when he first took the house.

ORRIN JOHNSON, heretofore identified exclusively either as a star or leading man in dramatic productions, surprised his friends last week by taking the role of the operatic hero in Henry W. Savage's new production of The Gay Hussars. Two years ago Mr. Johnson was advised by the great baritone Samarco to study for opera, and the actor has been preparing for his vocal debut ever since. He has studied under the best teachers in New York, and expects to go abroad later on and prepare for grand opera. With Mr. Johnson in the cast of The Gay Hussars are Anna Bussert, lifted from the role of Sonia in The Merry Widow; Muriel Terry from Berlin; Bobby North, in the leading comedy part that fits him to the shoes; Florence Reid, another surprise find, whose song, The Horrid Men, patterned after the Women Septet in The Merry Widow, is one of the numerous song hits of the opera, and many others, there being over twenty principal roles.

Spotlights

J. E. Dodson will resume his remarkable run in The House Next Door at the Gaiety Theatre in New York on August 2d. Later he will visit the larger cities in this brilliant comedy. This play, which deals deftly and delightfully with the social relations of Jews and Gentiles, is the first of the kind to please New York, which is enthusiastic over the merits of play and company.

In the Wagenhals & Kemper Company's forthcoming production of Marion Fairfax's modern drama, The Builders, a leading role has been assigned to Tully Marshall, who scored most effectively in New York in Paid in Full.

The Del Lawrence company, it is reported, is doing a very poor business in Vancouver, while the Frank Healey Opera Company at the Empress is doing all the business.

Dustin Farnum, last seen here in The Squaw Man, is booked for appearance at the Van Ness Theatre next month in his latest success, Cameo Kirby.

SPOKANE, July 18.—Mrs. Fiske in Salvation Nell comes to the Spokane, 19-20. Marie Doro in The Morals of Marcus, 26-27. At the Auditorium the Colonial Comedy Company will open a three weeks' engagement, commencing 25. The Curzon Sisters, who appear at the Orpheum this week, and known as the Human Butterflies, perform many perilous feats suspended in the air by their teeth, and they are making a big hit. The International Avedano Grand Opera Quartet were several times encored. Cooper and Robinson are good in their negro songs. Wilbur Mack and Nella Walker in The Girl and the Pearl are entertaining. Grace Armond in The Foolish Liz of Vaudeville, and her story of the trip of the country girl to the city, is funny. J. Rubens, novelty transformation painter. Due to sudden illness, Frank Mostyn Kelly and Albert Green failed to appear. Moving pictures conclude the bill. The Three Roehrs, offering their death-defying cycling exhibition, loop the loop in the revolving globe, is the headliner at the Washington. Murphy, Whitman and company in The Prodigal Girl; Tom Ratman, A Jolly Tar; Wood Brothers in their remarkable ring act; Harvard and Cornelle, and motion pictures. There is the usual good bill at Pantages, including the Bonesetti Troupe; Mary Hampton and company, presenting The Melodrama; the Goyt Trio; Harvey and Lee; Martin Brothers; William D. Gilson, and moving pictures. Majestic is having some good pictures with vaudeville and illustrated songs. Natatorium Park had a large crowd at Bowen's American Band concerts every afternoon and evening. The free attraction this week is the Sini-Letta Trio. Every Tuesday is ladies' and children's day, when they are admitted free. August 7, the Fifty-sixth Regiment of Fort Dodge, Iowa, will be at the park for eight days.
